Author's Introduction

The idea for this book arose from a personal need. Years ago, I determined to read the Doctrine and Covenants from cover to cover. I had not previously ignored the book but had spent many years memorizing a few of its verses, searching through its pages for talk material, and discussing its teachings in Sunday School classes. I had never before made a front-to-back study of this book of scripture on my own. I was determined to succeed. However, I found the reading often difficult. I frequently failed to understand the significance of verses, longer passages, and even whole sections—many of which seemed dull, repetitive, and even uninspiring. I found my enthusiasm for the project waning. It was sometimes even difficult to get back to my reading. I was in danger of failing in my commitment to finish the book!

Why was I having difficulty understanding and staying interested in this important book of scripture? I considered myself at least average in my understanding of church history and gospel principles. I loved to read, and yet I seemed to lack the necessary background and tools to make this particular book of scripture really come alive for me. I did not seem to possess an adequate framework of knowledge onto which I could hang the facts I was reading. Consequently they didn't fit anywhere, and they were detached and lifeless. I found the available commentaries to be helpful but somehow disjointed and not sufficiently comprehensive to fulfill my particular needs.

Wouldn't it be marvelous, I thought, if only I had access to a learned and sensitive friend who understood the Doctrine and Covenants and also perceived my particular needs, so that he might help me as I approached this book? He might say, "Let me tell you what you need to know before you begin this particular section. I'll tell you when and why and where this section was written. And as you read it, be sure to notice this . . . and that. You're going to find it fascinating!" I have worked hard to try to create just such a "friend." It is this book—Learning to Love the Doctrine and Covenants.

I have intended to write for the supposed typical member of the Church, which label is in no wise intended to be derogatory. It is assumed that this typical member has a basic understanding of the Church and of the gospel principles. I will not assume, however, that he has a prior knowledge of church history. I have tried to include materials in this study guide that not only facilitate an understanding of the book but also enrich and enliven the time spent studying it. I have attempted to avoid a repetitive retelling of facts and principles that our typical member already knows. If I have succeeded, then you should find a study of this work an exciting, educationally satisfying, and spiritually uplifting experience.

In addition to the historical background, I have, in the most recent updating, included rather extensive verse commentary. For this verse commentary I have drawn heavily and quoted extensively from the four-volume series, A Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants by Stephen E. Robinson and H. Dean Garrett. I am deeply indebted to these authors for their thoughtful and comprehensive work.

The confirmatory influence of the Spirit is more likely felt when we have done our homework and have earned an understanding and an interest in the scripture we are studying. It would seem unlikely that the Spirit would bear witness to us of scriptures that we read drowsily and half-heartedly and with a low level of comprehension.

The history of our Church is a vital foundation for understanding the Doctrine and Covenants. For the most part the revelations were received in a chronological sequence, and most all of them were given by the Lord at a time and in a setting where they were needed by the saints. To facilitate your being able to place the scripture onto a historical framework, I have written and included a brief history of the Church entitled, somewhat facetiously because of its brevity, the Two-Hour History of the Church. It is not intended to provide a comprehensive summary of this period of time but rather a manageable, concise summary. It begins with Joseph Smith's birth in 1805 and ends with the saints' entry into the Great Basin in 1847. Into this history I have inserted each of the sections of the Doctrine and Covenants. Each is referred to by its number and by an assigned title—the latter of my own making. Parts of this same history have been interjected, when appropriate, between the sections for convenience of study and to provide a smoothly flowing historical story line throughout the book. When the history of the Church is particularly pertinent and warrants further amplification, that added emphasis will be found in the commentary materials for the individual sections. At times, some minor repetition will be found between the history inserted between the sections and that in the section commentaries. This has been unavoidable, and it is hoped it will not be offensive.

This book was first published under the title Learning to Love the Doctrine and Covenants in 1988. Since then, there has been considerable updating of its content.

Throughout the book, references will be made to certain supplemental articles and other reference materials. These may be found in either this work or in a companion work, Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine. This latter book is a four-volume discussion of the most basic doctrines of the Church.

There are several brief Character Vignettes that are intended to introduce the characters into the Doctrine and Covenants story but not necessarily provide a complete profile of their sojourn in the early Church. A directory of these is not contained in the table of contents. Rather they can most easily be accessed by searching for the name of the character introduced in the vignette.

The scripture and any quotations taken directly from the scripture will be displayed in bold blue type. Longer block quotes will be displayed in red. The commentary materials are all displayed in black type.

Each section is assigned a suggested title. These titles should prove to be an important help in learning to relate the number of a section to its contents. A convenient summary of the section numbers and their corresponding titles may be found in the table of contents. It may be helpful for the reader to record these titles in your Doctrine and Covenants to the right of each section number. This will aid in your eventually memorizing them. We should henceforth in our lives never be without our scriptures in any gospel-related meeting, and we should never hear reference made to any section of the Doctrine and Covenants without turning to that section, reviewing its title, and recalling what we know about the section's messages. Thus, we commence a life-long program of studying the book. As an example, let us assume you hear reference made, over the pulpit, to a verse in Section 58. You then may turn to the section and recall that its title is "Instructions Concerning Zion." You may then further recall that it was received during Joseph Smith's first trip to Missouri. In this way the verse fits onto your framework of knowledge, and you will be more apt to find and refer to that verse in the future.

My hope is that you will come to regard the Doctrine and Covenants as a familiar friend with which you are well acquainted. May you come to regard it as a dynamic, vital book, and may you come to love it and know that it is of God. I have certainly come to that knowledge.

Explanatory Introduction

Previous editions of the Doctrine and Covenants called the explanatory pages the “preface,” such as in the earliest edition in 1835. Since section 1 has always been referred to as the Lord’s preface, this seeming discrepancy of two prefaces has led to some confusion over the years. To resolve the confusion, in the 1921 edition the preface was renamed the “Explanatory Introduction.”

This Explanatory Introduction for the 1981 edition was completed under the direction of President Spencer W. Kimball, with Elders Thomas S. Monson (acting as chair), Bruce R. McConkie, and Boyd K. Packer supervising the work of Ellis T. Rasmussen and Robert J. Matthews. It is noteworthy that this introduction was authored by general authorities of the Church who sought the spirit of revelation as they wrote it.

The text of this Explanatory Introduction (in bolded blue text) will be interrupted on a few occasions by a few words of commentary (in regular black text).

The Doctrine and Covenants is a collection of divine revelations and inspired declarations given for the establishment and regulation of the kingdom of God on the earth in the last days. Although most of the sections are directed to members of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, the messages, warnings, and exhortations are for the benefit of all mankind, and contain an invitation to all people everywhere to hear the voice of the Lord Jesus Christ, speaking to them for their temporal well-being and their everlasting salvation.

Most of the revelations in this compilation were received through Joseph Smith, Jun., the first prophet and president of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Others were issued through some of his successors in the Presidency. (See headings to Sections 135, 136, and 138, and Official Declarations 1 and 2.)

The book of Doctrine and Covenants is one of the standard works of the Church in company with the Holy Bible, the Book of Mormon, and the Pearl of Great Price. However, the Doctrine and Covenants is unique because it is not a translation of an ancient document, but is of modern origin and was given of God through his chosen prophets for the restoration of his holy work and the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth in these days. In the revelations one hears the tender but firm voice of the Lord Jesus Christ, speaking anew in the dispensation of the fulness of times; and the work that is initiated herein is preparatory to his second coming, in fulfillment of and in concert with the words of all the holy prophets since the world began.

With few exceptions, the speaker in the revelations is the resurrected Jesus Christ. On occasion, Christ speaks as if he were the Father by the principle of divine investiture of authority. The language of the revelations, with the exception of a few words by heavenly angels (see D&C 2; 7; 13), is the language of Joseph Smith. As the inspired ideas and thoughts came into his mind, he composed the revelatory language from his own linguistic background (see D&C 1:24).

Joseph Smith, Jun., was born December 23, 1805, in Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont. During his early life he moved with his family to Manchester, in western New York. It was while he was living near Manchester in the spring of 1820, when he was fourteen years of age, that he experienced his first vision, in which he was visited in person by God, the Eternal Father, and his Son Jesus Christ. He was told in this vision that the true Church of Jesus Christ that had been established in New Testament times, and which had administered the fulness of the gospel, was no longer on the earth. Other divine manifestations followed in which he was taught by many angels; it was shown to him that God had a special work for him to do on the earth, and that through him the Church of Jesus Christ would be restored to the earth.

In the course of time Joseph Smith was enabled by divine assistance to translate and publish the Book of Mormon. In the meantime he and Oliver Cowdery were ordained to the Aaronic Priesthood by John the Baptist in May 1829 (D&C 13), and soon thereafter they were also ordained to the Melchizedek Priesthood by the ancient apostles Peter, James, and John (D&C 27:12). Other ordinations followed in which priesthood keys were conferred upon them by Moses, Elijah, Elias, and many ancient prophets (D&C 110; 128:18, 21). These ordinations were, in fact, a restoration of divine authority to man on the earth. On April 6, 1830, under heavenly direction, the Prophet Joseph Smith organized the Church, and thus the true Church of Jesus Christ is once again operative as an institution among men, with authority to teach the gospel and administer the ordinances of salvation. (See Pearl of Great Price, Joseph Smith—History 1:1-75; D&C 20.)

These sacred revelations were received in answer to prayer, in times of need, and came out of real-life situations involving real people. The Prophet and his associates sought for divine guidance, and these revelations certify that they received it.

A number of the revelations are directed to specific individuals. There are 136 individuals mentioned by name in the Doctrine and Covenants. From these revelations, a number of personal instructions, warnings, commands, and counsels emerge. The revelations warn against murder, theft, dishonesty, adultery, pride, and idleness—to name a few. Also included is counsel on Sabbath-day observance, loving the Lord and one's neighbor, treating others as equals, supporting one's family, seeking an education, and teaching one's children. Though these revelations and instructions are to specific individuals, they hold great importance in that many of them are expressions of gospel principles from which all can benefit. As the Lord said, "What I say unto one I say unto all" (D&C 93:49). Readers should therefore each apply the principles included in the Lord's instructions to themselves.

In the Doctrine and Covenants we observe the pattern of how the Lord deals with his people, particularly in helping them solve their problems. He insists that we reach out to him in order to obtain his counsel and blessings: "Ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you" (D&C 4:7).

In the revelations one sees the restoration and unfolding of the gospel of Jesus Christ and the ushering in of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

Beginning with the First Vision, we can follow—in the Doctrine and Covenants—the unfolding of the restoration of the Church and gospel to the earth. We read of such seminal events as the coming forth of the Book of Mormon; the calling of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon; the restoration and reestablishment of the order of the priesthood (including the restoration of the Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthoods, the keys of the priesthood, and the extending of the blessings of the priesthood to all men regardless of race); and the establishment of the Church organization.

The westward movement of the Church from New York and Pennsylvania, to Ohio, to Missouri, to Illinois, and finally to the Great Basin of western America, and the mighty struggles of the saints in attempting to build Zion on the earth in modern times, are also shown forth in these revelations.

The westward movements of the Church, as detailed in this section, all took place in the spirit of the doctrine of gathering (see D&C 29:8).

Several of the earlier sections involve matters regarding the translation and publication of the Book of Mormon (see Sections 3, 5, 10, 17, 19). Some later sections reflect the work of the Prophet Joseph Smith in making an inspired translation of the Bible, during which many of the great doctrinal sections were received (see, for example, Sections 37, 45, 73, 76, 77, 86, 91, and 132, each of which has some direct relationship to the Bible translation).

The Joseph Smith Translation (actually Joseph's inspired revision) of the Bible had a substantial influence on the content of the Doctrine and Covenants, particularly on those revelations received during the years 1830-33. Joseph's translation of the Bible was a primary source for many of the doctrinal statements in the Doctrine and Covenants. Often Joseph's work on the Bible was the "trigger" that resulted in his inquiring of the Lord about certain doctrines. See the supplemental article, Joseph Smith's Inspired Revision of the Bible—The JST. The Doctrine and Covenants also contains counsel from the Lord to Joseph on the project of doing this translation. Joseph was told when to begin (see D&C 9:1-2), when to pause (see D&C 37:1-4), when to recommence translation (see D&C 41:7), who the scribe was to be (D&C 35:20:47:1), and the time in which the parts of the Bible should be translated (see D&C 45:60-62). These came with the exhortation to move more rapidly (see D&C 73:3-4; 93:53) and to make plans for publication (see D&C 94:10; 124:89).

In the revelations the doctrines of the gospel are set forth with explanations about such fundamental matters as the nature of the Godhead, the origin of man, the reality of Satan, the purpose of mortality, the necessity for obedience, the need for repentance, the workings of the Holy Spirit, the ordinances and performances that pertain to salvation, the destiny of the earth, the future conditions of man after the resurrection and the judgment, the eternity of the marriage relationship, and the eternal nature of the family.

The Doctrine and Covenants teaches the doctrines of salvation. This is seen in part in the 598-page Topical Guide to the Doctrine and Covenants, Book of Mormon, and Pearl of Great Price. In fact, every doctrine taught by the Church is found or referred to in the Doctrine and Covenants. It is the most important doctrinal book we have in the Church, teaching some doctrines that are not taught in the other books of scripture.

Likewise the gradual unfolding of the administrative structure of the Church is shown with the calling of bishops, the First Presidency, the council of the Twelve, and the Seventy, and the establishment of other presiding offices and quorums.

The Doctrine and Covenants instructs the small initial body of priesthood holders how to act in the administrative affairs in the kingdom. The revelations teach of the nature, the offices, and the ordinances of the priesthood of God. Examples of the latter include blessings of children, healing the sick, baptism, the sacrament, the endowment, baptism for the dead, and dedicatory prayers for a new temple. The revelations teach the necessity of membership records, the keeping of a history of the Church, and the conduct of meetings. In short, these revelations constitute the first handbook of instructions for Church leaders.

Finally, the testimony that is given of Jesus Christ—his divinity, his majesty, his perfection, his love, and his redeeming power—makes this book of great value to the human family and of more worth than the riches of the whole earth.

A number of the revelations were published in Zion (Independence), Missouri, in 1833, under the title A Book of Commandments for the Government of the Church of Christ. Concerning this publication the elders of the Church gave solemn testimony that the Lord had borne record to their souls that these revelations were true. As the Lord continued to communicate with his servants, an enlarged compilation was published two years later in Kirtland, Ohio, with the title Doctrine and Covenants of the Church of the Latter Day Saints. To this publication in 1835, the written testimony of the Twelve Apostles was attached as follows:

TESTIMONY OF THE TWELVE APOSTLES TO THE TRUTH OF THE BOOK OF DOCTRINE AND COVENANTS

The Testimony of the Witnesses to the Book of the Lord's commandments, which commandments He gave to His Church through Joseph Smith Jun., who was appointed by the voice of the Church for this purpose:

We, therefore, feel willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of the earth, that the Lord has borne record to our souls, through the Holy Ghost shed forth upon us, that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men and are verily true.

We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper; and it is through the grace of God the Father, and His Son, Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, in the which we rejoice exceedingly, praying the Lord always that the children of men may be profited thereby.

The names of the Twelve were:

Thomas B. Marsh	Orson Hyde	William Smith
David W. Patten	Wm. E. McLellin	Orson Pratt
Brigham Young	Parley P. Pratt	John F. Boynton
Heber C. Kimball	Luke S. Johnson	Lyman E. Johnson

In successive editions of the Doctrine and Covenants, additional revelations or other matters of record have been added, as received, and as accepted by competent assemblies or conferences of the Church.

Beginning with the 1835 edition a series of seven theological lessons was also included; these were titled the "Lectures on Faith." These had been prepared for use in the School of the Prophets in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1834-1835. Although profitable for doctrine and instruction, these lectures have been omitted from the Doctrine and Covenants since the 1921 edition because they were not given or presented as revelations to the whole Church.

In the current edition of the Doctrine and Covenants [1989] three documents have been included for the first time. These are Sections 137 and 138, setting forth the fundamentals of salvation for the dead; and Official Declaration 2, announcing that all worthy male members of the Church may be ordained to the priesthood without regard for race or color.

It is evident that some errors have been perpetuated in past editions, particularly in the historical portions of the section headings. Consequently this edition contains corrections of dates and place names and also a few other minor corrections when it seemed appropriate (such as discontinuing the unusual names beginning with Section 78). These changes have been made so as to bring the material into conformity with the historical documents. Other special features of this latest edition include maps showing the major geographical locations, in which the revelations were received, plus improvements in cross references, section headings, and subject-matter summaries, all of which are designed to help readers to understand and rejoice in the message of the Lord as given in the Doctrine and Covenants.

The Doctrine and Covenants is a challenging book to comprehend because it reads more like a compilation of random historical accounts and doctrinal dissertations. Unlike the Book of Mormon, there is no story line other than the history of the Church. Reading the Doctrine and Covenants is more like reading the letters of Paul. Each one has its own topic containing its own insights and background. Yet, the reader must persist, and he will learn, as the Explanatory Introduction explains, that the Doctrine and Covenants is “of great value to the human family and of more worth than the riches of the whole earth.”

Joseph Smith, Jr., was born in Sharon, Windsor County, Vermont, December 23, 1805, the fourth son and fifth child of Joseph and Lucy Mack Smith. His eldest brother had died during childbirth, but he had two living older brothers, Alvin and Hyrum, and an older sister, Sophronia. He would yet have four more brothers and two sisters. His younger brothers were Samuel Harrison, Ephraim, William, and Don Carlos. Little Ephraim died shortly after his birth. His younger sisters were Catherine and Lucy.

Joseph was born into a family of modest means. His father had lost a considerable sum of money some years prior on an investment that turned sour. The family did not lack industry, but were relegated by their lack of funds to becoming tenant farmers and were forced to move frequently during Joseph's childhood in order to find sufficient work and earn an adequate living.

In 1812, when Joseph was six years old, a typhoid fever epidemic swept through Lebanon, New Hampshire, the area where the Smiths were then living, and all of the Smith children fell ill. Joseph developed, as a result of the infection, a large abscess under his arm which was drained of a large amount of pus. He later developed a serious osteomyelitis, or bone infection, involving his left shin. In those days, when no antibiotics were available, the only hope of cure was either amputation of the affected extremity or surgical removal of the infected bone. Both young Joseph and his mother Lucy refused to consider amputation, and it was decided to proceed with excision of the diseased bone. Joseph refused wine or brandy to dull the pain and assured the doctors that tying him down was unnecessary. Thus, with Joseph held in the arms of his father, but having the benefit of no anesthetic, the doctors proceeded to bore holes in his leg bone and chip away pieces of that diseased bone. Afterward, Joseph lay on the bed "pale as a corpse, and large drops of sweat were rolling down his face, whilst upon every feature was depicted the utmost agony" (Lucy Smith, Biographic Sketches, 65). As the incision healed over the next several weeks, some fourteen additional pieces of bone worked their way to the surface (Joseph Smith "History," Book A-1, 131-32, LDS Church Historian's Office).

After three months of constant pain, Joseph had passed the crisis, and the leg bone began to mend. The disease and pain so wasted his body that his mother and his brother Hyrum easily carried him about in their arms. Convalescence dragged on for three years. Until the family moved to New York in 1816, he hobbled about on crutches. To the end of his life he limped slightly, as the trauma had stunted the growth of the affected leg.

The medical bills incident to the typhoid epidemic and Joseph's illness left the Smith family close to destitution. After unsuccessfully trying farming back in Vermont, they finally moved to the more fertile land of New York in 1816. They settled first in the village of Palmyra. Within two years they had raised enough money to begin purchasing a one-hundred acre farm two miles south of the center of Palmyra in the township of Farmington. In 1821 or 1822 the village and township of Manchester were formed and the Smith farm was then located in Manchester Township immediately adjacent to the line between Palmyra and Manchester Townships. Before moving from the village of Palmyra, the Smiths built a small four-room log cabin on this farm, and in 1818 all ten members of the Smith family—eight children and two parents—moved into this snug log house.

In western New York the years from 1799 to 1820 were marked by a series of religious revivals among the Protestant churches in the area. These included the Baptists, the Methodists, the Society of Friends, and particularly the Presbyterians. The ministers were rallying to halt the infidelity, or unbelief, they perceived was rampant in the area. All of the ministers pressed for new members. Because of the ministers' enthusiastic preaching, the question "What must I do to be saved?" was on everyone's mind. The Smith family was caught up in the spirit of revivalism. Joseph was later to remark that there was an unusual excitement on the subject of religion. Mother Lucy, Hyrum, Sophronia, and Samuel Harrison joined the Presbyterian Church. Joseph, Sr., and all the other sons held back. Joseph, Jr., was partial to the Methodists but could not overcome his reservations. Between ages twelve and fifteen, he seriously studied the scriptures, but was confused by the disparities between his interpretation of the scriptures and the teachings of the churches in the area. He wondered, "Who of all these parties are right; or, are they all wrong together? If anyone of them shall be right, which is it, and how shall I know it?" (HC, 1:3-4).

In this state of mind, he came across the Bible verse, James 1:5, "If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally . . . and it shall be given him." "Never did any passage of scripture," he later recalled, "come with more power to the heart of man than this did . . . to mine. . . . If any person needed wisdom from God, I did. . . . At length I came to the conclusion that I must either remain in darkness and confusion, or else I must do as James directs, that is ask of God" (HC, 1:34).

Accordingly in the early spring of 1820, Joseph went to a place in the woods near the family cabin and prayed out his dilemma. After wrestling with satanic power, he was favored to converse personally with God the Father and Jesus Christ (see Joseph's account of his vision in JSH 1:15-20). He asked which of all the churches he should join, and he was instructed to join none of them. The reader may wish to review Joseph

Smith's First Vision in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 10. This chapter provides a history of the evolution of the account of Joseph's vision.

Meanwhile, this vision did not interrupt the necessity of daily back-breaking work on the farm by all able members of the Smith family, including Joseph. The work, however, did not deter him from what seemed to be a normal childhood and teenage upbringing, including "light-minded pleasure with his friends," "all kinds of temptations," "mingling with all kinds of society," "many foolish errors," "weaknesses of youth," "the foibles of human nature," and "levity and [associating] with . . . jovial company." He was doubtless guilty of only the normal frivolity of youth, but he did not measure up to his own perceptions of "that character which ought to be maintained by one who was called of God as I had been" (HC, 1:9-10).

His remorse came to a head in the fall of 1823. On September 21, after the other family members had fallen asleep in the crowded little cabin, Joseph remained awake to pray "for forgiveness of all of my sins and follies" (HC, 1:11). While praying, he noticed the room growing brighter than broad daylight. A heavenly messenger named Moroni appeared to him and taught him of the vital mission and responsibilities which lay ahead. Moroni informed him of a book written on gold plates that gave an account of the former inhabitants of a certain portion of the American continent and contained the fulness of the everlasting gospel. These plates were buried in a hill later named Cumorah, three miles from the Smith farm. The site where the plates were buried was shown to Joseph in vision. Moroni also paraphrased the Old Testament quotation of Malachi (4:5-6) that predicted the coming of the Prophet Elijah [D&C 2 - Elijah the Prophet]. The vision ended but recurred twice more the same night.

It is interesting that Joseph experienced these visits from Moroni in the crowded family cabin without disturbing his sleeping family. Perhaps the Lord caused a deep sleep to come upon them or perhaps this type of heavenly vision is a private experience discerned only by the person for whom it is intended.

The same vision was repeated a fourth time on the following day when Joseph, who had insufficient strength to work in the fields after his experience of the previous night, fainted as he was returning to the family cabin, having been sent home by his father. This time Moroni commanded Joseph to return to the fields and inform his father of the visions. Joseph, Sr., expressed no skepticism but counseled his son to do exactly as the angel had instructed. Moroni had commanded that Joseph go to the place where the plates were deposited, and later that day Joseph went to the site he had seen in vision. He uncovered and pried the lid off the stone box which contained the plates, and he beheld the plates and also two stones in silver bows fastened to a breast plate. These stones, known as the Urim and Thummim, were seers in ancient times which God had prepared for the purpose of translating the plates. As Joseph touched the plates, Moroni again appeared and informed him that the time for bringing them forth had not yet arrived. Joseph was then commanded to return to this site yearly on September 22 to receive instructions. For a more detailed description of the Urim and Thummim, see "Two Instruments Used in the Translation" in The Process of Translating the Book of Mormon, in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, Appendix A.

Joseph's first visit to the site of the plates' burial may have been somewhat more colorful than the above paragraph (from Joseph Smith's HC, 1:16) suggests. The prophet's mother gives the following account of that first visit:

Having arrived at the place, he put forth his hand and took them up, but, as he was taking them hence, the unhappy thought darted through his mind that probably there was something else in the box besides the plates, which would be of some pecuniary advantage to him. So, in the moment of excitement, he laid them down very carefully, for the purpose of covering the box, lest some one might happen to pass that way and get whatever there might be remaining in it. After covering it, he turned round to take the Record again, but behold it was gone, and where he knew not, neither did he know the means by which it had been taken from him.

At this, as a natural consequence, he was much alarmed. He kneeled down and asked the Lord why the Record had been taken from him; upon which the angel of the Lord appeared to him, and told him that he had not done as he had been commanded, for in a former revelation he had been commanded not to lay the plates down, or put them for a moment out of his hands, until he got into the house and deposited them in a chest or trunk, having a good lock and key, and contrary to this, he had laid them down with the view of securing some fancied or imaginary treasure that remained.

In the moment of excitement, Joseph was overcome by the powers of darkness, and forgot the injunction that was laid upon him.

Having some further conversation with the angel on this occasion, Joseph was permitted to raise the stone again, when he beheld the plates as he had done before. He immediately reached forth his hand to take them, but instead of getting them, as he anticipated, he was hurled back upon the ground with great violence. When he recovered, the angel was gone, and he arose and return to the house weeping for grief and disappointment (Biographical Sketches of Joseph Smith the Prophet [Liverpool: 1853] 85-86).

Joseph Knight, Sr., would later record his version of this incident:

He went and found the place and opened it and found a plain box. He uncovered it and found the Book and took it out and laid it down by his side and thought he would cover the place over again thinking there might be something else here. But he was told to take the Book and go right away. And after he had covered the place he turned round to take the Book and it was not there and he was astonished that the Book was gone. He thought he would look in the place again and see if it had not got back again.

He had heard people tell of such things. And he opened the box and, behold, the Book was there. He took hold of it to take it out again and, behold, he could not stir the Book any more than he could the mountain. He exclaimed, "Why can't I stir this Book?" And he was answered, "You have not done right; you should have took the Book and gone right away. You can't have it now." Joseph says, "When can I have it?" The answer was the 22nd day of September next if you bring the right person with you. Joseph says, "Who is the right person?" The answer was "Your oldest brother [Alvin]" (From an original holograph by Joseph Knight, Sr., reported by Dean C. Jessee in "Joseph Knight's Recollection of Early Mormon History" in BYU Studies 17:1, spelling and punctuation changes added for clarity.)

Regarding the gold plates, Hugh Nibley wrote:

Nothing in the Book of Mormon itself has excited greater hilarity and derision than Joseph Smith's report that the original record was engraved on gold plates, the account being condensed from much fuller records on bronze plates. Today scores of examples of ancient historical and religious writings on sacred and profane plates of gold, silver, and bronze make this part of Joseph Smith's story seem rather commonplace. But it was anything but commonplace a hundred years ago, when the idea of sacred records being written on metal plates was thought just too funny for words (Prophetic Book of Mormon, 245; see also Nibley, Approach to the Book of Mormon, 21-28).

Section 1 The Lord's Preface—the Voice of Warning

Scripture Mastery

D&C 1 The Lord's Preface—the Voice of Warning

D&C 1:24 Scriptures given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language.

D&C 1:30 The Lord bears testimony of Church.

D&C 1:31-33 For I the Lord cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; And he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received; for my Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.

D&C 1:37 The Lord bears testimony of D&C.

D&C 1:38 Whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same.

Section 1 is one of the few sections in the Doctrine and Covenants that is out of temporal sequence. Chronologically it was received between sections 66 and 67 in Hiram, Ohio, on November 1, 1831. It was originally placed at the front of the Book of Commandments, and it has retained that position in all subsequent editions of the Doctrine and Covenants. It is the Lord's preface to this book of scripture. This is the only book in existence that has the honor of having a preface given by the Lord himself.

By the time this revelation was received the Church had been organized just over eighteen months. During the summer of 1830, within a few months of the organization of the Church, the Prophet and others began to compile the revelations of the Lord that had been received up to that time and also to edit these revelations in preparation for future publication. By November 1831, these revelations were collected and ready for publication. A council of the elders of the Church was convened in Hiram, Ohio, on November 1, 1831 to consider plans for publishing the revelations that had already been received. Following the first session of the conference in which a decision was made to publish the revelations, Joseph inquired of the Lord to receive divine confirmation of their resolve. This confirmation (section 1) was received in a marvelous manner. The Lord not only approved the work but gave a revelation as his own preface to the book. For more information on the historical setting for section 1, review the pertinent materials in the supplement entitled A Brief History of the Evolution of Our Present-day Doctrine and Covenants. Also, please read the background materials for section 67. Section 1 was first printed in The Evening and Morning Star in March 1833 and was subsequently placed at the beginning of the 1833 Book of Commandments as chapter 1.

At the conclusion of the conference of elders, Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer were directed to take a copy of the edited revelations with them to Independence, Missouri, where William W. Phelps, a member and printer by vocation, would do the actual printing. A printing press had been purchased by the Church in Cincinnati, Ohio, and shipped to Independence for this purpose.

This revelation names the book and announces its purpose or theme—it is a universal voice of warning crying unto the people of this dispensation. To the righteous it is a voice of gladness and celebration. The gospel has been restored! To the unbelieving it is a voice of warning that unless they repent of their sins and adhere to the principles of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the judgment of God shall befall them.

As Moses led the doubting Israelites through forty years of wanderings in the wilderness, an interesting means of communication was developed. A trumpet was sounded that could be heard throughout the entire camp (Leviticus 25:9). This trumpet was loud and was the alarm that roused Israel and called her to action in times of war and danger (Numbers 10:9; Ezekiel 33:3) and in times of jubilee and celebration (Leviticus 25:9). The Lord has used the symbol of sounding the trumpet as a signal of the restoration of gospel truths. It is a voice of gladness and a voice of warning. Its message to the righteous is one of celebration and gladness, but to the wicked it is a terrible trumpet of warning, alerting them to the perils that await the unrepentant. The message of the Doctrine and Covenants is that the warning trumpet will warn the camp (the world) one last time. It is not merely the Lord's wish that the voice of warning be sounded to the world; it is his divine command. The voice of warning is delivered to the saints in scripture, then the Lord commands that the saints deliver the warning to all the world.

What is there in section 1 that sets it apart and justifies its removal from the midsection of the compiled revelations and renders it appropriate to become section 1, the preface? Elder John A. Widtsoe wrote: “A good preface should prepare the reader for the contents of the book. It should help him understand the book. It should display in a concentrated manner the full contents of the book. Section 1 of the Doctrine and Covenants is one of the great prefaces in the possession of mankind” (The Message of the Doctrine and Covenants, ed. G. Homer Durham [Salt Lake City: Bookcraft, 1969], 11-12).

Elder Jeffrey R. Holland has made the point that the importance of section 1 lies not only in its content—what it says—but also in the historical context in which it was received—what the section is. In a very real way, when this section was received, the faith of the early brethren and their commitment to the Prophet Joseph and to these revelations as divine communication hung in the balance. Those brethren who gathered at Hiram, Ohio, for the conference of the elders of the Church in early November 1831 simply had to come to know that these revelations were not simply manufactured from Joseph’s vivid and fruitful imagination. The new Church’s future was on the line. Michel de Montaigne wrote: “The births of all things are weak and tender, and therefore we should have our eyes intent on beginnings” (“Of Managing the Will,” Essays, trans. Charles Cotton, ed. William Carew Hazlitt [London: Reeves & Turner, 1877]). Elder Holland wrote:

This may seem a minor thing to fourth-and-fifth-generation Latter-day Saints, but I suspect it was no minor thing to the Prophet Joseph and no minor thing to either the faithful or the skeptical who had to muscle through it and make peace with their own conscience and with the Lord. Indeed, we sense a painful poignancy in the Prophet Joseph’s phrase written on that day, “It was an awful responsibility to write in the name of the Lord” (HC, 1:226). Surely it was, and now William E. McLellin and the others understood it also [see a summary of the experience of William McLellin in the introductory commentary for section 67]. Perhaps here once again we see the Lord’s wisdom in choosing virtually an unlettered lad to be the vessel through which he would speak. In light of the educated McLellin’s failure, it seemed compellingly clear that neither the Prophet Joseph nor any other man was capable, on his own, of revealing prophecies that come true or of writing revelations that bear the familiar spirit of divinity. Elder Orson F. Whitney once noted that a vain boaster, ridiculing the proverbs of Solomon, had said, “Anybody can make a few proverbs.” The reply was simply, “Try a few.”

So both in terms of its internal message and the brief but dramatic confrontation out of which it came, section 1 establishes for the rest of the book and the rest of our reading the prophetic role, the divine process, the reality of revelation from the Almighty, and the virtual impossibility of pretense and posing and chicanery. Any man who is only a man will be found out soon enough in this business (Sperry Symposium Classics, The Doctrine and Covenants, 23-34).

1 Hearken, O ye people of my church, saith the voice of him who dwells on high, and whose eyes are upon all men; yea, verily I say: Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea, listen together.

verse 1 “Hearken, O ye people of my church” This section sounds a rather ominous note right here at the beginning. The Lord here is warning, not only ungathered Israel, but also those who are already in his Church. There is no room for complaisance in the kingdom of God on earth!

To “hearken” is not only to hear, but to obey as well.

“Hearken ye people from afar; and ye that are upon the islands of the sea” The phrases “ye people from afar” and “ye that are upon the islands of the sea” are scriptural phrases that usually refer to scattered Israel.

The origin of the expression “islands of the sea” is particularly interesting. This expression can mean any place to which one journeys by water (see Isaiah 20:6; 60:9; 2 Nephi 10:20-21), and so this phrase includes what we call continents as well as true islands.

2 For verily the voice of the Lord is unto all men, and there is none to escape; and there is no eye that shall not see, neither ear that shall not hear, neither heart that shall not be penetrated.

verse 2 The “Lord” is Jesus Christ who is the author and source of all of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants. The Father has seldom dealt with man directly since the fall of Adam, and he has never appeared except to introduce and bear record of the Son.

“there is none to escape” Joseph Smith wrote, “You cannot go anywhere but where God can find you out” (HC, 6:366).

3 And the rebellious shall be pierced with much sorrow; for their iniquities shall be spoken upon the housetops, and their secret acts shall be revealed.

verse 3 The “unbelieving” are those who reject the gospel (see verse 8). The “rebellious” are those who come out in open, willful, resistance against the Lord, and who might also act in defiance of God’s authority.

“and their secret acts shall be revealed” What a man truly is in his heart will inevitably be revealed in his thoughts and words and behaviors. The real truth about a man cannot be long hidden—it cannot be kept secret.

4 And the voice of warning shall be unto all people, by the mouths of my disciples, whom I have chosen in these last days.

verse 4 The world has not seen a more critical need for the saving truths of the gospel since the days of Noah than this final dispensation. Increased numbers of missionaries are being called to go to take the message of the restoration to every people. The missionaries, and indeed every man who has been warned, must lift up the trump and sound the warning (D&C 88:81-82) so that (1) the wicked will be left without excuse; (2) the member will free himself from the blood and sins of his generation; and (3) the righteous will be gathered from all nations to enjoy the blessings of the gospel.

“the voice of warning shall be unto all people” Joseph Fielding Smith taught that the Doctrine and Covenants “belongs to all the world, to the Catholics, to the Presbyterians, to the Methodists, to the infidel, to the non-believer. . . It belongs to all the world, not only to the Latter-day Saints. . . They will be judged by it, and you will be judged by it” (CR, October 1919, 146).

The warning voice cannot be silenced. The Prophet Joseph said, “No unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly, and independent, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country, and sounded in every ear, till the purposes of God shall be accomplished, and the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done” (HC, 4:540).

5 And they shall go forth and none shall stay them, for I the Lord have commanded them.

verse 5 These newly-called disciples are charged by the Lord with an overwhelming task—that of sharing the message of the restored gospel with all inhabitants of the earth (see the following verse). Just imagine for a moment what an overwhelming task this was! After all, it was a time of no television, telephones, radios, or other means of modern mass communication except newspapers with limited circulation. There were no automobiles, airplanes, or even railroads available. Transportation was basically limited to horse back, carriages, riverboats, or ships, and often great distances had to be covered on foot. And in all this they will go safely. Could such a monumental challenge be accomplished by such a small band of disciples? As this verse indicates, the Lord knew it could.

6 Behold, this is mine authority, and the authority of my servants, and my preface unto the book of my commandments, which I have given them to publish unto you, O inhabitants of the earth.

verse 6 The Lord places his stamp of approval and gives his authority for the publication of the Book of Commandments and even designates this revelation as his “preface unto the book of my commandments.” Further, the Lord provides the divine credentials to Joseph Smith and his associates in the ministry to preach the gospel and warn the world.

7 Wherefore, fear and tremble, O ye people, for what I the Lord have decreed in them shall be fulfilled.

verse 7 “fear and tremble, O ye people” Though it is usually considered politically incorrect and perhaps a bit insensitive to say so, those who reject the gospel do indeed have something to fear. They well ought to be terrified at the thought of one day meeting the Lord and having to make an accounting of their sojourns here on earth.

8 And verily I say unto you, that they who go forth, bearing these tidings unto the inhabitants of the earth, to them is power given to seal both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious;

9 Yea, verily, to seal them up unto the day when the wrath of God shall be poured out upon the wicked without measure—verses 8-9 These verses refer to the sealing power of the priesthood. See a discussion of the sealing power in the commentary for Helaman 10:7 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

These verses help explain D&C 24:15 and other verses wherein the Lord commands the missionary to dust off or wash his feet as a testimony against those who reject him. In D&C 75:19-22, the Lord explains that on the day of judgment, those who bear their testimonies will help in the judgment of those who rejected them. When we combine these scriptures with D&C 1:8, we get the impression that there is real power in testimony—power enough that those who reject it will find that it is part of their condemnation on judgment day. How poignant and formidable is the role of the Church's latter-day missionaries in the history of this earth!

“to them is power given to seal both on earth and in heaven, the unbelieving and rebellious” This “sealing” concerns the “unbelieving,” those who refuse to accept the gospel message; and the “rebellious,” those who turn against the servants of the Lord, especially those who do so after having enjoyed the privileges and blessings of membership in the Church. Those who have not yet had the opportunity to hear the gospel would not be classified, here in this verse, as “unbelieving.” Both the unbelieving and the rebellious ought to fear and tremble in view of what is coming to them and about which they have been duly warned.

10 Unto the day when the Lord shall come to recompense unto every man according to his work, and measure to every man according to the measure which he has measured to his fellow man.

verse 10 This verse is a reminder of the profound principle that the very essence of the commandments of the gospel of Jesus Christ is selflessness and concern for others—the command to be charitable. The expressions “every man” and “fellow man,” of course, refer to all mankind and include all men and all women.

11 Wherefore the voice of the Lord is unto the ends of the earth, that all that will hear may hear:

12 Prepare ye, prepare ye for that which is to come, for the Lord is nigh;

verse 12 “Prepare ye” is a major theme of the Doctrine and Covenants. The command appears some ninety times in the book. Man is warned to ready himself for the Lord’s second coming. Here, the command “Prepare ye” is repeated twice for emphasis.

13 And the anger of the Lord is kindled, and his sword is bathed in heaven, and it shall fall upon the inhabitants of the earth.

verse 13 The world has reached such a state that even the patient and long-suffering Lord Jesus Christ is angry. The “sword” symbolizes Christ’s authority and power to destroy and eventually triumph over Satan and the forces of evil. Until now the Lord has allowed good and evil to exist together in the world, but at the last day—the day of his coming in glory—anything or anyone who cannot tolerate his glorious presence will be cut off and removed by the sword, which is about to fall.

“his sword is bathed in heaven” Smith and Sjodahl suggest that “this is a very expressive term from Isaiah 34:5, where it is used to signify the pouring out of the indignation of the Lord upon all nations and His fury upon their armies, delivering them to destruction and slaughter” (Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 7). Another possible interpretation is that the Lord will bathe (wash or clean) his sword in preparation for its use.

“the inhabitants of the earth” The terms earth and world do not usually describe the same things in scripture. The earth is the physical planet upon which we live. The world is all of the worldly influences present here on earth—Satan’s kingdom. At the day of Christ’s second coming, the earth will continue, but the world and all its wickedness will abruptly end.

14 And the arm of the Lord shall be revealed; and the day cometh that they who will not hear the voice of the Lord, neither the voice of his servants, neither give heed to the words of the prophets and apostles, shall be cut off from among the people;

verse 14 The “arm of the Lord” is symbolic of the strength or power of God. Here the Lord lifts his arm in anger. The imagery of the Lord’s arm is not always used in the sense of negative power. For example, D&C 29:1 speaks of the Lord’s “arm of mercy,” which has atoned for sins. The Lord will tell Joseph Smith, after the loss of 116 pages of Book of Mormon manuscript, that he would have “extended his arm” and supported him against the temptations. Thus the Lord lifts his arm other than just in anger.

To be “cut off from among the people” is to be severed from the community of believers, or excommunicated.

15 For they have strayed from mine ordinances, and have broken mine everlasting covenant;

verse 15 An ordinance can be understood either as a decree or as a set procedure, ritual, or ceremony. Laws passed by municipalities are often referred to as city ordinances. The term ordinances here includes the rules and commandments as well as the rituals of the gospel.

“mine everlasting covenant” This expression refers to the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ restored in this latter day.

16 They seek not the Lord to establish his righteousness, but every man walketh in his own way, and after the image of his own god, whose image is in the likeness of the world, and whose substance is that of an idol, which waxeth old and shall perish in Babylon, even Babylon the great, which shall fall.

verses 15-16 The Lord enumerates the world's major sins. The world has: (1) “strayed from mine ordinances,” (2) “broken mine everlasting covenant”—broken the laws of the gospel, and (3) succumbed to the worship of idols. Idol worship? Today? Idol worship was a common problem in Moses's day, but certainly not today! Or, is it? Idol worship is very common today but takes a little different form from that of Moses's day. Idolatry is to love the creation more than the creator (see Romans 1:25). Men today commonly worship the idols of bodily appetites, materialism and other forms of worldliness. Whatever thing a man sets his heart and his trust in most is his god. The first commandment on Sinai is the commandment to avoid idolatry in any form: “Thou shalt have no other gods before me.” Closely related is his commandment: “Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might.”

“Babylon” is the symbol of the world—wickedness and depravity among men and nations. Babylon is the world of things as our carnal selves might wish them to be rather than of things “as they really are” (Jacob 4:13). Ancient Babylon was viewed by God and the people of Judah as the epitome of wickedness and godlessness and therefore the archenemy of Zion. Thus, the prophets of old issued the frequent cry to come out of Babylon and to leave her practices and values behind (see also D&C 133:7).

17 Wherefore, I the Lord, knowing the calamity which should come upon the inhabitants of the earth, called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and spake unto him from heaven, and gave him commandments; verse 17 “the calamity” The calamity consists of all the unpleasant events associated with Christ’s second coming and the end of the world. The gospel has been restored in the latter days to protect those who will receive it from the coming calamity. Many judgments are mentioned by the prophets that will occur before the Lord’s second coming, including pestilence, storm (rain, winds, and hail), fires, plagues, earthquakes, famines, lightning, wars, and floods. These will cleanse the earth of wickedness prior to the Lord’s advent. Apparently one may escape these destructive forces only through faithfully living the gospel and gathering to the safety of Zion about which we will be reading much more as we study the Doctrine and Covenants.

Does this mean that if we live righteously we will be guaranteed escape from the vicissitudes of any and all natural disasters? The answer is, no. The Prophet Joseph said, “It is a false idea that the saints will escape all judgments, whilst the wicked suffer; for all flesh is subject to suffer Many of the righteous shall fall prey to disease, to pestilence, etc. . . .” (HC, 4:11). Another author added, “It would be wrong to assume that the more righteous one is . . . the less he will suffer He will be blessed even though his blessings may be strength to endure the suffering The difference is that the wicked must suffer the consequences of their sins in addition to the suffering that is part of life Those who live faithful to their covenants can be assured that they will not have to suffer in vain” (Book of Mormon Student Manual, 2nd ed. [Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1981], 185).

“I the Lord . . . called upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun.” The Lord chose him! Of the millions out of every nation who could have been called to head this last and greatest of all gospel dispensations, the Lord chose a New York farm boy. But certainly Joseph was more than that. Is there any doubt that he was one of the “noble and great ones” in the premortal councils? (Abraham 3:22-25). Is there any doubt that he was foreordained to his high calling? Elder Stephen L. Richards said, “My grandfather [Willard Richards] was a close friend and companion of this man. He knew him as intimately as one man may know another. He had abundant opportunity to detect any flaws in his character and discover any deceit in his work. He found none, and he has left his testimony to his family and to all the world that this man was true, that he was divinely commissioned for the work he had to do, and that he gave his life to the fulfillment of his mission” (CR, October 1951, 117).

“and gave him commandments” All the revelations are commonly referred to as commandments, even though many of them are not commandments of the “thou shalt” or “thou shalt not” type.

18 And also gave commandments to others, that they should proclaim these things unto the world; and all this that it might be fulfilled, which was written by the prophets—verse 18 The Lord also called prophets of other ages.

19 The weak things of the world shall come forth and break down the mighty and strong ones, that man should not counsel his fellow man, neither trust in the arm of flesh—verse 19 The phrase “arm of flesh” refers to the weakness, frailty, and imperfections of men—in other words, to merely human resources and capacities. The admonition not to trust in man’s power is a common one throughout the scriptures (see D&C 3:7; 2 Nephi 28:31; Mosiah 23:14; 2 Chronicles 32:8).

20 But that every man might speak in the name of God the Lord, even the Savior of the world; verses 19-20 President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:

The Lord called Joseph Smith and others from among the weak things of the world, because he and his associates were contrite and humble. The great and mighty ones in the nations the Lord could not use because of their pride and self-righteousness.

The Lord’s ways are not man’s ways, and he cannot choose those who in their own judgment are too wise to be taught. Therefore he chooses those who are willing to be taught, and he makes them mighty even to the breaking down of the great and mighty. . . . When we think of our missionary system, we can see how the weak have gone forth among the strong ones and have prevailed. The mighty and strong ones have been broken down by the humble elders of the Church (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:255).

verses 21-23 The following three verses outline what might be considered to be the goals of the missionary effort of the Church today.

21 That faith also might increase in the earth;

22 That mine everlasting covenant might be established;

23 That the fulness of my gospel might be proclaimed by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world, and before kings and rulers.

verse 23 “the fulness of my gospel” This phrase has two separate meanings:

1. In scripture it always refers to those principles necessary for entrance into the celestial kingdom of God—faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. For example, the scriptures state over and over again that the fulness of the gospel is found in the Book of Mormon (see D&C 20:9; 27:5; 42:12; 135:3; JS-H 1:34), yet the temple ordinances are not found there. Neither are the three degrees of glory nor a clear description of the interval between mortal life and resurrection. Also, the Doctrine and Covenants speaks repeatedly of the early saints as already having the fulness of the gospel, even before the ordinances of the temple were revealed to them, beginning around 1842 (see D&C 35:12, 17; 39:11; 66:2; 118:4).

2. In the Church today, however, the phrase “fulness of the gospel” is often used to mean all that the Lord has ever revealed—including the ordinances of the temple—and the complete plan of salvation. Hence, the proper interpretation of this phrase in scripture depends on the audience to whom the scripture is directed.

“by the weak and the simple unto the ends of the world” In the eyes of the unbelieving and rebellious, the servants of the Lord are “weak and simple” when compared to kings, rulers, or scholars. That is, their message is considered by the unbelieving and rebellious to be insipid and not pertinent. The Lord cannot call those who in their own judgment are too wise to be taught. The Lord promises that these supposed weak and simple persons will prevail over those whom the world considers mighty and strong.

24 Behold, I am God and have spoken it; these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding.

verse 24 “Behold, I am God” In this, as in all the revelations found in the Doctrine and Covenants, the divine speaker is Jesus Christ.

“in their weakness, after the manner of their language” This phrase is important in helping us to understand one characteristic of the revelatory process. When the Lord reveals his words through a prophet, that prophet’s mind is imbued with divine thoughts; but when those thoughts are written down, they are clothed in human words. All the frailties of the prophet’s vocabulary, literary skills, and level of sophistication will be evident as the revelation is read by others. William McLellin lacked understanding of this concept when he questioned the divine authenticity of Joseph’s revelations (see the introductory commentary for section 67).

25 And inasmuch as they erred it might be made known;

26 And inasmuch as they sought wisdom they might be instructed;

27 And inasmuch as they sinned they might be chastened, that they might repent;

28 And inasmuch as they were humble they might be made strong, and blessed from on high, and receive knowledge from time to time.

verses 24-28 In these verses the Lord gives us some specific and personal reasons for reading these revelations:

1. so we might “come to understanding” (verse 24). For example, consider the many lofty concepts we are brought to understand in section 76.

2. so we might detect errors in our lives (verse 25). We might, for example, be making unintentional mistakes. As a specific example, section 20:69 teaches us that others ought to be able to tell that we are saints by the way we deport ourselves. If they cannot, then we must change or be guilty of sin.

3. so we can gain wisdom by being instructed (verse 26). Consider, for example, the several divine instructions we are given in section 93.

4. so we can be chastened concerning our sins, thus motivating us to repent (verse 27). For example, D&C 64:9-11 teaches us concerning the necessity of forgiving others.

5. so we can gain knowledge (verse 28). We gain valuable knowledge, for example, as we study section 86—the interpretation of the parable of the wheat and tares.

29 And after having received the record of the Nephites, yea, even my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., might have power to translate through the mercy of God, by the power of God, the Book of Mormon.

verse 29 “the record of the Nephites” It is reasonable to assume that this expression refers to the Book of Mormon even though it is also a record of the Jaredites.

When one becomes informed as to exactly how Joseph was able to “translate” the Book of Mormon record, one may conclude that saying it was translated “through the mercy of God” is an understatement (The Process of Translating the Book of Mormon in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, Appendix A).

30 And also those to whom these commandments were given, might have power to lay the foundation of this church, and to bring it forth out of obscurity and out of darkness, the only true and living church upon the face of the whole earth, with which I, the Lord, am well pleased, speaking unto the church collectively and not individually—verses 30 The Lord himself proclaims the divine authenticity of the Church! Other churches are not without some truth—some have much of the truth and many adherents who practice the virtues of Christianity. All other churches are, nonetheless, incomplete. The Lord is well pleased with the Church “collectively,” but not “individually.” The reason is that some in the Church are still sinning, and according to verse 31 he “cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance.” What a succinct statement by the Lord on the subject of sin!

The Church may be said to be a “living church” because it is connected continuously to God, the source of life and light, by continuing revelation and by the direct bestowal of priesthood authority. The Church has direct and living links with the divine in the chain of priesthood authority from Jesus Christ, to Peter, to Joseph Smith, and eventually to each priesthood holder.

31 For I the Lord cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance; verse 31 The Lord is beholden to the law of justice: He who commits even one sin is unworthy to live in the presence of God. No unrepentant sinner will be allowed into the celestial kingdom—or into any kingdom of glory, for that matter. There will be no exceptions.

But the Lord also avers, in the following verse, that the law of mercy is operational because of the Savior's atoning sacrifice.

32 Nevertheless, he that repents and does the commandments of the Lord shall be forgiven;

33 And he that repents not, from him shall be taken even the light which he has received; for my Spirit shall not always strive with man, saith the Lord of Hosts.

verse 33 Regardless of the state of spiritual development and attainment a man may earn, he will backslide spiritually if he ceases to obey.

“for my Spirit shall not always strive with man” What does it mean to strive? It means to try hard or to exert oneself vigorously. But in this phrase it is the Spirit who is striving! The Spirit wrestles or struggles with all of us. He wrestles against our carnal selves to tug and pull and prod us in the right direction. However, there is a degree of disobedience that will cause the Spirit to cease his work of coaxing us toward the light. In other words, we must be striving to obey in order for the Spirit to strive with us.

The Lord teaches that the process of keeping or maintaining the influence of the Spirit of the Holy Ghost in one's life is an active and ongoing process. Failure to maintain a constant righteous and diligent striving will result in a loss of the influence of the Spirit and a regression in one's spiritual progress. There are no plateaus in spiritual growth.

34 And again, verily I say unto you, O inhabitants of the earth: I the Lord am willing to make these things known unto all flesh; verse 34 The expression “all flesh” here refers to all human beings.

35 For I am no respecter of persons, and will that all men shall know that the day speedily cometh; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand, when peace shall be taken from the earth, and the devil shall have power over his own dominion.

verse 35 “For I am no respecter of persons” The Lord is impartial and grants to each man, on conditions of repentance, the same privileges and opportunities of salvation and exaltation.

“when peace shall be taken from the earth” “The beginning of the fulfillment of this day when peace was taken from the earth appears to be at the commencement of the Civil War” (Smith and Sjodahl, Commentary, 10). President Wilford Woodruff wrote: “God has held the angels of destruction for many years, lest they should reap down the wheat with the tares. But I want to tell you now, that those angels have left the portals of heaven, and they stand over this people and this nation now, and are hovering over the earth waiting to pour out the judgments. And from this very day they shall be poured out. Calamities and troubles are increasing in the earth, and there is a meaning to these things. . . . If you do your duty, and I do my duty, we'll have protection" (Young Woman's Journal, 5 [9 July 1853]: 512-13).

36 And also the Lord shall have power over his saints, and shall reign in their midst, and shall come down in judgment upon Idumea, or the world.

verse 36 "Idumea," also called Edom, was a nation south of the Dead Sea. The Idumeans were a wicked people. Hence, traveling through their country symbolized the pilgrimage of men through a wicked world. In Jesus's day Idumea had produced King Herod, the evil usurper who tried to murder the infant Jesus and succeeded in killing the babies in Bethlehem. Figuratively, the term Idumea, like the term Babylon, is used in scripture as a symbol for worldliness and wickedness.

37 Search these commandments, for they are true and faithful, and the prophecies and promises which are in them shall all be fulfilled.

verse 37 The Lord also pronounces the truth and divinity of the Doctrine and Covenants and commands us not just to casually read this book but instead to "search" it.

For a definition of the word commandments here, see the commentary for verse 17 of this section.

38 What I the Lord have spoken, I have spoken, and I excuse not myself; and though the heavens and the earth pass away, my word shall not pass away, but shall all be fulfilled, whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same.

verse 38 What power is afforded those who preach the Lord's word! "Whether by mine own voice or by the voice of my servants, it is the same."

39 For behold, and lo, the Lord is God, and the Spirit beareth record, and the record is true, and the truth abideth forever and ever. Amen.

Section 2 Elijah the Prophet

Scripture Mastery

D&C 2 The words of the angel Moroni to Joseph Smith: Behold, I will reveal unto you the priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet.

This section consists of Joseph Smith's inspired recollection of some of the words of Moroni when he visited Joseph on the night of September 21, 1823. The vision occurred twice more during the night of September 21-22, and again a fourth time on the morning of September 22 when Joseph, who found that he had insufficient strength to work in the fields after his experience of the previous night, fainted as he was returning to the family cabin. During those visits, Moroni paraphrased the Old Testament quotation of Malachi which predicted the coming of the Prophet Elijah:

Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord: And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse (Malachi 4:5-6).

The prophet Malachi had been the last of the Old Testament prophets, writing around 430 BC to a nation that was already declining into apostasy (see Malachi 1-2). He reproved his people for their sins, and then in closing his prophecy (and, as it turns out, closing the entire Old Testament), he foretold the comings of John the Baptist (see Malachi 3:1) and the coming again of the prophet Elijah (see Malachi 4:5-6—Elijah lived on earth just after 900 BC at the time of King Ahab of the northern kingdom of Israel) to prepare the way for the Savior. John the Baptist held the keys of the Aaronic Priesthood, and Elijah held the keys of the sealing power of the Melchizedek Priesthood.

Actually, Malachi foresaw and foretold the missions of both John the Baptist and Elijah in preparing the way for both of the comings of the Savior—his first and his second comings. These prophecies have been fulfilled relative to both the Lord's mortal ministry and his second coming. Because Joseph Smith was to be instrumental in the latter-day work preparatory to the Lord's second coming, it was fitting that Moroni should quote this passage to the young prophet as an example of those things that were about to be fulfilled.

It should be noted that Moroni's version of Malachi 4:5-6 (in D&C 2) is somewhat different than the version found in the King James Version of the Bible. Moroni's version is also found in Joseph Smith—History 1:38-39 in the Pearl of Great Price, where Joseph describes Moroni's visit. However, D&C 110:14-15; 128:17-18; 3 Nephi 25:5-6; and JST Malachi 4:5-6 all agree with the wording of the King James Version rather than with section 2 or JS-H 1:38-39. This indicates that we are dealing here not with “correct” and “incorrect” versions of the biblical passage but rather with different shades or levels of meaning reflected in the different versions.

Section 2 was first published in the 15 April 1842 Times and Seasons. Although it is chronologically the oldest of the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants (it is the words of Moroni when he appeared to Joseph Smith on the evening of September 21, 1823), it was not added to that book of scripture until 1876 by Orson Pratt under the direction of President Brigham Young.

Our feeling for this section is enhanced as we learn something about the Prophet Elijah. He was the prophet of the ninth century BC, whose story is told in 1 Kings 17 to 2 Kings 2, and who was the last of the Old Testament prophets to hold the keys of the sealing power. Elijah was “an hairy man with a girdle of leather about his loins,” and a commanding figure in the religious development of the Hebrew people. He was one of the few important biblical prophets who left us no written record. If any of Elijah’s writings ever existed, they have been lost through time.

Elijah lived at a time when the Israelites were divided into two kingdoms: the southern Kingdom of Judah and the northern Kingdom of Israel. He lived in the latter which was ruled by the wicked King Ahab and his equally wicked wife Jezebel. The people of the Kingdom of Israel were largely a spiritually degenerate group who worshiped several pagan gods, particularly one called Baal.

Elijah is remembered for his role in the following stories:

1. He prophesied of a devastating drought and famine in the land. He was sustained during the famine initially by drinking from the Brook of Cherith and by being fed “bread and flesh” by the ravens. Later he was fed by a widow whose barrel of meat and cruse of oil did not fail all of the time she supplied him with food.

2. He confronted 450 prophets of Baal and challenged them to call down fire from their god to consume the offering of a bullock. When they failed, he called down fire from the God of Israel which consumed the bullock, even after soaking the wood under the offering with water.

3. He called down fire from heaven to consume his detractors.

4. He spoke with the Lord on Mount Horeb (Sinai) on the same spot where the Lord had previously visited with Moses.

5. He parted the waters of the River Jordan.

6. He was taken up to heaven in a whirlwind and in a chariot of fire.

After Elijah’s being caught up into heaven (2 Kings 2:1-12), the legend grew that the great Prophet would come again and that his return would announce a greater coming—that of the Messiah. In fact, Old Testament scripture literally ends with this promise (Malachi 4:5-6 are the final two verses in the Old Testament record). Even today the Jewish people look forward to the return of Elijah. “This belief is manifested in rites attendant upon the celebration of the Passover: at the Passover meal a cup of wine is placed at the table for the Prophet, and the door is left open in the anticipation that he will select that day and that occasion to announce the Messiah's coming" (David C. Gross, Judaism, 183). President Joseph Fielding Smith made an interesting observation regarding this custom: "It was on [Easter Sunday] the third of April 1836, that the Jews, in their homes at the Passover [season], opened their doors for Elijah to enter. On that very day Elijah did enter—not in the home of the Jews . . . but he appeared in the house of the Lord in Kirtland and there bestowed his keys to bring to pass the very things for which these Jews, assembled in their homes, were seeking" (Doctrines of Salvation, 2:100-101). Thus, this prophecy was fulfilled on April 3, 1836, when the Prophet Elijah did appear to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in the Kirtland Temple.

Stephen E. Robinson and H. Dean Garrett have offered a minor correction to the correlation between the Jewish expectation and the appearance of the prophet Elijah in the Kirtland Temple: "It has often been noted that April 3, 1836, fell during the Jewish Passover in that year, and that during the Passover meal modern Jews save a place at the table in expectation of the return of Elijah as promised in Malachi (4:5-6). All of this is correct. However, it has also been claimed that this expectation of Elijah during the Passover feast would have occurred in Jewish homes at exactly the same time Elijah was actually appearing to Joseph and Oliver in the Kirtland Temple, and this needs some correction. Passover is observed for eight days, and in 1836, the first day of Passover—the day of the Passover meal—lasted from sundown on Friday, April 1 until sundown on Saturday, April 2. Elijah appeared to Joseph and Oliver on the afternoon of Easter Sunday, April 3, more than a full day after the Passover Feast but still clearly during the Passover Week. However, the remarkable synchronism between Elijah and the Passover and Elijah in the Kirtland Temple is not appreciably less significant because of this" (Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 66-67).

The Lord has decreed that each of us must make a concerted effort in helping to forge a welding link or a complete and perfect union which will bind all of God's children together (D&C 128:18) from Adam to the present time. No one of us can be exalted without doing our part to form this union and becoming a part of the union ourselves. This welding link is formed as we in families are sealed to one another, as we seek out the names of our dead ancestors, and as we do proxy endowments, baptismal work, and sealing ordinances for them. To man's frail intuition it is not obvious why this union must be formed, but there is no mistaking the Lord's intent regarding this work. It is obviously of central and supreme importance. The reader should note that in the celestial heaven, there will be only one family in which each and every one of the celestial inhabitants will be sealed to one another.

There is more to the sealing power than sealing families together. For a more complete discussion of the sealing power, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 11, The Sealing Power. See also the commentary for verse 1 below.

1 Behold, I will reveal unto you the Priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet, before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord.

verse 1 “Behold, I will reveal unto you the Priesthood, by the hand of Elijah the prophet” The King James Version of the Bible renders this, “Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet.” This change in wording pointed out to Joseph Smith his future role in the latter-day work of Elijah. In other words, Joseph would hold the keys of the priesthood and do the preparatory work of Elijah.

What did Elijah actually restore when he came to the Kirtland Temple on April 3, 1836? It wasn’t the priesthood since that had already been restored by John the Baptist and Peter, James, and John. He restored a vital part of the keys of the priesthood—the keys of the “sealing power.” Elijah was the last prophet of the Old Testament to hold all the keys of the sealing power of the Melchizedek Priesthood (ca. 900 BC). This is the same Elijah who appeared to Peter, James, and John on the Mount of Transfiguration to give them the same priesthood keys.

And what is the sealing power? We know that at least in part, it is the power by which families can be sealed together forever—husband to wife, parent to child, etc.—but it is also more. Consider carefully President Joseph Fielding Smith’s explanation of the power and authority Elijah came to restore:

The keys that Elijah held were the keys of the everlasting priesthood, the keys of the sealing power, which the Lord gave unto him. And that is what he . . . gave to the prophet Joseph Smith; and that included a ministry of sealing for the living as well as the dead—and it is not confined to the living, and it is not confined to the dead, but includes them both. . . .

Elijah’s mission was the sealing power. He held the keys by which the parents could be sealed together and children sealed to parents. He bestowed these keys upon the prophet Joseph Smith. . . .

But what was the nature of his mission to the earth in these latter days? It was to restore power and authority which once was given to men on the earth and which is essential to the complete salvation and exaltation of man in the kingdom of God. In other words, Elijah came to restore to the earth, by conferring on mortal prophets duly commissioned of the Lord, the fulness of the power of priesthood. This priesthood holds the keys of binding and sealing on earth and in heaven of all the ordinances and principles pertaining to the salvation of man, that they may thus become valid in the celestial kingdom of God (Doctrines of Salvation, 2:111-12, 117).

In other words, the authority that Elijah restored was the complete power to render valid in the eternal heavens all ordinances and blessings of the priesthood performed on this earth having to do with the spiritual progression and advancement of man. This would include the ordinances of baptism, eternal marriage, the endowment, the sacrament, priesthood ordinations, and all others. Under the direction of a prophet holding these keys, all priesthood ordinances are regarded as valid for all eternity providing they are participated in with righteous intent.

For a more complete discussion of the three components of the sealing power, see the commentary for Helaman 10:7.

The Holy Ghost has a vital role here. He also possesses the sealing power. Since he knows the hearts of men, he is able to certify the validity of all ordinances. In this role he is known as the Holy Spirit of Promise. The necessity of sealing by the Holy Ghost is emphasized in the following passage: “All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations, that are not made and entered into and sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, . . . are of no efficacy, virtue, or force in and after the resurrection from the dead; for all contracts that are not made unto this end have an end when men are dead” (D&C 132:7). Earthly representatives of the Lord, such as bishops and elders may be deceived by an unworthy person, but no one can deceive the Holy Spirit, who will not ratify an ordinance received unworthily. This safeguard is attached to all blessings and covenants associated with the gospel of Jesus Christ.

Why was Elijah, rather than some other prophet, sent to restore the sealing power? Apparently, as already mentioned, it was because he was the last prophet to hold the keys of the priesthood before the dispensation of the meridian of time. Certainly others held the keys and could have come including Peter, James, and John.

The coming of Elijah is an event to take place, according to the plain prediction, shortly preceding the great and dreadful day of the Lord. The great and dreadful day of the Lord, this prophecy proclaims, is the day of the second coming of our Lord in the clouds of heaven in great glory and when he shall take vengeance upon the ungodly. It is to be a day dreadful to all who are unrepentant and full of sin, but to the just it shall be a day of peace and salvation. However, before it comes there is to be some mighty work performed by the restoration of Elijah’s authority, which is so potent that it will save the earth from destruction, or from being smitten with a curse (Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 2:112-13).

“the great and dreadful day of the Lord” This day is the day of the Lord’s coming in glory. It will be “great” or “dreadful” depending on who you are—righteous or wicked. For the righteous it will be great. They shall be delivered from all their enemies, be united with Christ, and live on a millennial earth that will have been raised to a level of paradisiacal glory. On the other hand, the day will be dreadful for the wicked, for they shall be consumed by fire and delivered into spirit prison where their debts will be paid to the uttermost farthing.

2 And he shall plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers, and the hearts of the children shall turn to their fathers.

verse 2 “The fathers” are the patriarchs, the first fathers of the house of Israel: Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. “The children” are the posterity of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, either by lineage or by adoption, who, through the restoration of the new and everlasting covenant, receive from God the same promises that the patriarchs did.

Elijah came to “plant in the hearts of the children the promises made to the fathers” whereby the “hearts of the children [should] turn to their fathers” What is the meaning of this rather enigmatic verse?

First, the Prophet Joseph explained: “The word turn here should be translated bind or seal” (TPJS, 330). In other words, through the sealing power, binding covenants may be entered into which bind families into secure units that are safe from spiritual destruction.

Through the temple ordinances, God’s promises to the fathers, the tenets of the Abrahamic covenant, are extended to—“planted in the hearts of”—all God’s children. For the convenience of the reader the tenets of the Abrahamic covenant are summarized: They include: (1) Abraham will become the “father of many nations” (Genesis 17:19), and his posterity will be exceedingly numerous—even “as the stars of the heaven and as the sand which is upon the seashore (Genesis 17:2; 22:17-18). (2) The posterity of Abraham will be blessed with certain lands as an eternal inheritance. This is the land of Canaan (Genesis 17:8) extending from the Nile River to the Euphrates (Genesis 15:18). (3) Abraham’s posterity will prove to be a blessing to all families of the earth (Genesis 12:3). They will do this by bearing the priesthood and preaching the gospel to them. Thus, will every family have the opportunity, through the posterity of Abraham, to enjoy the blessings of the gospel, which include the “blessings of salvation, even of life eternal” (Abraham 2:9-11). (4) All of these blessings of the gospel and the priesthood will be offered to all of Abraham’s mortal posterity. These covenants were renewed with Isaac (Genesis 26:1-4,24) and again with Jacob (Genesis 28; 35:9-13; 48:3-4).

The hearts of the children turn to the ancient fathers because the children are now participants in and recipients of the blessings of the fathers. Being profoundly grateful for such privileges, members of the Church (motivated by the “Spirit of Elijah”) also find their hearts turning to their more immediate fathers, and they do all within their power (through genealogical research and subsequent temple work) to insure that the blessings of the ancient fathers are enjoyed by ancestry as well as posterity.

On another level, Elder Joseph Fielding Smith answered the questions—What were the promises made to the Fathers? Who made them? When?—as follows: “This expression has reference to certain promises made to those who died without a knowledge of the gospel, and without the opportunity of receiving the sealing ordinances of the priesthood in matters pertaining to their exaltation. According to these promises, the children in the latter days are to perform all such ordinances in behalf of the dead” (Improvement Era, volume 25, July 1922, 829).

One illustration of the fulfillment of the Lord's promises in connection with the powers revealed by Elijah, was described by President Wilford Woodruff:

I will here say, before closing, that two weeks before I left St. George, the spirits of the dead gathered around me, wanting to know why we did not redeem them. Said they, "You have had the use of the Endowment House for a number of years, and yet nothing has ever been done for us. We laid the foundation of the government you now enjoy, and we never apostatized from it, but we remained true to it and were faithful to God." These were the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and they waited on me for two days and two nights. I thought it very singular, that notwithstanding so much work had been done, and yet nothing had been done for them. The thought never entered my heart, from the fact, I suppose, that heretofore our minds were reaching after our more immediate friends and relatives. I straightway went into the baptismal font and called upon brother McCallister to baptize me for the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and fifty other eminent men, making one hundred in all, including John Wesley, Columbus, and others; I then baptized him for every President of the United States, except three; and when their cause is just, somebody will do the work for them (JD, 26 vols. [London: Latter-day Saints' Book Depot, 1854-1886], 19: 229 - 230).

3 If it were not so, the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his coming.

verse 3 "If it were not so [that is, if Elijah had not come to restore the sealing power], the whole earth would be utterly wasted at his [Christ's] coming." "Wasted" means "made waste" or "destroyed." The King James Version says "lest I come and smite the earth with a curse." Thus, we learn that the "curse" of the KJV is the wasting or destruction of the earth.

Why would the earth be destroyed at the Lord's second coming? Simply because the earth would not have accomplished its foreordained purpose—to establish on its face a family system patterned after the order of heaven and individuals in that system fully individually prepared to inherit eternal glory. If there were no binding and sealing powers whereby God's children could be readied to enter back into his presence and those same children cemented forever in an eternal family unit, then the purposes and designs of this earth shall have been frustrated, and there would be no reason for the earth to continue to exist.

Because of an occasional haste to associate Elijah's mission primarily with work for the dead, President Harold B. Lee reminded us that "it applies on this side of the veil as well as on the other side" (Church News, 11 August 1973, 14). By that President Lee meant that the sealing power is essential for all spiritual growth. Without it we cannot be granted the gifts of the Spirit or increments of the attributes of Christ which are the sum and substance of our spiritual growth. Of what use would this mortal experience be were we unable to grow spiritually through our obedience? See a more complete discussion of the concept of the sealing power in the commentary for Helaman 10:7 (this same commentary is repeated in the commentary for D&C 110:14-15). Also, as mentioned above, see the discussion in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine as referenced above.

Once the reader understands the expanded application of the concept of the sealing power, the following comments by the prophet Joseph Smith make sense. Joseph taught that the “spirit, power, and calling of Elijah is, that ye have power to hold the key of the revelation, ordinances, oracles, powers, and endowments of the fulness of the Melchizedek Priesthood and of the kingdom of God on the earth; and to receive, obtain, and perform all the ordinances belonging to the kingdom of God, even unto the turning of the hearts of the fathers unto the children, and the hearts of the children unto the fathers, even those who are in heaven” (HC, 6:251).

Joseph and his family drew great comfort from the fact that the Lord, by sending the messenger Moroni, had manifest his continued acceptance of Joseph as the instrument through which the gospel would be restored. This feeling of peaceful tranquility, however, was soon to end. On November 1, 1823, Alvin, Joseph’s eldest brother, became seriously ill. He died less than three weeks later of what was thought to be an intestinal obstruction resulting from a large dose of calomel. The loss of Alvin was a terrible blow to the Smith family. Not only had he been a stabilizing influence to all of them, but his industry and consistent hard work were great assets to the family’s finances. Without Alvin, the one hundred dollar annual contract payment for the farm became increasingly burdensome. The responsibility fell to Hyrum and Joseph to roam the countryside looking for work.

Character Vignette

Alvin Smith

Alvin Smith was born on February 11, 1798 in Tunbridge, Vermont and was thus nearly eight years older than the Prophet Joseph. He was the first-born of Joseph Sr. and Lucy Mack Smith. His was a pleasant and loving disposition, and he always sought out opportunities to aid the family in their continual financial struggles. Joseph Jr. later described his oldest brother as one in whom there was no guile (HC, 5:126). “He was a very handsome man, surpassed by none but Adam and Seth” (HC, 5:247). Lucy Mack writes that on the morning of November 15, 1823, “Alvin was taken very sick with the bilious colic.” One physician hurried to the Smith home and administered calomel to Alvin. The dose of calomel “lodged in his stomach,” and on the third day of sickness, Alvin became aware of the fact that death was near. He asked that each of the Smith children come to his bedside for his parting counsel and final expression of love. As his mother later recalled, “When he came to Joseph, he said, ‘I am going to die, the distress which I suffer, and the feelings that I have, tell me my time is very short. I want you to be a good boy, and do everything that lies in your power to obtain the Record [Joseph had been visited by Moroni less than three months before this time]. Be faithful in receiving instruction, and in keeping every commandment that is given you” (Lucy Mack Smith, History of Joseph Smith, Preston Nibley, ed. [Salt Lake City: Bookcraft, 1958], 86-89). Alvin died on November 19 at age 25. Lucy Mack Smith wrote of the pall of grief surrounding his passing: “Alvin was a youth of singular goodness of disposition—kind and amiable, so that lamentation and mourning filled the whole neighborhood in which he resided” (Ibid., 88). Alvin’s brother Joseph wrote many years later: “I remember well the pangs of sorrow that swelled my youthful bosom and almost burst my tender heart when he died. He was the oldest and noblest of my father’s family. . . . He lived without spot from the time he was a child. . . . He was one of the soberest of men, and when he died, the angel of the Lord visited him in his last moments” (HC, 5:126-26).

It was in this setting that Joseph went to work for Josiah Stowell of South Bainbridge, New York, and Joseph Knight of Colesville, New York. Josiah Stowell believed he had located the site of an ancient Spanish mine. When his hired hands failed to find it, he hired the Smiths—Joseph and his father—to help. Apparently, Joseph, Jr., had a reputation for being able to discern the unknown using a seer stone which he had found in 1822. After less than a month of working in the dig, Joseph prevailed upon Stowell to give up his vain pursuit.

Not only did the Smiths have to make payments on the farm, but in 1822, before Alvin died, they had started construction of a larger frame home which was completed in late 1825 or early 1826. The carpenter who did the work on this home began pressing them for his money. Indeed, he had designs on the Smith farm. His plan was to force them into foreclosure and buy the land and home for himself. In spite of the Smiths’ best efforts they did lose the farm. However, it was purchased by a friendly party who allowed them to rent the farm and continue to live on it until 1829 when the parents and five children moved in with Hyrum and his wife.

At this point it seems appropriate to digress briefly and address some charges which will be brought against the Smith family some years later in 1834. For this material I am indebted to Daniel C. Peterson and Donald L. Enders and their article, “Can the 1834 Affidavits Attacking the Smith Family Be Trusted?” in the FARMS publication, Insights [September 1993].

Eber D. Howe, in 1834, published the original anti-Mormon book, Mormonism Unveiled [sic] which featured affidavits gathered from former Smith neighbors by the excommunicated and bitter Philastus Hurlbut describing the Smith family as, among many other derogatory things, “lazy” and “indolent.” Joseph Capron, for example, declared that the Smiths' "great object appeared to be, to live without work." "It was a mystery to their neighbors," said David Stafford, "how they got their living."

In 1993, Donald L. Enders, a senior curator at the Museum of Church History and Art in Salt Lake City, published hard evidence that dealt a serious blow to the credibility of the Hurlbut-Howe affidavits (see "The Joseph Smith, Sr., Family: Farmers of the Genesee," in Joseph Smith: The Prophet, the Man, edited by Susan Easton Black and Charles D. Tate Jr., 213-25). Utilizing land and tax records, farm account books, soil surveys, horticultural studies, surveys of historic buildings, archaeological reports, and interviews with agricultural historians and other specialists—sources not generally used by scholars of Mormon origins—Enders concludes that, on questions of testable fact, the affidavits cannot be trusted.

The Smiths' farming techniques, it seems, were virtually a textbook illustration of the best recommendations of the day, showing them to have been, by contemporary standards, intelligent, skilled, and responsible people. And they were very hard working. To create their farm, for instance, the Smiths moved many tons of rock and cut down about six thousand trees, a large percentage of which were one hundred feet or more in height and from four to six feet in diameter. Then they fenced their property, which required cutting at least six or seven thousand ten-foot rails. They did an enormous amount of work before they were able even to begin actual daily farming.

Furthermore, in order to pay for their farm, the Smiths were obliged to hire themselves out as day laborers. Throughout the surrounding area, they dug and rocked up wells and cisterns, mowed, harvested, made cider and barrels and chairs and brooms and baskets, taught school, dug for salt, worked as carpenters and domestics, built stone walls, and fireplaces, flailed grain, cut and sold cordwood, carted, washed clothes, sold garden produce, painted chairs and oil-cloth coverings, butchered, dug coal, and hauled stone. And, along the way, they produced between one thousand and seven thousand pounds of maple sugar annually. "Laziness" and "indolence" are difficult to detect in the Smith family.

What resulted from the Smith's hard work? The 1830 tax records for Manchester Township appraise the family's holdings at the average level per acre for farms in the vicinity. Of the ten farms owned by the Staffords, Stoddards, Chases, and Caprons—residents of the neighborhood who affixed their signatures prominently to affidavits denigrating the Prophet's family—only one was assessed as more valuable per acre than the Smiths'. The others received lower appraisals—and, in some cases, significantly lower ones.

The conclusion to be drawn? If the Hurlbut-Howe affidavits cannot be trusted on matters that can be quantified and tested, there seems little reason to trust their judgments in the less tangible matter of character. Clearly, they reflect religious hostility and perhaps envy from their less successful neighbors. As the Prophet's brother William expressed it, "We never knew we were bad folks until Joseph told his vision.

We were considered respectable till then, but at once people began to circulate falsehoods and stories in a wonderful way.”

During the treasure hunting expedition, working for Josiah Stowell, Joseph and his father boarded at the Isaac Hale home in Harmony, Pennsylvania. While there, Joseph met Isaac's daughter, Miss Emma Hale. The relationship between Joseph and Emma flourished, and, in spite of stiff opposition from Emma's father, the couple was married in South Bainbridge on January 18, 1827, at the home of Josiah Stowell.

Joseph's fifth annual visit to Cumorah was on September 22, 1827. Joseph was twenty-one years of age at the time. Instead of going during the day as had become his annual custom, he arrived there just after midnight of September 21, in the first hours of September 22. This was done to throw off meddlers who knew of the date. On this visit he was given possession of the plates, the breastplate, and the Urim and Thummim. Rather than taking the plates home immediately, he concealed them in the woods in a hollow birch log. When he finally did pick them up the following day, he quickly learned that it was necessary to maintain a constant vigil in order to keep the plates safe, since many evil and conspiring men sought almost continually to wrest the plates from him. Joseph himself wrote: "I soon found out the reason why I had received such strict charges to keep them safe, and why it was that the messenger had said that when I had done what was required at my hand, he would call for them. For no sooner was it known that I had them, than the most strenuous exertions were used to get them from me. Every stratagem that could be invented was resorted to for that purpose. The persecution became more bitter and severe than before, and multitudes were on the alert continually to get them from me if possible (HC, 1:18).

Lucy Mack Smith described a specific group who had designs on the plates:

My husband soon learned that ten or twelve men were clubbed together, with one Willard Chase, a Methodist class leader, at their head; and what was still more ridiculous, they had sent sixty or seventy miles for a certain conjuror, to come and divine the place where the plates were secreted.

We supposed that Joseph had taken the plates, and hid them somewhere, and we were apprehensive that our enemies might discover their place of deposit. Accordingly, the next morning, after hearing of their plans, my husband concluded to go among the neighbors to see what he could learn with regard to the plans of the adverse party. The first house he came to, he found the conjuror and Willard Chase, together with the rest of the clan. Making an errand, he went in and sat down near the door, leaving it a little ajar, in order to overhear their conversation. They stood in the yard near the door, and were devising plans to find “Joe Smith’s gold bible,” as they expressed themselves. The conjuror seemed much animated, although he had traveled sixty miles the day and night previous (Biographical Sketches of Joseph Smith the Prophet, [Liverpool: 1853] 102- 03).

Brigham Young probably had this “conjuror” in mind when he wrote:

I well knew a man who, to get the plates, rode over sixty miles three times the same season they were obtained by Joseph Smith. About the time of their being delivered to Joseph by the angel, the friends of this man sent for him, and informed him that they were going to lose that treasure, though they did not know what it was. The man I refer to was a fortune-teller, a necromancer, an astrologer, a soothsayer, and possessed as much talent as any man that walked on the American soil, and was one of the wickedest men I ever saw. The last time he went to obtain the treasure he knew where it was, and told where it was, but did not know its value. Allow me to tell you that a Baptist deacon and others of Joseph’s neighbors were the very men who sent for this necromancer the last time he went for the treasure. I never heard a man who could swear like that astrologer; he swore scientifically, by rule, by note. To those who love swearing, it was musical to hear him, but not so to me, for I would leave his presence. He would call Joseph everything that was bad, and say, “I believe he will get the treasure after all.” He did get it, and the war commenced directly.

When Joseph obtained the treasure, the priests, the deacons, and religionists of every grade, went hand in hand with the fortune-teller, and with every wicked person, to get it out of his hands, and, to accomplish this, a part of them came out and persecuted him (JD, 2:180-81).

Joseph soon realized that he would never find peace in the Palmyra area, so he sent word to Alva Hale, Emma’s brother, to come up from Harmony with a wagon to transport them and their belongings back to Harmony. With some financial help from his wealthy neighbor, Martin Harris, Joseph was able to pay his debts and travel to Harmony in the late fall of 1827. During the trip the plates were hidden in a barrel of beans. Joseph and Emma moved into a small two-room house on Isaac Hale’s land, about 150 yards from the main house. Here the translation of the plates could begin, and here the two of them lived for the next two and one half years. Joseph would later purchase this house and thirteen acres of land for two hundred dollars.

Joseph spent the first two months in Harmony simply copying characters and translating a few of them. In February 1828 Martin Harris arrived in Harmony. Some time between December 1827 and February 1828, Martin Harris had received a vision affirming the divinity of Joseph’s calling (Dean Jessee, Papers of Joseph Smith, 1:9). With Joseph’s permission Martin carried some of the characters and their translation to a few Middle East experts for confirmation of the authenticity of the characters and their translation. The most important encounter was with Dr. Charles Anthon, professor of classical studies at Columbia College. After presenting the characters and Joseph's translation, Martin came away satisfied that Dr. Anthon had confirmed their authenticity. Dr. Anthon later, however, denied that he had confirmed their validity and called them a hoax.

History shows that Professor Charles Anthon could not have read the characters anyway. In 1821-22 Jean-Francois Champollion had begun a series of studies on the Rosetta Stone, which culminated many years later in his Egyptian Grammar and Dictionary. By 1829 a few of Champollion's studies from the Rosetta Stone had been published in Europe, but no Egyptian dictionary or grammar was yet available anywhere in the world. Surely Professor Anthon could not have read a reformed Egyptian text with any degree of confidence in 1829, nor could he credibly have pronounced someone else's translation either correct or incorrect.

Section 3 The Lost Manuscript

D&C 3:2 Joseph rebuked for losing 116 pages of manuscript—For God doth not walk in crooked paths.

After showing the characters and their translation, which Joseph had copied from the gold plates, to Professor Charles Anthon and others, Martin Harris returned to his home in Palmyra. He told his wife, Lucy, he was satisfied as to the authenticity of the plates and that he was planning to help Joseph translate them. This announcement made Lucy determined to see the plates for herself and settle the question once and for all as to their existence. She thus insisted on traveling to Harmony with Martin. The two of them left Palmyra for Harmony in March 1828. Once in Harmony, Joseph of course refused to allow her to see the plates. Not to be denied, she searched the Smith cabin and even the grounds outside the cabin. Anticipating Lucy's obnoxious behavior in advance, Joseph had hidden the plates somewhere outside his property. Frustrated and angry, she accused Joseph of trying to cheat her husband by encouraging him to contribute to the project financially and to serve as scribe. The Harrises returned to Palmyra after two weeks, and Lucy did her best to dissuade Martin from assisting in the translation. Seeds of doubt were planted in his mind, not only by his wife, but also by some of his Palmyra friends who told him they thought he was foolish for getting involved in this venture.

Martin traveled back to Harmony in early April 1828, and for the first time the translation started in earnest. Joseph and Martin worked steadily from April 12 until June 14, 1828. Martin wrote down the text as it was dictated by Joseph. A curtain separated them to prevent Martin's seeing the plates.

Even as he was translating, clouds of doubt continued to enter his mind. To interrupt the tedious process of translation, Joseph and Martin would sometimes go down to the banks of the Susquehannah River to throw stones. On one occasion, Martin found a stone that resembled the seer stone that Joseph was using in the translation process. He surreptitiously switched the two stones, substituting the one he had found for Joseph's stone. When they resumed the translation, Joseph paused for a long time and finally exclaimed, "Martin! What is the matter? All is as dark as Egypt." Martin confessed to Joseph that he merely had wished "to stop the mouths of fools, who had told him that the Prophet had learned the sentences and was merely repeating them" (Millennial Star, 44 [1881]:78-79, 86-87).

By June 14, 1828, they had translated sufficient text to fill 116 pages of foolscap paper (inexpensive, legal-size, lined, yellow paper bound together in tablet form). Doubts, particularly those of his wife and friends, still continued to plague Martin. If only he could show his wife and his friends the 116 pages of manuscript! If only he could see the plates! Martin asked again to see the plates and was again denied. Failing that, he asked if he might at least take home the 116 pages of manuscript. Joseph asked the Lord through the interpreters, and the answer was no. Martin continued to petition the Prophet, and Joseph continued to inquire of the Lord until finally it was Joseph's impression that the Lord had relented, but that he would hold both Martin and Joseph accountable for the safety of the manuscript. Rigid restrictions were placed upon Martin's freedom to show the manuscript. He was allowed to show the manuscript only to his brother Preserved Harris, his wife, his father and mother, and his wife's sister, Abigail Cobb. Joseph was uncomfortable with the whole arrangement, and he required Martin to bind himself in a solemn covenant to comply with these restrictions before leaving for Palmyra.

Joseph didn't have much time to worry after Martin left because he had serious problems of his own there in Harmony. On the day after Martin left, June 15, Emma gave birth to the couple's first child, a boy. Named Alvin, after Joseph's older brother, the baby died on the day of his birth. The exhausting labor and the tragic loss of her baby were almost too much for Emma, and for a while she seemed close to death. Joseph attended her night and day for two weeks, and Emma began to improve. Joseph then turned his attention to the manuscript. Sensing his anxiety, Emma suggested that he go to Palmyra to check up on Martin and to make sure the manuscript was safe. Emma's mother agreed to watch after her daughter, and Joseph caught the first stagecoach to Palmyra.

The stage let Joseph off about twenty miles from the Smith house. Emotionally and physically exhausted, Joseph probably would not have been able to make the long walk to his parents' house, save for the help of a benevolent stranger who, seeing Joseph's condition, offered to accompany him home. They reached the Smith farm at dawn. As soon as it was light, someone was sent to get Martin Harris.

Joseph expected Martin to come immediately, but the morning hours dragged by, and he did not come. Lucy Mack Smith tells the next part of the story well in her book History of Joseph Smith by His Mother.

We waited till nine, and he came not—till ten, and he was not there—till eleven, still he did not make his appearance. But at half past twelve we saw him walking with a slow and measured tread towards the house, his eyes fixed thoughtfully upon the ground. On coming to the gate he stopped, instead of passing through, and got upon the fence, and sat there some time with his hat drawn over his eyes. At length he entered the house. Soon after which we sat down to the table, Mr. Harris with the rest. He took up his knife and fork as if he were going to use them, but immediately dropped them. Hyrum, observing this, said "Martin, why do you not eat; are you sick?" Upon which Mr. Harris pressed his hands upon his temples, and cried out in a tone of deep anguish, "Oh, I have lost my soul! I have lost my soul!" Joseph who had not expressed his fears till now, sprang from the table, exclaiming, "Martin, have you lost that manuscript? Have you broken your oath, and brought down condemnation upon my head as well as your own?" "Yes, it is gone," replied Martin, "and I know not where." "Oh, my God!" said Joseph, clinching his hands. "All is lost! All is lost! What shall I do? I have sinned—it is I who tempted the wrath of God. I should have been satisfied with the first answer which I received from the Lord; for he told me that it was not safe to let the writing go out of my possession." He wept and groaned and walked the floor continually. At length, he told Martin to go back and search again. "No," said Martin, "it is all in vain; for I have ripped open beds and pillows, and I know it is not there." "Then must I," said Joseph, "return with such a tale as this? I dare not do it. And how shall I appear before the Lord? Of what rebuke am I not worthy from the angel of the Most High?" I besought him not to mourn so, for perhaps the Lord would forgive him, after a short season of humiliation and repentance. But what could I do to comfort him, when he saw all the family in the same situation of mind as himself; for sobs and groans, and the most bitter lamentations filled the house. However, Joseph was more distressed than the rest, as he better understood the consequences of disobedience. And he continued pacing back and forth, meantime weeping and grieving, until about sunset, when, by persuasion, he took a little nourishment. The next morning, he set out for home. We parted with heavy hearts, for it now appeared that all which we had so fondly anticipated, and which had been the source of so much secret gratification, had in a moment fled, and fled forever (129).

According to Pomeroy Tucker (Origin, Rise, and Progress of Mormonism, New York: D. Appleton and Company, 1867, 45-46), a prominent resident of Palmyra and Lucy Mack Smith, Martin Harris's wife played a key role in the theft of the manuscript. "There is no doubt but Mrs. Harris took it from the drawer [where Martin had placed it], with the view of retaining it until another translation should be given," wrote Lucy Mack Smith, "then to alter the original translation, for the purpose of showing a discrepancy between them, and thus make the whole appear to be a deception" (HC, 131).

Regardless of who took the manuscript and for what purpose, it was gone and would never be recovered. Joseph was inconsolable, and every member of the Smith family felt his despair.

We know by revelation (D&C 10) that the manuscript did fall into the hands of wicked people who altered the wording. They were waiting for Joseph to retranslate so they could reveal the discrepancies between the two versions.

For the indiscretion of allowing Martin Harris to borrow the manuscript, the plates and the Urim and Thummim were taken from Joseph. In July 1828, Moroni returned the Urim and Thummim to Joseph briefly to allow him to receive section 3. Of this event Joseph wrote: "After my return home [to Harmony], I was walking out a little distance, when, behold, the former heavenly messenger appeared and handed to me the Urim and Thummim again—for it had been taken from me in consequence of my having wearied the Lord in asking for the privilege of letting Martin Harris take the writings, which he lost by transgression—and I inquired of the Lord through it, and obtained [section 3]" (HC, 1:21-22). The Urim and Thummim were then taken back by Moroni.

Section 3 is a scathing rebuke of Joseph for allowing himself to be led astray by the persuasions of men. Martin Harris is also rebuked for his role in losing the manuscript.

After Joseph repented and humbled himself before the Lord, the plates and Urim and Thummim were returned to him on September 22, 1828.

The reader should be aware that after section 3 the next revelation received by Joseph Smith was section 10. Reading the revelations in the order in which they were received—section 3, 10, and then 4—gives the reader an understanding of the historical events surrounding the receiving of these revelations.

1 The works, and the designs, and the purposes of God cannot be frustrated, neither can they come to naught.

verse 1 Notice that the Lord is angry. He starts right off without any kind of introduction.

2 For God doth not walk in crooked paths, neither doth he turn to the right hand nor to the left, neither doth he vary from that which he hath said, therefore his paths are straight, and his course is one eternal round.

verse 2 "his course is one eternal round" This phrase refers to a concept which is a rich and vital one. We are governed by God's law. That law is absolute, completely reliable, unvarying, and its consequences are inescapable. For every action there is an identical result. These results follow without respect to person. It has always been thus, in Adam's day just as in ours and in the eternities to come. Thus, "his course is one eternal round." The direct opposite of this concept is also stated in the verse: "God doth not walk in crooked paths."

Yet another meaning has been suggested for the phrase "his course is one eternal round." It is that there is a circular aspect to God and his course. Humanity starts in a celestial (premortal) world, descends through a terrestrial Eden to a fallen, telestial earth, there to be redeemed and restored—first to a paradisiacal or terrestrial glory during the Millennium and thence back to a celestial glory once again.

Even a third meaning has been suggested: God's course is an eternal round since, from a human perspective, he and his works are without beginning or end, like a ring or a circle.

3 Remember, remember that it is not the work of God that is frustrated, but the work of men; verse 3 "Remember, remember" Note the repetition for emphasis.

God's power is sufficient that no one or no force or happening can frustrate or prevent him from accomplishing his designs. He will fulfill all his purposes and promises, including his promise of eternal life for all who obey him.

4 For although a man may have many revelations, and have power to do many mighty works, yet if he boasts in his own strength, and sets at naught the counsels of God, and follows after the dictates of his own will and carnal desires, he must fall and incur the vengeance of a just God upon him.

verse 4 Do we ever “set at naught the counsels of God” when he commands us in such matters as Sabbath-day observance, birth control, cleanliness of speech, and honesty in our daily activities? Do we obey willingly or do we follow the dictates of our own “carnal” desires?

5 Behold, you have been entrusted with these things, but how strict were your commandments; and remember also the promises which were made to you, if you did not transgress them.

verse 5 “these things” The plates, the Urim and Thummim, and the manuscript.

Perhaps the Lord has reference here to the warnings and promises delivered to Joseph by the prophet Moroni on the occasion of Moroni's first visit on the evening of September 21, 1823 (see JS-H 1:59).

6 And behold, how oft you have transgressed the commandments and the laws of God, and have gone on in the persuasions of men.

verse 6 “how oft you have transgressed the commandments and the laws of God” Joseph was human, and he made mistakes and committed human transgressions. We must remember that on the absolute scale of God's perfect righteousness, each of us is guilty of these same charges (Roman 3:23); so this is not to be taken as evidence of any particular wickedness on Joseph's part. Joseph himself stated: “No one need suppose me guilty of any great or malignant sins. A disposition to commit such was never in my nature” (JS-H 1:28).

7 For, behold, you should not have feared man more than God. Although men set at naught the counsels of God, and despise his words—verse 7 “behold, you should not have feared man more than God” Joseph apparently believed that Martin Harris was indispensable not only as a scribe but also in providing the financial means for publishing the finished book to the world. It was natural that Joseph might fear losing the support of such an important man as Martin Harris, and that fear may have led him to make a wrong decision in the affair of the 116 pages.

The use of the word “feared” does not refer to the fear of a coward, but was more probably caused by the fact that Joseph was but a youth and was inexperienced. In the case of Martin Harris, Joseph was dealing with a man over twenty-two years his senior, a prominent and wealthy farmer and one of the few who believed Joseph’s story and supported him with both money and labor. There would have been tremendous inner pressure for Joseph to want to show his appreciation to Martin Harris.

8 Yet you should have been faithful; and he would have extended his arm and supported you against all the fiery darts of the adversary; and he would have been with you in every time of trouble.

verses 7-8 “Although men set at naught the counsels of God, and despise his words—yet you should have been faithful” Joseph, with his experiences and his knowledge, is held to a higher standard than other men (D&C 82:3).

verse 8 “he would have been with you in every time of trouble” The Lord reassures Joseph that even without the help of Martin Harris, the Lord would have not forsaken Joseph. It is interesting to note that the Lord refers to himself in the third person here.

“fiery darts of the adversary” This phrase is, of course, figurative. Fiery means burning and indicates a poison that has penetrated a person’s soul.

9 Behold, thou art Joseph, and thou wast chosen to do the work of the Lord, but because of transgression, if thou art not aware thou wilt fall.

verse 9 “Behold, thou art Joseph” This provocative statement implies that Joseph was foreordained to his calling for good reason. He was chosen by the Lord in the premortal council in heaven for his specific assignment. This fact notwithstanding, he could lose it all if he is not obedient.

10 But remember, God is merciful; therefore, repent of that which thou hast done which is contrary to the commandment which I gave you, and thou art still chosen, and art again called to the work;

verse 10 The rebuke in section 3 must have been very hard on Joseph, particularly since he had just lost his firstborn son and had nearly lost his wife as well. But this verse offers comfort as well.

11 Except thou do this, thou shalt be delivered up and become as other men, and have no more gift.

verse 11 “have no more gift” The specific gift referred to here is the gift of translation.

12 And when thou deliveredst up that which God had given thee sight and power to translate, thou deliveredst up that which was sacred into the hands of a wicked man, verse 12 It must have been a sobering experience for Martin Harris to have been called a “wicked man” by the Lord. However, in 1829 a common use of the word wicked was someone of slight or little blame, such as a wicked child. Certainly his loss of the manuscript was unintentional, and less than a year after this unfortunate episode, the Lord was willing that Martin should become one of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon.

13 Who has set at naught the counsels of God, and has broken the most sacred promises which were made before God, and has depended upon his own judgment and boasted in his own wisdom.

14 And this is the reason that thou hast lost thy privileges for a season—verse 14 “thou hast lost thy privileges for a season” These privileges include possession of the plates and the Urim and Thummim and the right and power to translate the sacred scriptures.

15 For thou hast suffered the counsel of thy director to be trampled upon from the beginning.

verse 15 “thy director” This term likely refers to Moroni or perhaps to the Lord himself.

Others have insisted that “thy director” is the Urim and Thummim (Smith and Sjodahl, Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 20). However, elsewhere in scripture (see D&C 17:1; Mosiah 1:16; Alma 37:38, 45) and in early LDS usage, “director” or “directors” always referred to the Liahona rather than the Urim and Thummim. Because there is no evidence that Joseph had possession of the Liahona “from the beginning” of his work, this reference is more likely to him who ultimately directed Joseph—again, either to Moroni or to the Lord himself.

16 Nevertheless, my work shall go forth, for inasmuch as the knowledge of a Savior has come unto the world, through the testimony of the Jews, even so shall the knowledge of a Savior come unto my people—verse 16 “testimony of the Jews” The Bible.

“even so shall the knowledge of a Savior come unto my people” The expression “my people” here might seem to refer to the descendants of those who wrote the Book of Mormon. The following verse, however, seems to differentiate between “my people” and the descendants of the Book of Mormon people. We know also that the Book of Mormon was received by the “Gentiles” of the Great Gentile nation who were largely descendants of the house of Israel. To these and by these, the gospel would be restored and the Book of Mormon be given. The non-Jews of the house of Israel, then, are certainly considered by the Lord to be what he calls “my people.”

17 And to the Nephites, and the Jacobites, and the Josephites, and the Zoramites, through the testimony of their fathers—verse 17 Are there descendants of the Nephites alive in this final dispensation? Weren't they all killed by the Lamanites? Following the Savior's visit to the New World, there followed a two-hundred-year period of peace, the Zion society described in 4 Nephi, when the people joined together into one unified group in which there were no “ites.” After this so-called “mini-millennium” the people broke up into Nephite and Lamanite groups again. This time the division was not according to lineage but by righteousness or unrighteousness. The “Nephites” were those that wanted to live the commandments of God, and the “Lamanites” were those that did not (see 4 Nephi 1:38). Therefore, there were descendants of Nephi, Jacob, Joseph, and Zoram in both groups, and undoubtedly some of their descendants are among the native inhabitants of the Americas—probably largely of Central America. Thus, the terms Nephites and Lamanites both refer to all of the descendants of the Book of Mormon peoples.

18 And this testimony shall come to the knowledge of the Lamanites, and the Lemuelites, and the Ishmaelites, who dwindled in unbelief because of the iniquity of their fathers, whom the Lord has suffered to destroy their brethren the Nephites, because of their iniquities and their abominations.

19 And for this very purpose are these plates preserved, which contain these records—that the promises of the Lord might be fulfilled, which he made to his people;

20 And that the Lamanites might come to the knowledge of their fathers, and that they might know the promises of the Lord, and that they may believe the gospel and rely upon the merits of Jesus Christ, and be glorified through faith in his name, and that through their repentance they might be saved. Amen.

verses 19-20 “the promises of the Lord” One specific purpose of the Book of Mormon is to bring the descendants of Lehi to a knowledge of their fathers and of the religion of their fathers, in fulfillment of God's promises to their fathers.

verse 20 “rely upon the merits of Jesus Christ” This phrase means to trust in the atonement of Jesus Christ and his consequent ability to save imperfect mortals.

Section 4 Joseph Smith Senior's Call to Labor

D&C 4 Joseph Smith Senior's call to labor

By late fall of 1828, Joseph, now in Harmony, was making preparations for winter and struggling to get the translation started again. He and Emma did a little translating over the next few months, but most of Joseph's time was spent trying to prepare for winter and gather a living for Emma and himself. On August 25th Joseph had purchased thirteen acres of land from his father-in-law, Isaac Hale, and he began to farm it. He needed to support his family. By then his wife's family had rejected him and Emma, and there was not much support available to them. Joseph Knight, Sr., described Joseph's family situation during the winter of 1828-29: "Now, he could not translate but little, being poor and [having] nobody to write for him but his wife, and she could not do much and take care of her house, and he being poor and [having] no means to live but work. . . . I let him have some little provisions and . . . a pair of shoes and three dollars in money to help him a little" (Dean Jessee, "Joseph Knight's Recollection," 35).

Back on the Smith farm, Joseph, Sr., and Lucy were anxious about Joseph since they had heard nothing from him since his departure from there under such gloomy circumstances in July 1828. In October they set off to travel the 130 miles to Harmony to see Joseph and Emma. They were relieved to learn that Joseph had the plates and the Urim and Thummim back and that he had not lost his gift to translate. They enjoyed meeting with Joseph and Emma and with Isaac and Elizabeth Hale and the rest of their children. After spending almost three months in Harmony, they returned to Manchester, arriving on January 22, 1829.

Joseph, Sr., did not stay home long, however. In late January he and Samuel left again for Harmony. On the way they stopped at Colesville, New York, at the home of Joseph Knight, and the three of them traveled the rest of the way to Harmony by sleigh. During this visit, Joseph, Sr., asked his son to inquire of the Lord on his behalf. The senior Smith wanted to know what the Lord would have him do. Section 4 is the Lord's instructions to Joseph Smith, Sr.

Though this revelation was given for Joseph's father, it is addressed to all people who would serve God. It served the early Church and continues to be today our creed or standard of behavior and commitment. Elder Joseph Fielding Smith pointed out that this section—consisting of only seven verses:

[It] . . . contains sufficient counsel and instruction for a lifetime of study. No one has yet mastered it. It was not intended as a personal revelation to Joseph Smith Sr., but to be of benefit to all who desire to embark in the service of God. It is a revelation to each member of the Church, especially to all who hold the priesthood. Perhaps there is no other revelation in all our scriptures that embodies greater instruction pertaining to the manner of qualification of members of the Church for the service of God, and in such condensed form than this revelation. It is as broad, as high, and as deep as eternity. No elder of the Church is qualified to teach in the Church, or carry the message of salvation to the world, until he has absorbed, in part at least this heaven-sent instruction (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:35).

Section 4 may be classified as one of the six sections of the Doctrine and Covenants that fit into the “call to labor” category. The others are sections 11, 12, 14, 15, and 16. In these sections the Lord gives to each of these men the same basic message.

verse 1 “a marvelous work” Remember that this revelation was a prophecy at the time it was given. It refers to the revelation of the fulness of the gospel, the restoration of the priesthood, the organization of the true Church, the gathering of Israel, and the establishment of Zion and the millennial kingdom. Today we are seeing much of this prophecy fulfilled in a marvelous way.

Later in 1829, Oliver Cowdery, Hyrum Smith, Joseph Knight, and David Whitmer will also be informed of this same event by Joseph Smith the prophet, but with added emphasis—calling it “a great and marvelous work” (D&C 6:1; 11:1; 12:1; 14:1). This marvelous work had been foretold much earlier by Isaiah, as a work necessitated by the spiritual state of the Christian world. The Christian people would do lip service to the Lord but would not be worshiping him correctly. They would be taught by the precepts of men (Isaiah 29:13-14).

2 Therefore, O ye that embark in the service of God, see that ye serve him with all your heart, might, mind and strength, that ye may stand blameless before God at the last day.

verse 2 We must serve the Lord with our “heart”—emotions and feelings, “might”—our spiritual strength, “mind”—our mental capacities, and our “strength”—our physical abilities.

The Lord obviously wants a total commitment. We must serve him with all of our capacities. Only then can we be said to be magnifying our callings. Only then can we report our stewardship to the Lord in a way that will allow us to stand blameless before him.

3 Therefore, if ye have desires to serve God ye are called to the work;

verse 3 “if ye have desires . . . ye are called” The term called here is used in its less specific sense. The Church had not even been organized yet. We do not need to wait for a vision or other authorization to engage in God’s work.

Does this injunction apply only to full-time missionaries, or does it apply to every member of the Church? Elder George Albert Smith pointed out: “It is not necessary for you to be called to go into the mission field in order to proclaim the truth. Begin on the man who lives next door by inspiring confidence in him, by inspiring love in him for you because of your righteousness, and your missionary work has already begun” (CR, October 1916, 50-51).

[A] . . . significant feature of this revelation, and others given about the same period, is the naming of essential qualifications of those who were to participate in the bringing about of this marvelous work. These qualifications were not the possession of wealth, not social distinction, not political preferment, not military achievement, not nobility of birth; but a desire to serve God with all your “heart, mind, and strength”—spiritual qualities that contribute to nobility of soul. I repeat: No popularity, no wealth, no theological training in church government—yet a marvelous work was about to come forth among the children of men. Manifestly, some higher power was operating to bring about this marvelous work other than mere human and material means (CR, April 1954, 22-23).

4 For behold the field is white already to harvest; and lo, he that thrusteth in his sickle with his might, the same layeth up in store that he perisheth not, but bringeth salvation to his soul;

verse 4 “For behold the field is white already to harvest” Wheat is green as it grows but loses its color as it matures. The paler the stalks, the closer they are to an optimal ripeness.

The term “already” here means all ready or now ready.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, in his famous Divinity School Address at Harvard—shortly after the restoration—stated:

The need was never greater of new revelation than now. . . . The Church seems to totter to its fall, almost all life extinct. . . . I look for the hour when the supreme Beauty, which ravished the souls of those eastern men, and chiefly of the Hebrews, and through their lips spoke oracles to all time, shall speak in the West also (In Sidney E. Ahlstrom, ed., Theology in America [Indianapolis: Bobbs-Merrill, 1967], 306, 315-16).

A number of Latter-day Saint leaders spoke of their own quest for truth and the frustrations they felt before they encountered Joseph Smith. Brigham Young stated: “My mind was open to conviction, and I knew that the Christian world had not the religion that Jesus and his apostles taught. I knew that there was not a Bible Christian on the earth within my knowledge” (JD, 5:75). Wilford Woodruff said: “I did not join any church, believing that the church of Christ in its true organization did not exist upon the earth” (JD, 4:99). Willard Richards became “convinced that the sects were all wrong, and that God had no church on earth, but that he would soon have a church whose creed would be the truth” (HC, 2:470).

This marvelous work and wonder, to which the Lord referred, was, of course, heralded by the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

5 And faith, hope, charity and love, with an eye single to the glory of God, qualify him for the work.

verse 5 “faith, hope, charity” See a discussion of these three principles in “The Fruits of Faith” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 11, Other Notes on Faith.

“charity and love” We might assume that the use of and between charity and love implies that they are not exactly synonyms. “Charity” is the divine selfless love that God has for all men; whereas “love” may refer to a more earthly brotherly predisposition.

“with an eye single to the glory of God” A man cannot serve two masters (Mathew 6:24; Moroni 7:11-14).

6 Remember faith, virtue, knowledge, temperance, patience, brotherly kindness, godliness, charity, humility, diligence.

7 Ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you. Amen.

verse 7 This promise applies, most likely, only if we have paid the price of obedience to all else the Lord asks us to do in this section.

Brief Historical Setting

The translation work proceeded slowly with Emma and her brother Reuben Hale acting as scribes.

Section 5 Martin Harris—Witness of the Book of Mormon

After being rebuked by the Lord for losing the 116 pages of Book of Mormon manuscript (section 3) in June of 1828, the persistent Martin Harris came to Joseph Smith in Harmony, Pennsylvania, in March 1829 probably seeking the assurance that he was still accepted of the Lord. He probably also wanted to reassure himself once again that Joseph did indeed have the plates which he claimed to have. Martin wanted to actually see them that all doubt might be erased. Section 5 is the Lord's answer to Martin Harris's petition. The Lord informed him that if he would humble himself and repent, he would one day be privileged to be one of the three special witnesses of the Book of Mormon and be allowed to view the plates.

verses 1-22 These verses are directed to Joseph and not to Martin Harris.

1 Behold, I say unto you, that as my servant Martin Harris has desired a witness at my hand, that you, my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., have got the plates of which you have testified and borne record that you have received of me;

verse 1 “my servant Martin Harris has desired a witness at my hand”

Though Martin Harris seems rather stubborn, inclined to doubt, and easily swayed by the opinions of his family and friends, it would seem that he was basically honest and simply wanted to be very certain of the validity of everything he undertook. Martin wanted to actually see the plates and the Urim and Thummim, since in his mind this would be the surest way to satisfy himself that Joseph still had them. But Joseph did not have control over these sacred items. Rather, the Lord did, and the Lord forbade Joseph to show them to Martin or anyone else except at the Lord's specific command. At this point in time, not even Joseph's immediate family was allowed to view the plates.

2 And now, behold, this shall you say unto him—he who spake unto you, said unto you: I, the Lord, am God, and have given these things unto you, my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and have commanded you that you should stand as a witness of these things;

verse 2 “you should stand as a witness of these things” The Lord is speaking here to the Prophet Joseph. Joseph's calling was not to display the sacred objects to others, but only to testify of them. Only God could authorize them to be shown, and after the episode of the lost 116 pages, Joseph was not about to disobey the Lord on this point. We probably do not fully appreciate the emotional burden put on Joseph by his not being allowed to show the plates to others—not even to his wife and family.

3 And I have caused you that you should enter into a covenant with me, that you should not show them except to those persons to whom I commanded you; and you have no power over them except I grant it unto you.

4 And you have a gift to translate the plates; and this is the first gift that I bestowed upon you; and I have commanded that you should pretend to no other gift until my purpose is fulfilled in this; for I will grant unto you no other gift until it is finished.

verse 4 The “gift” spoken of in this verse is the gift of translation. The reader simply cannot begin to understand this incredible and astonishing gift until he or she comes to understand the process by which Joseph will soon translate the Book of Mormon. Please see The Process of Translating the Book of Mormon, in volume 2, Appendix A, of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine. In time, after the translation is completed, other gifts, including the priesthood of God, will be added.

5 Verily, I say unto you, that woe shall come unto the inhabitants of the earth if they will not hearken unto my words;

6 For hereafter you shall be ordained and go forth and deliver my words unto the children of men.

7 Behold, if they will not believe my words, they would not believe you, my servant Joseph, if it were possible that you should show them all these things which I have committed unto you.

8 Oh, this unbelieving and stiffnecked generation—mine anger is kindled against them.

9 Behold, verily I say unto you, I have reserved those things which I have entrusted unto you, my servant Joseph, for a wise purpose in me, and it shall be made known unto future generations;

10 But this generation shall have my word through you;

verse 10 “this generation” In one sense this designates Joseph’s own generation (1805-44). Future generations of saints will receive additional revelation through their own prophets. But in a larger sense, “Joseph’s generation” is the whole present dispensation of the gospel from the opening of the dispensation down to the second coming of Christ, which dispensation enjoys the fulness of the gospel only through the work of the prophet Joseph Smith.

“shall have my word through you” The Lord’s message to the world, the gospel of Jesus Christ, will come through the Prophet Joseph and through the Book of Mormon.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie has defined the expression “my word:”

The word is the gospel of salvation; the word is the plan of salvation; the word is the mind and will and purposes of the Lord as pertaining to his children on earth; the word is all the truths and rights and powers and doctrines and principles that are needed by men so they can take the souls they possess and transform them into the kind of souls that can go where God and Christ are (“This Generation Shall Have My Word Through You” in Sperry Symposium Classics, The Doctrine and Covenants, 35).

Elder Bruce R. McConkie has placed the calling of Joseph Smith in a particularly poignant perspective. Please see the supplemental article, Joseph Smith and the Gospel Dispensation.

11 And in addition to your testimony, the testimony of three of my servants, whom I shall call and ordain, unto whom I will show these things, and they shall go forth with my words that are given through you.

verse 11 (see also verses 15, 18) The Lord is still speaking to the Prophet Joseph. The Lord’s law of witnesses is introduced. Joseph’s testimony was not to stand alone, in keeping with the law revealed to Moses and also taught by Jesus during his earthly ministry: “At the mouth of two witnesses or at the mouth of three witnesses,” was a matter to be established or verified (Deuteronomy 17:6, Matthew 18:16; 2 Corinthians 13:1). The three witnesses of the Book of Mormon will be Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris. These three witnesses had been prophesied of by the prophet Moroni some fourteen hundred years previously (Ether 5:2-4).

12 Yea, they shall know of a surety that these things are true, for from heaven will I declare it unto them.

verse 12 “they shall know of a surety” The three witnesses will experience the plates with their own physical senses. They will see and converse with the angel Moroni, and will hear the voice of God bear witness from heaven. They will no longer have to depend upon their faith.

13 I will give them power that they may behold and view these things as they are; verses 12-14 The witnesses are to be given much more than the privilege of physically viewing the plates. They will also receive a spiritual witness of the divine authenticity of the book (see also D&C 17:3). The physical experience alone would likely have been denied or rationalized away by the witnesses. But the spiritual witness burned into their souls was never forsaken even to the end of their lives. No other person on earth will be allowed the privilege of obtaining a testimony in the same way. The eight witness saw and handled the plates but were not favored with the visit of a heavenly messenger. All the rest of us must earn our testimonies in the manner prescribed in Moroni 10:3-5.
14 And to none else will I grant this power, to receive this same testimony among this generation, in this the beginning of the rising up and the coming forth of my church out of the wilderness—clear as the moon, and fair as the sun, and terrible as an army with banners.

The term “coming forth of my church out of the wilderness” refers to symbolism used by John the Apostle in the book of Revelation (Revelation 12:6). The woman who “fled into the wilderness” (Revelation 12:6) is the Church of Christ which deteriorated into a state of apostasy in the first few centuries AD. In 1830 the Church will be restored or come “out of the wilderness”—out of a state of apostasy. See the commentary on D&C 33:5.

In scripture, the “wilderness” might also be a place of safe retreat—separate from the world or “Babylon.” Thus, Joseph went into the woods, Moses up onto the mountain, and Jesus into the wilderness of Judea to encounter or commune with God. John the Baptist is a voice “that crieth in the wilderness” (Isaiah 40:3). The saints are often called out of Babylon to go into the wilderness to avoid God’s punishments upon the world, as was Israel under Moses, Lehi before the destruction of Jerusalem, and the modern saints in their trek to the mountain West.

Here in verse 5 perhaps both of these concepts of “the wilderness” apply. In the time following Jesus’s mortal sojourn, the Church was metaphorically driven out of “the world” into “the wilderness” (see Revelation 12:6, 14; JST Revelation 12:5-7). That is, it was no longer found in the wicked and apostate world of men, but was taken to God. Thus, the Church’s being called forth out of the wilderness to take the gospel “into all the world” (D&C 18:28) here symbolizes the restoration of the true Church to the earth in the latter days.

The expression “clear as the moon, and fair as the sun and terrible as an army with banners” is used here to describe the restored gospel. The expression is taken from the Old Testament book, the Song of Solomon, which, interestingly, Joseph did not consider inspired writing.

15 And the testimony of three witnesses will I send forth of my word.

16 And behold, whosoever believeth on my words, them will I visit with the manifestation of my Spirit; and they shall be born of me, even of water and of the Spirit—verse 16 “manifestation of my Spirit” A spiritual witness may be received by all human beings in answer to their honest prayers. Still, this does not mean they have received the gift of the Holy Ghost.

“they shall be born of me” That is, born of Christ. When we are “born again” in the gospel covenant, we are born spiritually as the sons and daughters of Christ who has given us life through his suffering.

“even of water and of the Spirit” This phrase refers to the ordinance of baptism, part of which is receiving the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands. It also refers to spiritual rebirth. For a better understanding of the profoundly important ordinance of baptism, see Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth, chapter 18, volume 1 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

17 And you must wait yet a little while, for ye are not yet ordained—verse 17 Joseph has not yet received the priesthood—the authority to baptize and to bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost. Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery will receive this authority about two months later.

18 And their testimony shall also go forth unto the condemnation of this generation if they harden their hearts against them;

19 For a desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth, and shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty, and the inhabitants thereof are consumed away and utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming.

verses 18-19 These two verses read differently in the 1833 Book of Commandments. The changes were made by the Prophet Joseph himself in the 1835 edition, perhaps because of the inflammatory effect the original words had on the enemies of the Church. In the 1833 Book of Commandments, these two verses were numbered as verses 5-6. The 1833 wording, though not now officially the scripture of the Church, is as follows:

5 And thus, if the people of this generation harden not their hearts, I will work a reformation among them, and I will put down all lyings, and deceivings, and priestcrafts, and envyings, and strifes, and idolatries, and sorceries, and all manner of iniquities, and I will establish my church, like unto the church which was taught by my disciples in the days of old.

6 And now if this generation do harden their hearts against my word, behold I will deliver them up unto satan, for he reigneth and hath much power at this time, for he hath got great hold upon the hearts of the people of this generation: and not far from the iniquities of Sodom and Gomorrah, do they come at this time: and behold the sword of justice hangeth over their heads, and if they persist in the hardness of their hearts, the time cometh that it must fall upon them.

verse 19 “For a desolating scourge shall go forth among the inhabitants of the earth” A scourge is literally “a whipping” or “a flogging” and refers here figuratively to the punishment that is about to be poured out upon the nations. It is difficult to identify this scourge with any particular disease or disaster. Section 87 teaches that this scourge or punishment is to come in many forms—war, famine, plague, earthquake, and so on—“until the consumption decreed hath made a full end of all nations” (D&C 87:6). It is a “desolating” scourge because it will culminate with the Lord’s second coming in glory and leave the world empty or desolate of all telestial inhabitants and elements. As it was in the days of Noah, even so in our own dispensation, as the second coming approaches, all who will not repent will be erased. It is either repentance or destruction. In giving us this choice the Lord is treating our dispensation no differently than he treated the ancient inhabitants of Jerusalem, or the Nephites, or the inhabitants of Sodom and Gomorrah. The world in our dispensation will find the Lord's ultimatum just as unavoidable as it was anciently (see verse 20).

In agreement with verse 6 of the 1833 Book of Commandments (reproduced above), it is likely that the great scourging will begin with the Civil War: "The sword of justice hangeth over their heads." Brigham Young clearly believed this: "The war now raging in our nation [the Civil War] is in the providence of God, and was told us years and years ago by the Prophet Joseph; and what we are now coming to was foreseen by him, and no power can hinder" (JD, 10:294).

"utterly destroyed by the brightness of my coming" At the Lord's second coming, the energy that will consume the wicked will be the very glory of the resurrected Christ himself. That glory will burn away all things that cannot abide at least a terrestrial law. Thus, the earth will "be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory" (Articles of Faith 1:10).

20 Behold, I tell you these things, even as I also told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem; and my word shall be verified at this time as it hath hitherto been verified.

verse 20 "even as I also told the people of the destruction of Jerusalem" Jerusalem was destroyed in 587 BC by the Babylonians and again in AD 70 by the Romans. In the former case the people were warned by Jeremiah and Lehi among others (1 Nephi 1:18). In the latter case they were warned by the Savior himself (JS-M 1:4-20).

21 And now I command you, my servant Joseph, to repent and walk more uprightly before me, and to yield to the persuasions of men no more; verse 21 "repent and walk more uprightly" Even prophets like Joseph Smith must repent when they err.

22 And that you be firm in keeping the commandments wherewith I have commanded you; and if you do this, behold I grant unto you eternal life, even if you should be slain.

verse 22 "even if you should be slain" Note that even as early as March 1829, the Lord gives an intimation of Joseph's future martyrdom (see also D&C 6:30).

23 And now, again, I speak unto you, my servant Joseph, concerning the man that desires the witness—verse 23 "the man that desires the witness" The Lord is referring to Martin Harris.

24 Behold, I say unto him, he exalts himself and does not humble himself sufficiently before me; but if he will bow down before me, and humble himself in mighty prayer and faith, in the sincerity of his heart, then will I grant unto him a view of the things which he desires to see.

verse 24 “then will I grant unto him a view of the things which he desires to see” Martin is promised that he will become one of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon plates (see D&C 17).

25 And then he shall say unto the people of this generation: Behold, I have seen the things which the Lord hath shown unto Joseph Smith, Jun., and I know of a surety that they are true, for I have seen them, for they have been shown unto me by the power of God and not of man.

verse 25 “and I know of a surety that they are true” Again, Martin will see and hear with his own physical senses. He will know as Joseph knew with no further need of faith. The spiritual witness he received and the covenant he entered into at the time he saw the plates would be indelibly burned into his soul. He will know of himself with no need of any other witness.

26 And I the Lord command him, my servant Martin Harris, that he shall say no more unto them concerning these things, except he shall say: I have seen them, and they have been shown unto me by the power of God; and these are the words which he shall say.

verses 25-26 “and these are the words which he shall say” Notice how the Lord boxes in Martin Harris and the testimony he is to bear. Martin had the nasty habit of preaching his own pet ideas and theories. When it was appropriate, he had to say what he was commanded to say and no more, or else he would break his covenant with God and stand condemned (see verse 27).

27 But if he deny this he will break the covenant which he has before covenanted with me, and behold, he is condemned.

verse 27 The covenant spoken of in this verse is defined by the Lord in verses 2-3 of this section.

28 And now, except he humble himself and acknowledge unto me the things that he has done which are wrong, and covenant with me that he will keep my commandments, and exercise faith in me, behold, I say unto him, he shall have no such views, for I will grant unto him no views of the things of which I have spoken.

29 And if this be the case, I command you, my servant Joseph, that you shall say unto him, that he shall do no more, nor trouble me any more concerning this matter.

verses 28-29 Martin was wealthy and impetuous, and despite the witnesses he had received, was not yet sufficiently humble, even after losing the manuscript. This was Martin's last chance. If he would not repent and humble himself, the Lord did not want to be troubled again concerning him in the process of restoring the gospel to the earth. In this respect, Doctrine and Covenants 5:28-29 may be called Martin Harris's "wake up call."

30 And if this be the case, behold, I say unto thee Joseph, when thou hast translated a few more pages thou shalt stop for a season, even until I command thee again; then thou mayest translate again.

verses 30, 34 Joseph is commanded to stop translating "for a season" until the Lord provides "means" by which the translation may be accomplished. The "means" will be explained in section 6.

31 And except thou do this, behold, thou shalt have no more gift, and I will take away the things which I have entrusted with thee.

32 And now, because I foresee the lying in wait to destroy thee, yea, I foresee that if my servant Martin Harris humbleth not himself and receive a witness from my hand, that he will fall into transgression;

verse 32 If Martin Harris will not accept a quiet witness of the Spirit but continues to demand more dramatic proof, then he will fall.

33 And there are many that lie in wait to destroy thee from off the face of the earth; and for this cause, that thy days may be prolonged, I have given unto thee these commandments.

34 Yea, for this cause I have said: Stop, and stand still until I command thee, and I will provide means whereby thou mayest accomplish the thing which I have commanded thee.

verse 34 See verse 30 and its commentary.

35 And if thou art faithful in keeping my commandments, thou shalt be lifted up at the last day. Amen.

verse 35 "thou shalt be lifted up at the last day" To be lifted up is to be resurrected with a celestial body and be admitted into the celestial kingdom of God. This expression seems to have originated from the idea of being lifted up from the earth at the second coming of Christ when all wickedness is left behind and burned (see D&C 88:96; 1 Thessalonians 4:17).

“at the last day” This expression refers to the last day of Babylon, or the world, which is the present telestial earth. It will also be the day of Jesus’s return to earth in glory.

Section 6 Confirmation of Oliver Cowdery's Testimony

In the winter of 1828-29 the twenty-two year old Oliver Cowdery was a school teacher in Manchester, New York, and he was boarding at the home of the Joseph Smith, Sr., family. It was the custom of the day for teachers to board in the homes of their pupils, and since the Smiths had children in Oliver's school, he came to stay with them. Through the Smith family he had heard of the Prophet Joseph and the gold plates. He had also learned of the plates from a friend whom he had met in Palmyra, a man from Fayette, New York, named David Whitmer. Oliver had been moved to pray and ask the Lord concerning the authenticity of Joseph's calling. As Oliver explained, "The subject . . . seems working in my very bones, and I cannot, for a moment, get it out of my mind" (Lucy Mack Smith, History of Joseph Smith, 139). Oliver had been granted a spiritual witness of Joseph's mission, and he was convinced that the Lord wanted him to assist in the work of translation. According to an 1832 history of Joseph Smith, Oliver had actually seen the Lord and the plates in vision before seeking out the Prophet Joseph (Dean Jessee, Personal Writings of Joseph Smith, 8).

Oliver was the youngest of eight children and was born October 3, 1806 in Wells, Vermont. Thus, he was nearly a year younger than Joseph. In 1825 he moved to New York where he worked successively as a clerk in a general store, as a blacksmith, and as a farmer. In 1828 he entered the teaching profession in Manchester, New York.

In April 1829 Oliver traveled to Harmony, Pennsylvania, with Samuel Smith arriving on April 5. Lucy Mack Smith reported that about three days before the arrival of Oliver and Samuel (2 April), Joseph had called upon the Lord to send him a scribe, and that Joseph had been informed that the scribe should be forthcoming in a few days (History of Joseph Smith, 141).

Of course Joseph knew immediately why Oliver had come. Shortly after Oliver's arrival in Harmony, Joseph inquired of the Lord through the Urim and Thummim and received section 6 which consists of instructions and counsel to Oliver Cowdery. By April 7, he and Joseph were working full time on the Book of Mormon translation.

While Joseph translated, Oliver acted as scribe. By July 1, 1829, they finished the translation of the entire Book of Mormon. They moved from Harmony, Pennsylvania, to Fayette, New York, before the translation was completed. See The Process of Translating the Book of Mormon, volume 2, Appendix A of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

D&C 6 Confirmation of Oliver Cowdery's Testimony

D&C 6:7 Seek not for riches but for wisdom.

D&C 6:16 Yea, I tell thee, that thou mayest know that there is none else save God that knowest thy thoughts and the intents of thy heart.

D&C 6:22-23 Oliver Cowdery's secret prayer.

D&C 6:33 The law of the harvest: Fear not to do good, my sons, for whatsoever ye sow, that shall ye also reap; therefore, if ye sow good ye shall also reap good for your reward.

D&C 6:34, 36 Therefore, fear not, little flock; do good; let earth and hell combine against you, for if ye are built upon my rock, they cannot prevail. Look unto me in every thought; doubt not, fear not.

D&C 6:37 Behold the wounds which pierced my side, and also the prints of the nails in my hands and feet; be faithful, keep my commandments, and ye shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.

verses 1-9 These verses in this section are identical to verses 1-9 of section 11, a revelation given to Hyrum Smith, the prophet's brother. Also verses 1-5 of this section are identical to verses 1-5 of section 12, a revelation to Joseph Knight and to verses 1-5 of section 14, a revelation given to David Whitmer. Further, D&C 6:6 is also very similar in substance to D&C 14:6, and section 4 is similar in substance to the opening verses of sections 6, 11, 12, and 14. Why the repetition? It should not be understood as a divine "form letter" implying less than personal or individual concern for the recipients. Rather, it emphasizes the importance of the calling made to these servants and to all who have followed them in the Lord's service. The sacred ordinances of the gospel, while creating an individual, personal bond between the Lord and each person who enters into the covenants, often employ the same words for all who receive them. That the Sermon on the Mount was repeated on more than one occasion, for example (see Matthew 5-7; Luke 6; 3 Nephi 12-14), emphasizes the tremendous importance of the sermon.

2 Behold, I am God; give heed unto my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore give heed unto my words.

verse 2 "quick" The word of the Lord is "quick." Quick here does not mean swift but rather means something living and alive. Thus, to be quickened by the Spirit means to be given spiritual life. The word of the Lord is quick and powerful because it is a source of life, energy, and real power.

"sharper than a two-edged sword" How might we explain the symbolism here? This refers not to a one-handed foil or a saber, but to a heavy, two-handed broadsword that is sharpened on both its edges. This two-edged sword is highly effective and can cut in any direction regardless of the direction in which the blow was struck. Thus, just as a two-edged sword can cut deep enough to sever joints and cleave bone, so might the Lord's word bring spiritual death to those who do not give heed to it. Also, the word of God has power to pierce the soul as a sword and penetrate to the inmost parts of man. Also, it can cut through error and falsehood with particular efficiency. The two-edged sword will cut regardless of which way it is swung. There is no place that a person may touch it without feeling the effect it has or could have. Likewise, the word of God will have a positive or a negative effect upon whomever it contacts.

3 Behold, the field is white already to harvest; therefore, whoso desireth to reap, let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God.

4 Yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God.

5 Therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive; if you will knock it shall be opened unto you.

verse 5 Joseph Fielding Smith, in a conference address taught, "There is no reason in the world why any soul should not know where to find the truth. If he will only humble himself and seek in the spirit of humility and faith" (CR, April 1951, 59).

6 Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion;

verse 6 "as you have asked" The Lord is speaking to Oliver Cowdery. Oliver had requested a revelation from the Lord. He wanted to know what the Lord had in mind for him to do relative the Book of Mormon plates. Other sections of the Doctrine and Covenants (4, 11, 12, and 14) were all given in response to individuals' requests that Joseph inquire of the Lord in their behalf.

"keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion" Here it is in a nutshell. Here is all one must do in this life to inherit eternal life. Keep the commandments and work to establish Zion in this final dispensation! Keep in mind that the Church had not yet been organized.

"Zion" Let us briefly review the concept of Zion.

Literally, Zion is the kingdom of God upon the earth, a society that governs itself by celestial principles. Because of ancient scriptural prophecy we have greatly embellished the concept of Zion using various metaphors. Figuratively, Zion is that glorious city or land which will be established in the latter days some time prior to the Lord's second coming. It is represented figuratively as a city with high thick walls and an impenetrable gate. This safe refuge will serve as a place of gathering and security to those who accept the gospel of Jesus Christ. Zion is often metaphorically compared to a tent that covers the earth. This tent is anchored by a center pole and stakes.

Zion will be the abode of Jesus as he administers the government of the earth during the Millennium. It will not be a secret place. Rather, all will know of it, even those who do not dwell there. Zion is described in scripture as “Fair as the sun, clear as the moon, and . . . terrible unto all nations; [such] that the kingdoms of this world [will be] constrained to acknowledge that the kingdom of Zion is in very deed the kingdom of our God and his Christ” (D&C 105:31-32).

In the latter days two places will be called the center places of Zion. The first is the city of Jerusalem itself which will be restored to its holy position of grandeur and beauty. It will serve as a gathering place for the tribe of Judah. The second is the New Jerusalem to be built upon the western hemisphere with its center pole in Jackson County, Missouri. To Zion on the western hemisphere will gather the rest of Israel and those Gentiles without the house of Israel who accept the gospel and are “adopted” into the house of Israel.

Zion is not limited just to the city of Jerusalem and Jackson County, Missouri. In the latter days, wherever there are saints of God who have embraced the restored gospel, there is Zion. These are found in stakes all over the world.

Zion may also be something other than a place. Zion may also be an attitude of acceptance of the gospel, a spirit of obedience, a purity of heart. Just as the title Babylon may refer in a specific way to an ancient city or in a general way to the evil which exists in the world, so may the word Zion represent either a city or label used to describe all that is truly righteous, wholesome, and in tune with the Spirit of the Lord and his eternal plan.

Those who assist in the cause of Zion in the latter days will be exalted.

7 Seek not for riches but for wisdom, and behold, the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall you be made rich. Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich.

verse 7 Here is a priceless verse well-worth committing to memory!

“Seek not for riches but for wisdom” Wisdom may be defined as the ability to view any situation, person, or object in an eternal perspective. It is spiritual common sense.

“the mysteries of God” Harold B. Lee taught that a mystery is a spiritual truth that may be grasped only through divine revelation—a fact or concept that can truly be understood only with the help and influence of the Spirit of God. It is this type of mystery referred to in this particular verse. All spiritual truths are “mysteries” to those who are “hard-hearted” or “stiff-necked,” as they simply are unable to understand them (Ye Are the Light of the World, [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book, 1974], 211).

Today we might use the word “mystery” in an additional context: A mystery may be a point of doctrine that is unusually sacred or esoteric, and one should not speak freely about it. Usually the Lord has not given a complete revealed explanation of this type of mystery, nor is it necessarily his intent to do so.

8 Verily, verily, I say unto you, even as you desire of me so it shall be unto you; and if you desire, you shall be the means of doing much good in this generation.

9 Say nothing but repentance unto this generation; keep my commandments, and assist to bring forth my work, according to my commandments, and you shall be blessed.

verse 9 “Say nothing but repentance unto this generation.” This is not to say that the Lord’s servants should not say anything about the other principles of the gospel such as baptism and obedience to the commandments, but all that the missionaries do and say should be in the spirit of bringing the people to repentance.

10 Behold thou hast a gift, and blessed art thou because of thy gift. Remember it is sacred and cometh from above—verse 10 “thou hast a gift” The gift here is Oliver’s calling to be the scribe of Joseph, to assist in the translation of the Book of Mormon, and to establish Zion. See also the commentary for verses 10-12. This gift, together with its attendant blessings of revelation, was lost by Martin Harris through his carelessness and lack of faith.

11 And if thou wilt inquire, thou shalt know mysteries which are great and marvelous; therefore thou shalt exercise thy gift, that thou mayest find out mysteries, that thou mayest bring many to the knowledge of the truth, yea, convince them of the error of their ways.

verse 11 “thou shalt know mysteries which are great and marvelous” Anything that is known to God and not known to man is a mystery to man. One of the promises made to Oliver and others in this dispensation is that if they seek, they can know mysteries. At the time of this revelation, the content of the Book of Mormon was a mystery, and much of what we take for granted today as basic principles of the restored gospel was still a mystery to Oliver and Joseph in 1829.

12 Make not thy gift known unto any save it be those who are of thy faith. Trifle not with sacred things.

verses 10-12 Oliver’s gift was a talent for receiving divine revelation (see D&C 8:1-5). We will learn that Oliver had other special gifts (see D&C 6:25-28 and D&C 8:6-9).

To what extent does each member of the Church have the gift of revelation? Elder Bruce R. McConkie pointed out:

It is the privilege and the right of every member of the Church to receive revelation and to enjoy the gifts of the Spirit. When we are confirmed members of the Church, we receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, which is the right to the constant companionship of that member of the Godhead, based on faithfulness. . . .

Religion comes from God by revelation and deals with spiritual things; and unless and until a man has received revelation, he has not received religion, and he is not on the path leading to salvation in our Father's kingdom (CR, April 1971, 100-01).

Joseph Smith said: "God hath not revealed anything to Joseph, but what he will make known unto the Twelve, and even the least saint may know all things as fast as he is able to bear them" (TPJS, 149).

"Make not thy gift known" Is the Lord advising Oliver to keep the fact of his calling relative to the Book of Mormon secret? It would seem more likely that the Lord here is cautioning Oliver to treat as sacred the divine revelations and mysteries to which he will be privy in this new calling (Matthew 7:6).

13 If thou wilt do good, yea, and hold out faithful to the end, thou shalt be saved in the kingdom of God, which is the greatest of all the gifts of God; for there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation.

verse 13 "there is no gift greater than the gift of salvation" At that time the words "salvation" (verse 13) and "exaltation" were used interchangeably. What a spiritual pearl is contained in this verse: The "greatest of all the gifts of God" is the gift of exaltation or eternal life (see also D&C 14:7). Though some would try to take credit for "working out their own salvation," we are reminded that salvation is ultimately a gift of God—not a purchase, reward, or wage. Salvation is a gift, through the mercy of God and the atonement of Christ.

14 Verily, verily, I say unto thee, blessed art thou for what thou hast done; for thou hast inquired of me, and behold, as often as thou hast inquired thou hast received instruction of my Spirit. If it had not been so, thou wouldst not have come to the place where thou art at this time.

verse 14 This revelation to Oliver helped put his doubts to rest. In this verse (and also in verses 15, 22, and 23) the Lord reminds Oliver about two experiences that Oliver had never shared with Joseph. The first was Oliver's practice of inquiring of the Lord for direction and the fact that he had "received instruction" of the Spirit. The second was Oliver's specific inquiry about Joseph and the plates. On the particular night that Oliver had inquired of the Lord in prayer, the Lord, through the Spirit, provided Oliver with a witness as to the divine nature of Joseph's mission and the authenticity of the plates. Oliver had told no one, including Joseph, about these experiences, and they were known only to God and to himself.

15 Behold, thou knowest that thou hast inquired of me and I did enlighten thy mind; and now I tell thee these things that thou mayest know that thou hast been enlightened by the Spirit of truth;

16 Yea, I tell thee, that thou mayest know that there is none else save God that knowest thy thoughts and the intents of thy heart.

verse 16 How private are our thoughts? “Men’s thoughts are secret and cannot be pried into by other men, or for that matter by devils” (McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 777). Elder James E. Faust taught, “He [Satan] cannot know our thoughts unless we speak them” (CR, October 1987, 43). Only God knows our thoughts and feelings: “Thou, [even] thou only, knowest the hearts of all the children of men” (1 Kings 8:39). This verse is Solomon’s prayer to the Lord.

17 I tell thee these things as a witness unto thee—that the words or the work which thou hast been writing are true.

18 Therefore be diligent; stand by my servant Joseph, faithfully, in whatsoever difficult circumstances he may be for the word’s sake.

19 Admonish him in his faults, and also receive admonition of him. Be patient; be sober; be temperate; have patience, faith, hope and charity.

verse 19 “Admonish him in his faults” Even prophets have faults. Oliver is commanded to admonish Joseph in his faults; which means to counsel, advise, and caution Joseph against his faults.

20 Behold, thou art Oliver, and I have spoken unto thee because of thy desires; therefore treasure up these words in thy heart. Be faithful and diligent in keeping the commandments of God, and I will encircle thee in the arms of my love.

verse 20 “Behold, thou are Oliver” As D&C 3:9 does for Joseph Smith, this statement does for Oliver Cowdery. This provocative statement implies that Oliver was foreordained to his calling for good reason.

21 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I am the same that came unto mine own, and mine own received me not. I am the light which shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not.

22 Verily, verily, I say unto you, if you desire a further witness, cast your mind upon the night that you cried unto me in your heart, that you might know concerning the truth of these things.

23 Did I not speak peace to your mind concerning the matter? What greater witness can you have than from God?

24 And now, behold, you have received a witness; for if I have told you things which no man knoweth have you not received a witness?

verses 22-24 Joseph Smith reported:

After we had received this revelation [D&C 6], Oliver Cowdery stated to me that after he had gone to my father's to board, and after the family had communicated to him concerning my having obtained the plates, that one night after he had retired to bed he called upon the Lord to know if these things were so, and the Lord manifested to him that they were true, but he had kept the circumstance entirely secret, and had mentioned it to no one; so that after this revelation was given, he knew that the work was true, because no being living knew of the thing alluded to in the revelation, but God and himself (HC, 1:35).

Oliver had also informed his close friend David Whitmer of the remarkable witness he had received. According to Whitmer, Oliver "wrote me that Joseph had told him his [Oliver's] secret thoughts, and all he had meditated about going to see him, which no man on earth knew, as he supposed, but himself, and so he stopped [at Harmony] to write for Joseph" (Jenson, "Three Witnesses," 208).

verses 25-30 Oliver is the "means," spoken of in section 5, provided by the Lord to enable the translation process to proceed.

In these verses Oliver is given the keys of the gift of translation conjointly with the Prophet Joseph. This is likely the beginning of power given to Oliver to be the second witness of this dispensation. Later he will be given the apostleship and be called as the Second Elder of the Church. Note in verses 29 and 30 the intimation that this might even lead him to a martyr's crown.

25 And, behold, I grant unto you a gift, if you desire of me, to translate, even as my servant Joseph.

26 Verily, verily, I say unto you, that there are records which contain much of my gospel, which have been kept back because of the wickedness of the people;

verse 26 "records . . . which have been kept back because of the wickedness of the people" These likely include the sealed portion of the plates of Mormon which contained an account of the vision seen by the brother of Jared. Other records would also include parts of Joseph Smith's translation of the Bible (see D&C 35:20), the book of Moses (revealed June 1830-February 1831), and also the book of Abraham. Undoubtedly, there are yet other records still waiting to be brought forward.

27 And now I command you, that if you have good desires—a desire to lay up treasures for yourself in heaven—then shall you assist in bringing to light, with your gift, those parts of my scriptures which have been hidden because of iniquity.

28 And now, behold, I give unto you, and also unto my servant Joseph, the keys of this gift, which shall bring to light this ministry; and in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established.

verses 25-28 Another of Oliver Cowdery's gifts is the gift of translation.

verse 28 “in the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established” Oliver was to be a second witness of the restoration, Joseph Smith being the first witness. Oliver will be involved with every major restoration event—the translation of the Book of Mormon, the restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood, the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood, and the restoration of priesthood keys in the Kirtland Temple. It would be Oliver's duty and right to bear witness of these events. Joseph would no longer stand alone.

29 Verily, verily, I say unto you, if they reject my words, and this part of my gospel and ministry, blessed are ye, for they can do no more unto you than unto me.

30 And even if they do unto you even as they have done unto me, blessed are ye, for you shall dwell with me in glory.

verses 29-30 “even if they do unto you even as they have done unto me, blessed are ye” President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote the following concerning Oliver Cowdery and the martyrdom of Hyrum Smith:

Had Oliver Cowdery remained true, had he been faithful to his testimony and his calling as the “Second Elder” and Assistant President of the Church, I am just as satisfied as I am that I am here that Oliver Cowdery would have gone to Carthage with the prophet Joseph Smith and laid down his life instead of Hyrum Smith. That would have been his right. Maybe it sounds a little strange to speak of martyrdom as being a right, but it was a right. Oliver Cowdery lost it and Hyrum Smith received it. According to the law of witnesses—and this is a divine law—it had to be” (Doctrines of Salvation, 1:221-22).

31 But if they reject not my words, which shall be established by the testimony which shall be given, blessed are they, and then shall ye have joy in the fruit of your labors.

32 Verily, verily, I say unto you, as I said unto my disciples, where two or three are gathered together in my name, as touching one thing, behold, there will I be in the midst of them—even so am I in the midst of you.

verse 32 “where two or three are gathered together in my name” At this point in church history there were just a handful of disciples who knew the truth of the work. It was indeed a “little flock” (see verse 34).

33 Fear not to do good, my sons, for whatsoever ye sow, that shall ye also reap; therefore, if ye sow good ye shall also reap good for your reward.

verse 33 This verse is a succinct statement of the Law of the Harvest (“whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap”—Galatians 6:7).

34 Therefore, fear not, little flock; do good; let earth and hell combine against you, for if ye are built upon my rock, they cannot prevail.

35 Behold, I do not condemn you; go your ways and sin no more; perform with soberness the work which I have commanded you.

36 Look unto me in every thought; doubt not, fear not.

37 Behold the wounds which pierced my side, and also the prints of the nails in my hands and feet; be faithful, keep my commandments, and ye shall inherit the kingdom of heaven. Amen.

verses 36-37 The Lord reminds us to remember him always and keep him and his purposes in our minds continuously. His reference to the “wounds” and “prints” is only figurative. We “behold the wounds which pierced [his] side, and also the prints of the nails in [his] hands and feet” when we prayerfully ponder his atoning sacrifice and death.

Brief Historical Setting

From April 7, the translation proceeded steadily until early July 1829, when it was completed. This period of translation was a colorful and important period in our church history as the following pages will relate.

Section 7 Translation of the Parchment of John

As Joseph and Oliver were translating the Book of Mormon, they came to references of translated beings such as Alma and Moses in the Book of Alma and the three Nephites in 3 Nephi. The beloved apostle John was also mentioned. Joseph and Oliver had occasion to discuss this ancient apostle. Perhaps discussion between the two of them was also stimulated by one of the most frequently misunderstood passages in all the scripture, John 21:20-23, in which the resurrected Lord indicated that his beloved apostle John will not taste of death but instead will be translated. This passage of scripture has been debated for centuries among the various Christian sects with some scholars saying that he indeed died and was buried at Ephesus; while others believe he still walks the earth. A third school of thought states that even though he was buried at Ephesus, he is not really dead but simply sleeps in the grave until the second coming of the Savior. A difference of opinion arose between Joseph and Oliver as to whether John did or did not actually die. Oliver felt that he did die, and Joseph held that he did not. In order to resolve this question, Joseph inquired of the Lord through the Urim and Thummim and received this magnificent revelation. Joseph recorded that “during the month of April, I continued to translate, and he to write, with little cessation, during which time we received several revelations. A difference of opinion arising between us about the account of John the Apostle, mentioned in the New Testament [John 21:20-23] as to whether he died or continued to live, we mutually agreed to settle it by the Urim and Thummim and the following is the word which we received” (HC, 1:35-36).

Joseph had splashed onto his consciousness an actual parchment, handwritten by John himself. Joseph did not actually have possession of the parchment, but rather, through the process of revelation he discerned the parchment and was given the translation of it. Joseph learned that John did not die but was translated.

The historical setting for the conversation recorded in Doctrine and Covenants 7 is the appearance of the resurrected Jesus to his disciples at the Sea of Tiberias, or Galilee. According to the New Testament, on this occasion the Savior ate fish with the disciples and instructed Peter to feed his sheep (see John 21:9-17). Peter then asked the Savior what the apostle John would do and received an ambiguous answer—at least it is ambiguous as it is now recorded in John’s gospel (see John 21:20-23).

For a more thorough discussion of translated beings than is found here, see Doctrine of Translation in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 17.

A shorter version of section 7 was first published in the 1833 Book of Commandments with a heading that stated it was “translated from parchment, written and hid up” by John the Revelator. Verses 6 and 7 were added to the text of section 7 in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants under the supervision of the prophet

Joseph Smith, and the wording of other verses was revised at that time by the Prophet. Because Joseph worked on the Joseph Smith Translation after section 7 was received, it may be that he obtained additional insights on John 21:20-23 from that labor, which he then added to this revelation in the 1835 edition.

D&C 7 Translation of the parchment of John

1 And the Lord said unto me: John, my beloved, what desirest thou? For if you shall ask what you will, it shall be granted unto you.

verse 1 Section 7 explains that in the episode recorded in John 21, Jesus had asked his apostles what they desired of him in much the same way that he later asked his American disciples (see 3 Nephi 28:1-12). While Peter asked to come speedily to Christ in his kingdom, John wanted to keep working on the earth to bring more souls to Christ. John was therefore allowed to remain upon the earth until the second coming to minister to those who would be heirs of salvation.

“John, my beloved” The Bible nowhere explicitly identifies the “beloved disciple” as the apostle John, though that has been the traditional understanding of the term for centuries. Only here and in 3 Nephi 28:6 is that identification made explicit in the scriptures.

2 And I said unto him: Lord, give unto me power over death, that I may live and bring souls unto thee.

verse 2 To possess “power over death” does not, of course, mean that a person will never die. All must die (see 1 Corinthians 15:22). For one who has power over death, death is held in abeyance according to the will of God.

3 And the Lord said unto me: Verily, verily, I say unto thee, because thou desirest this thou shalt tarry until I come in my glory, and shalt prophesy before nations, kindreds, tongues and people.

verses 1-3 It is interesting to note the similarities between this conversation between John and Jesus and the conversation between the Savior and the three Nephite apostles who also wished to “tarry” (see 3 Nephi 28:1, 4-7).

4 And for this cause the Lord said unto Peter: If I will that he tarry till I come, what is that to thee? For he desired of me that he might bring souls unto me, but thou desiredst that thou mightest speedily come unto me in my kingdom.

verse 4 Peter’s desire was to pass through both death and the spirit world to become a resurrected, celestial being in the kingdom of God. It was in this glorious condition that Peter later appeared to Joseph and Oliver (see D&C 27:12).

5 I say unto thee, Peter, this was a good desire; but my beloved has desired that he might do more, or a greater work yet among men than what he has before done.

verse 5 “I say unto thee, Peter, this was a good desire” Sometimes people read jealous motives into Peter’s question about John’s future, when it is perhaps more likely that Peter was afraid he had asked for the wrong thing. The Lord reassured Peter that his request was a good one, but that John desired to do a greater work upon the earth before he came to Christ in his kingdom.

“a greater work” John’s desire to do “a greater work” does not necessarily mean a greater work than Peter’s in some competitive sense. It may simply mean a greater work than John himself had done so far, without any implied comparison to Peter’s request.

6 Yea, he has undertaken a greater work; therefore I will make him as flaming fire and a ministering angel; he shall minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation who dwell on the earth.

verse 6 “he shall minister for those who shall be heirs of salvation who dwell on the earth” John’s extended ministry will be to those who live on this earth, including the lost tribes of Israel (see D&C 77:11, 14). This should dampen any speculation that the lost tribes may not be upon the earth (see also 110:11). How has John accomplished this grand prophecy? John’s written prophecy has gone forth widely among the nations. He is the author of five books of the Bible including the Gospel of John, three epistles, and the book of Revelation. And who are “those who shall be heirs of salvation”? These are the descendants of Abraham who are faithful in keeping the Lord’s commandments. Also included are those not of Abraham’s descent who are brought into Abraham’s family by adoption. That is, they are allowed into the House of Israel through baptism and by remaining faithful to their covenants.

Joseph Smith gave us further insight concerning John’s ministry. Joseph taught that John’s mission was to prepare the ten tribes of Israel for the final gathering (see D&C 77:14). At a conference of the Church held in June 1831, Joseph Smith said that, “John the Revelator was then among the ten tribes of Israel who had been led away by Shalmaneser, king of Assyria, to prepare them for their return from their long dispersion” (HC, 1:176). It is not necessary to assume, however, that the ten tribes know who they are or that they know John by his biblical identity. It is only certain that wherever they are and whatever they know, he is among them and is working to prepare them to receive the fulness of the gospel and to witness the second coming of the Savior. John also ministered to the Prophet Joseph and Oliver Cowdery in 1829 when he assisted Peter and James in the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood (D&C 27:12). In addition, Heber C. Kimball recorded an appearance of John in the Kirtland Temple:

When the Prophet Joseph had finished the endowments of the First Presidency, the Twelve, and the Presiding Bishops, the First Presidency proceeded to lay hands upon each one of them to seal and confirm the anointing; and at the close of each blessing the whole of the quorums responded to it with a loud shout of Hosanna! Hosanna! etc.

While these things were being attended to, the beloved disciple John was seen in our midst by the Prophet Joseph, Oliver Cowdery, and others (Whitney, Life of Heber C. Kimball, 91-92).

7 And I will make thee to minister for him and for thy brother James; and unto you three I will give this power and the keys of this ministry until I come.

verse 7 “I will make thee to minister for him and for thy brother James”

The Lord is still speaking to Peter, who will minister for John and James in some unspecified manner. The three of them together will hold the keys of the priesthood unto the second coming. When one who holds the keys bestows them upon another, the former does not cease to hold them. Rather, he lengthens the chain of authority by another link. Christ presently holds all the keys, but so do Peter, James, and John, on whom Christ bestowed them, and so also does the prophet Joseph Smith, on whom these three bestowed the same keys.

There is an apparent error in this verse. The Lord is addressing Peter and refers to James as Peter’s brother. James was the brother of John. Peter’s brother was Andrew. This is either a mistake, or perhaps James is referred to as Peter’s brother in the gospel sense.

“unto you three I will give this power and the keys of this ministry” Exactly what are the keys held by Peter, James, and John? “The keys of the ministry which John says were given to Peter, James, and himself constituted the authority of Presidency of the Church in their dispensation. These keys were given at the transfiguration to these three apostles, and they in turn gave them to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery in this dispensation (D&C 2;7:12-13; 128:20)” (Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:49).

8 Verily I say unto you, ye shall both have according to your desires, for ye both joy in that which ye have desired.

Section 8 Oliver Cowdery Given Permission to Translate

While Joseph and Oliver were translating the Book of Mormon in April 1829, Oliver asked if he might try his hand at translating. Joseph inquired of the Lord, and section 8 is the Lord's answer. It was received sometime in the latter half of April 1829. The answer was that Oliver would be allowed to translate if he would prepare himself and ask in faith. In D&C 6:25-28, Oliver Cowdery had already been given the gift of translation. Since he had been given this gift, he quite naturally wondered if he could succeed in translating.

Some intriguing questions are raised by this incident. Did Oliver use the Urim and Thummim or Joseph's seerstone? Did he use the plates? Did Joseph copy some of the characters off the plates for him to use? Why did Joseph consent to such a thing? Didn't he explain to Oliver how much he had been taught by Moroni and others in order that he might become properly prepared to translate?

D&C 8 Oliver Cowdery Given Permission to Translate

D&C 8:2-3 I will tell you in your mind and in your heart, by the Holy Ghost.

1 Oliver Cowdery, verily, verily, I say unto you, that assuredly as the Lord liveth, who is your God and your Redeemer, even so surely shall you receive a knowledge of whatsoever things you shall ask in faith, with an honest heart, believing that you shall receive a knowledge concerning the engravings of old records, which are ancient, which contain those parts of my scripture of which has been spoken by the manifestation of my Spirit.

verse 1 Here the Lord reiterates a promise to Oliver Cowdery that is available to all faithful saints. The Lord will give liberally to the spiritually prepared if they will only "ask in faith, nothing wavering" (James 1:6). It is important for us to pause for a few moments over the phrase, "ask in faith." What does that actually mean? Our intuitive notion is to believe it means simply that we must deliberately suspend any inclination for disbelief. We must ask with full expectation that we will receive. It is important to acknowledge another crucial aspect of asking in faith, perhaps the most crucial aspect. It is that we must deliberately do anything that is required to allow the Lord to grant our request. This type of deliberate faith is not merely something we hold in our mind. Deliberate faith is a principle of action. After requesting anything of the Lord, we must then rise from our knees and deliberately set about to make the thing happen. Then and only then can we expect the Lord to grant our request. We would suppose that Oliver was willing to deliberately suspend any disbelief, yet he will fail in his efforts to translate. It will be because he was unwilling to do the requisite things in order to prepare himself to translate.

For a discussion of the different types of faith, including deliberate faith, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapters 9-11. These chapters are Revealed Faith, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith, and Other Notes on Faith.

“engravings of old records” This expression refers to the Book of Mormon plates and possibly to other records. Oliver would be able to translate them if he so desired and if he properly prepared himself to do so.

2 Yea, behold, I will tell you in your mind and in your heart, by the Holy Ghost, which shall come upon you and which shall dwell in your heart.

verse 2 “I will tell you in your mind and in your heart” Here is a reminder that the Lord works with both aspects of man—the mind (the intellect), and the heart (our feelings). The translation process would involve both Oliver’s intellect and his feelings.

Revelation is neither emotion devoid of logical sense nor intellect without feeling, but a combination of both working together in harmony. Revelation can never be “mindless” or illogical; nor can it ever be pure dispassionate logic or reason.

3 Now, behold, this is the spirit of revelation; behold, this is the spirit by which Moses brought the children of Israel through the Red Sea on dry ground.

verse 3 “the spirit of revelation” The spirit of revelation is a characteristic of deserving individuals. It is a gift of the Spirit earned incrementally by those who prove themselves, over time, to be diligently obedient to the Lord’s commandments. The spirit of revelation is the ability to perceive and respond to revealed information from the Holy Ghost.

4 Therefore this is thy gift; apply unto it, and blessed art thou, for it shall deliver you out of the hands of your enemies, when, if it were not so, they would slay you and bring your soul to destruction.

verse 4 “this is thy gift” This gift is the gift of revelation, the spirit of revelation (see verse 2). To possess such a gift, however, is not the same as knowing how to use it. In order to successfully exercise his gift, Oliver would have to himself supply an added ingredient—real effort (see D&C 9:7-9). When Oliver learned to “apply unto” the gift of revelation the Lord had given him, it would deliver him in times of need.

“apply unto it” Each of us comes into this mortal existence with unique latent and potential abilities. These were acquired in the old fashioned way (incrementally—line upon line, precept upon precept) in the premortal world. However, there is nothing of entitlement here. The veil clouds and partially obscures our gifts. In order to actually exercise those gifts here in mortality—though we doubtless did what was necessary in the premortal world to acquire them—we must rediscover and redevelop them. And this requires real effort. A talent is wasted unless we “apply unto it.”

“and bring your soul to destruction” A “soul” or an individual cannot actually be destroyed to the point of annihilation. This phrase then means to be cut off from the presence of God, banished from his presence, to die spiritually. Any individual who neglects his native gifts is in danger of suffering spiritual death. Our talents or gifts are a stewardship for which each of us is responsible. We will be added upon if we seek out our talents and work to redevelop them. The prophet Nephi wrote: “For behold, thus saith the Lord God: I will give unto the children of men line upon line, precept upon precept, here a little and there a little; and blessed are those who hearken unto my precepts, and lend an ear unto my counsel, for they shall learn wisdom; for unto him that receiveth I will give more; and from them that shall say, We have enough, from them shall be taken away even that which they have” (2 Nephi 28:30).

Such a person (“them that shall say, We have enough”) is in danger of losing the influence of the Spirit and eventually suffering spiritual death.

5 Oh, remember these words, and keep my commandments. Remember, this is your gift.

verses 1-5 There is only one way to receive revelation—through the Holy Ghost. Whether you are a prophet of God receiving revelation for the Church or an individual praying for personal guidance, the Holy Ghost is instrumental in the revelatory process. Oliver already had the gift of revelation (see D&C 6:10-13).

These verses contain the formula for revelation. The key to proper asking is: Ask in faith, with an honest heart, believing that an answer will come. Also you must then “study it out in your mind” (D&C 9:8). This “studying” may take many forms. The seeker must be willing to do anything required of him to obtain the desired blessing. If the proper steps are followed, the Holy Ghost will deliver the answer in the form of ideas and feelings.

6 Now this is not all thy gift; for you have another gift, which is the gift of Aaron; behold, it has told you many things; verse 6 Oliver’s special gifts, then, included the gift of revelation (D&C 6:10-13) and the gift of translation (D&C 6:25-28). This verse refers to yet another of Oliver’s gifts. This is the “gift of Aaron.” It was referred to in the original manuscript of this revelation (the 1833 Book of Commandments) as “the gift of working with the rod.” Ancient Aaron was the elder brother of Moses, and with his rod in his hand he went before Moses as a spokesman. God had instructed that Moses’s rod (originally his shepherd’s staff—see Exodus 4:2-4) was to be the instrument by which he and Aaron would perform signs and wonders. This rod was then carried by Aaron, and was sometimes called the rod of God (see Exodus 4:20; 17:9) and sometimes the rod of Moses (see Exodus 9:23; 10:13; 17:5), but usually it was called the rod of Aaron (see Exodus 7:10, 12, 19; 8:5, 16). It was a tangible symbol of Aaron's authority and stewardship, of his relationship to Moses and to God, and an instrument by which he accomplished what God commanded him through the mouth of Moses.

The use of such special rods was quite common in New England and New York at the time for such practical tasks as finding water and minerals. Perhaps Oliver had a rod and a gift for using it for practical or even for spiritual things (see verses 8-9).

It is clear, however, that Joseph and Oliver occupied the role in the modern Church once held by Moses and Aaron anciently. They were a modern Moses and Aaron (see D&C 28:2-3). Later in 1833, Sidney Rigdon will be given a commission similar to Oliver's—that of spokesman (see D&C 100:9-11).

7 Behold, there is no other power, save the power of God, that can cause this gift of Aaron to be with you.

8 Therefore, doubt not, for it is the gift of God; and you shall hold it in your hands, and do marvelous works; and no power shall be able to take it away out of your hands, for it is the work of God.

9 And, therefore, whatsoever you shall ask me to tell you by that means, that will I grant unto you, and you shall have knowledge concerning it.

10 Remember that without faith you can do nothing; therefore ask in faith. Trifle not with these things; do not ask for that which you ought not.

11 Ask that you may know the mysteries of God, and that you may translate and receive knowledge from all those ancient records which have been hid up, that are sacred; and according to your faith shall it be done unto you.

verse 9-11 “whatsoever you shall ask . . . ask in faith” “Ask that you may know the mysteries of God” In these verses, the Lord emphasizes the necessity of asking for what we want. Apparently this message did get across to Oliver, as he did ask if he might translate.

It would seem that the Lord was perfectly willing that Oliver should, along with Joseph, become a translator of the Book of Mormon plates. Possibly also he was to receive mysteries that would be revealed to the Church through him and Joseph. The Lord did, however, outline the qualifications which would be necessary to become successful in that enterprise. Oliver must possess sufficient faith. We will learn that Oliver failed to exert sufficient effort to accomplish those things for which he had the gift.

verse 11 “mysteries of God” It is appropriate, now that Oliver had been given the gift of revelation, that he also be encouraged to ask questions of the Lord and exercise his gift in receiving answers. As explained previously, the term mystery is used two ways in the modern Church. Used positively, it means necessary or useful information that can be obtained only by revelation from God. In this sense, Oliver was encouraged to seek “the mysteries of God.” The scriptures always use “mysteries” in this positive sense. On the other hand, the term mysteries is used more commonly in the contemporary Church in a negative sense to mean information unnecessary for our salvation or for our personal progress, information which the Lord has chosen, for whatever reason, to withhold from us. A preoccupation with such things can distract us from the really important truth that has been revealed and often leads to a loss of spiritual balance, then to contention, doubt, and apostasy.

12 Behold, it is I that have spoken it; and I am the same that spake unto you from the beginning. Amen.

Section 9 Why Oliver Cowdery Failed in His Attempt To Translate

Before studying this section, make certain you have studied section 8 and its commentary. Shortly after receiving permission from the Lord to translate, Oliver attempted to translate with Joseph acting as scribe. He was initially successful, but then failed in his attempt. In this section the Lord tells Oliver that he was not properly prepared, he was improperly motivated, and he exercised insufficient faith. It seems probable that Oliver wanted to translate largely because he was impatient at having to sit and act as scribe. He wanted to be the equal of the Prophet, and he failed to anticipate the spiritual and mental preparation necessary to qualify him to translate.

Oliver is further instructed to continue functioning as scribe for Joseph and to be patient. He is assured that the opportunity to translate records, other than the Book of Mormon, may yet be his in the future if he continues faithful. We know that he never did translate other records, but that may have been because of his eventual apostasy.

D&C 9 Why Oliver Cowdery Failed to Translate

D&C 9:7-9 Study it out in your mind, and I will cause your bosom to burn within you.

1 Behold, I say unto you, my son, that because you did not translate according to that which you desired of me, and did commence again to write for my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun., even so I would that ye should continue until you have finished this record, which I have entrusted unto him.

verse 1 “you did not translate according to that which you desired of me”

Oliver desired to translate just as Joseph had been translating. He desired that the Lord would allow that. But he did not fully meet the Lord’s requirements to translate at that level.

“you . . . did commence again to write for my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun.”

It is apparent that this revelation was received after Oliver had resumed his former position as scribe.

Oliver is instructed not to worry further about translating but to continue to act as scribe for Joseph until the Book of Mormon translation is completed. Most of the Book of Mormon manuscript is written in the hand of Oliver Cowdery, a measure of his obedience to this command.

2 And then, behold, other records have I, that I will give unto you power that you may assist to translate.

verse 2 “other records have I, that I will give unto you power that you may assist to translate” These “other records” might include the book of Abraham, which was later “translated” by Joseph with the assistance of Oliver, and the sealed portion of the Book of Mormon plates. Parenthetically, we really don’t know in detail the process by which Joseph was able to write the Book of Abraham. It is possible that he had writings of Abraham on the Egyptian papyri, but it is also possible that he received the Book of Abraham by a revelatory process similar to the way in which he “translated” the Book of Mormon.

Referring particularly to the sealed portion of the plates of Mormon, President Joseph Fielding Smith provided us with interesting insight into why we have not as yet received a knowledge of what is on that sealed record:

It is possible that some of them might have been translated had the people received the Book of Mormon with full purpose of heart and had been faithful to its teachings. This was the promise the Lord made through Mormon. He said he would try the faith of lesser things (i.e., the Book of Mormon) then he would make known to them the greater things. That we have failed in this is very apparent, we have not accepted the revelations in the Book of Mormon, neither in the Doctrine and Covenants, with that faith and willingness to know the will of the Lord which would entitle us to receive this greater information. Oliver Cowdery was a party to this failure by turning away from the Church for a number of years when it needed his service. He therefore lost his privilege to translate through his own disobedience and the people have lost the privilege of receiving the “greater things” spoken of by the Lord to Mormon (3 Nephi 26:8-11) until the day shall come when they are willing to be obedient in all things and will exercise faith such as was had by the brother of Jared. It should be remembered that such faith has rarely been seen on the earth. It appears, therefore that we must wait until the reign of unrighteousness is at an end before the Lord will give to the people these writings, containing “a revelation from God, from the beginning of the world to the ending thereof” (2 Nephi 27) (Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:52-53).

Oliver did act as scribe for Joseph for parts of the JST and for the book of Abraham.

3 Be patient, my son, for it is wisdom in me, and it is not expedient that you should translate at this present time.

4 Behold, the work which you are called to do is to write for my servant Joseph.

verses 3-4 It is sometimes difficult to realize that our calling may be to assist rather than to preside, or to record rather than to translate. Oliver’s calling was to assist Joseph, like Aaron assisted Moses, and not to become equal to him.

5 And, behold, it is because that you did not continue as you commenced, when you began to translate, that I have taken away this privilege from you.

verse 5 “you did not continue as you commenced” Oliver did begin to translate. He commenced well, but when the task was more difficult than he had anticipated, he failed to do what was required of him and lost his opportunity to continue.

Why did the Lord take away Oliver's right to translate? The likely key reason was Oliver did not possess faith sufficient to allow him to translate. Most likely the faith required at this stage was the practical preparations necessary for the task. This lack of faith would later manifest itself in the form of apostasy. He was also inadequately mentally prepared and inappropriately motivated. He had not paid the price in terms of spiritual and mental effort to properly prepare himself. He wanted to be a translator and not merely a scribe to satisfy his own ego. Joseph did need a scribe, and perhaps the Lord allowed Oliver to try to translate and fail in the attempt in order to quell his dissatisfaction at being only a scribe.

6 Do not murmur, my son, for it is wisdom in me that I have dealt with you after this manner.

verses 6 "it is wisdom in me that I have dealt with you after this manner"

Though Oliver may have thought of his unsuccessful attempt as a "failure," there was some reason why the Lord allowed this to happen. His "failure" somehow served God's purposes. No doubt it was a learning experience for Oliver. Perhaps it was important for him to understand the gift of translation so he could function more effectively as a scribe or serve as a more informed witness to the translation process.

7 Behold, you have not understood; you have supposed that I would give it unto you, when you took no thought save it was to ask me.

verse 7 The revelations of heaven are not granted to one in a mindless stupor. Rather, they embrace the complete use of all heavenly given endowments. A man cannot expect the Lord to answer his prayers in the form of writing on the wall. But after the man pays in full the tuition of effort, then—and only then—he has claim upon the answer.

8 But, behold, I say unto you, that you must study it out in your mind; then you must ask me if it be right, and if it is right I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you; therefore, you shall feel that it is right.

9 But if it be not right you shall have no such feelings, but you shall have a stupor of thought that shall cause you to forget the thing which is wrong; therefore, you cannot write that which is sacred save it be given you from me.

verses 7-9 It is important to understand that the contrast described here between a burning of the bosom and a stupor of thought (and a forgetting) applied specifically to the process of translation. While these verses may also contain important keys for all in the Church who would seek for personal revelation, we must be cautious in this application.

“if it is right I will cause that your bosom shall burn within you” Each individual must learn to recognize the promptings of the Spirit of God. Some, indeed, may receive a burning in the bosom. Others may recognize the Spirit’s promptings in other ways. Elder Mark E. Petersen once remarked that he had never experienced a “burning” in his bosom (personal communication). Whatever the specific feeling, it will be experienced as a peaceful, wonderful, and most positive experience.

Perhaps one key point to these verses is that receiving revelation is an active rather than a passive process. The receiver must think, must work to understand, must come up with a plan, a proposal, a theory—in short must do as much of the work as possible to bridge the gap between the known and the unknown. It is then that our mental and spiritual efforts are most likely to be rewarded with understanding and confirmation.

10 Now, if you had known this you could have translated; nevertheless, it is not expedient that you should translate now.

verse 10 Completing the work of the Lord is more important than satisfying the individual wishes and preferences of those called to do it.

11 Behold, it was expedient when you commenced; but you feared, and the time is past, and it is not expedient now;

verse 11 “you feared” Fear is the enemy of faith. Perhaps our secular definition of fear, however, is in some circumstances inadequate to fully explain that scriptural emotion that prevents us from exercising faith. In the scripture, fear is that controlling emotion—certainly the product of our natural-man self—that makes us decide not to act on our inclination to be obedience. It is the reluctance to do the more difficult thing. Caught in the clutches of this fear, we gravitate to doing the safer, less stressful, more comfortable, easier thing instead.

This verse tells us that timing is also important in the Lord’s scheme of things. Sometimes we need to do what the Lord wants us to do when he wants us to do it, otherwise, by the time we get around to it, it may no longer be necessary, profitable, or needed by the Lord.

12 For, do you not behold that I have given unto my servant Joseph sufficient strength, whereby it is made up? And neither of you have I condemned.

verse 12 “whereby it is made up” Joseph’s sufficient gift and strength in translating will “make up” or compensate for Oliver’s not being allowed to translate.

13 Do this thing which I have commanded you, and you shall prosper. Be faithful, and yield to no temptation.

14 Stand fast in the work wherewith I have called you, and a hair of your head shall not be lost, and you shall be lifted up at the last day. Amen.

verses 12-14 Note that the Lord did not condemn Oliver for his inability to translate, and neither should we. As with Peter, who because of fear walked on water for only a moment, that moment was a great deal more than most others can manage. The Lord does not reject Oliver for doing with difficulty what most others could not do at all. This was not the right time, however, to make further attempts. The work was more important than the private wishes of the workers. Oliver was called to be a scribe, not a translator. The Lord kindly indulged his private desire to translate, but now wanted him to resume his intended role of assisting Joseph that the work might move forward rapidly.

1829 May

By May 1829, Joseph and Oliver had finished the translation of the Plates of Mormon (see the supplemental article, Those Confusing Book of Mormon Plates). Joseph now had to decide what to do to fill in the gap left by the loss of the 116 pages of manuscript—from the time of Lehi to the reign of Mosiah I. In May he received a revelation telling him not to re-translate the first part of the Plates of Mormon, but rather to translate in its place the small Plates of Nephi [D&C 10 - Fate of the 116 Pages].

Section 10 Fate of the 116 Pages

The Lord explains that the 116 pages had fallen into the hands of evil men who had altered the manuscript. If Joseph were to re-translate the first part of the Plates of Mormon, the evil men could reveal to the world supposed discrepancies between the two versions. In this way, they hoped to discredit the work by causing people to believe that Joseph was a pretender and not a real prophet. Thus, Joseph is instructed to translate instead the unabridged small plates of Nephi.

The date given for this revelation is confusing. Even though our present Doctrine and Covenants gives the date as “summer of 1828,” some materials were probably given in May of 1829 (see especially verse 41). It seems likely that part was given in the summer of 1828 and part in May 1829. Joseph described the circumstances of his receiving that part of section 10 received in the summer of 1828: “After I had obtained the above revelation [section 3], both the plates and the Urim and Thummim were taken from me again; but in a few days they were returned to me, when I inquired of the Lord, and the Lord said thus unto me: [section 10]” (HC, 1:23). It has also been suggested that the “summer of 1828” was late in September, after the plates had been returned to him on September 22, 1828. It would seem that for the large part of section 10, it is out of its proper chronological order. It probably should be placed following section 3, and the reader is thus encouraged, for the sake of continuity, to read the sections in that order: 3, 10, then 4.

Don't try to understand this section, and particularly verse 41, without studying the supplemental article entitled Those Confusing Book of Mormon Plates. The “plates of Nephi” referred to in section 10 are the same as the “small plates of Nephi” referred to in the supplemental article.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 10:5 Pray always, that you may come off conqueror.

1 Now, behold, I say unto you, that because you delivered up those writings which you had power given unto you to translate by the means of the Urim and Thummim, into the hands of a wicked man, you have lost them.

verse 1 “Urim and Thummim” For a discussion of the two instruments used by Joseph in translating the Book of Mormon, see “Two Instruments Used in the Translation” in The Process of Translating the Book of Mormon in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, Appendix A. See Also the commentary for Mosiah 8:13 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

“you delivered up those writings . . . into the hands of a wicked man” This “wicked man” is Martin Harris who had “set a naught the counsels of God, and . . .

broken the most sacred promises which were made before God, and . . . depended upon his own judgment and boasted in his own wisdom” (D&C 3:13).

2 And you also lost your gift at the same time, and your mind became darkened.

3 Nevertheless, it is now restored unto you again; therefore see that you are faithful and continue on unto the finishing of the remainder of the work of translation as you have begun.

4 Do not run faster or labor more than you have strength and means provided to enable you to translate; but be diligent unto the end.

verse 4 The Lord suggests that speed and overzealousness is less important than diligence, wisdom, and patience (see also Mosiah 4:27). In Joseph Smith’s History of the Church (1:28), he informs us that upon receiving the advice in section 10, even though the work of translating was important, and though the plates had been returned to him, he put off translating for a time and began to work his farm in order to provide for his family. Even prophets can go only as fast as they have the resources to go.

5 Pray always, that you may come off conqueror; yea, that you may conquer Satan, and that you may escape the hands of the servants of Satan that do uphold his work.

verse 5 “Pray always” President Joseph F. Smith taught that prayer is not so much words as it is feelings: “It is not the words we use particularly that constitute prayer. Prayer does not consist of words, more in the feeling that rises from the heart and from the inward desire of our spirits to supplicate the Lord in humility and in faith, that we may receive his blessings” (Gospel Doctrine, 219). The apostle Paul wrote: “Pray without ceasing. In every thing give thanks” (1 Thessalonians 5:17-18). Perhaps a feeling of gratitude and love for the Lord and a constant yearning to please him and to be with him for eternity constitutes a ceaseless prayer. Amulek counseled: “Let your hearts be full, drawn out in prayer unto him continually for your welfare, and also for the welfare of those who are around you” (Alma 34:27). We should maintain a continuously prayerful attitude.

“that you may come off conqueror” The secret to overcoming the obstacles and threats of darkness and overcoming the always dangerous natural self is to be constantly touching base through prayer with the Father and the Son. Some of this constant prayer can be vocal, but it is more often an attitude of communion with the divine—a constant awareness and acknowledgment of God’s hand in our life. It is granted to us incrementally as a gift of the Spirit in return for our consistent obedience to the Lord’s commands. And what of the “conqueror”? He or she has achieved eternal life.

6 Behold, they have sought to destroy you; yea, even the man in whom you have trusted has sought to destroy you.

verse 6 Those who had taken the manuscript were hoping to “destroy” Joseph by demonstrating that he was not a true prophet, to nullify his influence among men. Thus, to “destroy” here means to negate or bring to naught. This same meaning applies in verses 7, 12, 19, 23, 25, 43, 52, and 54.

“even the man in whom you have trusted has sought to destroy you” Apparently Martin’s guilt and complicity in the affair of the lost 116 pages extended beyond just foolishly losing the manuscript, but it is impossible to know at this time exactly how far beyond. Martin may not have known or agreed with the whole conspiracy, but apparently he was not simply negligent. He was culpable in some degree beyond passive foolishness. He had broken the covenant he had made with God (see D&C 3:12-13). Still, Martin’s subsequent repentance and faithful service to the end of his life should also be mentioned here.

7 And for this cause I said that he is a wicked man, for he has sought to take away the things wherewith you have been entrusted; and he has also sought to destroy your gift.

8 And because you have delivered the writings into his hands, behold, wicked men have taken them from you.

verse 8 The Lord held Joseph accountable for the fate of the manuscript: “Wicked men have taken them from you” (italics mine). Though the plot was hatched and carried out by others, Joseph may not blame the loss of the 116 pages on them. He put the manuscript into their hands, and he did it against the Lord’s advice.

9 Therefore, you have delivered them up, yea, that which was sacred, unto wickedness.

verse 9 Do we ever deliver up sacred things unto wickedness? For example, do we ever fail to nourish our minds continually with uplifting and wholesome thoughts? Do we ever carelessly fail to treat our bodies as the home of our spirits and avoid potentially harmful activities?

10 And, behold, Satan hath put it into their hearts to alter the words which you have caused to be written, or which you have translated, which have gone out of your hands.

11 And behold, I say unto you, that because they have altered the words, they read contrary from that which you translated and caused to be written; verses 10-11 The Lord here warns Joseph of a conspiracy on the part of those who had stolen the 116 pages of the book of Lehi. It was their intent to discredit Joseph as a prophet and the Book of Mormon as scriptures by forging parts of the manuscript so that they read differently from the original. Their plan was to wait until Joseph had retranslated the 116 pages. Then they would bring forth the altered copy with the claim that Joseph could not translate the plates the same way twice and must therefore be a fraud. But the warning and instructions given him in section 10 enabled Joseph to avoid this trap.

Note that Satan was the source of the idea to alter the words of the manuscript. He can put ideas into the hearts of the wicked, whether they realize the ultimate source of those ideas or not. Satan is also the master counterfeiter. Artificial values, false arguments, lying testimony, and bogus documents are his stock in trade.

12 And, on this wise, the devil has sought to lay a cunning plan, that he may destroy this work;

13 For he hath put into their hearts to do this, that by lying they may say they have caught you in the words which you have pretended to translate.

14 Verily, I say unto you, that I will not suffer that Satan shall accomplish his evil design in this thing.

15 For behold, he has put it into their hearts to get thee to tempt the Lord thy God, in asking to translate it over again.

verse 15 “he has put it into their hearts to get thee to tempt the Lord thy God” To “tempt” means to “put to the test.” To tempt the Lord is to try to make him jump through our hoops so that we may pass judgment upon him. It is to make God perform for us. After all, it is not Joseph who is really being put to the test here, but the Lord—to see if he can give Joseph the same translation twice. This is a presumptuous sin. It is one form of “seeking a sign.” On the other hand, the Lord invites us to prove him by keeping his commandments and then receiving the promised blessings, for example by reading and praying about the Book of Mormon (Moroni 10:4) or by paying tithing (Malachi 3:10).

16 And then, behold, they say and think in their hearts—We will see if God has given him power to translate; if so, he will also give him power again;

17 And if God giveth him power again, or if he translates again, or, in other words, if he bringeth forth the same words, behold, we have the same with us, and we have altered them;

18 Therefore they will not agree, and we will say that he has lied in his words, and that he has no gift, and that he has no power;

19 Therefore we will destroy him, and also the work; and we will do this that we may not be ashamed in the end, and that we may get glory of the world.

verses 17-19 Those who stole the manuscript were not interested in providing a test whereby they could learn if Joseph was really a prophet. It really didn’t matter to them whether he was a true prophet or not. If Joseph had re-translated the first part of the Plates of Mormon, these detractors would have claimed discrepancies regardless of what Joseph had written.

20 Verily, verily, I say unto you, that Satan has great hold upon their hearts; he stirreth them up to iniquity against that which is good; verse 21 “therefore they will not ask of me” The proper way to find out if the Book of Mormon or the work of the prophet Joseph Smith are true is to ask God. The wicked, like Laman and Lemuel (see 1 Nephi 15:8-11), will not ask. They prefer subjecting God to their own little tests, thus tempting God. But God will not comply with such demands. He, not we, makes the rules and sets the terms. Knowledge of the truth of the restored gospel comes only one way: by asking God in faith if it is true.

22 Satan stirreth them up, that he may lead their souls to destruction.

verse 22 “Destruction” here means spiritual death.

23 And thus he has laid a cunning plan, thinking to destroy the work of God; but I will require this at their hands, and it shall turn to their shame and condemnation in the day of judgment.

verse 23 “I will require this at their hands” Even though Satan laid a “cunning plan,” those mortals who responded to his promptings and sought to destroy the latter-day work will be held accountable. They will have to pay for stealing the manuscript and preparing their trap for Joseph.

24 Yea, he stirreth up their hearts to anger against this work.

verse 24 “he stirreth up their hearts to anger” The carnal self loves to be angry. It is a self-indulgence that Satan plays upon to keep us distracted from finding the truth.

25 Yea, he saith unto them: Deceive and lie in wait to catch, that ye may destroy; behold, this is no harm. And thus he flattereth them, and telleth them that it is no sin to lie that they may catch a man in a lie, that they may destroy him.

verse 25 “And thus he flattereth them” It is flattery because Satan tells them that what is ugly and base about them is actually admirable and a virtue.

26 And thus he flattereth them, and leadeth them along until he draggeth their souls down to hell; and thus he causeth them to catch themselves in their own snare.

verse 26 “he causeth them to catch themselves in their own snare”

Anytime we respond to our natural or carnal self at the encouragement of Satan, we are more likely to again give in to Satan’s proddings on the next occasion of temptation. We thus gradually become captive to the devil—we gradually become ensnared in the “chains of hell” (Alma 12:9-11).

27 And thus he goeth up and down, to and fro in the earth, seeking to destroy the souls of men.

verse 27 To “destroy the souls of men” means to bring about their spiritual death.

28 Verily, verily, I say unto you, wo be unto him that lieth to deceive because he supposeth that another lieth to deceive, for such are not exempt from the justice of God.

verse 28 “for such are not exempt from the justice of God” The end does not justify the means. To use the tactics of wickedness to fight against wickedness is still wickedness, and it will be punished by God. This verse seems to indicate that we belong to the one whose methods we adopt and use.

29 Now, behold, they have altered these words, because Satan saith unto them: He hath deceived you—and thus he flattereth them away to do iniquity, to get thee to tempt the Lord thy God.

30 Behold, I say unto you, that you shall not translate again those words which have gone forth out of your hands;

31 For, behold, they shall not accomplish their evil designs in lying against those words. For, behold, if you should bring forth the same words they will say that you have lied and that you have pretended to translate, but that you have contradicted yourself.

32 And, behold, they will publish this, and Satan will harden the hearts of the people to stir them up to anger against you, that they will not believe my words.

verse 32 “Satan will harden the hearts of the people” To have a hardened heart is to be unresponsive to the promptings of the Spirit of God. Those who choose to believe bad publicity will develop anger and a condemning spirit which is antithetical to the Lord’s Spirit.

33 Thus Satan thinketh to overpower your testimony in this generation, that the work may not come forth in this generation.

verse 33 In this final dispensation the gospel has been restored in its fulness. The priesthood has been returned to the earth. The Book of Mormon has come forth. Israel is being gathered for the final time. Zion is being established. And the earth is being prepared for the Lord’s second coming and the millennial reign of the Savior.

How much is at stake for Satan? Does he feel strongly about frustrating the purposes of God in this latter-day? Never before have the stakes been so high! Indeed, the mission of the Prophet Joseph represents the eventual triumph of God's kingdom over that of Satan. We can expect Satan to spare nothing in his attempts to thwart the work!

34 But behold, here is wisdom, and because I show unto you wisdom, and give you commandments concerning these things, what you shall do, show it not unto the world until you have accomplished the work of translation.

verse 34 Satan's plan for discrediting Joseph and thwarting the work relative to the Book of Mormon was based on the assumption that Joseph would retranslate the lost 116 pages a second time. God, in his infinite knowledge, destroyed Satan's plans by providing an alternate set of plates (the unabridged small plates of Nephi) and instructing Joseph to use them in place of the lost 116 pages.

“show it not unto the world until you have accomplished the work of translation” Joseph is commanded not to show the translated Book of Mormon to anyone until it is completed. This applies to those who are perceived by Joseph to be “righteous” (see verses 36-37). This is because Joseph would not always be able to tell friend from foe, or the wicked from the righteous, as he learned from his “friend” Martin Harris. God does not always warn church leaders or members of imposters and false friends.

35 Marvel not that I said unto you: Here is wisdom, show it not unto the world—for I said, show it not unto the world, that you may be preserved.

36 Behold, I do not say that you shall not show it unto the righteous;

37 But as you cannot always judge the righteous, or as you cannot always tell the wicked from the righteous, therefore I say unto you, hold your peace until I shall see fit to make all things known unto the world concerning the matter.

38 And now, verily I say unto you, that an account of those things that you have written, which have gone out of your hands, is engraven upon the plates of Nephi; verse 38 The “plates of Nephi” in this and subsequent verses refers to the small plates of Nephi. The reader is again referred to the supplemental article, Those Confusing Book of Mormon Plates.

Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught: “In the episode involving the lost manuscript from the Book of Mormon, we see the interplay of the foreknowledge of God and the agency of man (with our freedom to fail) and the perfect foresight of a loving Lord who 1,500 years before the emergency was ready with an alternative” (“Doctrine and Covenants, The Voice of the Lord,” Ensign, December, 1978, 6). It is interesting to note that when Nephi wrote his account on the small plates, he indicated he did not know why the Lord had commanded him to prepare it except that it was “for a wise purpose in him, which purpose I know not” (1 Nephi 9:5-6).

39 Yea, and you remember it was said in those writings that a more particular account was given of these things upon the plates of Nephi.

verse 39 Obviously Joseph and Oliver had learned of a second account, a “more particular account,” on the small plates of Nephi as they translated the book of Lehi from the plates of Mormon. The expression “more particular account” seems compatible with the fact that the account on the small plates of Nephi is less secular than the book of Lehi on the plates of Mormon and more focused on the spiritual aspect of the Nephite experience.

40 And now, because the account which is engraven upon the plates of Nephi is more particular concerning the things which, in my wisdom, I would bring to the knowledge of the people in this account—verse 40 The Lord feels that the more spiritual account of the Nephite saga contained on the small plates of Nephi is more appropriate for the people of this dispensation who will become the audience for the Book of Mormon (see also verse 45). This verse reads a bit more smoothly if we replace the last three words in this verse with “at this time.”

41 Therefore, you shall translate the engravings which are on the plates of Nephi, down even till you come to the reign of king Benjamin, or until you come to that which you have translated, which you have retained; verse 41 The Lord therefore gives the instruction that Joseph should replace the lost book of Lehi (the 116 pages of lost manuscript) with the material contained on the small plates of Nephi. After Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery had completed the translation of the plates of Mormon (through Moroni 10), they then sought the Lord’s counsel as to what they should do to replace the lost 116 pages. This was in May of 1829. The Lord then gave them the instructions contained in this verse and in the few that follow. Thus, while the foregoing parts of section 10 were likely revealed to Joseph in the late summer of 1828, these few verses are “anachronistic”—that is, out of place temporally speaking. It is likely these verses were not received until almost a year following Joseph’s receiving the rest of the section.

42 And behold, you shall publish it as the record of Nephi; and thus I will confound those who have altered my words.

verse 42 The material contained on the small plates of Nephi is referred to here by the Lord as the “record of Nephi.” In other words the book of Lehi is replaced by the more doctrinal record of Nephi—those materials contained on the small plates of Nephi.

Satan can never stop the work of the Lord. God will always anticipate his every move and stratagem (see also verse 43).

43 I will not suffer that they shall destroy my work; yea, I will show unto them that my wisdom is greater than the cunning of the devil.

44 Behold, they have only got a part, or an abridgment of the account of Nephi.

verse 44 This verse indicates that the small plates of Nephi provide a more comprehensive account of the ministry of the prophet Nephi than did the book of Lehi—the first part of the abridged plates of Mormon.

45 Behold, there are many things engraven upon the plates of Nephi which do throw greater views upon my gospel; therefore, it is wisdom in me that you should translate this first part of the engravings of Nephi, and send forth in this work.

46 And, behold, all the remainder of this work does contain all those parts of my gospel which my holy prophets, yea, and also my disciples, desired in their prayers should come forth unto this people.

verse 46 “all the remainder of this work” This phrase refers to rest of the plates of Mormon—Mosiah through Moroni. It was this part of the plates of Mormon that Joseph and Oliver will translate first when they begin translating on April 7, 1829.

“my holy prophets, yea, and also my disciples, desired in their prayers should come forth unto this people” The ancient Nephite disciples (apostles) and prophets prayed that the gospel and the Book of Mormon would eventually come to “this people”—the modern day remnants of the Book of Mormon people and to other peoples that might inhabit the American continent in the future (see verses 48-49).

47 And I said unto them, that it should be granted unto them according to their faith in their prayers; verse 47 “I said unto them” The Lord said to his Book of Mormon prophets that the Book of Mormon will come forth in the latter days according to those Book of Mormon prophets’ faith.

48 Yea, and this was their faith—that my gospel, which I gave unto them that they might preach in their days, might come unto their brethren the Lamanites, and also all that had become Lamanites because of their dissensions.

49 Now, this is not all—their faith in their prayers was that this gospel should be made known also, if it were possible that other nations should possess this land;

50 And thus they did leave a blessing upon this land in their prayers, that whosoever should believe in this gospel in this land might have eternal life;

verses 48-50 The Nephite prophets have prayed for and left a blessing upon not just their own descendants, but also on others among the future generations of the inhabitants of the Americas. God has honored those prayers and that blessing by giving us, in the great Gentile nation of the latter days, political freedom, the fulness of the gospel, and the true Church of Jesus Christ.

51 Yea, that it might be free unto all of whatsoever nation, kindred, tongue, or people they may be.

verse 51 “that it might be free” The ancient Book of Mormon prophets prayed that “it”—eternal life—might be freely available to those who receive the Book of Mormon and accept its teachings. The word “free” in this verse does not mean without cost. Rather it means freely available to those willing to extend the effort to learn the truth.

52 And now, behold, according to their faith in their prayers will I bring this part of my gospel to the knowledge of my people. Behold, I do not bring it to destroy that which they have received, but to build it up.

verse 52 “this part of my gospel” This phrase may well refer to the writings in the Book of Mormon.

“I do not bring it to destroy that which they have received, but to build it up” The fulness of the restored gospel is not hostile to the truths found in other churches or in other religions of the latter days. It is not intended to take away people’s light, but rather to add to it.

53 And for this cause have I said: If this generation harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them.

verse 53 “If this generation harden not their hearts, I will establish my church among them” “This generation” refers to the generation to whom the Book of Mormon was initially made available—the early members who followed the prophet Joseph even before the Church was organized. Keep in mind that at the time of this revelation the Church had not yet been organized.

54 Now I do not say this to destroy my church, but I say this to build up my church; verse 54 Here the Lord seems to say that he does not want to downplay the idea of the establishment of his Church, but rather enhance the possibility its being organized.

55 Therefore, whosoever belongeth to my church need not fear, for such shall inherit the kingdom of heaven.

verse 55 Here, the Lord speaks of the future members of his Church following its organization. Will all members of the Church be exalted in the kingdom of heaven? Obviously not. How might we explain this verse then? The answer is provided later on in this section. In verse 67 we will learn that the true members of his Church are “whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church.” Then in verse 69 we learn further that all who endure to the end “will I establish upon my rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them.”

56 But it is they who do not fear me, neither keep my commandments but build up churches unto themselves to get gain, yea, and all those that do wickedly and build up the kingdom of the devil—yea, verily, verily, I say unto you, that it is they that I will disturb, and cause to tremble and shake to the center.

verse 56 “they who do not fear me” To fear the Lord is not to be frightened by him but rather to reverence him—to stand in awe of him and respect him.

“build up churches unto themselves to get gain” This phrase refers to those involved in priestcraft. Priestcraft is involvement in religion for the purpose of winning material gain, popularity, or power over people.

Those who do not fear him in the sense of reverencing him will experience his wrath and may come to fear him in sense of being terrified of him.

57 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I came unto mine own, and mine own received me not.

58 I am the light which shineth in darkness, and the darkness comprehendeth it not.

verses 57-58 During his mortal ministry in the Old World, Jesus preached to his own people, the Jews, and they rejected him.

The phrase “the darkness” refers to those on the earth who are not inclined to respond to the Lord’s message of salvation. The Lord intends to make his gospel available to them (“the light which shineth in darkness”), but they will not accept it—they “comprehendeth it not.”

59 I am he who said—Other sheep have I which are not of this fold—unto my disciples, and many there were that understood me not.

verse 59 See John 10:14-16 and 3 Nephi 15:21.

60 And I will show unto this people that I had other sheep, and that they were a branch of the house of Jacob;

verse 60 “This people” are those to whom the gospel is about to be restored and the Book of Mormon made available.

61 And I will bring to light their marvelous works, which they did in my name; verse 61 The pronoun “they” refers to the Book of Mormon people.

To reiterate: By means of the restoration of the gospel, “this people”—the inhabitants of America during this final dispensation—are about to learn, in the pages of the Book of Mormon, that they are a remnant of the house of Israel. Also they will learn their fathers, the prophets and righteous peoples of the Book of Mormon, had the fulness of the gospel and did many marvelous works in the name of Jesus Christ.

62 Yea, and I will also bring to light my gospel which was ministered unto them, and, behold, they shall not deny that which you have received, but they shall build it up, and shall bring to light the true points of my doctrine, yea, and the only doctrine which is in me.

verses 62 The Lord now paints an optimistic picture of the early saints of this dispensation. The Lord will bring to light his gospel—the same gospel that was had among “them”—the Book of Mormon people. “They”—the early saints of this dispensation will not deny this gospel, but, even more, they will build it up and bring to light many fine points of the Lord’s doctrines.

63 And this I do that I may establish my gospel, that there may not be so much contention; yea, Satan doth stir up the hearts of the people to contention concerning the points of my doctrine; and in these things they do err, for they do wrest the scriptures and do not understand them.

verse 63 The Lord expresses his wish that the restoration of the gospel will decrease the “contention” in the world. He points out that contention—the anger of those who involve themselves in contending against a supposed enemy—are under the influence of Satan, who uses religion to increase hatred and ill-will in the world. This is not true, however, of those who respond to the true gospel and enter the fellowship of the Spirit of God (John 13:34-35).

The word “wrest” means distort. To wrest the scriptures, in the context of this verse, is to use them as a weapon.

64 Therefore, I will unfold unto them this great mystery; verse 64 “this great mystery” Anything that can be understood only by revelation is a mystery. The Lord is about to unfold the great mystery of the gathering of Israel in this latter day.

65 For, behold, I will gather them as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, if they will not harden their hearts;

verse 65 The Lord announces for the first time, his intention to gather Israel, for the last time, in this latter day.

66 Yea, if they will come, they may, and partake of the waters of life freely.

verse 66 The phrase “waters of life” is symbolic of all the blessings of God’s redeeming love, including ultimately exaltation in the kingdom of heaven.

67 Behold, this is my doctrine—whosoever repenteth and cometh unto me, the same is my church.

verse 67 It is not enough to have one’s name on the membership records of the Church. Repentance and obedience to the Lord’s commandments are the watchwords.

68 Whosoever declareth more or less than this, the same is not of me, but is against me; therefore he is not of my church.

verse 68 “Whosoever declareth more or less than this” To say either more or less than the Lord has said or commanded us to say—either to put words in the Lord’s mouth or take them out—is to distort his message. We are not justified in preaching as doctrine that which we have added to the Lord’s word, neither are we justified in ignoring or failing to preach and practice what the Lord has clearly revealed.

69 And now, behold, whosoever is of my church, and endureth of my church to the end, him will I establish upon my rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against them.

verse 69 To endure in the gospel has a richer meaning than merely to avoid backsliding. It means to continue to progress in one’s obedience and overcoming the natural man.

70 And now, remember the words of him who is the life and light of the world, your Redeemer, your Lord and your God. Amen.

verse 70 For a discussion of how Jesus Christ is quite literally the “life and light of the world,” The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15.

Brief Historical Setting

By mid-May Joseph and Oliver had reached, in their translating, the book of 3 Nephi, and they came upon the concept of baptism. Their interest was piqued. They recognized that the proper authority for performing this ordinance was not upon the earth. This matter was sufficiently important that they paused in their translating and went down to the Susquehannah River on May 15, so they might be alone. There they prayed for guidance. They were visited by the resurrected John the Baptist who conferred upon them the Aaronic Priesthood [D&C 13 - Restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood]. The Baptist also promised them that in due time they would receive the higher or Melchizedek Priesthood. Accordingly, some time later on an uncertain date, Peter, James, and John, the Lord's ancient apostles, came to Joseph and Oliver on the banks of the Susquehannah River and conferred upon them the Melchizedek Priesthood.

During the latter part of May, Joseph and Oliver were visited by Hyrum Smith, Joseph's brother, and by Joseph's former employer, Joseph Knight, Sr. The latter made more than one trip from Colesville to Harmony to bring food and other provisions which enabled Joseph and Oliver to spend their full time translating rather than having to worry about temporal things. While in Harmony, both Hyrum Smith and Joseph Knight, Sr., asked for and were given revelations from the Lord [D&C 11 - Hyrum Smith's Call to Labor] [D&C 12 - Joseph Knight's Call to Labor].

Section 11 Hyrum Smith's Call to Labor

While Joseph and Oliver were translating the Book of Mormon in May of 1829 in Harmony, Pennsylvania, only a month or so after they had begun the translation, Joseph's younger brother Samuel Harrison Smith came again to Harmony to visit and observe. Within a short period of time, Joseph and Oliver convinced Samuel to pray concerning the truth of their work, and in answer to his prayers Samuel received a witness that the work was indeed divine. He was baptized by Oliver on May 25, 1829, and returned to his home in Manchester full of enthusiasm for the restoration. Shortly thereafter Joseph's elder brother Hyrum traveled the 130 miles from Manchester to Harmony. Hyrum came to Harmony in response to the news brought to the Smith family in Manchester by Samuel that the authority to baptize had been returned to the earth. Thus, this section was received after section 13. Since Hyrum's visit followed the return of his younger brother Samuel to Manchester, section 11 must have been received at least several days after Samuel's baptism in Harmony on the 25th of May. This estimate allows time for Samuel's return to New York and Hyrum's subsequent journey to Harmony. This revelation should therefore be dated to the last few days in May 1829 and should follow section 13.

On arriving in Harmony, Hyrum became deeply interested in the work Joseph and Oliver were doing. Almost immediately he wanted to make copies of what had been translated so far and to begin preaching and teaching from it in the surrounding areas.

Hyrum eventually asked Joseph what the Lord would have him do. Using the Urim and Thummim, Joseph inquired of the Lord concerning what part Hyrum should play in the restoration, and section 11 is the Lord's answer. Hyrum became converted, was baptized in June 1829, was allowed to become one of the eight witnesses of the Book of Mormon, and became one of the six charter members of the Church on April 6, 1830. He remained a stalwart church member and leader until his martyrdom with the Prophet in June 1844 in Carthage jail.

Section 11 directs Hyrum to prepare himself for the Lord's service, but to wait until the translation is finished to begin his work rather than to start out only partially prepared.

D&C 11 Hyrum Smith's Call to Labor

D&C 11:12 Put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good—yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously.

D&C 11:21 Seek not to declare my word, but first seek to obtain my word.

verses 1-9 These verses are identical to the corresponding nine verses in section 6. Verses 1-6 are identical to the first six verses in sections 6, 12, and 14. The message in each of these sections is the same to each of the individuals involved, and it is a universal message to all saints: repent, get converted, get committed, and then go out and share what you have with others.

For commentary for verses 1-9 of this section, see the commentary for D&C 6:1-9 and D&C 4:1-4.

1 A great and marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men.

2 Behold, I am God; give heed to my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore give heed unto my word.

3 Behold, the field is white already to harvest; therefore, whoso desireth to reap let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God.

4 Yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God.

5 Therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive; if you will knock it shall be opened unto you.

6 Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion.

7 Seek not for riches but for wisdom; and, behold, the mysteries of God shall be unfolded unto you, and then shall you be made rich. Behold, he that hath eternal life is rich.

8 Verily, verily, I say unto you, even as you desire of me so it shall be done unto you; and, if you desire, you shall be the means of doing much good in this generation.

9 Say nothing but repentance unto this generation. Keep my commandments, and assist to bring forth my work, according to my commandments, and you shall be blessed.

verse 9 “Say nothing but repentance unto this generation.” If one comes to understand fully the principle of repentance, one may realize that it is all that ever needs to be taught. Repentance means not only to stop doing those things which are wrong but also to start doing those things which are right. The principle of repentance is virtually the same as obedience and is at the very foundation of each step of spiritual progress we make here on earth. For a discussion of the processes by which we grow spiritually and become sanctified, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 7, Spiritual Growth—Gifts of the Spirit, chapter 8, The Blessings of Spiritual Gifts, and chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification.

verses 10-25 These verses, as pointed out by Dan Ludlow, outline the important steps to preparing to serve the Lord on a mission or in any other church calling: (1)

Desire to serve the Lord (verses 10, 17). (2) Keep the commandments of the Lord to remain worthy to receive the Spirit of the Lord (verses 13, 18, and 20). (3) Be willing to serve in any capacity in which you might be called (verse 19). (4) Seek to obtain the word of the Lord through studying the scriptures (verses 21-22) (A Companion to Your Study of the Book of Mormon, 1:108-09).

10 Behold, thou hast a gift, or thou shalt have a gift if thou wilt desire of me in faith, with an honest heart, believing in the power of Jesus Christ, or in my power which speaketh unto thee;

verse 10 “Behold, thou hast a gift” One possibility for the gift possessed by or promised to Hyrum is the gift of the Holy Ghost, which will “enlighten your mind” and “fill your soul with joy” (verse 13). Actually the gift is promised to Hyrum on certain conditions, which suggests a covenant arrangement. If Hyrum will seek the Lord in faith and an honest heart, he will be able to use his gift in the service of God.

President Joseph Fielding Smith suggested an alternate possibility for this gift:

The Lord declared that Hyrum Smith had a gift. The great gift which he possessed was that of a tender, sympathetic heart; a merciful spirit. The Lord on a later occasion said: “Blessed is my servant Hyrum Smith; for I, the Lord, love him because of the integrity of his heart, and because he loveth that which is right before me, saith the Lord” (D&C 124:15). This great gift was manifest in his jealous watch care over the Prophet lest some harm come to him (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:57).

11 For, behold, it is I that speak; behold, I am the light which shineth in darkness, and by my power I give these words unto thee.

verse 11 “For, behold, it is I that speak” It is the Lord—not Joseph Smith—who is speaking here.

12 And now, verily, verily, I say unto thee, put your trust in that Spirit which leadeth to do good—yea, to do justly, to walk humbly, to judge righteously; and this is my Spirit.

13 Verily, verily, I say unto you, I will impart unto you of my Spirit, which shall enlighten your mind, which shall fill your soul with joy;

14 And then shall ye know, or by this shall you know, all things whatsoever you desire of me, which are pertaining unto things of righteousness, in faith believing in me that you shall receive.

verses 12-14 If you have wondered whether or not you are being guided by the Holy Ghost, you might study these verses. They contain criteria by which to judge. In Winter Quarters, Brigham Young had a dream wherein Joseph Smith appeared to him. From what Brigham learned during that visit, he was able, subsequently, to enlarge on these verses. He taught that a person can tell the Holy Ghost from all other spirits because it will remove all hatred, malice, and evil desires from his heart, and he will be consumed by a desire to do good and build up the kingdom of God.

15 Behold, I command you that you need not suppose that you are called to preach until you are called.

verse 15 “you need not suppose that you are called to preach” Hyrum was mistaken in thinking that one can become a minister of the restored gospel by self-appointment. His desire to preach is not so much evil as it is naive and premature, and he has much to learn about priesthood, callings, ordination, stewardship, lines of authority, and accountability. It was important for Hyrum and the early members of the Church to learn this lesson, for they lived in an environment where itinerant, self-appointed preachers were the norm.

A man must be called by proper authority and possess the proper authority in order to serve. President Joseph Fielding Smith taught: “No man is authorized to act in the name of the Lord, or to officiate in any ordinance, unless he has been properly called” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:57).

16 Wait a little longer, until you shall have my word, my rock, my church, and my gospel, that you may know of a surety my doctrine.

verse 16 “Wait a little longer” Hyrum is advised to wait yet a little while before embarking in the service of the Lord. He is advised to first learn the doctrine. In verses 18 and 22 the Lord will counsel him to “hold your peace” which is to say, “Don’t speak yet; wait until you are fully prepared.” This advice should also apply to modern missionaries in the months and years before they receive their call.

17 And then, behold, according to your desires, yea, even according to your faith shall it be done unto you.

18 Keep my commandments; hold your peace; appeal unto my Spirit;

verse 18 “hold your peace” See the commentary for verse 16.

19 Yea, cleave unto me with all your heart, that you may assist in bringing to light those things of which has been spoken—yea, the translation of my work; be patient until you shall accomplish it.

verse 19 “cleave unto me with all your heart” The verb cleave has two contradictory meanings: “to split or separate” and “to bond or stick to.” Obviously the latter meaning applies here.

“that you may assist in bringing to light those things of which has been spoken” Hyrum remained in Harmony to help Joseph and Oliver with their work. A few weeks later he was privileged, back in Manchester, to become one of the eight witnesses of the Book of Mormon plates.

20 Behold, this is your work, to keep my commandments, yea, with all your might, mind and strength.

verse 20 What is the major work of God? What is the major work of man? Moses 1:39 explains the major work of God: “For behold, this is my work and my glory—to bring to pass the immortality and eternal life of man.” This verse succinctly explains or at least implies the major work of man. It is to obey the Lord’s commands.

“with all your might, mind and strength” It is unrealistic and humanly impossible to be absolutely obedient to all of the commandments. To “keep my commandments” is to desire, strive, and work to do so with all your might, mind, and strength. This effort is to be the focus of our lives. Yet the Lord knows we will fail in some degree, and so he has prepared repentance and the sacrament for us to renew our commitments on a regular basis and thus avoid losing our covenant relationship and its blessings through our human weakness.

21 Seek not to declare my word, but first seek to obtain my word, and then shall your tongue be loosed; then, if you desire, you shall have my Spirit and my word, yea, the power of God unto the convincing of men.

verse 21 Hyrum was so eager to become involved in the work that the Lord had to caution him about moving ahead too fast. Herein lies an important fact. As we endeavor to teach the precepts of the gospel, we cannot do so effectively without the help of the Spirit of God. And the Spirit cannot give us help with and access to those principles in a timely fashion unless we have learned them. A simple reading or a re-reading of the principle is not enough. We must learn them so that we fully understand them and have comfortable mental access to them; or, as the scripture says, we must “treasure up in your minds continually” the principles and precepts of the gospel. And then what does he promise us? “And it shall be given you in the very hour that portion that shall be meted unto every man” (D&C 84:85).

22 But now hold your peace; study my word which hath gone forth among the children of men, and also study my word which shall come forth among the children of men, or that which is now translating, yea, until you have obtained all which I shall grant unto the children of men in this generation, and then shall all things be added thereto.

“my word which shall come forth” This phrase refers to the Book of Mormon which was then in the process of being translated..

In this verse, which is related to verse 21, the Lord commands Hyrum to study the Gospel.

“all which I shall grant unto the children of men in this generation” This refers to all of the revelations that will yet be given to the Prophet Joseph: The Book of Mormon, the Pearl of Great Price, the Joseph Smith Translation, and the Doctrine and Covenants.

“and then shall all things be added thereto” Hyrum is promised that if he will be diligent in learning what the Lord has given and will yet give, he will then be given additional precious truths.

There is a grammatical error in this verse. As it reads, the Book of Mormon was translating itself. “Now translating” should be understood to mean “now being translated.”

23 Behold thou art Hyrum, my son; seek the kingdom of God, and all things shall be added according to that which is just.

verse 23 “Behold thou art Hyrum, my son” This rather provocative statement seems more than simply a formal address by the Lord. One cannot help but wonder if it does not imply that Hyrum was foreordained to a great work in the premortal world. Following his baptism, he will become a “son” of Jesus Christ. It is not possible to note the unwavering support Hyrum offered to his younger brother Joseph without being deeply moved. Hyrum was a pure, guileless, and loving soul whose steadfast and untiring support, doubtless, was key in the life and mission of his brother Joseph.

24 Build upon my rock, which is my gospel; verse 24 “Build upon my rock” The term rock is used in scripture with a few different meanings. While it is true that “the rock” sometimes refers to the rock of revelation, Christ is also the Rock (1 Corinthians 10:4; Helaman 5:12). In one context, Peter (or Cephas), whose name both in Greek and in Aramaic means “rock,” is referred to by the Savior as the rock. Peter was the last one to hold all the keys anciently (see D&C 27:12; see also Matthew 16:18-19, where “rock” has more than one meaning).

In this particular verse, the gospel is the rock, as it is also in D&C 18:5 and 3 Nephi 11:32-39.

25 Deny not the spirit of revelation, nor the spirit of prophecy, for wo unto him that denieth these things;

verse 25 Be careful lest you fail to acknowledge that revelation and divine guidance is being meted out to the Church constantly. Any person with the spirit of discernment can readily see that the hand of the Lord has guided this people from the beginning.

The act of denying the Spirit of the Holy Ghost occurs in various degrees. In one extreme, denying the Spirit can result in banishment to outer darkness (Matthew 12:31-32). In lesser degrees, denying the spirit of revelation cuts us off from the heavens and banishes the influence of God and interaction with his Spirit from our daily lives (D&C 59:21).

In the religious environment of Hyrum's day, without the fulness of the gospel, it was common for preachers to deny even the possibility of additional revelation or prophecy, and Hyrum was warned against this common error.

26 Therefore, treasure up in your heart until the time which is in my wisdom that you shall go forth.

verse 26 “treasure up in your heart” The implication of this phrase is “Neither take ye thought beforehand what ye shall say; but treasure up in your minds continually the words of life [the scriptures], and it shall be given you in the very hour that portion that shall be meted unto every man” (D&C 84:85).

27 Behold, I speak unto all who have good desires, and have thrust in their sickle to reap.

verse 27 The information and advice given to Hyrum in this revelation is intended not for Hyrum alone, but for all who might subsequently have the same desires Hyrum has to serve God and to build his kingdom.

28 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God. I am the life and the light of the world.

29 I am the same who came unto mine own and mine own received me not; verse 30 “[to] as many as receive me . . . will I give power to become the sons of God” Those who come to Christ become his children and are born again in the gospel covenant as sons and daughters of Christ. This status empowers us to follow the path of the Savior, to become what Jesus Christ—our spiritual Father—is, and to inherit what he inherits (see Mosiah 5:7; Romans 8:14-17; D&C 84:38), thus becoming exalted beings like him. This is the same power given to Jesus's disciples anciently (see John 1:12) and is explained in D&C 25:1.

Section 12 Joseph Knight's Call to Labor

As early as 1826, Joseph Smith had worked near Colesville, New York, a town about twenty miles from Harmony, Pennsylvania, for a farmer and mill owner named Joseph Knight, Sr. This old gentleman had subsequently become a close friend of Joseph's and had assisted him on several occasions. Brother Knight lent the prophet his horse and buggy the day Joseph married Emma Hale.

While Joseph and Oliver were translating the Book of Mormon, Joseph Knight, Sr., visited them repeatedly to bring them food and other provisions which allowed them to continue translating. The friendship between the elder Knight and Joseph was such that Joseph had kept him apprised of the developments in the coming forth of the Book of Mormon plates, and Knight was obviously interested and involved. On the day Joseph obtained the plates in September 1827, Knight was visiting in the Smith home in Manchester. According to Lucy Smith, her son used Knight's horse and carriage as his means of conveyance on that occasion (Biographical Sketches of Joseph Smith the Prophet, [Liverpool: 1853], 99-101).

Joseph Knight wrote a charming account of helping Joseph and Emma in the winter of 1828 when the latter two lived in Harmony and were trying to scratch out a living and yet find time to work on the translation of the Book of Mormon:

Now he could not translate but little, being poor and nobody to write for him but his wife, and she could not do much and take care of her house, and he being poor and no means to live but work. His wife's father and family were all against him and would not help him. He and his wife came up to see me the first of the winter 1828 and told me his case. But I was not in easy circumstances, and I did not know what it might amount to, and my wife and family [were] all against me about helping him. But I let him have some little provisions and some few things out of the store—a pair of shoes and three dollars in money to help him a little. In January his father and Samuel [Smith] came from Manchester to my house when I was busy a drawing lumber. I told him they had traveled far enough. I would go with my sleigh and take them down tomorrow. I went down and found them well, and they were glad to see us. We conversed about many things. In the morning I gave the old man a half a dollar and Joseph a little money to buy paper to translate, I having but little with me. The old gentleman told me to come and see him once in a while as I could. I went home followed teaming [sic] till the last of March, the sleighing being good. I told my wife I must go down and see Joseph again. "Why do you go so soon, for," said she. Says I, "Come go and see." And she went with me. Next morning we went down and found them well and were glad to see us. Joseph talked with us about his translating and some revelations he had received and from that time my wife began to believe and continued a full believer until she died, and that was the 7th day of August 1831 (from an original holograph by Joseph Knight, Sr., reported by Dean C. Jessee in "Joseph Knight's Recollection of Early Mormon History" in BYU Studies, 17:1, spelling and punctuation changes added for clarity.)

A few months later, after Oliver Cowdery had joined Joseph in the translating, the elder Knight's help was again needed:

Now Joseph and Oliver came up to see me if I could help him to some provisions, [they] having no way to buy any. But I was [away] to Catskill. But when I came home my folks told me what Joseph wanted. But I had engaged to go to Catskill again the next day, and I went again and I bought a barrel of mackerel and some lined paper for writing. And when I came home I bought some nine or ten bushels of grain and five or six bushels taters and a pound of tea, and I went down to see him and they were in want. Joseph and Oliver were gone to see if they could find a place to work for provisions, but found none. They returned home and found me there with provisions, and they were glad for they were out. Their family consisted of four, Joseph and wife, Oliver, and his [Joseph's] brother Samuel. Then they went to work and had provisions enough to last till the translation was done (Ibid.).

Joseph Knight was born November 3, 1772, and was thus more than thirty-three years older than the Prophet Joseph. In spite of their age difference, he remained a remarkably faithful friend of the prophet. Joseph would later say of him:

[He] was among the number of the first to administer to my necessities, while I was laboring in the commencement of the bringing forth of the work of the Lord, and of laying the foundation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. For fifteen years he has been faithful and true, and even-handed and exemplary, and virtuous and kind, never deviating to the right hand or to the left. Behold he is a righteous man, may God Almighty lengthen out the old man's days; and may his trembling, tortured, and broken body be renewed, and in the vigor of health turn upon him if it be Thy will, consistently, O God; and it shall be said of him, by the sons of Zion, while there is one of them remaining, that this was a faithful man in Israel; therefore his name shall never be forgotten (HC, 4:124-25).

Joseph Knight had been a Universalist and tended to believe that no one church was the true church, but that there was good to be found in all churches. In section 23, Brother Knight will be instructed to join the Church. He was baptized in June of 1830, and his family formed the nucleus of a small branch of the Church in Colesville, New York. In 1831 he moved with the Colesville saints to Kirtland, Ohio, and a few months later continued with them to Independence, Missouri where he helped pioneer the Latter-day Saint settlement of that state. He died on February 3, 1847 at Mount Pisgah, Iowa, during the Mormon exodus from Illinois. His son, Newel Knight, became even better known in church history. Newel Knight will be mentioned in sections 52, 54, 56, and 124).

During one visit to Harmony, Joseph Knight asked the Prophet to inquire of the Lord on his behalf. Section 12 resulted.

verses 1-6 Herein is reiterated what the Lord had taught Joseph Smith, Sr., in section 4. For commentary on verses 1-6, see the commentary on D&C 6:1-9 and D&C 4:1-4.

1 A great and marvelous work is about to come forth unto the children of men.

2 Behold, I am God; give heed to my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore, give heed unto my word.

3 Behold, the field is white already to harvest; therefore, whoso desireth to reap let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God.

4 Yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God.

5 Therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive; if you will knock it shall be opened unto you.

6 Now, as you have asked, behold, I say unto you, keep my commandments, and seek to bring forth and establish the cause of Zion.

7 Behold, I speak unto you, and also to all those who have desires to bring forth and establish this work;

verse 7 See the commentary for section 11, verse 27.

8 And no one can assist in this work except he shall be humble and full of love, having faith, hope, and charity, being temperate in all things, whatsoever shall be entrusted to his care.

verse 8 “humble” Without a knowledge of our utter dependence upon God, we cannot serve him effectively. It is his plan, his gospel, his Spirit, his work, and his glory.

“full of love” Joseph Smith wrote, “Love is one of the chief characteristics of Deity, and ought to be manifested by those who aspire to be the sons of God. A man filled with the love of God, is not content with blessing his family alone, but ranges through the whole world, anxious to bless the whole human race” (HC, 4:227).

“being temperate” This is to exercise moderation or self-control and to resist the carnal urge to indulge in extremes, particularly in personal and physical habits and in physical indulgences. Examples of intemperance would be not getting enough sleep, or getting too much sleep; not eating enough, or eating too much; not exercising enough, or exercising too much. Geographically speaking, the temperate zones are those latitudes which maintain a moderate climate. A temperate individual is one in whom extremes are similarly not often manifested, but who maintains a moderate “climate” in his personal life.

9 Behold, I am the light and the life of the world, that speak these words, therefore give heed with your might, and then you are called. Amen.

Section 13 Restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood

For some of this introductory material for section 13 I am indebted to Charles R. Harrell (“The Restoration of the Priesthood” in Studies in Scripture, Volume One, The Doctrine and Covenants, 86-99).

During the angel Moroni’s appearances to Joseph Smith in September 1823, Moroni foretold of the restoration of the Aaronic and Melchizedek Priesthoods in connection with the translation of the gold plates. “When they are interpreted,” said the angel, “the Lord will give the holy priesthood to some, and they shall begin to proclaim this gospel and baptize by water, and after that they shall have power to give the Holy Ghost by the laying on of their hands” (Oliver Cowdery in Messenger and Advocate, volume 2 [October 1835]:199). As the translation of the Nephite record commenced, the Lord began preparing the minds of the early saints to receive the priesthood, outlining the qualifications for labor in the ministry (D&C 4, 6, 11, 12). In section 5, dated March 1829, the Lord declared: “For hereafter you shall be ordained and go forth and deliver my words unto the children of men” (D&C 5:6, italics added).

It was mid-May of 1829 in Harmony, Pennsylvania. Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery had been engaged without stopping since April 7th on the translation of the Book of Mormon. As they came to the instructions of the Savior to the Nephites (probably 3 Nephi 11 or 3 Nephi 12:1) on the necessity of authority and baptism, Oliver relates that it became apparent to them that “none had authority from God to administer the ordinances of the Gospel” (Messenger and Advocate, volume 1 [October 1834]:15).

On Friday, May 15, 1829, Joseph and Oliver retired to a nearby wooded area near the banks of the Susquehanna River in fulfillment of the prophecy of Joseph of old, the son of Jacob, that the lesser priesthood would be restored in the latter days by the administration of an “angel in the bush.” According to Joseph Smith, this ancient patriarch prophesied of blessings that “should come upon the seer of the last days and the scribe that should sit with him, and that should be ordained with him, by the hands of the angel in the bush, unto the lesser priesthood” (Cited in Joseph Fielding Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, comp. Bruce R. McConkie, 3 vols. [Salt Lake City, Bookcraft, 1954-56], 3:101). In this natural surrounding they knelt in humble prayer to “inquire of the Lord respecting baptism for the remission of sins, that [they] found mentioned in the translation of the plates” (JS-H 1:68). It was not a casual interest to know “the Lord’s position on this issue” that drove them into the woods that day, but a heartfelt personal desire to know “His will concerning [them]” (TPJS, 335). As Oliver Cowdery recollected, “our souls were drawn out in mighty prayer, to know how we might obtain the blessings of baptism and of the Holy Spirit according to the order of God; and we diligently sought for the right of the fathers, and the authority . . . to administer the same; for we desired to be followers of righteousness, and the possessors of greater knowledge, even the knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of God” (Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 3:100). In answer to their petition, John the Baptist, now a resurrected being, was sent to restore the Aaronic Priesthood on the earth. Oliver Cowdery eloquently captured the grandeur of this heavenly manifestation that followed their humble supplication:

After we had called on Him in a fervent manner, aside from the abodes of men, [He] condescended to manifest to us His will. On a sudden, as from the midst of eternity, the voice of the Redeemer spake peace to us, while the veil was parted and the angel of God came down clothed with glory, and delivered the anxiously looked for message, and the keys of the Gospel of repentance. What joy! what wonder! what amazement! While the world was racked and distracted while millions were groping as the blind for the wall, and while all men were resting upon uncertainty, as a general mass, our eyes beheld, our ears heard, as in the “blaze of day;” yes, more—above the glitter of the May sunbeam, which then shed its brilliancy over the face of nature! Then his voice, though mild, pierced to the center, and his words, “I am thy fellow-servant,” dispelled every fear. We listened, we gazed, we admired! ‘Twas the voice of an angel from glory, ‘twas a message from the Most High! And as we heard we rejoiced, while His love enkindled upon our souls, and we were wrapped in the vision of the Almighty! Where was room for doubt? Nowhere; uncertainty had fled, doubt had sunk no more to rise, while fiction and deception had fled forever! (Messenger and Advocate, volume 1 [October 1834]: 15.)

Joseph Smith’s less flowery but more informative account (although omitting the “voice of the Redeemer” that Oliver said spoke peace to them at the outset of the angel’s visit—ibid., 16) related:

A messenger from heaven descended in a cloud of light, and having laid his hands upon us, he ordained us, saying: Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah, I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness.

He said this Aaronic Priesthood had not the power of laying on hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, but that this should be conferred on us hereafter; and he commanded us to go and be baptized, and gave us directions that I should baptize Oliver Cowdery, and that afterwards he should baptize me. Accordingly we went and were baptized. I baptized him first, and afterwards he baptized me—after which I laid my hands upon his head and ordained him to the Aaronic Priesthood, and afterwards he laid his hands on me and ordained me to the same Priesthood—for so we were commanded.

The messenger who visited us on this occasion, and conferred this Priesthood upon us, said that his name was John, the same that is called John the Baptist in the New Testament, and that he acted under the direction of Peter, James and John who held the keys of the Priesthood of Melchizedek, which priesthood he said would in due time be conferred on us, and that I should be called the first Elder of the Church, and he (Oliver Cowdery) the second (JS-H 68-72).

Although John is here mentioned as having conferred “the Aaronic Priesthood,” Joseph was later specific in outlining the twofold nature of this confirmation saying, “he laid his hands upon my head, and [1] ordained me to a Priest after the order of Aaron, and [2] to hold the keys of this Priesthood” (TPJS, 335). Differentiating between the authority and the keys conferred on this occasion, Elder Bruce R. McConkie noted, “When John came, he did two things: He conferred upon Joseph and Oliver the Aaronic Priesthood—he gave them authority. The second thing that he did was to give them the keys of the priesthood, the keys of presidency, the right to preside in the Aaronic Priesthood, and the right to authorize either themselves or someone else to use the priesthood, within the field and scope that people are entitled to use that particular priesthood” (Bruce R. McConkie, “The Keys of the Kingdom” [address to Wilford Stake Priesthood Meeting, February 21, 1955], 3, typescript, Special Collections, Harold B. Lee Library, Brigham Young University). As keys are not always conveyed when priesthood is conferred, President Joseph F. Smith emphasized that, “a distinction must be carefully made between the general authority and the directing of the labors performed by that authority [i.e., keys]” (Gospel Doctrine, 5th edition [Salt Lake City, Deseret Book Company, 1939], 136).

For John to have conferred the authority and keys of the Aaronic Priesthood on Joseph and Oliver, he had to have possessed them himself. These powers he received in mortality, being the firstborn son in the lineage of Aaron (see D&C 84:27-28). While the tribe of Levi had a hereditary right to the Aaronic Priesthood, only the firstborn of the sons of Aaron had a legal right to the presidency or the keys of this priesthood. In speaking of the presidency of this priesthood a revelation in our day states: “No man has a legal right to this office, to hold the keys of this priesthood, except he be a literal descendant and the firstborn of Aaron” (D&C 68:18; cf. 107:16). In reference to John’s authority, President Joseph Fielding Smith observed that “by divine right of descent, he was the rightful presiding priest of the Aaronic order in Israel. This authority had come to him by lineage. . . . Had the Church of God been in existence with the Jews in that day, instead of the Jews being in a dreadful state of apostasy, then John the Baptist would have taken his proper place as the presiding priest of the Aaronic order” (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:89). It would seem that John’s authority and keys were not simply determined by his being the first born in his family, but that he was senior and presided in some other way.

With the coming of John the Baptist, Joseph and Oliver received all of the rights of the Aaronic Priesthood that were vested in Aaron and were thus literally “called and ordained even as Aaron” (D&C 27:8). Joseph and Oliver had both the right to function as priests themselves and the keys or power of presidency in the Aaronic Priesthood. These keys gave Joseph and Oliver the right of administration or control, the right to ordain others, and also the right to direct how and when those others would be allowed to use their priesthood.

Actually, the last man to hold the keys of the Aaronic Priesthood anciently was John the Baptist. Because the major function of the Aaronic Priesthood is to prepare Israel for receiving the Melchizedek Priesthood, it is entirely fitting that John should prepare the way for Christ, who holds the keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood. Thus, John goes before the Savior and prepares the way for him—the preparatory priesthood preceding the higher priesthood. John prepared the way for the Savior in his mortal ministry and in the restoration of the gospel in the latter days before Jesus’s second coming (see Matthew 17:11-13).

In his book the History of the Church, in 1838, Joseph Smith recorded his recollection of the statement of John the Baptist made during the ordination. In 1876 Orson Pratt extracted this statement and placed it in the Doctrine and Covenants (D&C 13:1).

At the time John the Baptist restored the Aaronic Priesthood on May 15, the Prophet’s brother Samuel was in Harmony. He had traveled to Harmony with Oliver, having arrived there on April 5. He then returned home to Manchester, but about a month later turned around and came back to Harmony. The History of the Church says that Joseph and Oliver baptized him on May 25, but his mother, Lucy Mack Smith, claimed that Samuel was baptized the day of John the Baptist’s visit, on the 15th. Regardless of the date, after his baptism, Samuel left and returned to Manchester and reported to his family what had taken place. At that point, Hyrum came to Harmony to investigate, and section 11 was given to him. Thus we see that section 13 is out of chronological sequence. The proper sequence should be 9,10, 13, then 11 and 12.

D&C 13 Restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood by John the Baptist

1 Upon you my fellow servants, in the name of Messiah I confer the Priesthood of Aaron, which holds the keys of the ministering of angels, and of the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins; and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness.

verse 1 “in the name of Messiah” Note that John refers to Jesus by using the anglicized form of the Hebrew title meshiach, which is equivalent to the more familiar Greek form christos, both of which mean “Anointed One” or “Christ.” Note that John uses the title Messiah more as a name than a title—he says, “in the name of Messiah” rather than “in the name of the Messiah.”

“Priesthood of Aaron” This is the same priesthood given anciently to Aaron and his descendants (see D&C 84:25-27; 107:13-15). Aaron was of the tribe of Levi, the son of Jacob or Israel. Thus, his priesthood is also called the levitical priesthood.

“which holds the keys of the ministering of angels . . . of the gospel of repentance . . . of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins” As already mentioned above, it is important to differentiate between the rights and privileges afforded by receiving the priesthood and receiving the keys of that priesthood—the right of presidency. In this phrase, the word “keys” has an additional meaning. It does not only refer to the keys of presidency or the right to preside. In stating here that the Aaronic Priesthood “holds the keys” of the gospel of repentance, etc., reference is made to the special enabling powers associated with the authority of the Aaronic Priesthood and not to the directing keys of the priesthood. This is a second and more general usage of the word “key” as used in the scriptures. See Keys of the Priesthood in volume 2, chapter 22 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine. It is with this broader sense of the word “key” in mind that, in response to the question “What is a key?” Joseph F. Smith explained, “It is the right or privilege which belongs to and comes with the Priesthood. . . . It is the right to enjoy the blessing of communication with the heavens (to receive the assistance of heavenly messengers, and to minister as an angel ministers), and the privilege and authority to administer in the ordinances of the gospel of Jesus Christ, to preach the gospel of repentance, and of baptism by immersion for the remission of sins. That is a key. . . . We ordain boys . . . to that Priesthood which holds the keys of the ministering of angels and of the gospel of repentance and baptism by immersion for the remission of sin” (Gospel Doctrine, 142). Thus every holder of the Aaronic Priesthood has certain rights and privileges (i.e., “keys”) according to his calling in that priesthood.

It is also true that John the Baptist delivered to Joseph and Oliver on this occasion the directing keys of the Aaronic Priesthood, but that is not mentioned in D&C 13:1.

The Aaronic priesthood is referred to elsewhere as the “preparatory gospel” because it prepares an individual to receive the fulness of the gospel (see D&C 84:26-27; 107:20), membership in the Church, and the blessings of the higher Melchizedek Priesthood.

“and this shall never be taken again from the earth, until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness” The word “this” refers to the Aaronic Priesthood.

The statement here of Joseph Smith that the Aaronic Priesthood is to remain on the earth “until the sons of Levi do offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness” may suggest to some that the Aaronic Priesthood is only temporary—that it will be taken from the earth following some specific event involving the sons of Levi. The problem arises from the use of the word until in this phrase. Oliver Cowdery's earlier account (Messenger and Advocate, volume 1 [October 1834]: 16) is perhaps a bit more precise, using the word "that" instead of "until." He said, "Upon you, my fellow servants, in the name of the Messiah, I confer this Priesthood and this authority, which shall remain upon earth, that the sons of Levi may yet offer an offering unto the Lord in righteousness!" (Quoting from a letter to W. W. Phelps, September 7, 1834, italics added.) In a special conference held October 21, 1848 in Kanessville, Iowa (now Council Bluffs), Oliver Cowdery, who had been excommunicated April 11, 1838, arose to seek forgiveness of the Church and bore this testimony: "I was present with Joseph when an holy angel from God came down from heaven and conferred on us, or restored the lesser or Aaronic Priesthood, and said to us at the same time, that it should remain upon the earth while the earth stands" (Journal of Reuben Miller, 21 October 1848 [Church Historian's Library]). This statement is consistent with the Lord's declaration that the Aaronic Priesthood "continueth and abideth forever with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God [the Melchizedek Priesthood]" (D&C 84:18).

There are several ways in which the Aaronic Priesthood may be considered eternal in duration. In one respect everyone who holds the Melchizedek Priesthood also holds the Aaronic Priesthood for the following reasons: (1) The greater comprehends the lesser—that is, is completely contained within the Melchizedek Priesthood—so that all who hold the Melchizedek Priesthood ipso facto hold the Aaronic Priesthood. (2) When a person receives the Aaronic Priesthood and subsequently receives the Melchizedek Priesthood, none of the former authority is taken away. (3) In another respect it has been taught that the Church on earth, down to the office of Deacon, has been organized after the pattern of the Church which exists in Heaven. This would imply that somewhere in our Father's house, there is a place for the ministration of this lesser order of the priesthood. At least one realm in which this priesthood will minister is in the earths that will always be passing through a temporal existence. With respect to the functioning of the Aaronic Priesthood on this earth after it has "passed away" and become celestialized, Joseph Fielding Smith has explained, "As long as we have temporal things on the earth this priesthood is necessary. Eventually, when the earth is celestialized, I suppose all priesthood will be of the higher order" (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:92). President Joseph Fielding Smith also wrote: "We may be sure that the Aaronic Priesthood will never be taken from the earth while mortality endures, for there will always be need for temporal direction and the performance of ordinances pertaining to the 'preparatory Gospel'" (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:62).

But just who are the Levites, and what kind of offering will they make? When Moses led the children of Israel out of Egypt, it was with the intention that they should become a Zion people, enjoying the blessings of the fulness of the gospel and of the ordinances of the Melchizedek Priesthood. When Israel sinned in the wilderness, God took the fulness of the gospel, and the Melchizedek Priesthood away from them but left the lesser priesthood, the Levitical priesthood, in their midst. The law of carnal commandments and performances functioned under this priesthood, and, with the law of Moses, constituted a training program to prepare immature and rebellious Israel for the fulness of the gospel. The Aaronic priesthood cannot, however, administer the fulness. As a lesser or preparatory priesthood, it is limited in its authority and prerogatives (see D&C 84:23-28; JST Exodus 34:1-2).

After the return of Israel from the Babylonian captivity, the priestly Levites became lax in their religious obligations, and because of their bad example, the rest of the nation became remiss in their duties. Malachi pointed out that the sacrifices they offered to the Lord were the worst of the flocks or even stolen animals, rather than the best. Thus, because the priests were unrighteous, their sacrifices were unacceptable, and the Lord promised that when he comes again, he will purge the Levites that they may yet offer an offering in righteousness (Malachi 3:1-3).

The promise that the sons of Levi would offer again an offering unto the Lord in righteousness is an allusion to the prophecy found in Malachi which the angel Moroni quoted to Joseph Smith saying, "Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me: and the Lord whom ye seek shall suddenly come to his temple. . . . And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness" (Malachi 3:1, 3). It was in partial fulfillment of this promise that, according to Joseph Fielding Smith, "John the Baptist came to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery and gave them his priesthood, thus preparing the way for the coming of the Lord" (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:12.) The messenger spoken of by Malachi has also been interpreted as having reference to the mission of John the Baptist in mortality, (Ibid., 1:193). When the Lord suddenly comes to his yet future temple in Jackson County, Missouri, he will purify the sons of Levi so that all of their offerings will be done in righteousness. Section 84 of the Doctrine and Covenants reveals that all who receive and honor the Melchizedek and Aaronic Priesthoods "become the sons of Moses and Aaron" (verse 34), thereby becoming in effect the sons of Levi (Moses and Aaron were of the tribe of Levi). Thus, one view holds that the Levites are all of the present-day priesthood holders in the Church. These present-day priesthood holders, the "sons of Levi," whether they be literal sons who receive the priesthood by right of descent or sons "according to the Holy Priesthood" (verse 6), "shall be filled with the glory of the Lord, upon Mount Zion in the Lord's house" (verse 32) where they "shall offer an acceptable offering and sacrifice in the house of the Lord" (verse 31).

Joseph Smith taught that the sacrifice to be offered by the sons of Levi will be, at least initially, an offering of the firstlings of the flock such as was practiced prior to the law of Moses. "These sacrifices," he observed, "as well as every ordinance belonging to the priesthood, will, when the Temple of the Lord shall be built, and the sons of Levi be purified, be fully restored and attended to in all their powers, ramifications, and blessings” (TPJS, 173). Joseph envisioned that the temple to be built in the city of Zion would be a complex consisting of twelve temples, some of which would be dedicated to the lesser priesthood where ordinances such as blood sacrifice might be performed (HC, 1:357-59). As to whether blood sacrifices will be permanently reinstated, President Joseph Fielding Smith explained:

We are living in the dispensation of the fulness of times into which all things are to be gathered, and all things are to be restored since the beginning. Even this earth is to be restored to the condition which prevailed before Adam’s transgression. Now in the nature of things, the law of sacrifice will have to be restored, or all things which were decreed by the Lord would not be restored. It will be necessary, therefore, for the sons of Levi, who offered the blood sacrifices anciently in Israel, to offer such a sacrifice again to round out and complete this ordinance in this dispensation. Sacrifice by the shedding of blood was instituted in the days of Adam and of necessity will have to be restored.

The sacrifice of animals will be done to complete the restoration when the temple spoken of is built; at the beginning of the millennium, or in the restoration, blood sacrifices will be performed long enough to complete the fulness of the restoration in this dispensation. Afterwards sacrifice will be of some other character (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:94).

An alternate view as to the proper interpretation of the identity of the sons of Levi is that the descendants of Levi, who still exist among the Jews throughout the world, are still rightful heirs to the priesthood of Aaron. They are now outside of the covenants of the gospel, which are found only in The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Thus, these Levites are unable to fill the role to which their family had been chosen by revelation and set apart in ancient times. As part of the restoration of all things, the tribe of Levi once again will fill a priesthood function in the Lord’s kingdom—after they become converted, are purified at the Lord’s coming, join the Church, and are born again of the Spirit.

Brief Historical Setting

The exact date of the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood is unknown. The Prophet records that he and Oliver “were forced to keep secret the circumstances of having received the priesthood . . . owing to a spirit of persecution which had already manifested itself in the neighborhood” (JS-H 1:74). In 1878, Orson Pratt and Joseph F. Smith visited David Whitmer, one of the three witnesses who was closely associated with the Prophet during this period. The first question Pratt asked Whitmer was, “Can you tell the date of the bestowal of the apostleship upon Joseph, by Peter, James, and John?” David’s answer was, “I do not know, Joseph never told me” (“Report of Elders Orson Pratt and Joseph F. Smith,” Deseret Evening News, 11.302 [16 November

The earliest explicit reference to the priesthood's having been restored is found in D&C 18, given in June 1829. Joseph mentioned that this revelation was intended to "illustrate the nature of our calling to this priesthood, as well as that of others who were yet to be sought after" (HC, 1:61-62). In this revelation directed to Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer the Lord said: "I speak unto you, even as unto Paul mine apostle, for you are called even with that same calling with which he was called" (D&C 18:9).

Because this revelation (section 18) is dated simply June 1829, it has been difficult to establish the date of the restoration with any more precision than sometime between 15 May and the end of June, 1829. Recent research (Larry C. Porter, "Dating the Restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood," Ensign, June 1979, 5-10) shows evidence, however, that this event very likely occurred sometime between the 15th and 29th of May, 1829. The evidence in support of this conclusion is as follows:

1. Oliver Cowdery wrote a letter to Hyrum Smith dated 14 June 1829 which contained a considerable amount of wording identical to that found in section 18, strongly suggesting that the revelation contained in section 18 had been given by that time.

2. David Whitmer affirmed that Joseph and Oliver spent the month from 1 June to 1 July 1829 at the Whitmer farm, which is about three days journey from where the Melchizedek Priesthood was restored. We know the Melchizedek Priesthood was restored to Joseph and Oliver "in the wilderness [woods] between Harmony, Susquehanna county, and Colesville, Broome County, on the Susquehanna River" (D&C 128:20). Being busily occupied in the translation of the Book of Mormon, it is unlikely that they would have taken nearly a week sometime between the 1st and 14th of June to make a round-trip journey to Harmony.

3. With the likelihood that the priesthood was restored before Joseph and Oliver moved to Fayette where they arrived approximately 1 June, coupled with the fact that the distance was about three days, the probable time of the restoration is narrowed to between 15 May and 29 May.

Regrettably, there exists no detailed first-hand account of the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood other than to mention that it was restored by the two resurrected beings Peter and James, together with John the Beloved who had been translated.

An interesting secondhand description of what transpired comes from Addison Everett in a letter he wrote in 1881. Brother Everett relates that he overheard a conversation between Joseph and his brother Hyrum a few days before their martyrdom in which Joseph told how he and Oliver had been arrested at Colesville for preaching and were being held at the home of the Justice of the Peace. Their attorney, Mr. Reid, helped them escape through a window as a mob had begun to gather in front of the house. Everett goes on to say, "it was night and they traveled through brush and water and mud, fell over logs, etc., until Oliver was exhausted; then Joseph helped him along through brush and water, almost carrying him. They traveled all night, and just at the break of day Oliver gave out entirely and exclaimed, "O Lord! Brother Joseph, how long have we got to endure this thing?" They sat down on a log to rest and Joseph said that at that very time Peter, James, and John came to them and ordained them to the Apostleship. They had 16 or 17 miles to go to get back to Mr. Hales, his father-in-law's, but Oliver did not complain any more of fatigue" (Letter of Addison Everett to Oliver B. Huntington, reproduced in Young Woman's Journal, 11 [November 1890]: 75-76).

Elder Erastus Snow gave a similar account of Joseph and Oliver's experience in a conference address delivered in 1882: "It was at a period when they were being pursued by their enemies and had to travel all night, and in the dawn of the coming day when they were weary and worn who should appear to them but Peter, James, and John, for the purpose of conferring upon them the Apostleship, the keys of which they themselves had held while upon the earth, which had been bestowed upon them by the Savior (JD, 23:183).

Enlarging on the events attending the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood, Joseph Fielding Smith explained (alluding to D&C 128:20) that Satan "appeared on the banks of the Susquehanna River to oppose the restoration of keys, and was detected by Michael, and his plans were thwarted" (Joseph Fielding Smith, Answers to Gospel Questions, 5 volumes [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Co., 1957-66], 1:177). That Michael, or Adam, should have played a major role in the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood is supported by the fact that he holds "the keys of salvation" (D&C 78:16) for this earth. According to the Prophet's teachings (HC, 3:386; 4:207-08), whenever messengers are sent from heaven to establish a gospel dispensation and restore the priesthood it is by Adam's authority.

Similar to the procedure followed in the restoration of the Aaronic Priesthood, in which Joseph and Oliver were commanded to ordain each other to the Aaronic Priesthood after having received it from John the Baptist, Oliver Cowdery testified, "I was also present with Joseph when the Melchizedek Priesthood was conferred by the angels of God . . . which we then confirmed on each other by the will and commandment of God" (Journal of Reuben Miller, October 21, 1848). This ordination was in fulfillment of John the Baptist's instruction that, after receiving the higher priesthood, Joseph was to be called the first Elder in the Church and Oliver the second Elder.

This ordination was also possibly related to that rather enigmatic passage in D&C 128:21: "And again, the voice of God in the chamber of old Father Whitmer, in Fayette." This relationship is suggested by the following quote from the Prophet Joseph who was writing on events occurring the latter part of June, 1829 (presumably after the visit from Peter, James, and John):

We now become anxious to have that promise realized to us, which the angel that conferred upon us the Aaronic Priesthood had given us, viz., that provided we continue faithful, we should also have the Melchizedek Priesthood, which holds the authority of the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We had for some time made this matter a subject of humble prayer, and at length we got together in the chamber of Mr. Whitmer's house, in order more particularly to seek of the Lord what we now so earnestly desired; and here, to our unspeakable satisfaction, did we realize the truth of the Savior's promise—"Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you"—for we had not long been engaged in solemn and fervent prayer, when the word of the Lord came unto us in the chamber, commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an Elder in the Church of Jesus Christ, and that he also should ordain me to the same office; and then to ordain others, as it should be made known unto us from time to time. We were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such times as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers or not; when also we were commanded to bless bread and break it with them, and to take wine, bless it, and drink it with them; afterward proceed to ordain each other according to commandment; then call out such men as the Spirit should dictate, and ordain them; and then attend to the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost, upon all those whom we had previously baptized, doing all things in the name of the Lord (HC, 1:60-61).

It seems obvious that the above paragraph was not written by Joseph until after the visit of Peter, James, and John. And that had likely occurred near the last of May 1829. Obviously also the principle of common consent in the Church was also beginning to take shape. Accepting the premise that Peter, James, and John had already conferred the Melchizedek Priesthood on Joseph and Oliver, but that their ordination was not complete until they ordained each other, may help explain why the Lord gave these instructions.

The revelations and accounts frequently speak of Joseph and Oliver as having been ordained to the apostleship under the hands of Peter, James, and John. The Lord told Joseph, "I have sent [Peter, James, and John] unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles, and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry and of the same things which I revealed unto them" (D&C 27:12). Regarding Joseph and Oliver's ordination to the apostleship, Joseph Fielding Smith made this clarification: "These men were not ordained to the specific office in the priesthood, but received the priesthood itself out of which the offices come" (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:147, Brigham Young held the view that Joseph's ordination to the apostleship signified that he was given the keys of the kingdom which are inherent in the apostleship—JD, 1:134-35). Since the offices are appendages to and grow out of the priesthood (D&C 107:5, 8), there would be no need for these messengers to ordain them to the office of apostle.

With the Melchizedek Priesthood restored, Joseph and Oliver could administer the higher ordinances of the gospel which communicate the spiritual blessings of the Church by which members can ultimately become sanctified and inherit eternal life (see D&C 84:20 and 107:18-19). In addition to the authority of the Melchizedek Priesthood which was restored, there were special keys and powers which the Lord gave Peter, James, and John and which were subsequently conferred by them on Joseph and Oliver. The Lord revealed, “I have committed [unto Peter, James, and John] the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times” (D&C 27:13). Thus, when these ancient apostles appeared to Joseph and Oliver, they declared themselves “as possessing the keys of the kingdom, and of the dispensation of the fulness of times” (D&C 128:20). Having received the keys of the kingdom, Joseph and Oliver could preside in the Melchizedek Priesthood and build up the Church or Kingdom upon the earth. The conferral of the keys of the dispensation of the fulness of times was an appointment for Joseph and Oliver to preside jointly over this last and most glorious dispensation. Aside from these keys’ being taken from Oliver when he lost his standing in the Church and given to Joseph’s older brother Hyrum, these keys were not passed on to others, but continue to reside with Joseph and Hyrum. Presiding under Adam, who holds the keys of all dispensations under the direction of Jesus Christ, they will stand throughout eternity at the head of this dispensation.

With the coming of John the Baptist to restore the Aaronic Priesthood, and Peter, James, and John to restore the Melchizedek Priesthood, the Lord declared: “The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth” (D&C 65:2). The impact that these priesthoods are destined to have on the earth has only begun to be realized. In a letter to his brother-in-law while yet out of the Church, Oliver Cowdery wrote this sober confession:

I have cherished a hope, and that one of my fondest, that I might leave such a character as those who might believe in my testimony, after I should be called hence, might do so, not only for the sake of the truth, but might not blush for the private character of the man who bore that testimony. I have been sensitive on this subject, I admit, but I ought to be so; you would be, under the circumstances, had you stood in the presence of John with our departed brother Joseph, to receive the lesser priesthood, and in the presence of Peter, to receive the greater and looked down through time, and witnessed the effects these two must produce—you would feel, what you have never felt, were wicked men conspiring to lessen the effects of your testimony to man, after you have gone to your long sought rest (Letter of Oliver Cowdery to Phineas H. Young, Tiffin, Ohio, 23 March 1846, Church Archives).

The restoration of the priesthood was more than simply one small part of the overall restoration “of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began” (Acts 3:21). It established the channel through which the Lord will continue to bring to pass all of his holy purposes until the earth and all therein that are righteous are ultimately restored to the glory from which they fell (see Priesthood in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 12).

As the translation process continued, some neighbors in Harmony were taking notice and beginning to murmur and threaten Joseph and Oliver. By this time Isaac Hale had been won over to the point of feeling that the two should at least have the right to translate without being bothered or molested by the neighbors. Thus, for a time, he used his influence to protect them. In the latter part of May, however, his protection crumbled, and in fact he actually turned against the two translators. Joseph and Oliver were thus brought under increasing pressure. They had to find a safer place where they might finish the translation. Oliver wrote to his friend David Whitmer in Fayette, New York, asking if he and Joseph might come to Fayette and live and work in the house of David Whitmer’s father, Peter Whitmer, Sr. The Whitmer farm lay between Seneca Lake and Lake Cayuga. Oliver had met David Whitmer in Palmyra in 1828 when the two were just beginning to learn about the gold plates. Oliver had stopped off at the Whitmer farm on the way from Manchester to Harmony earlier in the spring. He later had written to David Whitmer from Harmony, telling him that he was sure that Joseph had the plates. The Whitmers extended an invitation for Joseph and Oliver to come to their home and finish the translating. The Whitmers were obviously intrigued by the gold plates and by the process of translating them.

Oliver wrote again to ask David to come to Harmony with his wagon to carry Joseph and him back to Fayette. This request came at a difficult time, as the Whitmers were in the middle of spring plowing, and David Whitmer couldn’t really spare the five or six days required for that round trip. He was able to take the time, however, because of what seemed to be miraculous intervention. Plowing that should have taken two days was accomplished in one. Three unknown strangers prepared and plowed the Whitmer land without the Whitmers’ requesting any help. Joseph and Oliver were brought from Harmony to Fayette in early June by David Whitmer in a two-horse wagon, while the plates were transported by the Lord. Joseph received them when he arrived in Fayette.

The Whitmer’s proved to be a great help to the young prophet as he translated the Book of Mormon. Joseph wrote:

Upon our arrival, we found Mr. Whitmer’s family very anxious concerning the work, and very friendly toward ourselves. They continued so, boarded and lodged us according to arrangements; and John Whitmer, in particular, assisted us very much in writing during the remainder of the work. In the meantime, David, John, and Peter Whitmer, Jun. became our zealous friends and assistants in the work; and being anxious to know their respective duties, and having desired with much earnestness that I should inquire of the Lord concerning them, I did so through the means of the Urim and Thummim, and obtained for them in succession the following revelations [Doctrine and Covenants 14, 15, and 16] (HC, 1:49).

The Whitmers had seven children in all. Three were married and lived close by (Christian, Jacob, and Catherine). Four still lived at home (Peter Jr.—age 19, David—age 24, John—age 26, and 14-year-old Elizabeth Ann). Oliver still did most of the transcribing, but he was relieved on occasion by Emma or one of the Whitmers—Christian or John. Actually, the entire Whitmer family was helpful in the process of translation.

It took about a month to finish translating the Book of Mormon after Joseph and Oliver moved from Harmony to the Whitmer farm in Fayette, New York.

Sections 14, 15, and 16 all consist of counsel to members of the Whitmer family.

D&C 14, 15, and 16 Counsel to the Whitmers

D&C 14:7 Eternal life . . . is the greatest of all the gifts of God.

verses 1-6 For a discussion of these verses, see the commentary on sections 6:1-9 and 11:1-9.

1 A great and marvelous work is about to come forth among the children of men.

2 Behold, I am God; give heed to my word, which is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of both joints and marrow; therefore give heed unto my word.

3 Behold, the field is white already to harvest; therefore, whoso desireth to reap let him thrust in his sickle with his might, and reap while the day lasts, that he may treasure up for his soul everlasting salvation in the kingdom of God.

4 Yea, whosoever will thrust in his sickle and reap, the same is called of God.

5 Therefore, if you will ask of me you shall receive; if you will knock it shall be opened unto you.

6 Seek to bring forth and establish my Zion. Keep my commandments in all things.

7 And, if you keep my commandments and endure to the end you shall have eternal life, which gift is the greatest of all the gifts of God.

verse 7 “eternal life” It is, of course, fundamental that the phrase “eternal life” means life in God’s celestial presence while the related word, immortality, means simply living forever. The former must be earned, while the latter is a free gift to all of God’s creatures.

“eternal life . . . is the greatest of all the gifts of God” If, through our obedience to gospel law, we earn our celestial resurrection, why is it a gift? It is very much a gift for two reasons. First, no one fully qualifies for the celestial heaven completely on their own merits, though we do participate in the process to the degree we are able. In spite of our best efforts, every human being falls short. It is only available to us through the Savior’s atoning sacrifice. Second, the gift of eternal life far exceeds in magnificence our paltry efforts exerted in obeying the commandments; so much so that exaltation is indeed a gift—“the greatest of all the gifts of God.”

8 And it shall come to pass, that if you shall ask the Father in my name, in faith believing, you shall receive the Holy Ghost, which giveth utterance, that you may stand as a witness of the things of which you shall both hear and see, and also that you may declare repentance unto this generation.

verse 8 “that you may stand as a witness” Note the foreshadowing of David Whitmer’s role as one of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon. To function in this role, he would first need to be worthy of the Holy Ghost by whose promptings all spiritual impressions come.

9 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, who created the heavens and the earth, a light which cannot be hid in darkness; verse 9 “I am Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God” The phrase “living God” in the scriptures may be applied to both the Father, as here, and the Son. The term “living” means “truly and eternally living” or “resurrected,” in an immortal state.

10 Wherefore, I must bring forth the fulness of my gospel from the Gentiles unto the house of Israel.

verse 10 To initiate the gathering of the house of Israel in the latter days, the Lord will raise up a mighty nation among the Gentiles—the United States of America. Missionaries will go out from this great gentile nation to Israel—to the Lamanites, to the Jews, and to Israelites in all the world. Thus, this nation will become an ensign to the world and to all Israel. These missionaries may be referred to in the scripture as “Gentiles” even though many of them are, by descent, of the house of Israel. They are “Gentiles” by virtue of the fact that culturally they belong to the “mighty nation among the gentiles” (1 Nephi 22:7).

We thus see a reversal of the order of gathering compared to that which took place in the meridian of time. Then, the gospel was taken to the Jews first and then to the Gentiles. Thus, in our dispensation “the last [the Gentiles] shall be first, and the first [the Jews] shall be last” (1 Nephi 13:42; see also Luke 13:30).

We now live in the “times of the Gentiles” when the gospel is being taken to every Gentile nation, kindred, tongue, and people (D&C 45:25-30). See the commentary for 1 Nephi 14:32.

11 And behold, thou art David, and thou art called to assist; which thing if ye do, and are faithful, ye shall be blessed both spiritually and temporally, and great shall be your reward. Amen.

verse 11 “thou art David” Again, we see the expression we have come to recognize as suggesting that David Whitmer was foreordained to his callings in the Church. Though we have come to admire and respect him for never having denied his testimony of the Book of Mormon—which he acquired as one of the three special witnesses of the Book of Mormon—he did leave the Church which was an unfortunate development for both him and the Church.

Section 15 Revelation to John Whitmer

Sections 14, 15, and 16 were all received by Joseph Smith at the same time—June 1829—and share the same historical setting. For historical background pertinent to sections 15-16, please refer to the introductory material for section 14. Sections 15 and 16 are identical except for the names in verse 1 and the one word, unto, which was added in section 16 verse 5. Apparently this difference occurred because of a copying error in the 1844 edition.

D&C 15:6 (also 16:6) The thing which be of the most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people.

1 Hearken, my servant John, and listen to the words of Jesus Christ, your Lord and your Redeemer.

2 For behold, I speak unto you with sharpness and with power, for mine arm is over all the earth.

verse 2 “with sharpness and with power” See the commentary for D&C 6:2. These words are related to what the Lord told Oliver Cowdery in that verse. There the Lord’s words are referred to as both “powerful” and “sharper than a two-edged sword.”

“mine arm is over all the earth” The “arm” of God represents his power and authority—to his ability to put into effect what he intends. For different ways this phrase is used see the following references: D&C 1:14; 3:8; 35:8; Isaiah 52:10; John 12:38; 3 Nephi 9:14.

3 And I will tell you that which no man knoweth save me and thee alone—

verses 3-4 Both John Whitmer and Peter Whitmer Jr. asked the Lord repeatedly and privately what he would have them do. Here, the Lord reveals to John Whitmer (and to Peter Jr. in section 16), as he did to Oliver Cowdery in section 6 and also anciently to Nathanael (see John 1:47-51), that he knows the thoughts of their hearts. In verse 6 both receive their answer.

verse 4 Elder Ruder Clawson, of the Quorum of the Twelve, commented on the significance of this verse:

Cast your minds back to the early days of this Church, and there stood this man John Whitmer, recently come into the Church of Christ. Various occupations in which he might engage were before him. He had the opportunity to labor upon the farm, to engage in merchandising, to follow mining, to study the profession of medicine or law, or to adopt one of the many other occupations in which men employ themselves. The question he asked himself at that time was, What would be of the most worth to him? . . . I say, these opportunities were before him because the country is full of opportunities, which are within the reach of all. We live in a free country, and the way is open to you and to me, as it was to this man. He stood there in this situation, not having been trained long in the gospel of Christ, and I say to you—for it is on record here—that a voice came to that man from the eternal worlds, and that voice set at rest in him every doubt, every dubiety, every fearful anticipation. At a critical time in his life, when he must choose which way to go, that voice said unto him that that which would be of most worth unto him was to declare repentance unto the people and bring souls unto Christ [see verse 6]. The message was of such importance that it came to him with “sharpness and with power.” It was the voice of Jesus Christ (CR, April 1901, 7).

5 Behold, blessed are you for this thing, and for speaking my words which I have given you according to my commandments.

verse 5 John Whitmer (and Peter Jr. in the following section) are “blessed” for asking God what he desired of them and for speaking God’s word according to the commandments they had already received from the Bible and perhaps from revelations through the Prophet Joseph.

6 And now, behold, I say unto you, that the thing which will be of the most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me, that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father. Amen.

verse 6 “that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father” The celestial kingdom is often referred to as a place of rest when the struggles of mortality are over, the contest with Satan and with our own carnal nature is won, and our place in the kingdom is secured. However, there is ample reason to believe that the eternal celestial experience will hardly be one of rest. Judging by what we know of the position, experiences, and responsibilities of our Father in heaven, we may surely conclude that there will be abundant challenge, excitement, and joy in the celestial heaven.

The term rest is also used to refer to the state of being sealed up to exaltation in the celestial kingdom and receiving God’s oath that we shall inherit that kingdom, even while we remain in mortality. To see and converse with God while still in the flesh and receive his personal promise of exaltation would also, then, be considered entering “into his rest” (D&C 84:24—see the commentary for this verse).

Section 16 Revelation to Peter Whitmer, Jr.

1 Hearken, my servant Peter, and listen to the words of Jesus Christ, your Lord and your Redeemer.

2 For behold, I speak unto you with sharpness and with power, for mine arm is over all the earth.

3 And I will tell you that which no man knoweth save me and thee alone—

5 Behold, blessed are you for this thing, and for speaking my words which I have given unto you according to my commandments.

6 And now, behold, I say unto you, that the thing which will be of the most worth unto you will be to declare repentance unto this people, that you may bring souls unto me, that you may rest with them in the kingdom of my Father. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

In June 1829, as the Book of Mormon translation was nearing completion, Joseph learned, from the text of the Book of Mormon itself, that there were to be three special witnesses of the Book of Mormon who would be allowed to see the plates (Ether 5:2-4; see also 2 Nephi 11:3; 27:12). About this time a repentant and chastened Martin Harris had come again from Palmyra to Fayette to see how the work was progressing. David Whitmer, Oliver Cowdery, and Martin Harris repeatedly petitioned Joseph to see if they might become the witnesses. As a result of their importuning, Joseph inquired of the Lord and was given a revelation which named the three as the witnesses [D&C 17 - Three Witnesses of the Book of Mormon].

Shortly thereafter, the Book of Mormon witnesses received a revelation charging them with the responsibility of choosing, when the appropriate time arrived, those who would comprise the first Quorum of Twelve Apostles in this dispensation [D&C 18 - Book of Mormon Witnesses to Choose Twelve Apostles]. Martin Harris was excluded from this calling initially, but by 1835, when the time came to choose the Twelve, Martin had repented, and he participated in making those callings.

Section 17 Three Witnesses of the Book of Mormon

Almost immediately after Joseph discovered that three special witnesses to the Book of Mormon would be designated (see Ether 5:2-4; see also 2 Nephi 11:3; 27:12), Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer were each inspired with a desire to become one of the three special witnesses. As we learned in section 5 (verses 11-13; 24-28), Martin Harris had already been told by the Lord that he might be one of those special witnesses if he would humble himself. Similarly, Oliver Cowdery (D&C 6:25-28) and David Whitmer (D&C 14:8) had received the same promise from the Lord. They all urged Joseph Smith to inquire of the Lord to see if they might be granted this honor. Joseph did so, and through the Urim and Thummim in June 1829 he received section 17. For some reason, section 17 was not printed in the Book of Commandments in 1833 but was added to the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants (as were several other sections). It had been recorded in the Kirtland Revelation Book, a collection of revelations recorded in Kirtland during 1831-34—the early years there.

The three are told in this section that if they continue faithful, they will see the plates, the breast plate, the sword of Laban, the Urim and Thummim, and the Liahona. The three are also commanded to testify of the reality and divine purpose of the plates and the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon.

D&C 17 The Three Witnesses of the Book of Mormon

D&C 17:6 The Lord's swears an oath that the Book of Mormon is true—As your Lord and your God liveth it is true.

1 Behold, I say unto you, that you must rely upon my word, which if you do with full purpose of heart, you shall have a view of the plates, and also of the breastplate, the sword of Laban, the Urim and Thummim, which were given to the brother of Jared upon the mount, when he talked with the Lord face to face, and the miraculous directors which were given to Lehi while in the wilderness, on the borders of the Red Sea.

verse 1 There are two grammatical problems in this verse. First, "Urim and Thummim" can take either a singular or plural verb. In this verse, a plural verb is used. Anyone reading it might surmise that the plates, breastplate, sword of Laban, and the Urim and Thummim were all given to the Brother of Jared. The verse intends to say, however, that only the Urim and Thummim once belonged to the Brother of Jared (see Ether 3:28).

The other problem is the term “miraculous directors.” This should be “miraculous director . . . was given” since the Liahona was never used in the plural in the Book of Mormon.

This verse makes the point that it is not just the text or the doctrine of the book that is true, but the historical account of events as well. Not only did the witnesses know that the book was of God, they also knew that it was based on real history and real people who really did what the book claims they did, for they saw for themselves the artifacts associated with that history. Thus, the testimony of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon renders untenable the idea that the Book of Mormon may be inspired without being historical.

2 And it is by your faith that you shall obtain a view of them, even by that faith which was had by the prophets of old.

3 And after that you have obtained faith, and have seen them with your eyes, you shall testify of them, by the power of God;

verse 3 It is, of course, notable that all three men, following their special experience near the Peter Whitmer farm, bore individual witness to the book and its message for the rest of their lives. See the commentary for verse 5.

4 And this you shall do that my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., may not be destroyed, that I may bring about my righteous purposes unto the children of men in this work.

verse 4 One purpose of having the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon was to spread the burden of testifying among a few individuals that thus, the prophet Joseph was kept from being the single focus of the wrath of the world. Also, since God has provided three witnesses to the truth of his work, the hearers are left without excuse should they reject the testimony of multiple witnesses (see D&C 42:80; Deuteronomy 17:6; Matthew 18:16).

5 And ye shall testify that you have seen them, even as my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., has seen them; for it is by my power that he has seen them, and it is because he had faith.

verse 5 “And ye shall testify” Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, and Martin Harris never faltered in bearing testimony of the truthfulness of the book of Mormon. As history attests, however, they did falter in other church-related areas. David Whitmer left the Church and never came back. Oliver Cowdery and Martin Harris both left the Church but were eventually rebaptized and died in full fellowship. But ever while they were out of the Church, all three continued to bear solemn witness of the reality of their experience on that day. They undoubtedly felt the weight of the Lord’s warning to them to keep his commandments or the gates of hell would prevail against them.

On Sunday evening, at 5:30 (January 22, 1888), Mr. Whitmer called his family and some friends to his bedside, and addressing himself to the attending physician, said: "Dr Buchanan, I want you to say whether or not I am in my right mind, before I give my dying testimony." The doctor answered: "Yes, you are in your right mind, for I have just had a conversation with you." He then addressed himself to all around his bedside in these words: "Now you must all be faithful in Christ. I want to say to you all, the Bible and the record of the Nephites (Book of Mormon) is true, so you can say that you have heard me bear my testimony on my death-bed. All be faithful in Christ, and your reward will be according to your works. God bless you all, my trust is in Christ forever, worlds without end. Amen" (Jenson, Biographical Encyclopedia, 1:270).

The last testimony of Martin Harris was given to William Harrison Homer, who was with him at the time of his death. Brother Homer recorded:

The next day, July 10, 1875, marked the end. It was in the evening. It was milking time, and Martin Harris, Jr., and his wife, Nancy Homer Harris, had gone out to milk and to do the evening's chores. In the house with the stricken man were left my mother, Eliza Williamson Homer, and myself. . . . I stood by the bedside holding the patient's right hand and my mother at the foot of the bed. Martin Harris had been unconscious for a number of days. When we first entered the room the old gentleman appeared to be sleeping. He soon woke up and asked for a drink of water. I put my arm under the old gentleman, raised him, and my mother held the glass to his lips. He drank freely, then he looked up at me and recognized me. He said, "I know you. You are my friend." He said, "Yes, I did see the plates on which the Book of Mormon was written; I did see the angel; I did hear the voice of God; and I do know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God, holding the keys of the Holy Priesthood." This was the end. Martin Harris, divinely-chosen witness of the work of God, relaxed, gave up my hand. He lay back on his pillow and just as the sun went down behind the Clarkston mountains, the soul of Martin Harris passed on (New Witness for Christ, 1:253-54).

verses 3-5 The three witnesses fulfilled an important law established by the Lord. Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote:

Whenever the Lord has established a dispensation by revealing his gospel and by conferring priesthood and keys upon men, he has acted in accordance with the law of witnesses which he himself ordained. This law is: "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established" (2 Corinthians 13:1; Deuteronomy 17:6; 19:15; Matthew 18:15-16; John 8:17-18).

Never does one man stand alone in establishing a new dispensation of revealed truth, or in carrying the burden of such a message and warning to the world. In every dispensation, from Adam to the present, two or more witnesses have always joined their testimonies, thus leaving their hearers without excuse in the day of judgment should the testimony be rejected (Mormon Doctrine, 436).

6 And he has translated the book, even that part which I have commanded him, and as your Lord and your God liveth it is true.

verse 6 The Lord bears simple and powerful testimony of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon. Bruce R. McConkie wrote:

One of the most solemn oaths ever given to man is found in these words of the Lord relative to Joseph Smith and the Book of Mormon [verse 6 is quoted].

This is God's testimony of the Book of Mormon. In it Deity himself has laid his Godhood on the line. Either the book is true or God ceases to be God. There neither is nor can be any more formal or powerful language known to men or Gods (Ensign, May 1982, 33).

The Lord's solemn oath does not mean that the text of the Book of Mormon is inerrant. Inerrant means infallible and free from error. There might be printer's errors, copyists' errors, or other human errors. The book itself, however, both in its historical claims and in its doctrines, remains true.

7 Wherefore, you have received the same power, and the same faith, and the same gift like unto him; verse 7 The testimony that the three witnesses would have for themselves would have the same fundamental bases as Joseph Smith's testimony. They would have a witness beyond faith. They would know with their physical senses.

8 And if you do these last commandments of mine, which I have given you, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; for my grace is sufficient for you, and you shall be lifted up at the last day.

verse 8 "these last commandments of mine" This phrase refers to the commandments just delivered to them in verses 3-6. These three men are promised that if they would do all that they were instructed in this revelation, the Lord's grace would be sufficient to ensure their exaltation.

"you shall be lifted up at the last day" To be "lifted up" is to receive one's celestial resurrection. The term "lifted up" might also refer either to the living who will be caught up to meet the Lord on his return to this earth or to the "dead in Christ" who will be resurrected and raised up to the celestial heaven.

9 And I, Jesus Christ, your Lord and your God, have spoken it unto you, that I might bring about my righteous purposes unto the children of men. Amen.

Section 18 Book of Mormon Witnesses to Choose Twelve Apostles

This revelation was given in June 1829, probably between the 1st and the 14th, in the home of Peter Whitmer, Sr., in Fayette, New York, to Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer. The Lord withheld, for the time being, the blessing of this revelation from Martin Harris.

Section 18 is closely associated with the restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood. No specific date for the receipt of section 18 is known. Joseph and Oliver received the Aaronic Priesthood on May 15, 1829 (see D&C 13), and they left Harmony and moved to Fayette, New York, to stay with the Whitmer family around the 29th or 30th of May. Because the Melchizedek Priesthood was restored to Joseph and Oliver “in the wilderness [woods] between Harmony, Susquehanna county, and Colesville, Broome County, on the Susquehanna River” (D&C 128:20), it is likely that the restoration took place before May 30, by which time Joseph and Oliver had left the area where it is reported to have occurred (see Porter, “Dating the Restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood,” 5-10; also Porter, “Restoration of the Priesthood,” 3-7). If this is correct, then the Melchizedek Priesthood was restored within about two weeks of the Aaronic Priesthood and before the move to Fayette which began on either the 29th or 30th of May. The 18th section, then, was received sometime between the 1st and 14th of June. On June 14, 1829, Oliver Cowdery wrote a letter to Hyrum Smith, which indicates from its many parallels to section 18 that this revelation had already been received by that date.

The revelation given at the Whitmer home occurred as follows. After arriving at the Whitmer’s on June 1, 1829, the Prophet Joseph and some of his associates gathered in prayer “when the word of the Lord came unto us in the chamber, commanding us that I should ordain Oliver Cowdery to be an Elder in the Church of Jesus Christ; and that he also should ordain me to the same office; and then to ordain others, as it should be made known unto us from time to time. We were, however, commanded to defer this our ordination until such time as it should be practicable to have our brethren, who had been and who should be baptized, assembled together, when we must have their sanction to our thus proceeding to ordain each other, and have them decide by vote whether they were willing to accept us as spiritual teachers or not; . . . The following commandment [section 18] will further illustrate the nature of our calling to this priesthood, as well as that of others who were yet to be sought after” (HC, 1:60-62).

In this revelation Joseph and Oliver are directed in how to proceed in ordaining one another and also in ordaining other prospective elders. Also Oliver and David are given the honor and commandment to choose those who would comprise the first Quorum of Twelve Apostles in this dispensation. The actual selection of the Twelve did not occur until six years later in 1835. By that time Martin Harris had placed himself in the position to be allowed by the Lord to be included with the other two witnesses in choosing the apostles.

D&C 18 Book of Mormon Witnesses to Choose Twelve Apostles

D&C 18:10 The worth of souls is great in the sight of God.

D&C 18:15-16 And if . . . you should labor all your days and bring save it be one soul unto me.

D&C 18:23 There is none other name given whereby man can be saved.

1 Now, behold, because of the thing which you, my servant Oliver Cowdery, have desired to know of me, I give unto you these words:

verse 1 Oliver Cowdery wrote a document known as the Articles of the Church of Christ in 1829. Much of what is in that manuscript is now contained in D&C section 20, and the relationship between the two is unmistakable. It is likely that Joseph assigned Oliver to write this document, and that at the time section 18 was received, Oliver was making plans and preparations for writing this manuscript. Oliver had prayed to know what to include, and he had also approached the Prophet for his counsel as well. See further discussion of this project of Oliver's in the introductory commentary for section 20.

2 Behold, I have manifested unto you, by my Spirit in many instances, that the things which you have written are true; wherefore you know that they are true.

verse 2 The Lord responds to Oliver's prayer in these verses of section 18 by reminding him that through the Spirit, Oliver had received a testimony that the things which he had previously written as a scribe for Joseph in translating the Book of Mormon (D&C 6:22-23; 13:1; 17:1).

3 And if you know that they are true, behold, I give unto you a commandment, that you rely upon the things which are written; verses 3-4 The Lord then tells him to rely, for his proposed manuscript, on what he had written in the Book of Mormon, because the Book of Mormon contains everything concerning the foundation of the Church.

4 For in them are all things written concerning the foundation of my church, my gospel, and my rock.

5 Wherefore, if you shall build up my church, upon the foundation of my gospel and my rock, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you.

verse 5 “my church . . . my gospel . . . my rock” When the Lord refers to his “church,” he is referring to the assembled believers and disciples who have taken upon themselves his name and covenanted to be obedient to his gospel (see D&C 10:67). The Church, of course, has not yet been organized so the Lord speaks in the future tense—“if you shall build up my church.”

The Lord defined his “gospel” in D&C 39:6: “And this is my gospel—repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things, and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom.”

His gospel is essentially the “first principles and ordinances of the gospel,” faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, repentance, baptism by immersion for the remission of sins, and the laying on of hands for the gift of the Holy Ghost. We should not speak of repentance without reminding ourselves that repentance is essentially obedience. When we want to emphasize obedience following a period of disobedience, we call it repentance.

The term “rock” is used in scripture with a few different meanings. While it is true that “the rock” sometimes refers to the rock of revelation, Christ is also the Rock (1 Corinthians 10:4; Helaman 5:12). In one context, Peter (or Cephas), whose name both in Greek and in Aramaic means “rock,” is referred to by the Savior as the rock. Peter was the last one to hold all the keys anciently (see D&C 27:12; see also Matthew 16:18-19, where “rock” has more than one meaning). In this particular verse, the gospel is the rock, as it is also in D&C 11:24 and 3 Nephi 11:32-39.

6 Behold, the world is ripening in iniquity; and it must needs be that the children of men are stirred up unto repentance, both the Gentiles and also the house of Israel.

verse 6 One major purpose for restoring the gospel to the earth is to call the world to repentance.

7 Wherefore, as thou hast been baptized by the hands of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., according to that which I have commanded him, he hath fulfilled the thing which I commanded him.

verse 7 The Lord tells Oliver that Joseph is so far doing just what he (the Lord) has commanded him to do.

8 And now, marvel not that I have called him unto mine own purpose, which purpose is known in me; wherefore, if he shall be diligent in keeping my commandments he shall be blessed unto eternal life; and his name is Joseph.

verse 8 “and his name is Joseph” In Hebrew the name Joseph means “added.” The prophet Lehi, just before his death gathered his family and quoted from writings of ancient Joseph who was sold into Egypt. In these writings, ancient Joseph prophesied that in the latter days a branch of the tribe of Joseph would be raised up to gather scattered Israel. They would be led by a choice seer named Joseph (2 Nephi 3:5-15).

9 And now, Oliver Cowdery, I speak unto you, and also unto David Whitmer, by the way of commandment; for, behold, I command all men everywhere to repent, and I speak unto you, even as unto Paul mine apostle, for you are called even with that same calling with which he was called.

verse 9 For the remainder of this section, the Lord will speak to both Oliver and to David Whitmer.

“I command all men everywhere to repent” A call to repentance is a call to obey. It is not just a plea or a request of God. It is an ongoing commandment given to the greatest and to the least; to the righteous and to the wicked; to members of the Church and to nonmembers alike.

“for you are called even with that same calling with which he was called” What does it mean to be called “with the same calling with which [Paul] was called”? It means to be called to be an apostle.

Brigham Young taught that “Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and David Whitmer were the first apostles of this dispensation, though in the early days of the Church David Whitmer lost his standing, and another took his place” (JD, 6:320). To these, according to Heber C. Kimball, Martin Harris was later added (JD, 6:29). These men will be instructed in verse 37 to find and ordain twelve others who will form the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles.

10 Remember the worth of souls is great in the sight of God;

verse 10 A verse and scriptural reference worth memorizing! The Savior was willing to pay an infinite price to provide us an opportunity to return to our celestial home.

11 For, behold, the Lord your Redeemer suffered death in the flesh; wherefore he suffered the pain of all men, that all men might repent and come unto him.

verse 11 “wherefore he suffered the pain of all men” Men commit sin because they fall prey to their natural selves (Mosiah 3:19). We are naturally inclined to seek for social acceptance, for physical comfort and security, for material comfort, for respect, for self-esteem, for financial security. We are driven to satisfy our sexual cravings. The influences of the world are powerful and immediate and difficult to resist. These temptations of the world are amplified by the sufferings of men, particularly discouragement, despair, physical pain, addictions, and others of life's vicissitudes. In order for Jesus Christ to possess perfect empathy for all men, he had to experience first hand every combination of temptations and hardships ever experienced by any man (Alma 7:11-12; Hebrews 2:18). It would certainly take a miracle for him to experience all of this in the space of less than twenty-four hours. It was a miracle. This miracle was the infinitely excruciating ordeal he undertook in the Garden of Gethsemane and on the cross. It was orchestrated by the Father (3 Nephi 11:11; D&C 76:107). It was the atonement of Jesus Christ.

12 And he hath risen again from the dead, that he might bring all men unto him, on conditions of repentance.

13 And how great is his joy in the soul that repenteth!

14 Wherefore, you are called to cry repentance unto this people.

15 And if it so be that you should labor all your days in crying repentance unto this people, and bring, save it be one soul unto me, how great shall be your joy with him in the kingdom of my Father!

16 And now, if your joy will be great with one soul that you have brought unto me into the kingdom of my Father, how great will be your joy if you should bring many souls unto me!

verses 15-16 Another scriptural passage and scriptural reference well worth memorizing! Contemplate these two verses for a few moments. Indeed, "The worth of souls is great in the sight of God."

17 Behold, you have my gospel before you, and my rock, and my salvation.

18 Ask the Father in my name, in faith believing that you shall receive, and you shall have the Holy Ghost, which manifesteth all things which are expedient unto the children of men.

19 And if you have not faith, hope, and charity, you can do nothing.

verse 19 "faith, hope, and charity" These three virtues are not listed together by accident. Faith is initially deliberate obedience. We receive in turn for our obedience, through personal revelation, increments of the attributes of Christ in the form of gifts of the Spirit, which refine us and incline us toward further and less difficult obedience. Most of God's commands define for us how we should treat one another and how we should place the interests of others ahead of our own. As we obey these commands, initially deliberately, our hearts are softened toward others; we come to have spiritual insight into the hearts of others. We come to sense their true identity stripped of all of their earthly defenses; we come to truly understand and love them.

This love also comes to us in the form of gifts of the Spirit—incremental bits of that charity which Christ possesses for us all. Gradually, we come to place others first and ourselves second. A side benefit of this spiritual progress is the quiet growing assurance that our efforts are acceptable to the Lord and that we are okay—we are headed to our celestial home. This assurance, this hope is whispered to our souls by personal revelation. This is the gift of hope.

verse 20 We are commanded to avoid contention (arguing, fighting, or “bashing”) in our dealings with other churches. The Lord taught his missionaries: “And according as I have commanded you thus shall ye baptize. And there shall be no disputations among you, as there have hitherto been; neither shall there be disputations among you concerning the points of my doctrine, as there have hitherto been. For verily, verily I say unto you, he that hath the spirit of contention is not of me, but is of the devil, who is the father of contention, and he stirreth up the hearts of men to contend with anger, one with another. Behold, this is not my doctrine, to stir up the hearts of men with anger, one against another; but this is my doctrine, that such things should be done away” (3 Nephi 11:28-30).

The prophet Joseph Smith taught the same principle:

The elders would go forth, and each must stand for himself . . . to go in all meekness, in sobriety, and preach Jesus Christ and him crucified; not to contend with others on account of their faith, or systems of religion, but pursue a steady course. This I delivered by way of commandment; and all who observe it not will pull down persecution upon their heads, while those who do, shall always be filled with the Holy Ghost; this I pronounced as a prophecy, and sealed with hosanna and amen (HC, 2:431).

“save it be the church of the devil” What is the “church of the devil”? It is no individual denomination. Our enemies are not the Methodists, or the Baptists, or the Catholics, for there are many people among these denominations and all others who love light and seek to serve God as far as their understanding allows them. The church of the devil is wickedness. It is those who love darkness more than light—those who would attack other denominations. It is Satan’s kingdom, the sphere of his influence and power. It is the same as the “great and abominable church” defined in 1 Nephi chapter 14. See the commentary for that chapter.

21 Take upon you the name of Christ, and speak the truth in soberness.

22 And as many as repent and are baptized in my name, which is Jesus Christ, and endure to the end, the same shall be saved.

23 Behold, Jesus Christ is the name which is given of the Father, and there is none other name given whereby man can be saved;

verse 23 “there is none other name given whereby man can be saved” Just as there is but one true God, so is there but one true name endowed by him with saving power—Jesus Christ. That name was confirmed in the days of Adam as “the only name which shall be given under heaven, whereby salvation shall come unto the children of men” (Moses 6:52). All other names, titles, and epithets applied to other supposed deities are spiritually impotent.

The restoration of the gospel—of necessity—involved the restoration of the saving name of Jesus Christ. Not, of course, the literal person/name familiar to all Christians, but the correct understanding of the personality behind that name, together with that authority and those doctrines and ordinances encompassed by it. For just as there are false gods, so are there false Christs or, rather, false concepts associated with him. Christ condemns those “who use the name of the Lord, and use it in vain, having not authority” (D&C 63:62). Therefore, we cannot receive Christ and validly take his name upon us without committing ourselves to the gospel as restored through Joseph Smith. The Lord made this clear to James Covill, a Baptist minister: “He that receiveth my gospel receiveth me; and he that receiveth not my gospel receiveth not me” (D&C 39:5).

24 Wherefore, all men must take upon them the name which is given of the Father, for in that name shall they be called at the last day;

25 Wherefore, if they know not the name by which they are called, they cannot have place in the kingdom of my Father.

26 And now, behold, there are others who are called to declare my gospel, both unto Gentile and unto Jew;

27 Yea, even twelve; and the Twelve shall be my disciples, and they shall take upon them my name; and the Twelve are they who shall desire to take upon them my name with full purpose of heart.

verse 27 This verse portends the eventual calling in 1835 of the twelve apostles. In February of that year the Quorum of the Twelve was organized. Note that in the following verse this priesthood calling was initially intended to be a traveling missionary calling.

28 And if they desire to take upon them my name with full purpose of heart, they are called to go into all the world to preach my gospel unto every creature.

29 And they are they who are ordained of me to baptize in my name, according to that which is written;

verse 29 “According to that which is written” in the newly translated Book of Mormon and in the revelations to the Prophet Joseph.

30 And you have that which is written before you; wherefore, you must perform it according to the words which are written.

31 And now I speak unto you, the Twelve—Behold, my grace is sufficient for you; you must walk uprightly before me and sin not.

verse 31 “And now I speak unto you, the Twelve” Again, the Lord speaks to the Twelve six years before they are called.

32 And, behold, you are they who are ordained of me to ordain priests and teachers; to declare my gospel, according to the power of the Holy Ghost which is in you, and according to the callings and gifts of God unto men;

33 And I, Jesus Christ, your Lord and your God, have spoken it.

34 These words are not of men nor of man, but of me; wherefore, you shall testify they are of me and not of man;

35 For it is my voice which speaketh them unto you; for they are given by my Spirit unto you, and by my power you can read them one to another; and save it were by my power you could not have them; verses 34-36 These verses contain the reason why an apostle, or any of us for that matter, can testify that he has heard the voice of Christ. When we read the scriptures, we hear the voice of Christ.

36 Wherefore, you can testify that you have heard my voice, and know my words.

37 And now, behold, I give unto you, Oliver Cowdery, and also unto David Whitmer, that you shall search out the Twelve, who shall have the desires of which I have spoken; verse 37 The question might well be raised: Is not apostolic authority necessary before a man can call and ordain another apostle? Did Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer possess such authority? Were they apostles? B. H. Roberts suggested that the three special witnesses of the Book of Mormon were indeed “three very special witnesses” not only of the Book of Mormon, but of the Lord’s work in general. Brother Roberts suggested that it was “pre-eminently proper” that the Twelve should be chosen by the three witnesses (HC, 2:187). The implication is that the calling of the Three Witnesses was an apostolic one.

Again, only Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer are mentioned here (see D&C 19:15, 20), but in 1835 Joseph Smith directed that Martin should also assist in choosing the Twelve.

38 And by their desires and their works you shall know them.

39 And when you have found them you shall show these things unto them.

40 And you shall fall down and worship the Father in my name.

41 And you must preach unto the world, saying: You must repent and be baptized, in the name of Jesus Christ;

42 For all men must repent and be baptized, and not only men, but women, and children who have arrived at the years of accountability.

verse 42 This is the first mention of the concept of accountability, which was later clarified by revelation to be eight years of age (see D&C 68:25; JST Genesis 17:11; see also D&C 20:71).

43 And now, after that you have received this, you must keep my commandments in all things;

44 And by your hands I will work a marvelous work among the children of men, unto the convincing of many of their sins, that they may come unto repentance, and that they may come unto the kingdom of my Father.

45 Wherefore, the blessings which I give unto you are above all things.

46 And after that you have received this, if you keep not my commandments you cannot be saved in the kingdom of my Father.

verse 46 Those who have been given the greater blessings are held to a higher standard (see D&C 82:3). Those who have received the blessings that are “above all things” (see the previous verse), will surely be dealt with severely in the eternities, especially if they then rebel against God.

47 Behold, I, Jesus Christ, your Lord and your God, and your Redeemer, by the power of my Spirit have spoken it. Amen.

1829 July

One morning in early July 1829, the three witnesses and Joseph retired to a secluded spot in a pasture between two roads on the Whitmer farm. They took turns praying, not once, but twice, and nothing happened. Before making a third attempt, Martin Harris withdrew, perceiving that he was the obstacle. The remaining three prayed again, and this time they were granted the glorious experience of having an angel appear and show them the plates of the Book of Mormon, the brass plates, the plates of the book of Ether, the plates containing the records of the wickedness and secret combinations of the people of the world down to the time of their being engraved, and many other plates. There appeared as it were, a table with many records or plates upon it. They also saw the breastplate, the Liahona, the Urim and Thummim, and the sword of Laban. David Whitmer later said, “I saw them just as plain as I see this bed (striking the bed beside him with his hand), and I heard the voice of the Lord, as distinctly as I ever heard anything in my life, declaring that the records of the plates of the Book of Mormon were translated by the gift and power of God.” When asked if he saw the angel at that time, Brother Whitmer replied, “Yes; he stood before us, our testimony as recorded in the Book of Mormon is strictly and absolutely true, just as it is there written” (“Report of Elders Orson Pratt and Joseph F. Smith,” 771-72).

Joseph then left Oliver and David and found Martin Harris engaged in prayer, as he had previously been instructed by the Lord (see D&C 5:24). Joseph and Martin prayed together, and at length, Martin was favored with the same experience. See the Testimony of the Three Witnesses and its commentary in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

Another account of the experience of the three witnesses further enriches our understanding of this remarkable incident:

Not many days after the above commandment was given, we four, viz., Martin Harris, David Whitmer, Oliver Cowdery and myself, agreed to retire into the woods, and try to obtain, by fervent and humble prayer, the fulfilment of the promises given in the above revelation—that they should have a view of the plates. We accordingly made choice of a piece of woods convenient to Mr. Whitmer's house, to which we retired, and having knelt down, we began to pray in much faith to Almighty God to bestow upon us a realization of these promises.

According to previous arrangement, I commenced prayer to our Heavenly Father, and was followed by each of the others in succession. We did not at the first trial, however, obtain any answer or manifestation of divine favor in our behalf. We again observed the same order of prayer, each calling on and praying fervently to God in rotation, but with the same result as before.

Upon this, our second failure, Martin Harris proposed that he should withdraw himself from us, believing, as he expressed himself, that his presence was the cause of our not obtaining what we wished for. He accordingly withdrew from us, and we knelt down again, and had not been many minutes engaged in prayer, when presently we beheld a light above us in the air, of exceeding brightness; and behold, an angel stood before us. In his hands he held the plates which we had been praying for these to have a view of. He turned over the leaves one by one, so that we could see them, and discern the engravings thereon distinctly. He then addressed himself to David Whitmer, and said, “David, blessed is the Lord, and he that keeps His commandments;” when, immediately afterwards, we heard a voice from out of the bright light above us, saying, “These plates have been revealed by the power of God, and they have been translated by the power of God. The translation of them which you have seen is correct, and I command you to bear record of what you now see and hear.”

I now left David and Oliver, and went in pursuit of Martin Harris, whom I found at a considerable distance, fervently engaged in prayer. He soon told me, however, that he had not yet prevailed with the Lord, and earnestly requested me to join him in prayer, that he also might realize the same blessings which we had just received. We accordingly joined in prayer, and ultimately obtained our desires, for before we had yet finished, the same vision was opened to our view, at least it was again opened to me, and I once more beheld and heard the same things; whilst at the same moment, Martin Harris cried out, apparently in an ecstasy of joy, "'Tis enough; 'tis enough; mine eyes have beheld; mine eyes have beheld;" and jumping up, he shouted, "Hosanna," blessing God, and otherwise rejoiced exceedingly (HC, 1:54-55).

Joseph was greatly relieved that the Lord had allowed others to see the plates so that they might now share with him the responsibility of witnessing to the authenticity of the Book of Mormon record. Lucy Mack Smith, the Prophet's mother, gave the following account describing Joseph's feelings after he returned home from the manifestation to the three witnesses:

When they returned to the house it was between three and four o'clock p.m. Mrs. Whitmer, Mr. Smith, and myself were sitting in a bedroom at the time. On coming in, Joseph threw himself down beside me, and exclaimed, "Father, mother, you do not know how happy I am: the Lord has now caused the plates to be shown to three more besides myself. They have seen an angel, who has testified to them, and they will have to bear witness to the truth of what I have said, for now they know for themselves, that I do not go about to deceive the people, and I feel as if I was relieved of a burden which was almost too heavy for me to bear, and it rejoices my soul, that I am not any longer to be entirely alone in the world. Upon this Martin Harris came in: he seemed almost overcome with joy, and testified boldly to what he had both seen and heard. And so did David and Oliver, adding that no tongue could express the joy of their hearts, and the greatness of the things which they had both seen and heard (History of Joseph Smith by His Mother, 152-53).

Shortly thereafter, back in Manchester, New York, eight additional witnesses were allowed to see and handle the plates. These included four Whitmer brothers (Christian, Jacob, John, and Peter, Jr.), their brother-in-law, Hiram Page, Hyrum and Samuel Harrison Smith, and Joseph Smith, Sr. They were shown the plates by Joseph, rather than an angel, and they did not see the artifacts (see the Testimony of the Eight Witnesses and its commentary, again in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon).

Character Vignette

David Whitmer

David Whitmer was born a Pennsylvania German and carried into adulthood a hint of a German accent. He was about the same age as the Prophet Joseph. He was an outspoken rugged individualist and this quality verged on stubbornness. This utterly honest personality would have been the first to detect fraud and expose it. If Joseph had been intending to perpetrate some type of fraud, David Whitmer is not one he would have picked as a partner in his conspiracy. Throughout his eight years in the Church and his fifty years strictly separated from it, he never wavered regarding his testimony of the Book of Mormon.

In addition to being one of the three Book of Mormon witnesses, he became prominent in the leadership of the Church, serving as the “president of the Church in Missouri” which would be comparable to a stake president in terms of the current church organization.

Tragic events culminated in David Whitmer’s excommunication in April 1838. In the previous year of doctrinal and financial trial, prominent dissenters moved in open council to depose the Prophet Joseph and replace him with David Whitmer, a commentary on the public stature of the man. Long afterward he gave his own version of the processes of his thinking. In summary, he resisted change and was jealous of the power and suspected influence of Sidney Rigdon: “Rigdon was a thorough Bible scholar, a man of fine education, and a powerful orator. He soon worked himself deep into Brother Joseph’s affections, and had more influence over him than any other man living” (An Address to All Believers in Christ, [Richmond, Missouri, 1887], 35). At his excommunication, the main charge was “possessing the same spirit with the dissenters” (Donald Q. Cannon and Lyndon W. Cook, eds., Far West Record, Minutes of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1830-1844, Salt Lake City, 1983, 177). This meant that he was skeptical of the new policies of the Kirtland era and had declared doctrinal and economic independence. But David really sought to recreate the intimate days of 1829-30 at his father’s home in Fayette. His later writings idealize this period when he felt closest to God and the Prophet. So David Whitmer is really a man who declined to grow with the Church. He accepted the founding divine guidance of the Church, and then he became skeptical of further revelations. This position plus opposition to polygamy characterized his feelings.

Following his excommunication he moved to Richmond, Missouri, where he lived in a society hostile to his religious views, a situation that continually highlighted his rugged independence. There he ran a livery stable and haulage business. He remained in Richmond for fifty years until his death in 1888 at the age of 85.

David earned the solid respect of his non-Mormon townsmen through a half century of private integrity and doing business with them. He was also active in civil government. This is the critical issue of the life of David Whitmer. During fifty years in non-Mormon society, he insisted with the fervor of youth that he knew that the Book of Mormon was divinely revealed. Relatively few people in Richmond could accept such testimony, but none doubted his intelligence or complete honesty. No one summarized this view more clearly than Hiram Parker, a prominent businessmen, who lived near David Whitmer for a decade: “No one could know Uncle Davy and not like and trust him. . . . Children like him, men respected him and trusted him, and I never heard a word from anyone during my ten years’ acquaintance with him and those who had known him intimately for years that spoke a harsh word or uttered a doubt as to his truthfulness and general kindness of heart” (“Mormon Reminiscences,” published letter of Hiram Parker, Detroit, uncertain date). Parker had obviously reflected a good deal on how one might admire the man without accepting his message. Few of his townsmen could accept his Book of Mormon testimony, but “on any other subject or statement of fact neither myself or others could doubt.” Hiram Parker spent most of his life in selling in several states but had never met “a more honest guileless man”—“How one can account for the delusion that must have possessed this old man is beyond me” (Ibid.).

The story of the episode in 1833 in the public square at Independence, Missouri was told by New York convert John P. Greene:

When the mob assembled they went to the houses of several of the leading Mormons. And taking Isaac Morley, David Whitmer, and others, they told them to bid their families farewell, for they would never see them again. Then driving them at the point of the bayonet to the public square, they stripped and tarred and feathered them, amidst menaces and insults. The commanding officer then called twelve of his men. And ordering them to cock their guns and present them at the prisoners’ breasts, and to be ready to fire when he gave the word, he addressed the prisoners, threatening them with instant death unless they denied the Book of Mormon and confessed it to be a fraud; at the same time adding that if they did so, they might enjoy the privileges of citizens. David Whitmer, hereupon, lifted up his hands and bore witness that the Book of Mormon was the Word of God. The mob then let them go (Facts Relative to the Expulsion of the Mormons, [Cincinnati, 1839]: 17).

David became widely known as “the last surviving witness,” and consequently he was interviewed far more extensively than the others. He claimed that thousands came to inquire, and more than fifty of these conversations are reported in reasonable detail in contemporary diaries, letters, and newspapers, supplemented by later recollections. These reports furnish us with a detailed historical record. So, today an investigator can test David Whitmer’s convictions almost as well as the visitor of the past century who talked with him personally. The following replies are taken from the better recorded interviews of about the last decade of his life. This composite interview has been constructed by the historian Richard Lloyd Anderson and reported in his book, Investigating the Book of Mormon Witnesses (80-82).

Q: Is your published testimony accurate?

A: “As you read my testimony given many years ago, so it stands as my own existence, the same as when I gave it, and so shall stand throughout the cycles of eternity” (Letter of David Whitmer to Dr. James N. Seymour, December 8, 1875).

Q: When did this event take place?

A: “It was in June, 1829, the very last part of the month” (Life of Joseph F. Smith, [Salt Lake City, 1938], 242).

Q: What was the approximate time of day?

A: “It was about 11 AM” (Journal of Edward Stevenson, December 22, 1877).

Q: What were the circumstances of the vision?

A: “[We] went out into the woods nearby, and sat down on a log and talked awhile. We then kneeled down and prayed. Joseph prayed. We then got up and sat on the log and were talking, when all at once a light came down from above us and encircled us for quite a little distance around, and the angel stood before us” (Letter of William H. Kelley to Saints’ Herald, January 16, 1882, Coldwater, Michigan).

Q: Describe the angel.

A: “He was dressed in white, and spoke and called me by name and said, ‘Blessed is he that keepeth His commandments.’ This is all that I heard the angel say” (Ibid.).

Q: Did the angel have the Book of Mormon plates?

A: “[He] showed to us the plates, the sword of Laban, the Directors, the Urim and Thummim, and other records. Human language could not describe heavenly things and that which we saw” (Journal of George Q. Cannon, February 27, 1884, cit. Instructor 80 [1945]:520).

Q: Did the vision take place under natural circumstances?

A: “The fact is, it was just as though Joseph, Oliver, and I were sitting right here on a log, when we were overshadowed by a light. It was not like the light of the sun, nor like that of a fire, but more glorious and beautiful. It extended away round us. I cannot tell how far, but in the midst of this light, immediately before us, about as far off as he sits (pointing to John C. Whitmer, who was sitting 2 or 3 feet from him) there appeared, as it were, a table, with many records on it—besides the plates of the Book of Mormon, also the sword of Laban, the Directors, and the Interpreters. I saw them as plain as I see this bed (striking his hand upon the bed beside him), and I heard the voice of the Lord as distinctly as I every heard anything in my life declaring that they were translated by the gift and power of God” (Journal of Joseph F. Smith, cit. Joseph Fielding Smith, Life of Joseph F. Smith, [Salt Lake City, 1938], 242).

Q: Can you explain the supernatural power that surrounded you?

A: “All of a sudden I beheld a dazzlingly brilliant light that surpassed in brightness even the sun at noonday, and which seemed to envelop the woods for a considerable distance around. Simultaneous with the light came a strange entrancing influence which permeated me so powerfully that I felt chained to the spot, while I also experienced a sensation of joy absolutely indescribable” (Omaha Herald, October 17, 1886).

Q: “Did you see the Urim and Thummim?”

A: “I saw the Interpreters in the holy vision; they looked like whitish stones put in the rim of a bow—looked like spectacles, only much larger” (Interview notes of Zenas H. Gurley, Jan. 14, 1885, also cit. Autumn Leaves 5 (1892):452).

Q: Did you see an actual table?

A: “You see that small table by the wall? . . . Well, there was a table about that size, and the heavenly messenger brought the several plates and laid them on the table before our eyes, and we saw them” (Letter of James H. Hart to Deseret News, August 23, 1883, Seneca, Missouri, cit. Deseret Evening News, September 4, 1883).

Q: Did you handle the plates?

A: “I did not handle the plates—only saw them” (Journal of James H. Moyle, June 28, 1885).

“Joseph, and I think Oliver and Emma, told me about the plates, and described them to me, and I believed them, but did not see except at the time testified of” (Journal of Nathan Tanner, Jr., April 13, 1886).

Q: How clearly could you see the plates?

A: “The angel stood before us, and he turned the leaves one by one” (Letter of P. Wilhelm Poulson to Deseret News, August 13, 1878, Ogden, Utah, cit. Deseret Evening News, August 16, 1878). “He held the plates and turned them over with his hands, so that they could be plainly visible” (Chicago Times, October 17, 1881).

Q: “Did the angel turn all the leaves before you as you looked on it?”

A: “No, not all, only that part of the book which was not sealed, and what there was sealed appeared as solid to my view as wood” (Journal of Edward Stevenson, December 22, 1877).

Q: “Can you describe the plates?”

A: “They appeared to be of gold, about six by nine inches in size, about as thick as parchment, a great many in number and bound together like the leaves of a book by massive rings passing through the back edges. The engraving upon them was very plain and of very curious appearance” (Kansas City Daily Journal, June 5, 1881).

Q: Is it possible that you imagined this experience?

A: “Our testimony is true. And if these things are not true, then there is no truth; and if there is no truth, there is no God; and if there is no God, there is no existence. But I know there is a God, for I have heard His voice and witnessed the manifestation of his power” (Letter of James H. Hart to Deseret News, August 23, 1883, Seneca, Missouri, cit. Deseret Evening News, September 4, 1883).

Q: “Do you remember the peculiar sensation experienced upon that occasion?”

A: “Yes, I remember it very distinctly. And I never think of it, from that day to this, but what that spirit is present with me” (Letter of William H. Kelley to Saints’ Herald, January 16, 1882, Coldwater, Michigan, cit. Saints’ Herald 29 [1882]:68).

More than one person appealed privately to the last-surviving witness to disclose deceit if it existed. James H. Moyle was later Assistant Secretary of Treasury in two U.S. administrations. Graduating with legal training at the University of Michigan in 1885, he determined to cross-examine the remaining Book of Mormon witness before returning to Utah. Young Moyle journeyed to Richmond, secured an appointment with David Whitmer, and spent some time recounting the persecutions and sacrifices of his family because of belief in Mormonism. He further contrasted his own situation with Whitmer’s. He was just beginning his own life’s career, and Whitmer was not far from death: “And so I begged of him not to let me go through life believing in a vital falsehood.” The thoughtful law student requested not confirmation, but disclosure: “Was there any possibility that he might have been deceived in any particular?” All of his life Moyle remembered the “unequivocal” affirmation of the testimony: “There was no question about its truthfulness” (James H. Moyle, “A Visit to David Whitmer,” Instructor 80 [1945]:401).

He said himself toward the end of his life, “Those who know me best, well know that I have always adhered to that testimony” (David Whitmer, A Proclamation [Richmond, Missouri, 1881]).

Character Vignette

Egbert Bratt Grandin

A Palmyra, New York, publisher who printed the first edition of the Book of Mormon.

Grandin was born in Freehold, Monmouth County, New Jersey, on March 30, 1806. At age four (in 1810) he moved with his family to northern Ontario County, New York (later Wayne County). The Grandins located at Pultneyville, town of Williamson, on the shore of Lake Ontario. At about age sixteen or seventeen (ca. 1822-23), E. B. Grandin entered into an apprenticeship with a printer Pomeroy Tucker in the village of Palmyra, New York.

Toward the end of June 1829, and having secured the copyright on June 11, 1829, Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, Hyrum Smith, and Martin Harris sought the services of Egbert B. Grandin of Palmyra to publish the manuscript. Negotiations began in June 1829. A momentary delay was experienced when Grandin initially refused on moral and religious grounds to print the volume. Eventually, Grandin’s primary concerns were satisfied, and he consented to publish the work.

Grandin asked that John H. Gilbert, an experienced printer, assist him in estimating the cost. Gilbert stated, “A few pages of the manuscript were submitted as a specimen of the whole, and it was said there would be about 500 pages” (ultimately there were 590 pages from the title page to the two-page testimonials of the Three and Eight Witnesses at the back of the 1830 edition). Gilbert further explained, “The size of the page was agreed upon, and an estimate of the number of ems [an ‘em’ is the unit measure of type, the width of the letter M] in a page which would be 1000, and that a page of manuscript would make more than a page of printed matter, which proved to be correct.” The resulting contract specified that Grandin would print and bind in leather five thousand copies for the sum of $3,000 (“Memorandum, made by John H. Gilbert Esq, Sept 8th, 1892,” King’s Daughters’ Free Library. Palmyra, New York).

Payment for the job was secured in a mortgage agreement between Martin Harris and E. B. Grandin on August 25, 1829. Harris was to pay the sum of $3,000 for the requisite copies within eighteen months “from the date hereof.” Should he fail to do so, his land would be sold at public auction to meet the demand. The press was situated in E. B. Grandin’s printing shop on the third story of the west bay of the newly constructed (1827-28) “Thayer & Grandin’s Row” (later “Exchange Row,” 1831). Grandin rented his quarters from his brother Philip Grandin and his partners. The binding process was to be conducted by Egbert Grandin’s partner, Luther Howard, on the second story of that same bay. Copies could then be made available for sale in Grandin’s Palmyra Bookstore on the first level.

In an 1847 publication, Frederick Follett quoted Pomeroy Tucker as contending that “the largest printing job ever done in it [Wayne County], was the first edition of Joe Smith’s ‘Book of Mormon,’ or the ‘Golden Bible.’ This was done at the office of the ‘Wayne Sentinel,’ by E. B. Grandin . . . in 1829-30 (History of the Press of Western New York. Rochester: Jerome & Brother, Daily American Office, 1847). The printing of five thousand copies was unusually large as press runs were ordinarily from five hundred to two thousand copies.

Preparations were made by Grandin to ready his printing shop. He went to New York to purchase the type and paper. To print and bind five thousand copies of the book required an increase in the number of workers at the press. Among the known members of the printing shop crew assembled by Grandin were (1) Pomeroy Tucker, “foreman of the office,” reader of the proof sheets, and a brother-in-law to Grandin; (2) John H. Gilbert, chief compositor (one who sets type, makes up pages and forms, and does some presswork); (3) William Van Camp, compositor; (4) Daniel Hendrix, periodic compositor and proofreader; (5) Jacob H. Bortles, presswork; (6) Thomas McAuley, or “Whistling Tom,” presswork; and (7) Franklin P. Rogers, a nine-year-old boy and youngest brother of Grandin’s wife Harriet, who was reported to have assisted in the typesetting process. Lucy Smith said that “a young Mr. Robinson son of our friend Dr. [Gain C.] Robinson,” was also involved in the printing shop. Luther Howard operated the bookbindery. One of Howard’s assistants was sixteen-year-old Albert Chandler, who recalled, “I was an apprentice in the bookbindery connected with the Sentinel office. I helped to collate and stitch the Gold Bible” (Linne, William Alexander. The Story of the Mormons. New York: Macmillan, 1902).

About the middle of August 1829, the printer was ready to begin typesetting. Martin Harris was notified. Hyrum Smith then brought the first installment of twenty-four pages from the larger “printer’s manuscript.” He had them buttoned under his vest and coat for security.

The Prophet remained in Palmyra through September 1829. Assured that the details of the publication had been arranged, he returned to Emma and his home in Harmony, Pennsylvania, on October 4. Oliver Cowdery was left to oversee their interests in the proofing and printing of the work with the assistance of Hyrum Smith and Martin Harris. Gilbert specified that “Oliver Cowdery was not engaged [employed] as a compositor on the work—was not a printer. He was a frequent visitor to the office, and did several times take up a ‘stick’ and set a part of a page—he may have set 10 or 12 pages, all told” (letter February 10, 1879). Gilbert also stipulated: “Cowdery held and looked over the manuscript when most of the proofs were read. Martin Harris once or twice, and Hyrum Smith once, Grandin supposing that these men could read their own writing as well, if not better, than anyone else; and if there are any discrepancies between the Palmyra edition and the manuscript these men should be held responsible” (“Memorandum, made by John H. Gilbert Esq, Sept 8th, 1892.” King’s Daughters’ Free Library. Palmyra, New York).

Most available information about the role of the compositor John Hulburt Gilbert (1802-1895) in the printing of the Book of Mormon comes from two letters written by Gilbert to James Cobb (10 February and 16 March 1879), and an 8 September 1892 memorandum. In these documents Gilbert stated that after Grandin agreed to publish the Book of Mormon, Hyrum Smith and Martin Harris brought him each morning the pages he was to set in type that day. Each night they retrieved the pages to guard against possible theft. Gilbert also noted that the prophet Joseph Smith entered the print shop only once, for a few minutes, during the entire course of the work.

The pages Hyrum and Martin brought Gilbert were nearly always pages from a second copy of the manuscript, called the printer’s copy, which Joseph had asked Oliver Cowdery to prepare. The original dictated manuscript was to remain in their keeping. In producing the printer’s copy, Oliver was to correct grammar and spelling errors found in the original manuscript, apparently because it had been written very rapidly. Gilbert could not merely replicate the printer’s copy but divided it into sentences and paragraphs because “every chapter, if I remember correctly, was one solid paragraph, without a punctuation mark, from beginning to end” (Wood, Wilford C., Joseph Smith Begins His Work [Salt Lake City: Deseret News Press, 1963], 29). Both the original and printer’s copies show each chapter to be a solid paragraph with a period only at the end. When Gilbert asked Hyrum and Martin about sentences and paragraphs, they instructed him to make them as needed but not to change any words.

Gilbert’s claim of no punctuation is not entirely true because Oliver did add some punctuation, as an examination of the original translation copy shows. Pomeroy Tucker asserted that Gilbert “was given a limited discretion in correcting, which was exercised in the particulars of syntax, orthography, punctuation, capitalizing, paragraphing, etc.” (Origin, Rise, and Progress of Mormonism. New York: D. Appleton and Company, 1867, 35).

It was no easy task to set the type, punctuate, and make the paragraphs for a five-hundred-page manuscript that Gilbert was permitted to see only in segments (the first segment was twenty-four pages long and included the title page). The whole procedure was ripe for error. But the most significant challenge Gilbert faced was his total ignorance of the book he had to set in type. Nearly all the people, places, and circumstances were totally unfamiliar to him. He had never heard of Moroni, or the Lamanites, or the Jaredites. He did not know who they were or what relationship any might have had to any other. Examination of the title page, which was reproduced from the printer's copy, illustrates the difficulty. The entire page was written with indiscriminate capital letters and no periods. Slash marks indicated the ends of lines. Gilbert had to decide what words to place in the title, which in the subtitle, and what sizes of type he should set them in. When modern readers look at the printed page, it all seems so simple, but creating the printed page from a handwritten account without punctuation was no easy matter.

In his attempt "to make it read as I supposed the author intended" (Ibid., 29), Gilbert made a major error on the title page. Because he had not yet been able to read the book of Ether, he did not know that it was the record of the Jaredites, so he placed the statements about those people in two different paragraphs, as if they referred to two different records. This error was printed on the title page of the first edition of the Book of Mormon but was changed in the second edition printing in 1837. Finally, Gilbert requested and received permission to take the manuscript home and punctuated it at night so he could "get along faster in the day time," for, as he explained, "now I have frequently to stop [setting type] and read half a page to find how to punctuate it" ("Memorandum, made by John H. Gilbert, September 8th, 1892." King's Daughters Library, Palmyra, New York). Gilbert promised to protect the pages and not leave them at the shop overnight.

Gilbert said he worked from August 1829 until early March 1830 before he had the Book of Mormon all set and printed. It went then to the bindery, and some bound copies became available for sale 26 March 1830.

John H. Gilbert performed an extremely valuable service to the Church in setting the type, punctuating the sentences, and building the paragraphs for the first edition of the Book of Mormon. All his obituaries note that Gilbert was most widely known as the typesetter for the first Book of Mormon.

Gilbert described the actual printing process: "The Bible [Book of Mormon] was printed 16 pages at a time, so that one sheet of paper made two copies of 16 pages each, requiring 2,500 sheets of paper for each form of 16 pages. There were 37 forms of 16 pages each—570 [590] pages in all" ("Memorandum, made by John H. Gilbert Esq. Sept 8th, 1892." King's Daughters' Free Library. Palmyra, New York). A further explanation specified that "the 'matter' was 'paged' so that 32 pages could be printed at a time on one of Hoe's 'Smith' six-column hand presses. After the sheets had been run through once and properly dried, they were reversed and printed on the other side. The bookbinder then folded them by hand and severed them with an ivory paper cutter. The result was that the 2,500 large sheets made 5,000 small sheets with 16 pages printed on each side” (New York Times, 26 February 1888, 16). The 37 forms of 16 pages each, having printing on both sides, made up eighteen and a half signatures in each book. Every form required 2,500 sheets of paper, for a total of 47,500 sheets of paper to print the consignment. It is estimated that the printer made 95,000 pulls of the lever during the seven months it took to print the volume.

Joseph had to return to Palmyra twice during the printing, in the late fall of 1829 and early in 1830 when he traveled to Palmyra to prevent a man named Abner Cole, using the pseudonym of Obadiah Dogberry Jun., from violating the copyright laws by publishing parts of the Book of Mormon in his weekly periodical, The Reflector. The unfinished work was still at the Grandin press, and The Reflector was printed at the same office. This provided ease of access to printed pages of the Book of Mormon.

Cole stated in his December 9, 1829 issue: “As much curiosity has been excited in this section of the country on the subject, and as the work itself will not be ready for delivery for some months to come, at the solicitation of many of our readers we have concluded to commence publishing extracts from it on or before the commencement of the second series” (57).

In the January 2, 1830 issue of The Reflector, Cole printed a portion of “The First Book of Nephi. His Reign and Ministry, Chapter 1,” containing the copy found in the first eleven paragraphs of the 1830 edition of the Book of Mormon. And in the January 13 issue he printed the next four paragraphs. This was followed on January 22 by copy from the book of Alma (Alma 43:22-40).

Hyrum Smith, in company with Oliver Cowdery, became aware of Cole’s actions and requested that he desist. Cole, even with the threat of copyright violation, refused to comply. Joseph Smith, Sr. went to Harmony, Pennsylvania, to inform Joseph Smith, Jr. of the situation. The Prophet and his father returned to New York to stop the pilfering. Cole, a lawyer and former justice of the peace, finally acknowledged his vulnerability when Joseph again confronted him with his intrusion on the copyright. Lucy Smith said, “He made us no further trouble” in that regard (History of Joseph Smith by His Mother, Lucy Mack Smith. Edited by Preston Nibley. Salt Lake City: Bookcraft, 1958, 166). But Cole continued to satirize the Book of Mormon and the Mormons in succeeding issues.

Lucy Smith said that “a party of restless religionists” (Ibid, 158) sponsored a boycott of the Book of Mormon during the printing process. They held a mass meeting, organized into a committee, and appointed persons to wait on E. B. Grandin and urged “the necessity of his putting a stop to the printing” (Ibid, 167). Grandin became concerned that the boycott may prevent his being paid. The Prophet was again summoned from Harmony, Pennsylvania, to allay Grandin’s fears (Ibid., 158, 167). The boycott eventually proved effective in curtailing sales of the work within the community.

Because of this boycott, Martin Harris was forced to sell his property to pay the debt to Grandin. It is not known for a certainty if Martin Harris ever recovered the cost of printing the book.

Finally, on March 26, 1830, the Book of Mormon was finished and offered for sale. To Martin Harris's dismay, initial sales of the book were slow, as the Palmyra residents had boycotted it. Martin was consequently worried about the security of his investment. When Joseph came up from Harmony shortly after the publication, Martin was dejected and declared that he "must have a commandment." After asking Joseph several times for a commandment, Joseph finally received a revelation on Martin's behalf [D&C 19 - Eternal and Endless Punishment—Atonement].

Section 19 Eternal and Endless Punishment—the Atonement

On March 26, 1830, E. B. Grandin announced that the Book of Mormon was ready for sale. The first edition consisted of 5,000 copies which were offered for sale at $1.75 per copy, but this price was soon adjusted to $1.25 because of lagging sales. The citizens of Palmyra, hoping to limit sales of the book, had placed a boycott on the book and refused to buy any copies. As a result, initial sales of the book were slow. This was of great concern to Martin Harris since he was worried about the security of his $3,000 investment.

The debt for the printing of the book came due on February 5, 1831. Unable to pay off the contractual agreement with proceeds from the sale of the Book of Mormon, Martin Harris arranged a private sale of 150 1/4 acres of his Palmyra farm on April 7, 1831 at twenty dollars per acre. Following a series of sales of Martin Harris's land, E. B. Grandin finally received his $3,000 in January or February of 1832. By the time the debt was paid, Martin had sold a little over half of his entire farm.

It is interesting also to note that the building which housed the E. B. Grandin printing establishment was purchased by the Church in December of 1978. The agreement allowed the Church to take occupancy of the space in March 1979. Following two and one-half years of exacting reconstruction, President Gordon B. Hinckley dedicated the "Book of Mormon Historic Publication Site" in services conducted at the Palmyra Ward meetinghouse on the commemorative date of March 26, 1998, 168 years after the publishing of the Book of Mormon.

In late March 1830, Joseph Knight brought Joseph up from Harmony. As they approached the Hyrum Smith farm in Manchester, where the Smith family was now living, they spotted Martin crossing the road with a pile of books in his arms. "The books will not sell, for nobody wants them," Martin reported dejectedly. "I think they will sell well," Joseph replied encouragingly. "I want a commandment," Martin said, presumably wanting a revelation assuring him he was doing the right thing. Joseph was initially reluctant to seek another revelation for Martin since he had not fulfilled the commandments he had been given in prior revelations. Martin insisted three or four times, however, that he wanted a revelation. The next morning after a night at the Smiths, Martin repeated his demand. Later that day Joseph sought and received a revelation on Martin's behalf—section 19 (Bushman, Joseph Smith and the Beginnings of Mormonism, 110-11).

Basically, section 19 is a reprimand of Martin Harris. It is also one of the great doctrinal revelations given in this dispensation. The Lord's exposition of the doctrines of the atonement and eternal and endless punishment are here set forth. The section also deals with repentance and the nature of hell.

The churches of Joseph's day generally taught that the punishments of God last forever and that sinners will suffer endless burning in fire and brimstone. In section 19, the Lord clarifies the doctrine of hell by explaining that the condemned do not suffer forever, though the scriptures sometimes give that impression for the sake of increased effect (see verse 7).

D&C 19 Eternal and Endless Punishment—Atonement

D&C 19:10-12 Eternal punishment is God's punishment, endless punishment is God's punishment.

D&C 19:15-19 I command you to repent—repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore—how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not. For behold, I God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent. Which suffering caused myself . . . to bleed at every pore.

D&C 19:21-22 Milk and meat.

D&C 19:23 Learn of me, and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit, and you shall have peace in me.

D&C 19:28 Pray vocally as well as in thy heart, before the world as well as in secret.

1 I am Alpha and Omega, Christ the Lord; yea, even I am he, the beginning and the end, the Redeemer of the world.

verse 1 "I am Alpha and Omega" Alpha and Omega are respectively the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. Christ is both the beginning (the creation) and the end (the judgment) of our mortal existence, and he is the point of everything in between.

"the Redeemer of the world" The word redeem comes from the Latin re(d)-emo, which means literally "buy back."

2 I, having accomplished and finished the will of him whose I am, even the Father, concerning me—having done this that I might subdue all things unto myself—verse 2 "I, having accomplished and finished the will of him whose I am, even the Father" We must remember that the Father orchestrated the atoning experience of Jesus in Gethsemane and on the cross (3 Nephi 11:11; D&C 76:107).

"having done this that I might subdue all things unto myself" If there had been no atonement, Jesus would have been bound by the law of justice. He would have been unable to exercise his mercy in blessing mankind. The reason for this is simple. When the Lord exercises his mercy and grace, he provides blessings over and above what a man or woman might merit. This is possible because of his atoning sacrifice. Those who enforce the law of justice allow him carte blanche in mercifully providing whatever blessings he deems appropriate. He thus has “subdue[d] all things unto [him]self.” He has removed all obstacles to his encouraging and enabling all people to return and live with forever. He also is enabled to exercise all of the powers itemized in the following three verses.

3 Retaining all power, even to the destroying of Satan and his works at the end of the world, and the last great day of judgment, which I shall pass upon the inhabitants thereof, judging every man according to his works and the deeds which he hath done.

verse 3 “Retaining all power, even to the destroying of Satan and his works” Christ and the truth will ultimately prevail over Satan’s power and influence. But what is the nature of God’s (both Father’s and Son’s) ultimate control over Satan? Generally God, in dealing with his children, is loath to interfere in any way with their agency. He places his offspring in a setting where they may learn the law and then decide to obey or not to obey all on their own. Has he dealt with Satan and his minions in this manner, or has he at times had to place arbitrary restrictions on their agency? Satan and his supporters, who total a third of all the hosts of heaven, will not have the privilege of receiving a mortal body. Satan will be bound during the millennium. Ultimately their “falling and rejection” has been made sure—they will not inherit a kingdom of glory. Rather, they will be cast into outer darkness. Are these restrictions the natural consequence of their recalcitrance—simply the result of failure to grow spiritually in the premortal world? Or has God, by his purposeful and deliberate decision placed limitations upon them? It would seem that we have not been given to know the answer to this question. We do know, however, that God’s judgments are inevitably perfectly fair and just. According to the law of the harvest (D&C 6:33), Satan and his angels have harvested what they have sown. We are taught that ultimately Satan will not be able to come where God is because he has insufficient power (D&C 29:27-29). In an analogous way, no individual will have the power to inherit a higher glory than that which they have earned through their obedience. While each man is given agency free of charge, agency is the right and ability to choose among available alternatives. The blessing of having many available alternatives is not agency. Rather, it is freedom. Freedom must be earned and is not given free of charge. At the final judgment a degree of glory will not be an available alternative to Satan and his friends. See Agency and Freedom in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 13.

“at the end of the world” The Hebrew word for world is ‘olam, meaning “age.” The end of the world is therefore the end of an age or an era. The “end of the world” is the end of the telestial mortal world and not the end of the earth. It marks the beginning of the Millennium which follows a period of destruction of the wicked, telestial elements of the earth. At that time there will be “a new heaven and a new earth” (Isaiah 65:17-25;

D&C 101:23-24). The earth will receive its terrestrial or paradisiacal glory (see Articles of Faith 1:10).

“last great day of judgment” There is a “last day of judgment” for this telestial world. It will be at Christ’s second coming when the wicked who are alive will be burned and when the righteous, both living and dead, will be raised up. The reference in this verse, however, is probably to the last day of judgment at the end of the millennial age, which is also the end of the earth’s terrestrial existence or age. This judgment is also known as the judgment from the great white throne (see Revelation 20:5-7, 11-15)—when all who have not previously been resurrected will be raised up and consigned finally either to some degree of glory or to outer darkness, and when the earth shall also receive its celestial glory.

4 And surely every man must repent or suffer, for I, God, am endless.

verse 4 The doctrine of eternal and endless punishment states that if a man sins (breaks the eternal law—the law of God), he has only two choices. He must either repent or suffer a punishment called “God’s punishment.” The unrepentant will go to a place called hell, which is the spirit world, to suffer the required punishment. Here they will suffer torment of mind and spirit (there will be “weeping, wailing, and gnashing of teeth”—verse 5) as they are disciplined and taught those things they failed to learn on earth. By this process they are cleansed and readied to be admitted into a degree of glory. When they are sufficiently prepared, figuratively, the prison doors will open, they will be resurrected, and there will be rejoicing among those who welcome them to a better state. Thus the words “endless” and “eternal” do not describe the duration of the punishment in hell. Rather “endless” and “eternal” are other words for God. Therefore the punishment men suffer in the spirit world—in hell—is “endless” and “eternal” in that it is God’s punishment. The Lord’s explanation that such terms as endless, eternal, and everlasting punishment are to be interpreted qualitatively rather than quantitatively is a marked departure from the widespread belief of many Christians that the wicked are doomed to suffer in a hell of infinite duration. Happily, such is not the case.

Repentance is a better alternative. Through the process of the atonement, the Savior acquired the ability to spare man some of the pain associated with overcoming one’s natural tendencies and obeying. It is always painful to overcome our natural self and obey, but much less so when we accept Christ and his atoning sacrifice.

5 Wherefore, I revoke not the judgments which I shall pass, but woes shall go forth, weeping, wailing and gnashing of teeth, yea, to those who are found on my left hand.

verse 5 “Those who are found on my left hand” are those who die unrepentant and are assigned a state called prison in the spirit world.

6 Nevertheless, it is not written that there shall be no end to this torment, but it is written endless torment.

verse 6 As we learned in the commentary for verse 4 above, the words “endless” and “eternal” are other names or titles for God. Thus, “eternal punishment” or “endless punishment” or “endless torment” are not terms which mean punishment that goes on forever. Rather, they mean God’s punishment which is defined in the commentary for verse 4. The punishment is limited in its duration—it does have an end.

7 Again, it is written eternal damnation; wherefore it is more express than other scriptures, that it might work upon the hearts of the children of men, altogether for my name’s glory.

verse 7 Elder Bruce R. McConkie has defined the expression “eternal damnation” as being the state of all those who are not exalted in the highest degree of the celestial kingdom. They are damned eternally in that their progress is limited forever. Spirit children are denied them for all eternity (Mormon Doctrine, 234).

The phrase “eternal damnation” or eternal condemnation might, however, be interpreted by others as applying only to those who are condemned to outer darkness.

8 Wherefore, I will explain unto you this mystery, for it is meet unto you to know even as mine apostles.

verse 8 “I will explain unto you this mystery” For a discussion of the term mystery, see the commentary for D&C 6:7. In this verse, the Lord is likely referring to the information in section 19 that allows us to properly understand the phrases “endless punishment,” “eternal punishment,” and “endless torment.”

“for it is meet unto you to know even as mine apostles” “Meet” means suitable, fitting, proper. The Lord states that it is important for his apostles to know the mysteries taught in section 19. The only ones with apostolic office, or special witness status, at this point in time include Joseph, Oliver, and the other two Book of Mormon witnesses—David Whitmer and Martin Harris.

9 I speak unto you that are chosen in this thing, even as one, that you may enter into my rest.

verse 9 It would seem that the Lord is not sealing anyone up to eternal life. Rather, he is simply expressing his hope that the special witnesses will one day be exalted. For further discussion on the concept of the rest of the Lord, see the commentary for 2 Nephi 21:10.

10 For, behold, the mystery of godliness, how great is it! For, behold, I am endless, and the punishment which is given from my hand is endless punishment, for Endless is my name. Wherefore—verses 10-12 See the commentary for verse 4.

11 Eternal punishment is God's punishment.

12 Endless punishment is God's punishment.

verses 13-41 These verses contain instructions to Martin Harris. In spite of his many experiences with the Book of Mormon, he was still tormented by doubts. A degree of skepticism is probably healthy in that it may motivate one to investigate and learn. However, continued disbelief when there has been ample opportunity to receive the promptings of the Spirit is a sin.

13 Wherefore, I command you to repent, and keep the commandments which you have received by the hand of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., in my name; verse 13 “Wherefore, I command you to repent” The Lord is speaking to Martin Harris. Perhaps the Lord has in mind Martin’s persistent tendency to doubt and his need for repeated reassurance which borders on asking for a sign.

14 And it is by my almighty power that you have received them; verses 15-18 These verses contain a graphic description of the sufferings Christ endured during the atonement process and which the unrepentant will suffer in hell. We are not to understand that we will be nailed to a cross, but we are assured there will be plenty of mental anguish. It is suggested that the reader review the discussion in “The Atonement Principle” in The Roles of Suffering in Our Lives, chapter 2, volume 3 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

15 Therefore I command you to repent—repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth, and by my wrath, and by my anger, and your sufferings be sore—how sore you know not, how exquisite you know not, yea, how hard to bear you know not.

verse 15 “repent, lest I smite you by the rod of my mouth” The rod or stick with which the unrepentant are metaphorically smitten will be the judgment pronounced on them at the day of the final judgment.

“how sore you know not” The suffering in hell will be worse than anything the unrepentant would have suffered here on earth.

16 For behold, I, God, have suffered these things for all, that they might not suffer if they would repent; verse 16 This is not to say that the repentant do not suffer, but their burden of suffering is more tolerable than for the unrepentant.

17 But if they would not repent they must suffer even as I;

verse 17 “they must suffer even as I” The reader should be reminded that the unrepentant are simply the disobedient. No unrepentant individual will, of course, even begin to duplicate the experience of the Savior in Gethsemane, but they will suffer the pains of self-denial and repentance unmitigated by the Savior’s atonement—just as did the Savior. The Savior has already suffered all the pains of hell to a near infinite degree.

The negative approach of this verse is instructive and serves to remind us that while the Jesus, on the one hand, is a merciful Savior who has assumed the moral burden of every soul, on the other hand he is a just but demanding Judge whose wrath will be poured out without measure upon those who reject his sacrifice and refuse to repent.

18 Which suffering caused myself, even God, the greatest of all, to tremble because of pain, and to bleed at every pore, and to suffer both body and spirit—and would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink—verse 18 This verse and Mosiah 3:7 are the only verses in the four standard works that definitely declare that Christ did bleed from every pore. Luke 22:44 is somewhat ambiguous as it declares, “And his sweat was as it were great drops of blood.”

Elder James E. Talmage wrote:

Christ’s agony in the garden is unfathomable by the finite mind, both as to intensity and cause. . . . He struggled and groaned under a burden such as no other being who has lived on earth might even conceive as possible. It was not physical pain, nor mental anguish alone, that caused him to suffer such torture as to produce an extrusion of blood from every pore; but a spiritual agony of soul such as only God was capable of experiencing. No other man, however great his powers of physical or mental endurance, could have suffered so; for his human organism would have succumbed” (Jesus the Christ, 613).

“would that I might not drink the bitter cup, and shrink” Would here means “I wish” or “I desire.” The suffering or the anticipation of the suffering was so overwhelming that it caused even the Savior to request of the Father that he might not have to suffer it further: “O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me: nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt” (Matthew 26:39).

19 Nevertheless, glory be to the Father, and I partook and finished my preparations unto the children of men.

verse 19 The Savior’s “preparations unto the children of men” consist of his part in the implementation of the plan of salvation, which required his infinite suffering and atoning sacrifice.

20 Wherefore, I command you again to repent, lest I humble you with my almighty power; and that you confess your sins, lest you suffer these punishments of which I have spoken, of which in the smallest, yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit.

verse 20 “yea, even in the least degree you have tasted at the time I withdrew my Spirit” When Martin Harris lost the 116 pages of manuscript, he experienced the loss of the Spirit and alienation from God which was but a tiny foretaste of what he would experience were he to fail to completely repent.

21 And I command you that you preach naught but repentance, and show not these things unto the world until it is wisdom in me.

verse 21 “I command you that you preach naught but repentance” “Repentance” here is used to indicate the whole process of entering the gospel covenant—the baptismal covenant.

“show not these things unto the world until it is wisdom in me” The Lord cautions that the world around Joseph and Martin, steeped in traditions about hell as an endless furnace, was not yet ready to be taught such things as the temporary nature of “endless punishment.” Martin should start with the more basic principles such as “naught but repentance.”

22 For they cannot bear meat now, but milk they must receive; wherefore, they must not know these things, lest they perish.

verse 22 We may divide gospel teachings, though somewhat arbitrarily, into two categories, the milk and the meat. The milk consists of those fundamentals of the gospel doctrines, the “nuts and bolts” or the “whats” of the doctrine. The meat, on the other hand, consists of the “whys”—the deeper and more complex teachings. The Lord warns that “spiritual indigestion” might result when a person is taught too much too soon (Matthew 7:6). To “perish,” you will recall, does not mean to cease to exist. Rather it means to perish spiritually—to be cut off from the presence of God and die a spiritual death.

23 Learn of me, and listen to my words; walk in the meekness of my Spirit, and you shall have peace in me.

verse 23 To have “peace” in the Lord is to achieve a calm assurance that all will be well in the eternity that follows this earth life. Here we learn that to have that peace we must listen humbly to the teachings of the Savior and to “walk in the meekness of [his] Spirit—to obey his commandments (see also D&C 59:23.)

24 I am Jesus Christ; I came by the will of the Father, and I do his will.

25 And again, I command thee that thou shalt not covet thy neighbor's wife; nor seek thy neighbor's life.

verse 25 It is unclear whether this commandment was meant in its original context specifically for Martin in his own personal situation, or for the whole Church generally, or both.

26 And again, I command thee that thou shalt not covet thine own property, but impart it freely to the printing of the Book of Mormon, which contains the truth and the word of God—verse 26 Martin Harris is commanded to impart freely of his resources for the printing of the Book of Mormon.

A good scriptural example of coveting one's own property is found in the story of Ananias and Sapphira who covenanted to sacrifice everything for the kingdom if necessary, but then, coveting their own property, withheld part of their consecration from the Lord and lied to Peter to hide that fact (see Acts 5:1-11).

27 Which is my word to the Gentile, that soon it may go to the Jew, of whom the Lamanites are a remnant, that they may believe the gospel, and look not for a Messiah to come who has already come.

verse 27 The Book of Mormon and the gospel, in this dispensation, will go first to the Gentiles—the citizens of the great Gentile nation, the United States of America. We are currently living through a period of time known as the “times of the Gentiles” (see D&C 45:28) which began at the time of the restoration of the gospel through Joseph Smith. Then it will go to the Jews. The descendants of Lehi are referred to as “Jews” in that Lehi was a citizen of the land of Judah. Therefore politically he was a Jew even though he was a blood descendant of the tribe of Joseph through Manasseh.

“look not for a Messiah to come who has already come” This phrase refers to the Jews who do not, as yet, acknowledge Jesus as the Messiah, and they still await a Messiah who has not yet come to earth.

28 And again, I command thee that thou shalt pray vocally as well as in thy heart; yea, before the world as well as in secret, in public as well as in private.

verse 28 We are commanded to pray both privately and publicly. The spirit of prayer must be in our hearts unceasingly.

verses 29-32 In the four following verses, the Lord again places limits on what Martin Harris can say as he preaches the gospel (see also the commentary for D&C 5:24-26).

29 And thou shalt declare glad tidings, yea, publish it upon the mountains, and upon every high place, and among every people that thou shalt be permitted to see.

verse 29 The “glad tidings” are the good news that the gospel has been restored and that the kingdom of God is on the earth again. “Publish” here is used in the archaic sense of “make available” by means of any medium, not just in print.

30 And thou shalt do it with all humility, trusting in me, reviling not against revilers.

verse 30 “reviling not against revilers” The Lord commands Martin and all of us not to abuse or attack those anti-Mormons who attack the Church.

31 And of tenets thou shalt not talk, but thou shalt declare repentance and faith on the Savior, and remission of sins by baptism, and by fire, yea, even the Holy Ghost.

verse 31 “of tenets thou shalt not talk” A tenet is a point of doctrine or dogma. It would seem that the Lord is counseling not to become involved in arguments over points of doctrine—rather bear testimony and preach repentance.

32 Behold, this is a great and the last commandment which I shall give unto you concerning this matter; for this shall suffice for thy daily walk, even unto the end of thy life.

verse 32 “this is a great and the last commandment which I shall give unto you” Martin Harris had demanded a commandment, or revelation, and here he received it—the last revelation that will be addressed directly and exclusively to him in the Doctrine and Covenants. In General the Lord’s instruction to Martin, in section 19, is to restrict himself for the rest of his life to declaring the basic message of the restoration and to leave the fine points of the doctrine alone. As a special witness to the Book of Mormon, Martin’s duty to bear apostolic witness of the restoration was even greater than that of some others.

33 And misery thou shalt receive if thou wilt slight these counsels, yea, even the destruction of thyself and property.

verse 33 The Lord warns Martin that if he does not do as he is commanded, he will not only suffer spiritual destruction, but lose all of his property.

34 Impart a portion of thy property, yea, even part of thy lands, and all save the support of thy family.

35 Pay the debt thou hast contracted with the printer. Release thyself from bondage.

verses 34-35 The Lord further counsels Martin to mortgage a portion of his property in order to pay the three thousand dollar debt to the printer. This was actually a great sacrifice to ask of him, considering it was not Martin's understanding at the beginning of the project that the publishing costs would come out of his pocket. Originally, payment of the printing costs was supposed to come from the proceeds of book sales, and Martin's property merely guaranteed payment should the book not sell as expected. Eventually, the book did sell well, but not in time to save Martin's farm. It should be noted that Martin later claimed he got all his money back and more (see Gunnell, "Martin Harris—Witness and Benefactor," 40). It is a tribute to Martin that he did as the Lord commanded him and settled the entire debt out of his own pocket.

36 Leave thy house and home, except when thou shalt desire to see thy family; verses 36-37 Martin is called on a mission to preach the gospel.
37 And speak freely to all; yea, preach, exhort, declare the truth, even with a loud voice, with a sound of rejoicing, crying—Hosanna, hosanna, blessed be the name of the Lord God!

verse 37 "Hosanna, hosanna" The word "Hosanna" is a transliteration of a Hebrew word that literally means "save now." Its meaning might be extended to something like "grant us salvation." It is often associated with the arrival of the Lord at his temple, whether Jesus's triumphal entry into Jerusalem to visit the temple there, or the arrival of the divine presence at a temple dedication in the modern Church. We might also shout "Hosannah" whenever the word, Spirit, or presence of God is manifested among us.

"blessed be the name of the Lord God" The name of the Lord God is Jesus Christ (see also 3 Nephi 11:17). This name is blessed because this is the name by which all things are done for our salvation and exaltation. It is the power of Jesus's name that makes all prayers, ordinances, and performances valid, and anything that is to last beyond this terrestrial world must be done, asked, or sealed in the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

38 Pray always, and I will pour out my Spirit upon you, and great shall be your blessing—yea, even more than if you should obtain treasures of earth and corruptibleness to the extent thereof.

verse 38 "Corruptibleness" is a colorful word indeed for what we might be more inclined to day to call corruptness—that quality that characterizes the individual whose heart is set on things of the world.

39 Behold, canst thou read this without rejoicing and lifting up thy heart for gladness?

verse 39 In section 19 the Lord has counseled Martin to repent (verse 15), make sacrifices for the kingdom (verses 34-35), pray (verses 28, 38), humble himself and be wise and meek (verse 41), and follow counsel (verse 33). These things, if followed, will bring him joy and rejoicing.

40 Or canst thou run about longer as a blind guide?

verse 40 If the Lord's counsel in this section is not followed, on the other hand, Martin will be a "blind guide," who is unable to find his own spiritual direction and unable to lead others correctly in spiritual things.

41 Or canst thou be humble and meek, and conduct thyself wisely before me? Yea, come unto me thy Savior. Amen.

Character Vignette

Martin Harris

Martin Harris was a farmer and rancher of great ability. For two decades prior to 1829, he had managed over 240 acres of productive land, together with associated interests. He had obvious ability in raising animals, particularly sheep, and he won prizes for his textile manufacturing. He produced linen, cotton and woolen ticking, blankets, and worsted and flannel fabrics. He was involved in a few different local civic activities and was mustered out for the War of 1812 when the British threatened to attack his region.

By 1829 it was well known in Palmyra that Martin Harris believed in Joseph Smith and the gold plates. Martin was twenty-three years older than the Prophet. He was therefore 46 years old when he became a witness of the Book of Mormon while the other two witnesses were half his age. He had already achieved considerable prestige in his community before accepting Mormonism. He was generally considered an industrious, hard-working farmer who was shrewd in his business calculations and frugal in his habits. He was not particularly noted for personal brilliance or leadership qualities.

He was skeptical by nature but when convinced, he was unshakable in his convictions. He was not surpassed in doubt by Thomas nor in absolute assurance by any apostle. His examination of Mormonism proceeded with methodical care. This is evidenced by his first talking to several members of the Smith family about the Book of Mormon plates to see if their stories coincided and his taking a copy of the characters from the plates to Charles Anthon of Columbia College. Joseph Smith's claims were taken seriously by this mature man conditioned by life to use his analytical powers in all circumstances, but he had difficulty suppressing his doubts.

His doubts were even evident on that day in late June of 1829 in Fayette where he saw the angel and the plates. Earlier in the day, upon failure of repeated prayers of Joseph Smith and the witnesses, Martin acknowledged that his attitude was probably the cause of their failure to obtain the promised revelation, and he withdrew. His revelation came somewhat afterward in company with Joseph Smith who remembered Martin's cry of conviction: "'Tis enough; mine eyes have beheld!" (Joseph Smith, "History of Joseph Smith," Times and Seasons, 3 [1842], 898). The ecstasy of that experience was indelibly stamped upon the mind of the former doubter. Lucy Mack Smith especially remembered the return of Martin Harris to the Whitmer home immediately after the vision: "He seemed almost overcome with joy, and testified boldly to what he had both seen and heard" (Biographical Sketches, 139). The force of his conviction never diminished in nearly a half-century's ideological transitions and personal trials.

His conversion to the claims of Joseph Smith caused former friends to ridicule him and produced intense domestic conflict that resulted in a separation from his wife. A survivor of this period later wrote that no early resident of Palmyra "received so many rebuffs" and endured "so many unfeeling comments" as did Martin Harris (Palmyra Courier, May 24, 1872). His association with Mormonism was generally deplored by his fellow townsmen. Many felt that it was truly phenomenal that such a dignified man as Martin Harris was involved in it. Yet none of his townsmen exceeded his established reputation as a responsible and honest individual. He lacked the polish of intellectual training, but he was admired for the solidity of his character by many educated men.

Pomeroy Tucker, who later gained considerable stature in western New York as a politician and editor for forty years, summarized the enigma that was Martin Harris: "How to reconcile the act of Harris in signing his name to such a statement [his testimony of the Book of Mormon], in view of the character of honesty which had always been conceded to him, could never be easily explained" (Origin, Rise, and Progress of Mormonism, [New York, 1867], 71).

Martin's father, Nathan Harris, was admired as a rugged hunter and fisherman who loved the sociability of the frontier gatherings. The elder Harris was universally honored by his neighbors for his kindness of heart and willingness to assist those in need.

Martin's exodus from Palmyra in 1831 occasioned a touching tribute written by E. B. Grandin, editor of the Wayne Sentinel during the years 1827-32. Interestingly Grandin perhaps knew Martin more intimately than any other non-Mormon. Grandin wrote: "Mr. Harris was among the early settlers of this town, and has ever borne the character of an honorable and upright man, and an obliging and benevolent neighbor. He had secured to himself by honest industry a respectable fortune—and he has left a large circle of acquaintances and friends to pity his delusion" (Wayne Sentinel, May 27, 1831).

Although Martin Harris was honored by appointment to the first high council of the Church, his main contribution was in the missionary service of formal journeys and private conversations. He and his brother Emer baptized a hundred converts in a few weeks (The Evening and the Morning Star, 1 [February, 1833]: 70), and Martin was imprisoned for his forthrightness in proclaiming the restored gospel. But when the trials of Job descended upon the Latter-day Saints community of Kirtland, and Martin was affected. The first steps toward plural marriage rankled him, and unlike Job he felt that the loss of property in the failure of the church bank was inconsistent with divine favor. Consequently, as he explained in 1855, he “lost confidence in Joseph Smith” and “his mind became darkened” (Letter of Thomas Colburn to Erastus Snow, May 2, 1855, Saint Louis cit. St. Louis Luminary, May 5, 1855).

He and other prominent dissenters in the Church were formally excommunicated in December 1837. These men, who shared Martin Harris’s skepticism on church policy, admired the sweep of Mormon doctrine and were talking of forming a reorganized church that would retain the great doctrinal concepts but jettison what to them was irrational. In a private meeting in early 1838, several former leaders insisted that the Book of Mormon was “nonsense.” “Martin Harris then bore testimony of its truth and said all would be damned that rejected it” (Letter of George A. Smith to Josiah Fleming, March 30, 1838, Kirtland, Ohio).

Although the Mormons moved from Kirtland, following his excommunication, Martin remained at Kirtland for the next thirty years in the condition of a fossil embedded in an earlier layer of sediment. His constant and vocal testimony to scores of visitors is all the more remarkable in the light of the psychology of the man in this period. No other Book of Mormon witness remained in Kirtland, and he had practically lost touch with them after 1840. Not only had the Latter-day Saints deserted him (according to his point of view) by moving away, but his second wife, Carolyn Young, immigrated to Utah in 1856 with their children. As the years passed in Kirtland, Martin was increasingly a solitary figure in non-Mormon society, which only ridiculed him for his persistence in declaring that he had seen the angel and the plates. He also felt strong resentment against church leaders, in large part stemming from the blow to his ego in never being given a major office in the Church. If such thinking is obviously immature, it was nevertheless real to the man who had sacrificed domestic peace, fortune, and reputation to bring about the printing of the Book of Mormon and the founding of the Church. Though such feelings were clearly held, in the face of them Martin insisted that the Mormon cause was founded on objective truth as he had experienced it in his vision of 1829.

In this Kirtland period of his life he changed his religious position eight times, including a rebaptism into the Church by a Nauvoo missionary in 1842. Every affiliation of Martin Harris was with some Mormon group, except when he accepted some Shaker beliefs, a position not basically contrary to his Book of Mormon testimony because the foundation of that movement was acceptance of personal revelation from heavenly beings. The only constancy of this period is his witness of the Nephite record and his unshakable testimony that Joseph Smith was a prophet of God.

Throughout the Ohio residence, Martin Harris was a forceful missionary for the Book of Mormon. Some two years after Joseph Smith's death the unstable Kirtland branch was largely converted to the pretensions of James J. Strang. Apparently at first a disciple of Strang's, Martin embarked for England with the Strangite leader Lester Brooks. But private correspondence from Brooks shows that Martin was not committed to the Strangite cause, and he was hastened back to the States. George Mantle later recalled attending a Strangite conference in which Martin Harris unsuccessfully demanded the right to speak and was publicly repudiated by the presiding officer, Cyrus H. Wheelock. Mantle recorded in a letter: "When we came out of the meeting Martin Harris was beset with a crowd in the street, expecting that he would furnish them with material to war against Mormonism; but when he was asked if Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, he answered yes; and when asked if the Book of Mormon was true, this was his answer: 'Do you know that is the sun shining on us? Because as sure as you know that, I know that Joseph Smith was a true prophet of God, and that he translated that book by the power of God'" (Letter of George Mantle to Marietta Walker, December 26, 1888, Saint Catherine, Mo., cit. Autumn Leaves 2 [1889]: 141).

In 1870, at age 87, he moved to Utah and lived with his eldest son by his second wife Carolyn, Martin Harris, Jr. in Smithfield, Utah, and then Clarkston, Cache County. Listened to by thousands in two Tabernacle speeches in Salt Lake City, and in talks in wards and in many private conversations, the aged Harris never tired of repeating his story. President Brigham Young also spent some time with him discussing his experiences with the Book of Mormon.

He died July 10, 1875 at the age of 92. Perhaps Martin Harris's words in a private letter best summarize his mission as a modern witness: "No man ever heard me in any way deny the truth of the Book of Mormon, the administration of the angel that showed me the plates, nor the organization of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints under the administration of Joseph Smith, Jun., the prophet whom the Lord raised up for that purpose in these the latter days, that he may show forth his power and glory" (Letter of Martin Harris, Sr., to Hanna B. Emerson, Jan., 1871, Smithfield, Utah Territory, cit. Saints' Herald 28 [1881]: 43).

1830 April

Now that the Book of Mormon, which had a fundamental and vital role in the restored gospel, was published, the time was right for organization of the Church. Some time between April first and early June 1830, Joseph received a revelation which has functioned as the constitution of our Church [D&C 20 - Constitution of the Church].

Section 20 Constitution of the Church

Robert J. Woodford has written a fascinating account of the origin of section 20 (“The Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ and the Book of Mormon” in Sperry Symposium Classics, The Doctrine and Covenants, ed. Craig K. Manscill, 103-16). This introduction to section 20 contains much of the material in Brother Woodford’s article—some of it quoted and some merely summarized.

In 1959 Brenda Daily and her brother Bill attended Ravenna High School in Ravenna, Ohio. They had recently moved there with their family from the Canal Zone, where their father, William D. Daily, served in the military. While in the Canal Zone, these two young people had learned conversational Spanish. They were anxious to study the language at their new school. Unfortunately, the school was not large enough for a regular Spanish class. However, the principal, Wayne E. Watters, had experience teaching Spanish. He was willing to teach a class before school if Brenda and Bill could also get some other students to attend. They found several willing classmates, and soon they had an enthusiastic class functioning.

During the year, Mr. Watters found out that Bill and Brenda were Latter-day Saints. Once he knew that, he had several discussions with them about the Church. On one occasion he mentioned that his wife’s father had a set of early LDS documents in his possession. He told them that the family had preserved these documents through four generations. His wife’s maiden name is Virginia Ryder, and she is a great-great-granddaughter of Symonds Ryder. He was an 1831 convert to the Church from Hiram, Ohio (see the commentary for D&C 52:37). The Lord called Symonds Ryder on a mission. Unfortunately, Joseph Smith’s scribe who wrote the letter notifying him of the call misspelled his name. Symonds Ryder complained about the Spirit that called him on a mission. If it could not spell his name correctly, then perhaps it erred in calling him on a mission. And so he refused to go. He left the Church in 1831 and became a vicious enemy of the Church, even playing a leading role in the cruel mobbing of Joseph and Sydney Rigdon in Hiram Ohio in the spring of 1832.

Ironically and almost comically, his name is still not spelled correctly in the Doctrine and Covenants and other church publications. His tombstone and his signature give the spelling as Symonds Ryder, not Symonds Rider or Simonds Ryder.

Before proceeding further in this account, please review D&C 18:1 and its commentary. This commentary refers to a document called “Articles of the Church of Christ” that Oliver Cowdery was assigned by Joseph to write in 1829 in preparation for the organization of the Church. This article of Oliver Cowdery’s was one of the items contained in the set of documents in the possession of the family of Virginia Ryder Watters.

How Symonds Ryder obtained this set of documents is an interesting story. In 1868, just two years before he died, Symonds Ryder told an acquaintance that when Joseph Smith and the other church authorities visited Zion (Independence, Missouri) in the summer of 1831, they “left their papers behind,” and they came into the possession of some of the new converts to the Church. And they eventually came into the possession of Symonds Ryder. While not specifically identifying himself as one of those “new converts,” Symonds described how the “new converts [took] an opportunity to become acquainted with the internal arrangement of their church” (Symonds Ryder to A. S. Hayden, February 1, 1868, published in A. S. Hayden, Early History of the Disciples in the Western Reserve, Ohio [Cincinnati: Chase & Hall Publishers, 1876], 221). In addition to Oliver Cowdery’s 1829 document, Symonds Ryder had in his possession manuscript copies of the following revelations: sections 20, 35, 36, 42, 52, and 56. This listing was noted by then LDS Church archivist Earl Olson in his May 27, 1960 statement, in the Archives of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (hereafter cited as Church Archives), that accompanied the documents to Salt Lake City. It seems that Ryder was particularly concerned about the recent revelation of the law of consecration (D&C 42:30-39) and that his farm in Hiram might be taken from him for church use. It is interesting to note that Ryder ended up with manuscript copies of Cowdery’s 1829 article, the 1830 “Articles and Covenants” (section 20), and the law of the Church (section 42). These documents were passed down in the Ryder family and ended up in the possession of Virginia Ryder Watters’ father who was still alive in 1959, the year Brenda Daily and her brother Bill started attended Ravenna High School in Ravenna, Ohio.

Later in the year 1959, during a serious illness, Wayne and Virginia Watters feared her father would soon die. They thought that he had no more use for the document, and so they gave it to Brenda. They felt it would be of greater value to a member of the Church than it was to them. Brenda took it to her father, and he immediately realized that it was a record of some worth. He conveyed it to the mission president in Ohio, who sent it to church headquarters with the next missionary returning to Utah. The Church historian placed it in the Archives of the Church, where researchers can have access to it today. It is interesting to note, parenthetically, that Virginia Ryder Watters’ father recovered and was upset that they had given the documents away. The Church Archives did supply him with a set of photocopies.

The 1829 article is in the handwriting of Oliver Cowdery and is three pages in length. It begins, “A commandment from God unto Oliver how he should build up his Church & the manner thereof.” It ends, “Written in the year of our Lord & Saviour 1829—A true copy of the Articles of the Church of Christ &c.” [“&c” is an archaic abbreviation for “etc.”]. The body of the document is composed of scriptures from the Book of Mormon and the Doctrine and Covenants interspersed with inspired commentary by Oliver Cowdery. Through these, Oliver Cowdery established several important doctrinal truths. First, because the world is becoming a more wicked place, there is a great need to repent and be baptized. He then explained the procedures for proper baptism. Second, he established that men are to be ordained to the priesthood, and he demonstrated the proper method of performing these ordinations. Those who are so ordained are to pray for the Church and teach the members the truths of the gospel. Third, he explained the doctrine concerning the sacrament. The members are to meet together often to partake of it. He related from the scriptures the form of the ordinance, including the prayers and should be said. He also included the warning from 3 Nephi about partaking of the sacrament unworthily. Fourth, he taught that the church members should meet together often to tell each other of their progress toward eternal life, and he explained a standard of moral conduct which every member should live. He also explained that those who will not repent must be cast out of the Church. Finally he issued a call for all people to come to Christ and take Christ's name upon them. If they will walk uprightly before the Lord, then his grace is sufficient for them.

There is a close connection between this 1829 manuscript of Oliver Cowdery and section 20 of the Doctrine and Covenants. The title of section 20 in the surviving manuscripts and early published copies is "The Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ." The title of section 20 as it was published in The Evening and the Morning Star, in the June 1832 issue, is the same, and it is similar to the title of Oliver Cowdery's early manuscript, "The Articles of the Church of Christ." Section 20 also contains some of the Book of Mormon scriptures quoted by Oliver Cowdery in his manuscript. Oliver Cowdery's manuscript, then, is an early forerunner to the more comprehensive section 20. The following is an attempt to reconstruct the events leading to the composition of both Oliver's 1829 article and our present section 20.

Oliver Cowdery had wanted to know what material to put into the "Articles of the Church" and approached the Prophet for help. Joseph Smith prayed about the matter and received the revelation known as section 20. In verse 1 of section 18 we learned that the Lord gave this revelation (section 20) because of "the thing" that Oliver Cowdery desired to know. Oliver Cowdery wanted to know what to write in his 1829 article. The Lord told Oliver Cowdery he had manifested to him many times that the things he had written were true (see D&C 18:2). Oliver Cowdery was the principal scribe for the Book of Mormon as the Prophet dictated it. The Lord told Oliver Cowdery to rely on the things he had written (the text of the Book of Mormon) that he already knew were true (see D&C 18:3). In summary, he was told to get the information he needed for the 1829 "Articles" of the Church from the Book of Mormon. The Lord said he placed "all things . . . concerning the foundation of [his] church" in the Book of Mormon (D&C 18:4). The Lord had already inspired prophets to put in the Book of Mormon the basic principles Oliver Cowdery needed for the earliest procedural statement or handbook of the Church of Christ. He told Oliver further to "build up my church, upon the foundation of my gospel" (D&C 18:5). If he did, the gates of hell could not prevail against him. Oliver Cowdery included the phrase “build up my church” in the introduction of his 1829 article. Oliver Cowdery then composed his three-part version of the articles of the Church from Book of Mormon scriptures. This is the same document that Symonds Ryder acquired.

Oliver Cowdery must have submitted his manuscript to Joseph Smith, and doubtless Joseph’s inspired thinking in producing section 20 was influenced by Oliver’s manuscript. Joseph spoke as if section 20 had been given in advance of the organization of the Church when he wrote: “We obtained of him [Jesus Christ] the following, by the spirit of prophecy and revelation; which not only gave us much information but also pointed out to us the precise day upon which . . . we should proceed to organize his Church once more here upon the earth” (HC, 1:64-70). However, some have speculated that section 20 was probably not finalized in its present form until after April 6, 1830. They offer as evidence the fact that verse 1 refers to the organization of the Church in the past tense: “it being regularly organized and established agreeable to the laws of our country . . .” Also, in the Book of Commandments, this section was dated June 1830. Since it was presented to the conference held on June 9, 1830, for approval, it must have been written sometime between April 1 and June 9 (Woodford, The Historical Development of the Doctrine and Covenants, 286).

We may thus summarize the origins of section 20 by saying that it is a composite that evolved over a period of time. The main portions were written in April 1830, and Joseph drew upon the materials written by Oliver Cowdery in 1829. Some finalizing and editing were done in preparation for the June 1830 conference. Verses 65 through 67 were later added and included in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants. One interesting point regarding the form of this section is that it differs from the previous nineteen sections. In section 20 the Lord is not speaking as the first person. Verse 16 shows that the speaker is “we, the elders of the Church.” The first thirty-six verses take the form of a testimony of the two elders, Joseph and Oliver. From verse 37 to the end, straightforward directions are given, but never in the voice of the Lord.

In all editions of the Doctrine and Covenants published between 1835 and 1869, section 20 was printed just after the preface as some indication of its importance (Ibid., 299).

The purpose of section 20 seems to have been to identify and introduce the new organization—the restored Church—to the Christian world as a respectable Christian church holding to established gospel principles. “[Section 20] presented the Church as no cult or sect with eccentric beliefs or bizarre forms of worship, but as a church among churches, stable, disciplined, and orthodox” (Bushman, Joseph Smith and the Beginnings of Mormonism, 158).

Section 20 resembles the statements or confessions of faith of Christian denominations, both in its language and in the topics covered: the fall, the nature of man, the atonement, resurrection, redemption, justification, and sanctification. Verses 65 through 67 were obviously added some time later as Joseph's knowledge regarding priesthood organization grew. After section 20 was accepted by the June 9 conference, the missionaries often carried personal copies for teaching purposes. While section 20 made public announcement of the new Church as a conventional Christian church, to the members themselves it was obviously much more than simply another church among churches.

Section 20, which is made up largely of revelatory material received before the Church was organized and was known to the early Church as the "Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ." It was the first summary statement of the history, doctrines, policies, and procedures of the Church. At the first conference of the Church held in Fayette, New York, on June 9, 1830, section 20 was read to the members and unanimously sustained as the Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ, thus making it the first revelation of this dispensation to be formally presented to and sustained by the members. The importance attached to section 20 by early members of the Church is obvious from the many historical accounts of its use. Several other revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants refer to section 20, including 28:12, 14; 33:14; 42:13; 51:4; 68:24; and 107:12, 63. The Lord in each of these passages, requested the saints to remember the articles and covenants and to obey the principles revealed there. The importance of section 20 has not diminished over the years. According to statistics kept personally by Robert J. Woodford, the General Authorities since 1974 cite only sections 84, 88, and 121 from the Doctrine and Covenants more often than they cite section 20.

Certainly, this section served as the first priesthood manual or handbook for the Church, and it was read verbatim to the members at many early Church conferences. Section 20, along with sections 21-22, are foundational documents for the organization of the restored Church.

Section 20 contains some passages of scripture quoted directly from the Book of Mormon. Several other passages are paraphrased or summarized. The sacrament prayers are probably the most widely known of these scriptures. Moroni recorded them in Moroni chapters 4 and 5, and Joseph Smith published them as verses 77 and 79 of section 20. Verse 73 of section 20 contains the baptismal prayer from 3 Nephi 11:25. Joseph included the instruction in Moroni 6:5-6 to partake of the sacrament frequently as verse 75 in section 20. Moroni taught, in Moroni 3:4, how men are to be ordained to the priesthood. Joseph included these same instructions in verse 60. He also placed in verse 37 the prerequisites for baptism that are given in Moroni 6:2-4. The elders are to conduct church meetings as the Holy Ghost directs them. This teaching comes from Moroni 6:7, and Joseph included this material in verses 80-83. In D&C 20:10, the Lord uses the testimony of the Three Witnesses and the Eight Witnesses to declare to mankind that the Book of Mormon is true. Verse 11 of section 20 adds two additional truths concerning the Book of Mormon. First, the Book of Mormon proves to the people of the world that the Bible is true (Moroni 7:8-9). Second, we learn in D&C 20:11 that the Book of Mormon establishes the actuality of prophets in our own day. It does this by the fact that the irrefutable truth of the Book of Mormon establishes Joseph Smith as a latter-day prophet. Section 20 integrates the teachings of the Book of Mormon into the Church of this dispensation. It emphasizes the eternal covenants and commitments required by the Lord of the Nephites and also of us. It sets the same standard of conduct for us that the Savior set during his ministry to the Book of Mormon people.

1 The rise of the Church of Christ in these last days, being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh, it being regularly organized and established agreeable to the laws of our country, by the will and commandments of God, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April—verse 1 “the Church of Christ” The name of the Church is given: “the Church of Christ.” This name was used from 1830 to 1834. In 1834, the name “Church of the Latter-day Saints” was given (HC, 2:63). Finally, in 1838 the Church was given its present name, “The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints” (D&C 115:4).

“being one thousand eight hundred and thirty years since the coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ in the flesh” Much has been made over this wording. Specifically it has been repeatedly suggested that the Savior was born on April 6 in the year 1 BC. The question remains as to whether or not such a specific implication was intended by the Lord or by the Prophet Joseph.

On April 6, 1833, the third anniversary of the Church’s organization, Joseph Smith himself wrote, “The day was spent in a very agreeable manner, in giving and receiving knowledge which appertained to this last kingdom—it being just 1800 years since the Savior laid down his life that men might have everlasting life, and only three years since the Church had come out of the wilderness, preparatory for the last dispensation” (HC, 1:337). Again, we wonder if Joseph Smith felt that he was revealing divine knowledge as to the exact birth year of the Savior.

At least two presidents of the Church, Harold B. Lee and Spencer W. Kimball, have affirmed that April 6 is the actual birthday of the Savior as well as the anniversary of the organization of the Church (see Lee, in the Ensign, July 1973, 2; Kimball, in the Ensign, May 1980, 54; see also Roberts, Outlines of Ecclesiastical History, 16-17).

On the other hand, some writers, including some modern apostles and prophets, have urged caution in interpreting this verse as an exact date. Among these are Hyrum M. Smith, J. Reuben Clark Jr., and Bruce R. McConkie (see Smith, Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 138; Clark, Our Lord of the Gospels, vi-vii; McConkie, Mortal Messiah, 1:349-50). Elder McConkie's summary is helpful: "We do not believe it is possible with the present state of our knowledge—including that which is known both in and out of the Church—to state with finality when the natal day of the Lord Jesus actually occurred" (Mortal Messiah, 1:349-50, n. 2).

It seems highly likely that the Savior's birth was in 4 or 5 BC (See the commentary for 3 Nephi 1:1 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon).

"it being regularly organized and established agreeable to the laws of our country" To what law does this statement refer? By 1830, the United States Constitution had been ratified and its first amendment was in force, protecting the freedom of religion. The specific laws under which the Church was incorporated, however, seem to have been the laws of New York State. In 1784 the state of New York enacted a procedure for incorporating religious societies. This statute was updated in 1813 and was in effect on April 6, 1830.

Although the law did not require a group of worshipers to incorporate themselves in order to exist as a church, certain legal privileges, such as the right to acquire and hold property and perform marriages would flow from the act of incorporation. In summary, the statute required a church or congregation to elect from three to nine trustees to take charge of church property and transact business affairs. Two elders of the congregation were to be selected to preside over the election. Fifteen days' notice, given for two successive Sabbaths, was required. A certificate establishing a name for the church and evidencing completion of the organizational events was to be recorded in the county or counties where the church was located (see Laws of the State of New York, 214). Interestingly, all of these requirements were met by the Church, but the certificate for the incorporation of the Church in April 6, 1830, has never been located (John K. Carmack, "Fayette: The Place the Church was Organized" in Sperry Symposium Classics, The Doctrine and Covenants, 48-55). Six people became "trustees" on that day in Fayette, and Joseph and Oliver were the two presiding elders at the incorporation proceeding.

2 Which commandments were given to Joseph Smith, Jun., who was called of God, and ordained an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the first elder of this church;

verse 2 “Joseph Smith, Jun., who was called of God, and ordained an apostle of Jesus Christ” In May of 1829 Joseph and Oliver had received both the Melchizedek Priesthood and the apostolic keys under the hands of Peter, James, and John (see D&C 27:12).

“Joseph Smith, Jun., who was called . . . to be the first elder of this church” In order to avoid organizational confusion, it was important that Joseph be designated the “first elder” or head of the Church. The designation “first elder” was a Church administrative designation and does not refer to a special office in the priesthood. Oliver Cowdery was designated the “second elder.” Joseph and Oliver were already apostles and thereby also elders (see verse 38). In exercising their authority as apostles and elders, Joseph was to have administrative precedence over Oliver. Their designation as first and second elders had nothing to do with the sequence of their ordination, but rather with their authority. In the infancy of the Church there was no First Presidency, only a first and second elder who held the keys of the apostleship. Joseph would later write: “I will inform you that it is contrary to the economy of God for any member of the Church, or any one, to receive instructions for those in authority, higher than themselves” (HC, 1:338).

3 And to Oliver Cowdery, who was also called of God, an apostle of Jesus Christ, to be the second elder of this church, and ordained under his hand;

4 And this according to the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, to whom be all glory, both now and forever. Amen.

5 After it was truly manifested unto this first elder that he had received a remission of his sins, he was entangled again in the vanities of the world;

verse 5 What time period is being referred to here when Joseph “was entangled again in the vanities of the world”? At the time of the first vision, Joseph received a remission of his sins. Between the time of the first vision and the time of Moroni’s first visit on September 21, 1823, by Joseph’s own description his conduct did not live to the Lord’s expectations. Joseph wrote:

During the space of time which intervened between the time I had the vision and the year eighteen hundred and twenty-three—having been forbidden to join any of the religious sects of the day, and being of very tender years, and persecuted by those who ought to have been my friends, and to have treated me kindly, and if they supposed me to be deluded to have endeavored in a proper and affectionate manner to have reclaimed me—I was left to all kinds of temptations; and mingling with all kinds of society. I frequently fell into many foolish errors, and displayed the weakness of youth, and the foibles of human nature; which, I am sorry to say, led me into divers temptations, offensive in the sight of God. In making this confession, no one need suppose me guilty of any great or malignant sins. A disposition to commit such was never in my nature. But I was guilty of levity, and sometimes associated with jovial company, etc., not consistent with that character which ought to be maintained by one who was called of God as I had been. But this will not seem very strange to any one who recollects my youth, and is acquainted with my native cheery temperament (HC, 1:9-10).

6 But after repenting, and humbling himself sincerely, through faith, God ministered unto him by an holy angel, whose countenance was as lightning, and whose garments were pure and white above all other whiteness; verse 6 The “holy angel” was, of course, Moroni.

7 And gave unto him commandments which inspired him;

verse 7 For a detailed account of the commandments given to Joseph by Moroni, see JS-H 1:33-42.

verses 8-16 The importance of the Book of Mormon is emphasized.

8 And gave him power from on high, by the means which were before prepared, to translate the Book of Mormon;

verse 8 The “means which were before prepared” were the Urim and Thummim.

9 Which contains a record of a fallen people, and the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ to the Gentiles and to the Jews also;

verse 9 “Which contains . . . the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ” For a discussion of the concept of the fulness of the gospel, see the commentary for D&C 1:23. The Book of Mormon contains all of the gospel principles sufficient to lead to the exaltation of any individual who adheres to those principles.

“to the Gentiles” In this dispensation, which is the “times of the Gentiles” (from the time of the restoration to the Lord’s second coming), the Book of Mormon and the gospel are to go to the Gentiles first and then to the Jews. This order of things fulfills the ancient declaration that “the last [the Gentiles] shall be first, and the first [the Jews] shall be last” (1 Nephi 13:42; Luke 13:30).

10 Which was given by inspiration, and is confirmed to others by the ministering of angels, and is declared unto the world by them—verse 10 “and is confirmed to others by the ministering of angels” The “others” here are the three witnesses and the eight witnesses of the Book of Mormon.

11 Proving to the world that the holy scriptures are true, and that God does inspire men and call them to his holy work in this age and generation, as well as in generations of old;

verse 11 “Proving to the world that the holy scriptures are true” It is the Lord’s intent that the Book of Mormon be used to prove that the Bible is true. Indeed, the Book of Mormon provides the keys by which the Bible should be interpreted. For example, some biblical scholars deny that Jesus himself could have composed or taught the Sermon on the Mount (see Funk, Five Gospels). The Book of Mormon shows that Jesus did teach the Sermon on the Mount—that it was his sermon (3 Nephi 12-14). Also, many Bible scholars theorize that much of the book of Isaiah was not written by Isaiah but by other writers after the Babylonian conquest in 586 BC. The Book of Mormon shows this theory to be false. Lehi left the Old World with the brass plates before the fall of Jerusalem. Because the brass plates at the time already contained a nearly complete copy of Isaiah—and if the Book of Mormon is true—then Isaiah cannot have been written after 587 BC.

The way in which the Book of Mormon “proves” the Bible true is not scientifically but by the logic of the Spirit. The Book of Mormon testifies of the Bible. If a person learns by the Spirit’s witness that the Book of Mormon is true, then he or she also knows that the Bible is true (Mormon 7:8-9).

Also, the very existence of the Book of Mormon testifies to the world that the heavens are still open and that the Lord of heaven who spoke to the prophets and apostles anciently continues to do so today. The pattern of the Lord’s giving the Old Testament and then the New Testament is consistent with the pattern of the Lord’s giving the Bible and the Book of Mormon. The Lord has not changed his mode of operation. He is still the same—yesterday, today, and forever (Hebrews 13:8—and see also the following verse).

12 Thereby showing that he is the same God yesterday, today, and forever. Amen.

13 Therefore, having so great witnesses, by them shall the world be judged, even as many as shall hereafter come to a knowledge of this work.

verse 13 The “so great witnesses” are Joseph Smith and the three and eight witnesses of the Book of Mormon.

14 And those who receive it in faith, and work righteousness, shall receive a crown of eternal life; verse 14 Here the Lord re-emphasizes the importance of both faith and works (2 Nephi 25:23).

15 But those who harden their hearts in unbelief, and reject it, it shall turn to their own condemnation—

16 For the Lord God has spoken it; and we, the elders of the church, have heard and bear witness to the words of the glorious Majesty on high, to whom be glory forever and ever. Amen.

verse 16 The “elders of the church” are Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.

verses 17-36 The basic doctrines or creed of the Church is stated. To understand these verses one must have a feeling for the Protestant doctrines of grace, justification, and sanctification, which were prevalent in 1830. This declaration of the Church’s creed was intended at least in part for a nonmember audience, and it is couched in somewhat Protestant phraseology. The terms grace, justification, and sanctification are, of course, perfectly valid and important concepts in our Church doctrine today.

The term grace refers the Lord’s love for man, especially that aspect of the Lord’s love that inclines him to bestow upon man blessings that the man does not completely deserve. By his grace, he extends to us the opportunity for eternal life in his presence in spite of our being unworthy to enter his presence. Grace particularly refers to the blessings which have to do with salvation from sin. Christ is the complete expression of grace. He is the chosen means whereby God shows his favor and blessings to sinful man. To receive this grace, according to the Protestant concept, one must simply declare a genuine faith in Jesus Christ. Then one is “in a state of grace.” To be in a state of grace is to be sealed up to one’s salvation and to be fully aware that ultimately one’s relationship with God is determined not by merit or works or obedience to the law, but by faith in Jesus Christ’s merciful love.

In order to understand the concept of justification, one must first come to understand the law of justice. Stated succinctly, this law holds that for every violation of God’s law a penalty is assessed. This penalty renders the individual “guilty of sin.” This law is very exact. If even one sin is committed, and the penalty is not removed, the individual guilty of the sin cannot qualify for entry back into God’s presence. Hence the scriptural statement to the effect that “no unclean thing can enter into the kingdom of God” (1 Nephi 10:21; 15:34; Alma 11:37; 40:26; 3 Nephi 27:19; Moses 6:57). A man is said to be “justified” or “reconciled to God” when all a man’s penalties are removed. We may say, then, that his sins are forgiven or removed. He is then brought into perfect harmony with God to the point where he can be exalted. The following statement is absolute and must be understood to be absolute: No man can be exalted in the celestial kingdom without being justified. If a man is justified he is regarded as being righteous by God. If God were to judge man strictly based on adherence to the law, then no man would be regarded as righteous—every man would fall short. Each and every man is guilty of sin (Romans 3:23). To become justified, then, every man needs help. This help comes, of course, from our Savior. He will remove the penalty of sin—forgive the sinner—if the sinner will qualify himself by accepting Christ and striving diligently to live his commandments.

Sanctification implies a lofty state of spiritual refinement. The process of sanctification is an incremental process of refinement, extending over our mortal lives, during which our “natural man” inclinations, our carnal proclivities, are preferentially purged from our souls; and they are replaced by gifts of the Spirit—increments of the attributes of God and Christ. We are in this way, made “holy.” To be sanctified means to be made holy. God is holy, and as we are sanctified over time, we become more like him. It is the result of continuous self introspection, and repeated repenting of our sins and imperfections. The Spirit of God has a vital role in this process, as it is he who purges us of our sins and imperfections (“as if by fire”) as we evidence satisfactory effort to change ourselves. And he also grants those gifts of the Spirit—those increments of spiritual growth—when he judges man to be worthy. Sanctification is required of all those who would enter into the celestial kingdom of God. No one will return to his presence who has not progressed on the road to becoming like him through the process of sanctification. For a more complete discussion of justification and sanctification, see the chapter by that name in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine (volume 1, chapter 17).

17 By these things we know that there is a God in heaven, who is infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting the same unchangeable God, the framer of heaven and earth, and all things which are in them;

verse 17 “By these things” refers to the Book of Mormon and the witnesses of the Book of Mormon.

“infinite and eternal, from everlasting to everlasting” We in the Church find no conflict between the ideas that God has a tangible, physical body, and that he is an infinite God.

“the same unchangeable God” God is unchanging. The God of the orthodox Christians, however, no longer reveals his will to apostles or prophets, and seems rather to have changed from the biblical pattern.

18 And that he created man, male and female, after his own image and in his own likeness, created he them;

verse 18 Note that Eve as much as Adam is created in the image of God. Hence, the concept of “God” has an even richer significance in connection with the Spirit birth of mankind than it does in other contexts. The First Presidency, in 1925, declared, “All men and women are in the similitude of the universal Father and Mother, and are literally sons and daughters of Deity” (Clark, Messages of the First Presidency, 5:244). The male God and the female God are sealed together eternally and act as one in the process of eternal procreation. This may be one of several reasons for the plural noun form Elohim in the Hebrew word for the Father.

19 And gave unto them commandments that they should love and serve him, the only living and true God, and that he should be the only being whom they should worship.

verse 19 The fulness of the gospel was given to Adam and Eve, and they taught it to their children (see Moses 5).

20 But by the transgression of these holy laws man became sensual and devilish, and became fallen man.

verse 20 There are perhaps two problems with this verse:

1. First, it implies that the “sensual and devilish” tendency within each of us—our “natural self”—is brought about by our transgressing the laws of God. Man’s dual nature (“natural” and “spiritual”) is fundamental and intrinsic to each member of the family of man. These two qualities have always existed in each individual. They did not have a beginning. They are not created. We have always had this dual nature even from the time we existed as unembodied intelligences and later as spirits in the premortal world. We have been exposed to the law and have exercised our agency to obey or disobey even before we were born spiritually in the pre-existent phase. Certainly we see evidence of “natural man” behavior in the premortal world. Sin did not create the natural tendencies of man. Rather, those natural tendencies result in sin.

The natural self certainly was not created by Satan though he delights in and exploits man’s “natural-man” inclinations and encourages the exercise of them to the exclusion of man’s spiritual side.

Pride is the most fundamental sin of the natural man. Pride is the excessive giving in to the natural pulls of man. Was not Lucifer guilty of obvious pride as he put himself forward to be the savior of the worlds? The Father reported this incident to Moses: “Satan . . . came before me, saying—Behold, here am I, send me, I will be thy son, and I will redeem all mankind, that one soul shall not be lost, and surely I will do it; wherefore give me thine honor.

For a more complete discussion of the natural and spiritual tendencies in each individual, see the “Natural Self” and “Spiritual Self” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 5.

2. Secondly, the verse implies that we mortals became fallen man as a result of our “transgression of these holy laws.” This is only partly true. We came to be in a “fallen state”—outside the presence of God in a telestial world—because of the transgression of Adam and Eve through no fault of our own. At the moment of our birth into mortality, we exist in a fallen state. It is also true that once he is in the world, each man transgresses the law and “falls” on his own.

A general misconception has grown up in the Church to the effect that our coming into this earth in a “fallen state” has resulted in the “natural man” tendency within each of us. The word man in the expression natural man, is often used with the connotation of mortal man or fallen man. It seems clear that this mortal experience here on earth is particularly designed to test our abilities to exist in the world but not become of the world. Mortality is particularly designed to test our natural self in ways we were not tested in the premortal world. Every man and woman is forced to interact intimately with things of the world as they obtain an education, prepare themselves to be fathers, mothers, and breadwinners, and arm themselves to succeed in the world. Yet they must maintain their spiritual connections as their primary loyalty. The world is an enticing and most dangerous place to the man seeking one day to return to his eternal celestial home. Here in mortality we are especially inclined toward being “carnal, sensual, and devilish,” because of the pulls of our mortal body.

It would seem that the label “natural man” ought to be most correctly used to describe the natural self of an individual who is here on earth navigating this mortal experience. “Natural self” is an appropriate term for that same inclination of each individual in all settings (premortals, mortals, and post mortals).

21 Wherefore, the Almighty God gave his Only Begotten Son, as it is written in those scriptures which have been given of him.

22 He suffered temptations but gave no heed unto them.

verse 22 There is no suffering that has been experienced or which ever will be experienced by mortal man that the Savior does not understand perfectly because he somehow personally experienced all suffering in Gethsemane and on the cross. Likewise, there is nothing of temptation which he does not understand perfectly because he also experienced all temptations.

23 He was crucified, died, and rose again the third day;

24 And ascended into heaven, to sit down on the right hand of the Father, to reign with almighty power according to the will of the Father;

25 That as many as would believe and be baptized in his holy name, and endure in faith to the end, should be saved—verse 25 To be “saved,” of course, means to receive a celestial salvation.

26 Not only those who believed after he came in the meridian of time, in the flesh, but all those from the beginning, even as many as were before he came, who believed in the words of the holy prophets, who spake as they were inspired by the gift of the Holy Ghost, who truly testified of him in all things, should have eternal life, verse 26 “meridian of time” One of the definitions for the word meridian is “midday” or “noon.” Thus we speak of ante-meridian (a.m.) or post-meridian (p.m.). The meridian of time therefore might suggest the idea of the middle of the earth’s existence. We know that the period of the Savior’s mortal ministry, the meridian of time, was not the chronological middle of the earth’s temporal existence, but rather the spiritual middle. Is the point that everything before looks ahead to, and that everything after looks back at—the high point of the earth’s temporal existence. The atonement of Christ is the reference point in time, like noon, that determines the before and after of all things.

“all those from the beginning . . . should have eternal life” Here is a reminder that one of the ways in which the atonement of Jesus Christ is infinite is that it applies to and was active in the lives of those that accepted Christ even before the Savior’s experience in Gethsemane and on the cross.

27 As well as those who should come after, who should believe in the gifts and callings of God by the Holy Ghost, which beareth record of the Father and of the Son; verse 28 President Joseph Fielding Smith has explained this verse by teaching us that the word “God” in this verse actually means Godhead.

It is true there are three divine and separate beings in the Godhead. But they are obligatorily united in ways that we are not given to fully understand. If the Son and the Holy Ghost were not obedient to the Father, or if they deviated from being one with him in mind, thought, and purpose, they would cease to be divine (see Alma 42:13, 22, 25).

29 And we know that all men must repent and believe on the name of Jesus Christ, and worship the Father in his name, and endure in faith on his name to the end, or they cannot be saved in the kingdom of God.

verse 29 “worship the Father in his name” We worship God by emulating him and following his course. Just as imitation is the sincerest form of flattery, so also it is the truest form of worship. True worship of the Father is to imitate the Son of God and conform to his example. In this way we worship the Father in the name (and example) of the Son.

30 And we know that justification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true; verse 30 See the commentary for verses 17-36 above regarding the principles of justification and grace.

“justification” Justification is a judicial or legal term, and it means being acquitted or being declared innocent of all charges. In spite of the fact that each of us has sinned, each of us can also be declared innocent (we can be forgiven of our sins) through the Savior’s appealing for us before the demands of justice. He will do this if we strive diligently to obey him. And he is qualified to do this because of his atoning sacrifice.

The scriptures describe us variously as being justified by Christ (Acts 13:39; Mosiah 14:11), by faith (Acts 26:18; Romans 3:28, 30), by grace (Romans 3:24), by works (James 2:27-30), by Christ's blood (Romans 5:9), and by the Spirit (Moses 6:60). A useful exercise for the reader is to consider each of the items on this list and briefly explain the role of each in your becoming justified.

“justification . . . is just and true” Justification is both a just and a true principle. It is just because Christ is the perfect judge and, by virtue of his atoning death, he has satisfied the demands of justice. It is true because it exists—it truly is.

31 And we know also, that sanctification through the grace of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ is just and true, to all those who love and serve God with all their might, minds, and strength.

verse 31 See also the commentary for verses 17-36 above regarding the principle of sanctification.

“sanctification” Just as with justification, the scriptures describe us variously as being sanctified by Christ (1 Corinthians 1:2; Hebrews 2:11), by the grace of God (Moroni 10:33), by the truth (John 17:17, 19), by the word of God (1 Timothy 4:5), by God the Father (Jude 1:1), by law (D&C 88:21, 34), by water (Ephesians 5:26), by the Holy Spirit (Romans 15:16; 2 Thessalonians 2:13; 1 Peter 1:2; Alma 5:4; 13:12; 3 Nephi 27:20), and by blood (Hebrews 9:14; Moses 6:60). Again, don't fail to review the more complete discussion of justification and sanctification in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification.

32 But there is a possibility that man may fall from grace and depart from the living God; verse 32 In the Protestant world in the early nineteenth century, some creeds held to the idea of Irresistible grace which is attributed to John Calvin. This was the idea that God designated or predestined some individuals for salvation (and also some for damnation), and that once so designated, those individuals could never fall from that secure state—they possessed irresistible grace. In this verse the principle of irresistible grace is struck down in favor of the idea of agency and personal responsibility. We “fall from grace” when we, through our disobedience, render ourselves unworthy and unqualified for the Savior to plead our case before the demands of justice. For a more complete discussion of this issue, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 4, chapter 11, Grace and Works.

33 Therefore let the church take heed and pray always, lest they fall into temptation; verse 34 “those who are sanctified” What is required before an individual is sanctified? What are the criteria? It is not possible to precisely define a concrete endpoint. An individual is sanctified (and justified—the two processes occurring together) when he is satisfactorily (as judged by the Spirit—the Holy Spirit of Promise) striving to overcome his natural self and obeying the Lord’s commands. The processes of justification and sanctification are ongoing. One does not suddenly arrive at that point where one is irreversibly justified and sanctified. At some times in our lives we are progressing well—our offering of obedience is satisfactory to the Lord—and we might be said to be justified and sanctified. We are regularly being cleansed by the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost (see the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31). At other times we may find ourselves drifting downward spiritually, and those moments we may struggle to be found worthy—and therefore unworthy to become justified. We may even lose some of the spiritual gifts that we had already acquired, and therefore we may become less sanctified than we were. Each of us has moved and will continue to move through these up and down cycles. When our mortal trial is over, the Lord will judge if our spiritual growth, given our premortal gifts and our earthly circumstances, has been adequate. If the Savior chooses to appeal for our exaltation, we will finally be declared justified and sufficiently sanctified, and we will be allowed access to our celestial home.

34 Yea, and even let those who are sanctified take heed also.

35 And we know that these things are true and according to the revelations of John, neither adding to, nor diminishing from the prophecy of his book, the holy scriptures, or the revelations of God which shall come hereafter by the gift and power of the Holy Ghost, the voice of God, or the ministering of angels.

verse 35 This verse deals with the charge that Joseph’s revelations added to the Bible, contrary to the warning in the Book of Revelation (22:18) not to add to the words of the Bible. The idea is implied that Joseph’s revelations neither add nor detract from biblical writings but are contained within the Bible.

36 And the Lord God has spoken it; and honor, power and glory be rendered to his holy name, both now and ever. Amen.

37 And again, by way of commandment to the church concerning the manner of baptism—All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church.

verse 37 “by way of commandment to the church concerning the manner of baptism” Requirements for membership in the Church are outlined.

“come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits” We must be motivated to repent by a more pure motive than sorrow for one’s own sins which might be wrought through being caught sinning or because of peer pressure. It would seem that to truly acquire a “broken heart” and “contrite spirit” one must be blessed by the Spirit of God with a deep, godly sorrow for one’s sins, a profound realization of our dependence upon the Savior, a desire for forgiveness, a loss of any desire to deliberately sin, a propensity to be wounded even by the sins of others, and an enthusiastic willingness to abide by all the covenants and obligations which the gospel entails. A “broken heart and contrite spirit” is clearly a gift of the Spirit. Our hearts are broken perhaps for two reasons. One is that we feel remorse for our sinful ways. The other reason is that, as we contemplate the atoning sacrifice of the Savior, our hearts are broken because of how much he suffered on our behalf. See also the commentary for D&C 97:8.

“are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ” To take upon us his name is to (1) join the Church bearing his name; (2) to become one of his children, fully committed to subject our will to his; (3) to willing be owned by him—to have his name “written” upon us; (4) to actively represent him and his gospel before those who do not have it; and (5) to assume his identity and therefore gradually becoming what he is.

“that they have received of the Spirit of Christ” The phrase “Spirit of Christ” has various meanings including: (1) It is a name or title of the Holy Ghost. (2) It may refer to that spiritual entitlement given to each individual at their birth (Moroni 7:16-17; D&C 93:2). (3) It may refer to the light or the influence of Christ. This latter definition seems to apply here.

verses 38-59 Duties of church officers are outlined—apostles, elders, priests, teachers, and deacons.

Seventies and high priests are not mentioned in verse 38 because there were none in the Church at the time. High priests were added in June 1831 and seventies in February 1835. The organization revealed to the Church at this time was sufficient and expedient for the government of the Church at the time of its organization.

38 The duty of the elders, priests, teachers, deacons, and members of the church of Christ—An apostle is an elder, and it is his calling to baptize;

verse 38 “An apostle is an elder” The difference between an elder and an apostle is not a difference in the level of priesthood which they hold. When a man is ordained to the higher or Melchizedek priesthood, he holds all of the priesthood which he will ever receive on this earth. Within that priesthood there are six offices to which a Melchizedek Priesthood holder may be called. Can you name them? They are elder, seventy, high priest, apostle, patriarch, and president of the high priesthood (prophet president of the Church). In the early Church, there was, for a time, a seventh office in the Melchizedek Priesthood which was Assistant President of the Church. A man is ordained to these offices. The calling of an apostle is to hold, in concert with his quorum, the keys of the kingdom and he has an additional, special calling to be a personal and special witness for Jesus Christ.

There are other positions in the priesthood that may be classified as callings within the priesthood. These might include an assignment to be president or group leader of a priesthood quorum, a counselor in a quorum presidency or group leadership, and a member of a special quorum such as the Quorum of Twelve Apostles or the Quorum of the First Presidency. To these assignments a man is set apart and not ordained. Thus, a new apostle is ordained an apostle and then set apart as a member of the Quorum of Twelve Apostles.

It is appropriate to address an apostle or seventy or anyone holding the Melchizedek priesthood as “Elder.” The use of this designation makes it unnecessary to use the more sacred terms such as “Apostle,” “Patriarch,” “High Priest,” etc. The term “President” in addressing a member of the First Presidency is another appropriate term (Joseph Fielding Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:95).

verses 39-44 The duties of the apostle are outlined.

39 And to ordain other elders, priests, teachers, and deacons;

40 And to administer bread and wine—the emblems of the flesh and blood of Christ—

41 And to confirm those who are baptized into the church, by the laying on of hands for the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, according to the scriptures;

verse 41 “baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost” For a discussion of the ordinance of baptism with its three separate parts, see the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31 (In Learning to Love the Book of Mormon) or in Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth in volume 1, chapter 18 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

42 And to teach, expound, exhort, baptize, and watch over the church;

43 And to confirm the church by the laying on of the hands, and the giving of the Holy Ghost;

44 And to take the lead of all meetings.

verse 44 To “take the lead of all meetings” means to preside.

45 The elders are to conduct the meetings as they are led by the Holy Ghost, according to the commandments and revelations of God.

verses 46-59 The duties of those holding the Aaronic Priesthood are outlined. There are four offices in the Aaronic Priesthood. Can you name them? They are deacon, teacher, priest, and bishop. While the calling of bishop is a calling within the lesser priesthood, he is also the presiding high priest of a ward.

46 The priest's duty is to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize, and administer the sacrament, 47 And visit the house of each member, and exhort them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties.

48 And he may also ordain other priests, teachers, and deacons.

49 And he is to take the lead of meetings when there is no elder present;

50 But when there is an elder present, he is only to preach, teach, expound, exhort, and baptize,

51 And visit the house of each member, exhorting them to pray vocally and in secret and attend to all family duties.

52 In all these duties the priest is to assist the elder if occasion requires.

53 The teacher's duty is to watch over the church always, and be with and strengthen them;

54 And see that there is no iniquity in the church, neither hardness with each other, neither lying, backbiting, nor evil speaking;

55 And see that the church meet together often, and also see that all the members do their duty.

56 And he is to take the lead of meetings in the absence of the elder or priest—

57 And is to be assisted always, in all his duties in the church, by the deacons, if occasion requires.

58 But neither teachers nor deacons have authority to baptize, administer the sacrament, or lay on hands;

59 They are, however, to warn, expound, exhort, and teach, and invite all to come unto Christ.

60 Every elder, priest, teacher, or deacon is to be ordained according to the gifts and callings of God unto him; and he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost, which is in the one who ordains him.

verse 60 There are no self-appointments in the priesthood (Hebrews 5:4-6). A man must be called and ordained by one who is properly authorized.

“he is to be ordained by the power of the Holy Ghost” The Holy Ghost is the Communicator whose stewardship is all information and gifts which pass between heaven and earth. The worthy earthly administrators of the Lord's kingdom minister by virtue of special gifts which belong to the priesthood. The Holy Ghost has stewardship over these special gifts. See Priesthood in volume 2, chapter 12 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

verses 61-62, 81 Elders of the Church are commanded to meet together periodically in conferences. In the early days of the Church, the conferences were mainly general priesthood conferences, and the sole participants in these quarterly conferences of the Church were the elders—male members of the Church. As the Church has expanded there has arisen a need for other conferences involving all members of the Church, male and female. These include stake, ward, general, regional, and area conferences. President Harold B. Lee taught that the purpose of conferences in the Church is to convey to the saints those things that the Lord would have them know at the time of the conference (CR, October 1973, 168).

61 The several elders composing this church of Christ are to meet in conference once in three months, or from time to time as said conferences shall direct or appoint; verses 63-64, 82-84 In the early days of the Church, the method employed to certify the membership, priesthood authority, and good standing of individuals was to give them certificates of ordination and membership. A person carried this certificate with him from his old branch and presented it to the presiding elder of the new one. Then, by sustaining vote of the new branch, the priesthood holder would be given a license to function in the new branch. Also membership lists were presented at the various conferences for entrance in the general records of the Church. These usually also included a list of those who had been removed from the Church since the last conference.

62 And said conferences are to do whatever church business is necessary to be done at the time.

63 The elders are to receive their licenses from other elders, by vote of the church to which they belong, or from the conferences.

64 Each priest, teacher, or deacon, who is ordained by a priest, may take a certificate from him at the time, which certificate, when presented to an elder, shall entitle him to a license, which shall authorize him to perform the duties of his calling, or he may receive it from a conference.

verses 65-67 At the time section 20 was received in 1829-30, there were no such offices in the Church as high priest, bishop, or high councilor. As the structure of the Church continued to unfold, section 20 was revised to include the newly revealed offices. Verses 65-67 were added to section 20 at the Prophet's direction in 1835. Verse 65 also reflects the law of common consent (see D&C 26).

65 No person is to be ordained to any office in this church, where there is a regularly organized branch of the same, without the vote of that church;

66 But the presiding elders, traveling bishops, high councilors, high priests, and elders, may have the privilege of ordaining, where there is no branch of the church that a vote may be called.

verses 68-70 Some duties of church members after their baptism are outlined.

68 The duty of the members after they are received by baptism.—The elders or priests are to have a sufficient time to expound all things concerning the church of Christ to their understanding, previous to their partaking of the sacrament and being confirmed by the laying on of the hands of the elders, so that all things may be done in order.

verse 68 In the early days of the Church, the Lord required that baptized members be taught the basics of the gospel and have an understanding before being confirmed and before partaking of the sacrament.

69 And the members shall manifest before the church, and also before the elders, by a godly walk and conversation, that they are worthy of it, that there may be works and faith agreeable to the holy scriptures—walking in holiness before the Lord.

verse 69 Members of the Church are to manifest a “godly walk and conversation.” This means that others should be able to recognize that Mormons are genuine Christians by the way they behave and the way they talk.

verses 70-79 The methods of specific ordinances are outlined: blessing of children (verse 70), baptism (verses 72-74), and sacrament—including the specific sacramental prayers (verses 77, 79).

Verse 76 implies that congregations of the saints knelt during the sacrament prayers. Even from the early days of the Church, the members of the Church did not kneel with those officiating at the sacrament table, except in the smallest congregations, and many times not even then.

70 Every member of the church of Christ having children is to bring them unto the elders before the church, who are to lay their hands upon them in the name of Jesus Christ, and bless them in his name.

verse 70 While fathers holding the Melchizedek Priesthood can bless their children whenever the need arises, here we learn that it is a commandment of the Lord to bless our children in front of the members of the Church. President John Taylor taught that parents who bring their child before the Church to be blessed publicly manifest their faith in God and in his promises. Also the child benefits from the united faith of the assembled saints (Millennial Star, 15 April 1978, 235).

71 No one can be received into the church of Christ unless he has arrived unto the years of accountability before God, and is capable of repentance.

verse 71 Joseph resolves the Church's position on the question of infant baptism. In D&C 68:25-27 the Lord will define the age of accountability as eight years of age. This age was prefigured in the law of Moses by circumcision of male children at eight days of age (see JST Genesis 17:11) and is perhaps also alluded to in 1 Peter 3:20-21.

73 The person who is called of God and has authority from Jesus Christ to baptize, shall go down into the water with the person who has presented himself or herself for baptism, and shall say, calling him or her by name: Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ, I baptize you in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

verse 73 “Having been commissioned of Jesus Christ” It is interesting to note that the phrase “having authority given me of Jesus Christ” (identical to that found in 3 Nephi 11:25) appears in all sources of section 20 before 1835. Joseph Smith altered the phrase to read “having been commissioned of Jesus Christ” in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and covenants, which is, of course the form of the prayer we use today.

74 Then shall he immerse him or her in the water, and come forth again out of the water.

verse 74 The consensus of biblical scholars is that Jewish and Christian baptism in the first century was also by immersion. In fact, the verb baptize in Greek is normally translated as “to immerse” or “to dip.”

75 It is expedient that the church meet together often to partake of bread and wine in the remembrance of the Lord Jesus;

verse 75 Bread, of course, is made from crushed wheat, and wine is made from the crushed grapes. Thus, bread and wine are ideal symbols for the body and blood of Christ whose life was crushed out of him in the press of Gethsemane. His body was bruised and his blood shed for us that we might live.

In ancient Israel, under the Law of Moses, part of the ordinance of sacrifice or blood offerings was the partaking of the sacrificed animal. Bringing an animal to be sacrificed brought to the individual ritual cleansing and spiritual security. They then ate the sacrificed animals. Accordingly, we partake symbolically of the Lamb of God, who was sacrificed to bring us cleansing and salvation. Also, when we partake of the bread and water, in faith and repentance, we receive the same blessings and restore the same covenants as at our baptism. And just as those who are baptized are then given the gift of the Holy Ghost, so those who partake of the sacrament in good faith will then “always have his Spirit to be with them” (verses 77, 79).

76 And the elder or priest shall administer it; and after this manner shall he administer it—he shall kneel with the church and call upon the Father in solemn prayer, saying:

verse 76 “he shall kneel with the church” It appears that in the early days of the Church the entire Church knelt when the sacrament was blessed, just as in the Book of Mormon (see Moroni 4:1-2). This is largely impractical in modern congregations, though we must still have an attitude of humility and bend the “knees” of our hearts as the priest offers the prayers. It should be noted that all such changes in practice have been inspired, with prophetic authorization.

77 O God, the Eternal Father, we ask thee in the name of thy Son, Jesus Christ, to bless and sanctify this bread to the souls of all those who partake of it, that they may eat in remembrance of the body of thy Son, and witness unto thee, O God, the Eternal Father, that they are willing to take upon them the name of thy Son, and always remember him and keep his commandments which he has given them; that they may always have his Spirit to be with them. Amen.

78 The manner of administering the wine—he shall take the cup also, and say:

79 O God, the Eternal Father, we ask thee in the name of thy Son, Jesus Christ, to bless and sanctify this wine to the souls of all those who drink of it, that they may do it in remembrance of the blood of thy Son, which was shed for them; that they may witness unto thee, O God, the Eternal Father, that they do always remember him, that they may have his Spirit to be with them. Amen.

80 Any member of the church of Christ transgressing, or being overtaken in a fault, shall be dealt with as the scriptures direct.

verses 81-84 See the commentary for verses 61-64.

81 It shall be the duty of the several churches, composing the church of Christ, to send one or more of their teachers to attend the several conferences held by the elders of the church, verse 81 The expression “several churches” means several congregations. Today we would say several wards.

82 With a list of the names of the several members uniting themselves with the church since the last conference; or send by the hand of some priest; so that a regular list of all the names of the whole church may be kept in a book by one of the elders, whomsoever the other elders shall appoint from time to time;

83 And also, if any have been expelled from the church, so that their names may be blotted out of the general church record of names.

verse 83 The Lord from the very beginning of the Church has allowed for the excommunication of those who violate their covenants and refuse to repent. When an excommunication takes place, the name of the excommunicated person is removed from the records of the Church. By this action they are mercifully released from covenants they will not keep, and they are returned to “the world.”

84 All members removing from the church where they reside, if going to a church where they are not known, may take a letter certifying that they are regular members and in good standing, which certificate may be signed by any elder or priest if the member receiving the letter is personally acquainted with the elder or priest, or it may be signed by the teachers or deacons of the church.

The Lord had commanded that the Church be organized on Tuesday, April 6, 1830, and the Church of Christ was accordingly organized, according to the state law of New York, at the Whitmer home in Fayette, New York. The six official organizers, for legal purposes, were Joseph Smith, Jr., Oliver Cowdery, Hyrum Smith, Peter Whitmer, Jr., Samuel H. Smith, and David Whitmer. Later that day the Lord gave additional instructions to the infant Church [D&C 21 - The Prophet Is the Mouthpiece of God]. On the following Sunday, April 11, 1830, Oliver Cowdery preached the first sermon.

Later in April, someone applied for membership in the Church who had already been baptized by immersion in the Baptist Church. They did not want to be rebaptized. The Lord made it clear by revelation that even those who had been previously baptized into other churches needed to be baptized again by proper authority [D&C 22 - Rebaptism]. He also gave instructions to specific members of the Church [D&C 23 - Counsel to Five Individuals].

Section 21 The Prophet Is the Mouthpiece of God

Section 21 consists of various instructions given to the nascent Church on the day the Church was organized at the Peter Whitmer farm in Fayette, New York.

The Church of Jesus Christ had been “in the wilderness” (Revelation 2:14) for over seventeen hundred years. On Tuesday, April 6, 1830, in Fayette, New York, a small group of people convened in the home of Peter Whitmer, Sr. No heads of state or prominent religious leaders attended. No newspapers reported what happened there. But in heaven the angels rejoiced.

The meeting was opened by solemn prayer. Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were sustained as leaders in the kingdom of God and were given unanimous approval to organize the Church of Christ. The prophet Joseph Smith recorded the events that followed:

I then laid my hands upon Oliver Cowdery, and ordained him an elder of the Church Christ; after which he ordained me to the office of elder of said Church. [Although they had been ordained to the Melchizedek priesthood earlier, they were told to defer ordaining each other to the office of elder until the Church was organized (see HC, 1:61.) We then took bread, blessed it, and brake it with them; also wine, blessed it, and drank it with them. We then laid our hands on each individual member of the Church present, that they might receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and be confirmed members of the Church of Christ. The Holy Ghost was poured out upon us to a very great degree—some prophesied, whilst we all praised the Lord, and rejoiced exceedingly. Whilst yet together, I received the following commandment [section 21]. (HC, 1:77-78.)

Joseph Knight Sr. also described this same meeting:

Now in the spring of 1830, I went with my team and took Joseph out to Manchester to his father. When we were on our way he told me that there must be a Church formed, but did not tell when. . . .

On the Sixth day of April 1830, he began the Church with six members and received the following revelation [section 21]. They all kneeled down and prayed, and Joseph gave them instructions how to build up the Church and exhorted them to be faithful in all things, for this is the work of God (Jessee, “Joseph Knight’s Recollection,” 36-39; spelling, punctuation, and capitalization standardized.)

It should be noted that there were more than six individuals present at this meeting. On April 6, 1830, there were believers in New York State—some of them already baptized but not confirmed—in Manchester/Palmyra, mainly Smiths; Fayette, mainly Whitmers; and Colesville, mainly Knights. Six of these signed the certificate of incorporation as responsible parties on April 6 to satisfy New York state law. More than twenty individuals were actually present at the organization meeting, however, with some of these others also receiving confirmation into the Church. Thus, the number six does not represent the actual number of members confirmed on that day, but rather the number of members who signed the document as legal representatives of the Church to the state of New York.

1 Behold, there shall be a record kept among you; and in it thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church through the will of God the Father, and the grace of your Lord Jesus Christ, verse 1 “there shall be a record kept among you” Joseph was commanded on the day the Church was organized to keep a record. This commandment likely provided the impetus to keep a record of his revelations and to regularly record the events which would later comprise Joseph Smith’s History of the Church.

“thou shalt be called a seer, a translator, a prophet, an apostle of Jesus Christ, an elder of the church” Joseph is named by the Lord: Seer, Translator, Prophet, Apostle, and Elder. These are the titles for what was then the First Elder of the Church. They are now applied to the President of the Church.

Let us define these terms:

Seer. Elder John A. Widtsoe defined a seer as “one who sees with spiritual eyes. He perceives the meaning of that which seems obscure to others; therefore he is an interpreter and clarifier of eternal truth. He foresees the future from the past and the present. This he does by the power of the Lord operating through him directly, or indirectly with the aid of divine instruments such as the Urim and Thummim. In short, he is one who sees, who walks in the Lord’s light with open eyes (Mosiah 8:15-17)” (Evidences and Reconciliations, 1:205-6; see also Moses 6:36). If reality were compared by analogy to visible light, then a seer perceives the visible spectrum like the rest of us, but he also sees the infra-red and the ultra-violet bands, those spiritual wavelengths the rest of us cannot see.

Translator. The title “translator” may refer to one who has received two blessings through the Spirit of God:

1. The power to convert the written or spoken word from one language into another (see D&C 20:8).

2. The power to give a clearer meaning to any given language

Through the gift of translation a translator does not merely convey, in the language of the reader, the words that were recorded by the writer but by revelation preserves for the reader the thoughts or intentions of the original writer. The translator does not translate intellectually, as scholars do, but by the gift and power of God. Thus, Joseph Smith not only “translated” the Book of Mormon record from reformed Egyptian to English, but he also “translated” the King James English into clearer, more understandable English—the Joseph Smith Translation.

Prophet. According to Elder Widtsoe:

A prophet is a teacher. That is the essential meaning of the word. He teaches the body of truth, the gospel, revealed by the Lord to man; and under inspiration explains it to the understanding of the people. He is an expounder of truth. Moreover, he shows that the way to human happiness is through obedience to God's law. He calls to repentance those who wander away from the truth. He becomes a warrior for the consummation of the Lord's purposes with respect to the human family. The purpose of his life is to uphold the Lord's plan of salvation. All this he does by close communion with the Lord, until he is "full of power by the Spirit of the Lord."

In the course of time the word "prophet" has come to mean, perhaps chiefly, a man who receives revelations and directions from the Lord. The principal business of a prophet has mistakenly been thought to foretell coming events, to utter prophecies, which is only one of the several prophetic functions" (Evidences and Reconciliations, 1:204-5).

A prophet is a teacher of known truth. A seer is a perceiver of hidden truth. A revelator is a bearer of new truth. In the widest sense, the one most commonly used, the title prophet includes the other titles and makes of the prophet a teacher, a seer, and a revelator.

Apostle. An apostle is a special witness of Jesus Christ to all the world (see D&C 107:23). The prophet Joseph Smith explained the important calling of an apostle by asking a question and then giving the answer:

What importance is there attached to the calling of these twelve apostles, different from the other callings or officers of the Church? . . .

They are the twelve apostles, who are called to the office of the Traveling High Council, who are to preside over the churches of the saints, among the Gentiles, where there is a presidency established; and they are to travel and preach among the Gentiles, until the Lord shall command them to go to the Jews. They are to hold the keys of this ministry, to unlock the door of the kingdom of heaven unto all nations, and to preach the gospel to every creature. This is the power, authority, and virtue of their apostleship (HC, 2:200).

Elder. The name of an office in the Melchizedek priesthood, elder is also the general title used to address one who bears this higher priesthood. Elder Bruce R. McConkie added that an elder is a representative of the Lord: "What is an elder? An elder is a minister of the Lord Jesus Christ. He holds the holy Melchizedek priesthood. He is commissioned to stand in the place and stead of his Master—who is the Chief Elder—in ministering to his fellow men. He is the Lord's agent. His appointment is to preach the gospel and perfect the saints" ("Only an Elder," Ensign, June 1975, 66).

2 Being inspired of the Holy Ghost to lay the foundation thereof, and to build it up unto the most holy faith.

verse 2 “to lay the foundation thereof” To lay the foundation of the Church. Most all of the small group gathered on April 6, 1830 could not really have understood the great movement that was beginning on that date. The true Church of Jesus Christ, the stone “cut out of the mountain without hands” (D&C 65:2), which was ultimately to fill the whole earth, was beginning to roll forth (see Daniel 2:44-45).

“to build it up unto the most holy faith” The word “faith” here refers to the doctrines and ordinances that characterize and are available in the Lord’s Church. “The most holy faith” refers to the unprecedented fulness of this final dispensation restoration of the gospel.

3 Which church was organized and established in the year of your Lord eighteen hundred and thirty, in the fourth month, and on the sixth day of the month which is called April.

verse 3 Just as they have with D&C 20:1, some have interpreted this verse to mean that the Savior was born on April 6, and that the Church was also organized on the 1830th anniversary of his birth (see the commentary for D&C 20:1).

4 Wherefore, meaning the church, thou shalt give heed unto all his words and commandments which he shall give unto you as he receiveth them, walking in all holiness before me;

verse 4 “meaning the church” The Lord makes it clear that “thou” in this verse refers to the members of this nascent Church.

The antecedent of the phrase “walking in all holiness before me” is you (the members of the Church) and not he (Joseph). This verse does not mean to say that the Church is to obey Joseph only when, in their opinion, Joseph is walking in holiness.

5 For his word ye shall receive, as if from mine own mouth, in all patience and faith.

verse 5 This is perhaps the most radical verse in this revelation, because it lays out what it truly means to be founded on the principle of living revelation. It is especially radical since the mind set of the Christian churches of Joseph’s day was that the heavens were silent—the day of revelation and prophets was past. This verse makes it clear that when the Prophet speaks, it is as though the Lord had said it himself. The Prophet is literally the Lord’s mouthpiece.

The Prophet, as the Lord’s mouthpiece, will never be permitted to lead the Church astray. This important principle has been taught by more than one prophet in this dispensation. For example:

I say to Israel, the Lord will never permit me or any other man who stands as President of this Church to lead you astray. It is not in the program. It is not in the mind of God. If I were to attempt that, the Lord would remove me out of my place, and so he will any other man who attempts to lead the children of men astray from the oracles of God and from their duty. God bless you. Amen (Wilford Woodruff, Discourses of Wilford Woodruff, 212-13).

The ultimate safety and security that we have available to us on this earth is to do exactly what the prophet says to do. We may not always like what he says, and his counsel may interfere with our social life or contradict our political views. However, if we obey in patience and faith, we will emerge victorious from this mortal phase of our existence and inherit eternal life.

6 For by doing these things the gates of hell shall not prevail against you; yea, and the Lord God will disperse the powers of darkness from before you, and cause the heavens to shake for your good, and his name's glory.

verse 6 “the gates of hell shall not prevail against you” Hell is the part of the spirit world we call prison. To “prevail” is to win a contest or struggle. The metaphor here is of the righteous wrestling with the power of hell and trying not to be pulled in through its gates (or “jaws” in D&C 122:7). Through the atonement of Christ, the faithful will “win” their struggle with hell and not be pulled in to suffer inside its gates under Satan’s power. Elder Bruce R. McConkie gave the following explanation of the concept of the gates of hell: “The gates of hell are the entrances to the benighted realms of the damned [in the spirit world] where the wicked go to await the day when they shall come forth in the resurrection of damnation. Those beckoning gates prevail against all who pass through them. But those who obey the laws and ordinances of the gospel have the promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against them” (Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 1:388-89).

On the other hand, if hell here is to be understood as a larger term for the entire spirit world, then the promise is that we will not be captives there permanently. Ultimately, the atonement of Christ will prevail over the gates of the spirit world, and all who are held captive there will be released through redemption in Christ and the power of the resurrection.

7 For thus saith the Lord God: Him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good, and his diligence I know, and his prayers I have heard.

verse 7 “to move the cause of Zion in mighty power for good” This means to work to establish a Zion place and a Zion people. Joseph Smith attempted to establish both a Zion place and a Zion people during his lifetime.

8 Yea, his weeping for Zion I have seen, and I will cause that he shall mourn for her no longer; for his days of rejoicing are come unto the remission of his sins, and the manifestations of my blessings upon his works.

verse 8 Joseph Smith, even at this early stage in the history of the Church, had plead for the Lord's help in establishing Zion. Joseph's sins had been remitted by the Lord, and the Lord stood ready to bless him in this work as first Elder and prophet.

9 For, behold, I will bless all those who labor in my vineyard with a mighty blessing, and they shall believe on his words, which are given him through me by the Comforter, which manifesteth that Jesus was crucified by sinful men for the sins of the world, yea, for the remission of sins unto the contrite heart.

verse 9 "by the Comforter" The Comforter is the Holy Ghost functioning in his role to bring peace, comfort, and security to those who are keeping their gospel covenants. He assures the righteous that they are right with God, that they are worthy of a celestial reward.

10 Wherefore it behooveth me that he should be ordained by you, Oliver Cowdery mine apostle; verse 10 Both Joseph and Oliver already held the Melchizedek Priesthood and the keys of apostleship. These were bestowed upon them by ordination under the hands of Peter, James, and John. In this verse, the Lord refers to a specific office, first elder, in the Church which did not even exist before April 6, 1830. Joseph and Oliver already had the authority to ordain anyone to any office in the Church, but only on this occasion did the Church actually come into existence. Everyone who holds a priesthood office in the Church must be ordained to that office. Joseph Smith was no exception, and so he was ordained to his church office by Oliver Cowdery.

11 This being an ordinance unto you, that you are an elder under his hand, he being the first unto you, that you might be an elder unto this church of Christ, bearing my name—verse 11 "This being an ordinance unto you" This phrase refers to the instructions that follow. The term "ordinance" here is used to mean a rule or commandment, as in a city or county ordinance.

"he being the first unto you" The Lord explains the priesthood line of authority and relative stewardships of Joseph and Oliver in clear and unmistakable terms: Joseph had the priority, and Oliver was his subordinate. This is something Oliver later had trouble accepting (see D&C 28:3, 5-7).

12 And the first preacher of this church unto the church, and before the world, yea, before the Gentiles; yea, and thus saith the Lord God, lo, lo! to the Jews also. Amen.

verse 12 In this verse, "first" refers to Oliver Cowdery. As stated previously, Oliver Cowdery will deliver the Church's first sermon on Sunday, April 11, 1830.

Several times in the Doctrine and Covenants the Lamanites are termed “Jews.” In D&C 19:27 the Lamanites are called a “remnant of the Jews.” In D&C 57:4 the Indian frontier was called the line running directly between “Jew” and Gentile. Since Oliver Cowdery is called in this verse to be the first preacher to the Jews, and since he will be called in section 28 to be the first missionary to the Indians (“Lamanites”), it is likely that “Jew” in this verse really means American Indian.

Section 22 Rebaptism

The Church was organized on Tuesday, April 6, 1830. Shortly thereafter, some sincere investigators to the Church approached Joseph Smith in his family's home in Manchester. They believed the Book of Mormon was true, and they wanted to become members of the Church. Some of these converts had belonged previously to churches that believed in baptism by immersion. They themselves believed that immersion was the proper mode of baptism, and they had already been baptized in this manner. After joining the Church of Christ, a group of ex-Baptists wondered why it was necessary for them to be baptized again. Joseph inquired of the Lord on their behalf and section 22 was received.

In section 22 the Lord explains that all old covenants are done away, and that all must be baptized again into the new and everlasting covenant by someone holding proper priesthood authority.

Section 22 appeared combined with section 21 in The Evening and Morning Star in June 1832 under the title "Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ." In all other publications of sections 20, 21, and 22, only section 20 was labeled the "Articles and Covenants of the Church of Christ."

William E. McLellin's journal contains a very early copy of section 22 with the following appended: "April 16th 1830 Joseph Smith" (Shipps and Welch, Journals of William E. McLellin, 236). This would put the reception of this revelation only ten days after the organization of the Church.

1 Behold, I say unto you that all old covenants have I caused to be done away in this thing; and this is a new and an everlasting covenant, even that which was from the beginning.

verse 1 "all old covenants have I caused to be done away" "Old covenants" here are apostate covenants entered into without proper priesthood authority. Many Christians have little or no understanding of priesthood authority. Accordingly, because little or no importance is placed on priesthood, in their view almost anyone may baptize, and baptisms performed in one church are quite generally accepted in another. This was the hope of those who came to Joseph in April 1830, desiring to unite with the Church by virtue of their previous baptisms. Many sincere persons would seek and have sought to come to God and even submit to ordinances or make covenants to serve him while they are members of other faiths. These ordinances and covenants, though they may be sincerely entered into, and though God may be pleased with the righteous desires of these individuals and bless them accordingly, are still of human origin. They are merely human attempts to reach God, and all such attempts are superseded by the covenant that has its origin in God and is entered into by authority of his priesthood.

“this is a new and an everlasting covenant” The term “new and everlasting covenant” is used frequently throughout the Doctrine and Covenants. President Joseph Fielding Smith gave the following definition of it:

The new and everlasting covenant is the fulness of the gospel. It is composed of “All covenants, contracts, bonds, obligations, oaths, vows, performances, connections, associations, or expectations” that are sealed upon members of the Church by the Holy Spirit of promise, or the Holy Ghost, by the authority of the president of the Church who holds the keys. The president of the Church holds the keys of the Melchizedek priesthood. He delegates authority to others and authorizes them to perform the sacred ordinances of the priesthood.

Marriage for eternity is a new and everlasting covenant. Baptism is also a new and everlasting covenant, and likewise ordination to the priesthood, and every other covenant is everlasting and a part of the new and everlasting covenant which embraces all things (Answers to Gospel Questions, 1:65).

“that which was from the beginning” Keep in mind that this section was received in answer to Joseph’s question which centered on the ordinance of baptism. How could something which was “from the beginning” be “a new and everlasting covenant?” Baptism by proper authority in this dispensation is a new covenant when compared to the apostate forms of baptism which were extant in 1830, but it is the same covenant given to Adam in the beginning. Baptisms performed by ministers without the priesthood are merely dead works—purely human attempts to reach God, and of no avail. The issue is not sincerity but authority. All who enter his Kingdom must enter through the gate of baptism by one having the proper authority, even Jesus Christ himself required baptism.

2 Wherefore, although a man should be baptized an hundred times it availeth him nothing, for you cannot enter in at the strait gate by the law of Moses, neither by your dead works.

verse 2 “you cannot enter in at the strait gate” See the supplemental article, Strait and Straight in the Book of Mormon in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

The law of Moses was given to Israel in hopes of lifting them from a telestial to a terrestrial level. But the law of Moses, by itself, can save no one in the celestial heaven. The “strait” or narrow gate leads to the celestial kingdom. This requires the “new and everlasting covenant”—the gospel of Jesus Christ with its priesthood authority. Just as the law of Moses, with its emphasis on works, cannot save any man, neither can religion, even Christian religion, that originates with man and not with God. Without divine priesthood authorization and power, these religions represent human attempts to find God—human works rather than Christ’s saving work done in our behalf. They are called “dead works” because without God’s priesthood, they cannot bestow eternal life but are merely human efforts to manipulate God.

3 For it is because of your dead works that I have caused this last covenant and this church to be built up unto me, even as in days of old.

verse 3 Because the Christian world had degenerated into a state of apostasy and in 1830 consisted of only human attempts to imitate the covenants and ordinances of Christ’s true gospel, the Lord caused this “last covenant”—the new and everlasting covenant—to be restored and his Church to be established, as it had been in times past.

4 Wherefore, enter ye in at the gate, as I have commanded, and seek not to counsel your God. Amen.

verse 4 “enter ye in at the gate” Be baptized.

“seek not to counsel your God” According to President Marion G. Romney we “counsel” God when we “disregard his counsel, either knowingly or unknowingly, and in place thereof substitute our own counsel or the persuasions of men” (Ensign, August 1985, 2).

In some of the more democratic Christian denominations it is acceptable for the membership to instruct the leaders by vote or otherwise. But in the true Church of Jesus Christ, with continuing revelation and the priesthood line of authority, and where the words of the prophet are to be received as if from God’s own mouth (D&C 1:38), to counsel our leaders uninvited is to seek to “counsel our God.”

Character Vignette

Oliver Cowdery

Oliver was about a year younger than the Prophet Joseph. He was a small man, being about 5 feet 5 inches tall and of a slight build. He married Elizabeth Whitmer, a daughter of Peter Whitmer, Sr. His role in the early Church was obviously extraordinary. He was a key figure many of the most important founding experiences of the early Church, including the translation and printing of the Book of Mormon, the restoration of the Aaronic and Melchizedek priesthoods, the conversion of Sidney Rigdon, and the vision of the Savior and the Old Testament prophets in the Kirtland Temple. As one of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon, he had participated in the selection of the first quorum of twelve apostles in 1835.

Probably no one gives such a brutally candid view of an executive or author as does a secretary or scribe. That is the view Oliver had of the prophet Joseph, and Joseph passed this severe test. Five years after the translation of the Book of Mormon, Oliver’s memory of this time was still vivid: “These were days never to be forgotten—to sit under the sound of a voice dictated by the inspiration of heaven, awakened the utmost gratitude of this bosom! Day after day I continued, uninterrupted, to write from his mouth, as he translated, with the Urim and Thummim, or, as the Nephites would have said, ‘interpreters,’ the history, or record called ‘The Book of Mormon’” (Latter-day Saints’ Messenger and Advocate, 1[1834]:14). It should be noted, parenthetically, that both the two-lens device Joseph found buried with the plates in September 1827 and Joseph’s seerstone were both referred to at times as the Urim and Thummim. It seems likely that the device Joseph employed most commonly during the translation of the Book of Mormon with Oliver in 1829 was the seerstone, rather than the ancient Urim and Thummim.

The pinnacle of his church career was in Kirtland, Ohio, in 1836, when he was a trusted “assistant president” to Joseph Smith and was involved on many practical fronts in the expanding Church.

He was excommunicated on April 12, 1838. He had been personally hurt in his relationship with Joseph Smith, and he had allied himself with his Whitmer relatives in serious differences with the Church as it was gathering in the area of Far West Missouri. The Whitmers were in local leadership and also had become involved in land promotion which might be considered either self-serving private enterprise or—as it was interpreted by Missouri members—the exploitation of the saints. Six of the nine charges against him involved his economic affairs and his part in filing collection suits against members of the Church. He wrote a spirited letter of resignation from the Church in which he defined his conflicts with the leaders of the Church—“the outward government of this Church” (HC, 3:18). He never repudiated his basic beliefs.

Following his excommunication, he experimented with living in Missouri briefly but then moved back to Kirtland Ohio where he taught school to support himself while he was studying law. From 1840 to 1847 he practiced law in Tiffin, Ohio. While in Tiffin he also served as a newspaper columnist and a member of the county Board of School Examiners. He also became active in the Democratic Party and in civil government affairs.

He was described by his non Mormon associates as gentlemanly, polite, soft spoken, modest in his habits, polite, dignified, courteous, kind and friendly, never spoke ill of anyone, and never complained. One of his colleagues said of him, “There was a certain degree of sadness that seemed to pervade his whole being” (Lang, History of Seneca County, 365).

He was also regarded as a first-class attorney. A Colleague said of him, “His addresses to the court and jury were characterized by a high order of oratory, with brilliant and forensic force” (Ibid.).

The cessation of Oliver’s activity in the Church meant a suspension of his role as Book of Mormon witness. Evidently it did not violate his conscience to be an inactive witness, but he would not accept the role of a denying witness in a direct confrontation where silence would strongly imply a denial. One courtroom incident has prompted much controversy as to the accuracy of the reporting of the incident. Probably the most reliable report of the incident was written by George Q. Cannon:

When I was a boy I heard it stated concerning Oliver Cowdery, that after he left the Church he practiced law, and upon one occasion, in a court in Ohio, the opposing counsel thought he would say something that would overwhelm Oliver Cowdery, and in reply to him in his argument he alluded to him as the man that had testified and had written that he had beheld an angel of God, and that angel had shown unto him the plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated. He supposed, of course, that it would cover him with confusion, because Oliver Cowdery then [at that time] made no profession of being a “Mormon,” or a Latter-day Saint; but instead of being affected by it in this manner, he arose in the court, and in his reply stated that, whatever his faults and weaknesses might be, the testimony which he had written, and which he had given to the world, was literally true (JD, 22:254).

In 1847 he moved briefly to Elkhorn, Wisconsin and practiced law with his brother Lyman. By this time he had significant chronic health problems. Then in October 1848 he traveled to Council Bluffs or Kaneshville, Iowa, the “eastern” headquarters of the Church and humbly asked for rebaptism. Reuben Miller recorded Oliver’s testimony at the time in his journal: “I wrote with my own pen the entire Book of Mormon (save a few pages) as it fell from the lips of the Prophet, as he translated it by the gift and power of God, by means of the Urim and Thummim, or as it is called by that book, Holy Interpreters. I beheld with my eyes, and handled with my hands, the gold plates from which it was translated. I also beheld the Interpreters. That book is true” (Journal of Reuben Miller, October 21, 1848. For an insight into Miller’s competence as a diarist, see Richard L. Anderson, “Reuben Miller, Recorder of Oliver Cowdery’s Reaffirmations,” BYU Studies 8 [1968]: 277-93).

Because of ill health and depleted finances, he was unable to migrate to Utah. Hence, he moved to Richmond, Missouri, to be near his wife’s relatives. He died March 3, 1850, only sixteen months following his reconciliation at Kaneshville, probably of tuberculosis.

Of all of the people in his life, the person with the most intimate knowledge of all his actions and attitudes was his wife, Elizabeth Whitmer Cowdery. Thirty-seven years after her husband’s death she wrote in a letter to her brother David Whitmer: “From the hour when the glorious vision of the Holy Messenger revealed to mortal eyes the hidden prophecies which God had promised his faithful followers should come forth in due time, until the moment when he passed away from earth, he always, without one doubt or shadow of turning, affirmed the divinity and truth of the Book of Mormon” (Letter of Elizabeth Cowdery to David Whitmer, March 8, 1887).

Section 23 Counsel to Five Individuals

Shortly after the Church was organized on April 6, Joseph returned to his family's home in Manchester. There, five persons, of whom four had just been baptized, sought to know the will of the Lord and their respective duties in the Church. Joseph inquired of the Lord and received section 23. The five were: Oliver Cowdery, Hyrum Smith, Samuel Smith, Joseph Smith, Sr., and Joseph Knight Sr. All of these brethren, except Joseph Knight, had been baptized into the Church. In the 1833 Book of Commandments these instructions were separated into five different chapters, but in the first edition of the Doctrine and Covenants published in 1835, they were combined into this one section.

1 Behold, I speak unto you, Oliver, a few words. Behold, thou art blessed, and art under no condemnation. But beware of pride, lest thou shouldst enter into temptation.

verse 1 “thou art under no condemnation” This statement is made to four of the five men. It likely implies that they are currently on a favorable path that will lead to their exaltation. Joseph Knight is given no such assurance, perhaps because he had not yet submitted to covenant of baptism.

“beware of pride” At the time of this revelation, Oliver Cowdery was doing well spiritually, but this warning sounds an ominous note of what is to come. In a day of great tribulation for the Church in Kirtland, Oliver will fail to humble himself and lose his membership in the Church.

2 Make known thy calling unto the church, and also before the world, and thy heart shall be opened to preach the truth from henceforth and forever. Amen.

verse 2 “Make known thy calling unto the church” This phrase suggests the idea of: “Magnify thy calling.”

3 Behold, I speak unto you, Hyrum, a few words; for thou also art under no condemnation, and thy heart is opened, and thy tongue loosed; and thy calling is to exhortation, and to strengthen the church continually. Wherefore thy duty is unto the church forever, and this because of thy family. Amen.

verse 3 In a previous section (D&C 11:21), Hyrum was promised that if he would seek to obtain the word of God, then his tongue would be “loosed.” Note that in verse 3 we now learn that his tongue is loosed, and he is called to help strengthen the Church, a calling which he will faithfully do for the rest of his life.

“Wherefore thy duty is unto the church forever, and this because of thy family” It is notable that Hyrum's line remained faithful in the Church—the patriarchal line. Joseph's line did not. The office of Patriarch was Hyrum's duty and that of his family to whom it would be passed along.

4 Behold, I speak a few words unto you, Samuel; for thou also art under no condemnation, and thy calling is to exhortation, and to strengthen the church; and thou art not as yet called to preach before the world. Amen.

verse 4 Samuel Smith was the third person baptized in this dispensation. He was also one of the first to be ordained to the office of elder.

“and thou art not as yet called to preach before the world” Samuel, at age 22, was not yet called to preach, but it was not long after this revelation that he was sent forth as the first missionary of this last dispensation. As a missionary he was remarkably successful. One of the under-appreciated founding members of the Church, Samuel was one of the eight witnesses to the Book of Mormon. He is generally credited with being the first full-time traveling missionary in this dispensation, serving at least five missions in the succeeding fourteen years. He helped build the Nauvoo Temple, served as an alderman in Nauvoo, served as bishop of the Nauvoo Ward, was a member of the Nauvoo Legion, and served in the Presiding Bishopric of the Church. Faithful to the end, Samuel died on July 30, 1844, one month after his brothers were martyred on June 27.

5 Behold, I speak a few words unto you, Joseph; for thou also art under no condemnation, and thy calling also is to exhortation, and to strengthen the church; and this is thy duty from henceforth and forever. Amen.

“thy duty from henceforth and forever” Joseph Smith, Sr. was the first patriarch of the Church in this dispensation. When he was ordained to that calling, he was blessed that this calling was to come upon his head “and his seed after him, to the uttermost” (Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 3:164).

6 Behold, I manifest unto you, Joseph Knight, by these words, that you must take up your cross, in the which you must pray vocally before the world as well as in secret, and in your family, and among your friends, and in all places.

verse 6 “you must take up your cross” What does it mean to “take up your cross”? This phrase is found in the New Testament (Matthew 16:25-26) and in modern scripture (D&C 23:6; 56:2; 112:14). When an individual “takes up his cross” he denies his natural-man self, particularly in times of suffering and adversity—however painful and difficult that may be. He attempts to eschew all worldly inclinations and gives heed to the Lord's counsel.

Perhaps he was one of those painfully shy individuals for whom humbling themselves and taking up their cross means, despite their fear, to reveal and share their inner feelings and their faith in God by praying, testifying, or declaring his word publicly before the world. Newel Knight, the son of Joseph Knight, also found it difficult to pray in public. There are many in the Church for whom praying or speaking in front of the congregation is a heavy cross to bear.

verses 6-7 “it is your duty to unite with the true church” Joseph Knight was a “Universalist”—one who believed that all religions were correct and that there was not just one true church. Here the Lord commands him to commit himself to the Church of Christ and be baptized. Though a believer and a staunch supporter of the restoration, he was fairly liberal in his theology and apparently did not yet grasp the importance of baptism. In obedience to this direct command, he was baptized in June 1830.

Brief Historical Setting

In the summer of 1830, Joseph and Emma still lived in the cabin in Harmony, Pennsylvania. Joseph, however, shuttled among the various clusters of believers who formed the nucleus of the Church: the Smiths in Manchester, the Whitmers in Fayette, and Joseph Knight and his son Newel and their families in Colesville, New York. Most of the early converts were other family members and friends of these families.

The first quarterly conference of the Church was held on June 9, 1830. Following the conference Joseph returned to his own home in Harmony. A short time later, together with his wife Emma, Oliver Cowdery, John Whitmer, and David Whitmer, he again visited Colesville, New York, about twenty miles north of Harmony, to see the Joseph and Newel Knight families and to arrange for the baptism of a number of believers in the Colesville area.

The formal organization of the Church seemed to inflame persecution of the fledgling Church and its Prophet. In June 1830 Joseph was arrested and harassed when he traveled to Colesville to baptize new converts. In July the Lord comforted Joseph with a revelation [D&C 24 - Be Patient in Persecution]. Emma also had suffered the hardships of persecution and was similarly favored of the Lord [D&C 25 - An Elect Lady—Emma Smith].

Also in July 1830, the Lord revealed an important principle of church government [D&C 26 - Common Consent].

Section 24 Be Patient in Persecution

By June 1830 a number of Knight family members in Colesville, New York, were ready to join the Church. Along with the growing interest in the Church shown by the Knight family, there was also found a growing animosity among some of their neighbors in Colesville, largely due to the efforts of local ministers.

In late June Joseph, Emma, Oliver, and David and John Whitmer traveled to Colesville to baptize the new converts. A small stream was dammed up to make a pond for baptisms. Some antagonistic Colesville residents tore down the dam, and it had to be rebuilt. Finally the baptism was held, and Joseph Knight, his wife Polly, Newel Knight's wife Sally, several other members of the Knight family, and Emma Smith were all baptized.

Enraged at the proceedings, a mob of about fifty people gathered and surrounded the home of Joseph Knight, Sr., where the Prophet Joseph had a confrontation with them. Before the newly baptized members could be confirmed, Joseph was arrested at the Newel Knight home and taken into custody on trumped-up charges of "disturbing the peace." After a grueling day in court, he was acquitted but then immediately arrested again by a constable from another county. Eventually he was cleared of all charges, and he returned to Harmony.

Joseph and Oliver tried to steal back to Colesville a few days later to complete the confirmations, but their enemies were alert. They had no sooner arrived at the Knights' when a mob began to gather, and Joseph and Oliver had to flee immediately. They were forced to travel all night, with their enemies in hot pursuit, to reach Harmony.

During this period of time, July 1830, while Joseph was at his farm in Harmony, he received the "vision of Moses" now found in the Pearl of Great Price (see Moses 1). He also received sections 24 through 26 of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Section 24 was given to Joseph and Oliver in July 1830 to strengthen and encourage them after the persecution they had endured.

D&C 24 Be patient in persecution

D&C 24:8 Be patient in afflictions, for thou shalt have many.

D&C 24:12 At all times and in all places he shall open his mouth . . . and I will give unto him strength such as is not known among men.

1 Behold, thou wast called and chosen to write the Book of Mormon, and to my ministry; and I have lifted thee up out of thine afflictions, and have counseled thee, that thou hast been delivered from all thine enemies, and thou hast been delivered from the powers of Satan and from darkness!

verse 1 “thou hast been delivered from all thine enemies, and thou hast been delivered from the powers of Satan and from darkness” Certainly the Lord was not blessing Joseph here with a temporal blessing that would guarantee him freedom from any further persecution, as we know Joseph would yet experience much persecution. It is true that none of the plots or stratagems against Joseph succeeded in stopping his work, so doubtless the Lord’s protective hand was over Joseph.

It seems more likely that this is a spiritual blessing that seems to seal him up to eternal life.

2 Nevertheless, thou art not excusable in thy transgressions; nevertheless, go thy way and sin no more.

verse 2 “thou art not excusable in thy transgressions” It is interesting to note that Joseph was honest in recording for posterity even those portions of his revelations that reflect badly on him even though he could easily have edited them out. Joseph was not perfect, but he was nevertheless eminently worthy to translate the Book of Mormon, receive the keys of the kingdom, restore the gospel, and build up the kingdom of God.

verses 3-4, 7, 9 Apparently it was difficult for Joseph himself (and the rest of the Church for that matter) to understand Joseph’s role as full-time prophet and leader of the Church. The Lord here commands him to quit trying to work the land as a means of support and rely instead on the church members for his support. He is called to full-time labor in the kingdom. The Lord even says he will not bless Joseph in temporal labors since they are not his calling. “The laborer in Zion shall labor for Zion; for if they labor for money they shall perish” (2 Nephi 26:31).

The obligation of the saints was to support him in this, temporally as well as spiritually, with material sacrifice as well as with prayer. If they keep this commandment they will be blessed. The situation is the same today. There are those who labor full time for the kingdom, and it is necessary for them to be supported by the kingdom. Today these include many of the general authorities and, to some extent, mission and temple presidents, and others. This is not a form of divine extortion. If the kingdom is to be built, there will be those who must work full time in the kingdom.

3 Magnify thine office; and after thou hast sowed thy fields and secured them, go speedily unto the church which is in Colesville, Fayette, and Manchester, and they shall support thee; and I will bless them both spiritually and temporally;

verse 3 “Magnify thine office” To magnify is to “make it great” or make it greatly effective, so that no one in our stewardship can shift responsibility for their sins from their own choices to our negligence. Conversely, failing to magnify our calling is to neglect our duty, so that blame for the sins of others is due in part to our own negligence (see Jacob 1:19). To magnify a calling or an office in the Church is to accept pro-actively all of the responsibilities of the calling and to perform the duties of the calling enthusiastically and completely.

“after thou hast sowed thy fields” This revelation was given in July, which is not a good time to plant in Harmony, Pennsylvania, but Joseph had been too busy planting and nurturing the Church and the saints to plant his own fields at the appropriate time. The Lord’s advice is to go ahead and plant his crops late, and then rely on the saints for additional help if he should need it.

4 But if they receive thee not, I will send upon them a cursing instead of a blessing.

verse 4 The Lord’s warning to withhold blessings from those saints who failed to provide support, both material and spiritual, to the Prophet Joseph.

5 And thou shalt continue in calling upon God in my name, and writing the things which shall be given thee by the Comforter, and expounding all scriptures unto the church.

verse 5 Joseph was already involved in revising the Bible—producing what we know call the Joseph Smith Translation (the JST)—and this verse seems to refer, at least in part, to that project.

6 And it shall be given thee in the very moment what thou shalt speak and write, and they shall hear it, or I will send unto them a cursing instead of a blessing.

verse 6 Another warning to the Church as to how they should regard the teachings and writings of the Prophet Joseph.

7 For thou shalt devote all thy service in Zion; and in this thou shalt have strength.

8 Be patient in afflictions, for thou shalt have many; but endure them, for, lo, I am with thee, even unto the end of thy days.

verse 8 A rather ominous warning to Joseph from the Lord, but at the same time a comforting promise. One of the ironies of afflictions experienced by those in the Lord’s service is that the more good one does, the more persecution he will provoke and the more afflictions he is likely to experience.

9 And in temporal labors thou shalt not have strength, for this is not thy calling. Attend to thy calling and thou shalt have wherewith to magnify thine office, and to expound all scriptures, and continue in laying on of the hands and confirming the churches.

verse 9 “in temporal labors thou shalt not have strength” The Lord reminds Joseph that his strengths lie in his spiritual calling. Church members sometimes assume that church service implies increased chances of temporal success. This may not be true. Members all share the conditions and risks of mortal life with everyone else.

10 And thy brother Oliver shall continue in bearing my name before the world, and also to the church. And he shall not suppose that he can say enough in my cause; and lo, I am with him to the end.

11 In me he shall have glory, and not of himself, whether in weakness or in strength, whether in bonds or free; verse 11 Oliver receives here another gentle reminder that he is to glory in God and not in himself. He should trust in and glory in the Lord regardless of whether he finds himself in positions of weakness or bondage or in positions of strength or freedom. This is perhaps another hint of the wedge of pride in Oliver’s character that will later almost destroy him and will cause him to lose many blessings.

verses 12-19 These verses, at least in part, constitute an apostolic commission for the last pruning the vineyard in the latter days. Note the similarities of these verses to Matthew 10:7-15 and Mark 16:15-18. These verses are directed primarily to Oliver Cowdery and Joseph Smith both of whom have apostolic authority (see the commentary for verse 14). Though they are intended for those with apostolic office, certainly those with other priesthood callings might also find sound counsel in these verses.

12 And at all times, and in all places, he shall open his mouth and declare my gospel as with the voice of a trump, both day and night. And I will give unto him strength such as is not known among men.

verse 12 “declare my gospel as with the voice of a trump” As Moses led the doubting Israelites through forty years of wanderings in the wilderness, an interesting means of communication was developed. A trumpet was sounded that could be heard throughout the entire camp (Leviticus 25:9). This trump was loud and was the alarm that roused Israel and called her to action in times of war and danger (Numbers 10:9; Ezekiel 33:3) and in times of jubilee and celebration (Leviticus 25:9). The Lord has used the symbol of sounding the trump as a signal of the restoration of gospel truths. It is a voice of gladness and a voice of warning. Its message to the righteous is one of celebration and gladness, but to the wicked it is a terrible trump of warning, alerting them to the perils that await the unrepentant. The message of the Doctrine and Covenants is that the warning trump will warn the camp (the world) one last time. It is not merely the Lord’s wish that the voice of warning be sounded to the world. It is his divine command. The voice of warning is delivered to the saints in scripture, then the Lord commands that the saints deliver the warning to all the world.

13 Require not miracles, except I shall command you, except casting out devils, healing the sick, and against poisonous serpents, and against deadly poisons; verse 13 “Require not miracles” The Lord continues to counsel Oliver (and the rest of the Church as well). As Oliver opens his mouth to do missionary work, he is commanded to “require not miracles.” This means that Oliver (as well as the rest of us) is counseled by the Lord to do missionary without trying to convert people through the working of miracles. Miracles of themselves do not convert people and therefore should not be used as a missionary tool. The purpose of miracles is to bless and reassure those who are already converted rather than to convert.

14 And these things ye shall not do, except it be required of you by them who desire it, that the scriptures might be fulfilled; for ye shall do according to that which is written.

verse 14 It is felt that verses 13-19 of section 24 are addressed to both Oliver and Joseph rather than just to Oliver. The reason is that the pronoun ye is the second person plural form of the pronoun you.

verses 13-14 We should not seek to perform miracles, with but few exceptions. Why these exceptions? These are the signs that follow all believers (see D&C 84:65-72) which are also summarized in verse 13. They are gifts of the Spirit bestowed upon those who accept Christ and his gospel and are obedient to the Lord’s commandments.

A request to perform a healing should be granted if those requesting really desire to be healed rather than merely to witness a miracle. It is usually wise to require the person who is in need of a miracle to request a priesthood blessing rather than preemptively offer him one. In this way the scriptures are fulfilled, that is, the miracle is performed in behalf of one who believes, and his request for a blessing is a sign of his faith. It is probably not prudent for priesthood holders to visit hospitals uninvited, soliciting opportunities to give blessings.

15 And in whatsoever place ye shall enter, and they receive you not in my name, ye shall leave a cursing instead of a blessing, by casting off the dust of your feet against them as a testimony, and cleansing your feet by the wayside.

verse 15 Cursings as well as blessings may be administered by the power and authority of the priesthood (see D&C 124:93) and include the sealing up of the unbelieving and rebellious to punishment (see D&C 1:8-9). The act of cleansing the feet as a testimony against those who reject the servants of the Lord is an ordinance less of cursing and more a witness or demonstration that a witness of the truth has been given and has been rejected. Through this cleansing ordinance, those who rejected the truth are on their own, and those who preached the gospel to them are no longer responsible for them before the Lord (see D&C 88:81-82). The responsibility for their rejection is on their own heads. It is apparent in this and other scriptures given later in the Doctrine and Covenants that this ordinance is to be performed only when the Lord expressly commands it (see also D&C 75:20-22) and only under unusual and extreme conditions. It would likely be commanded only when individuals willfully and maliciously oppose the truth when the truth is authoritatively presented.

16 And it shall come to pass that whosoever shall lay their hands upon you by violence, ye shall command to be smitten in my name; and, behold, I will smite them according to your words, in mine own due time.

17 And whosoever shall go to law with thee shall be cursed by the law.

verses 16-17 The Lord avows that whatever men do to Joseph and Oliver will be done also to them. If men are violent toward them, God will smite them in return, in his own due time. If men use the law and the courts to attack the apostles and prophets, they will suffer themselves by the law and the court. “Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein” (Proverbs 26:27).

18 And thou shalt take no purse nor scrip, neither staves, neither two coats, for the church shall give unto thee in the very hour what thou needest for food and for raiment, and for shoes and for money, and for scrip.

verse 18 A purse is a coin-pouch. Many have taken the word “scrip” to mean the scriptures. This is not correct. Scrip was a small bag that shepherds carried at their side with a strap over their shoulder. It was filled with extra clothing and some food. The Lord is saying not to take any luggage, but rather depend upon the Lord, the Church, and the good people they contacted and taught for their temporal support.

19 For thou art called to prune my vineyard with a mighty pruning, yea, even for the last time; yea, and also all those whom thou hast ordained, and they shall do even according to this pattern. Amen.

verse 19 In this final dispensation the Lord’s missionaries are going forth to gather scattered Israel before the appointed day of burning when the vineyard will be purified of corruption. The imagery in this passage is similar to that used in the allegory of the olive tree. Pruning is the cutting off of evil individuals and preserving the righteous for spiritual instruction.

Section 25 An Elect Lady—Emma Smith

By July of 1830 it had been three and one half years since Joseph and Emma had married. They were married on January 18, 1827. Joseph was now twenty-four years old and Emma just turning twenty-six. Emma was born the seventh of nine children to Isaac and Elizabeth Hale on July 10, 1804, in Harmony, Pennsylvania. It is reported that Emma was a beautiful woman with an attractive personality, and she had the reputation of being a refined and dignified individual who was an excellent housekeeper and cook. Her Methodist upbringing had helped her develop a great love of music.

Emma married Joseph knowing that if she became his wife, she would share in the persecution. She was a woman of faith and courage. As persecution was heaped upon the Church from its inception, Emma, of course, experienced it also. Even apart from the harassment, however, life had been difficult for Emma. Three and a half years of marriage had afforded few moments of uninterrupted domestic peace. She had nearly perished herself when her firstborn son died in childbirth in June 1828. Joseph was gone from their home in Harmony more than half of the time, beginning in the winter of 1829-30, seeing to the publication of the Book of Mormon, organizing the Church, preaching, and baptizing. She had accompanied Joseph to Colesville and had seen him arrested and tried twice and a mob threaten to tar and feather him. When Joseph and Oliver had to flee home from Colesville to Harmony, she had been pregnant with twins. Also adding to her stress was the fact that her parents and other members of her family never did believe in Joseph's mission. Of Emma, the Prophet's mother Lucy Mack Smith, wrote:

I have never seen a woman in my life, who would endure every species of fatigue and hardship, from month to month, and from year to year, with that unflinching courage, zeal, and patience, which she has ever done; for I know that which she has had to endure. . . . She has breasted the storms of persecution, and buffeted the rage of men and devils, which would have borne down almost any other woman (History of Joseph Smith by His Mother, 190-91).

She passed through many trials and shared them in an admirable way, as did the faithful wives of other church leaders. Of course she was also human and possessed emotions found in all of us. Being the wife of the man whom the Lord had blessed, she felt she was entitled to some special considerations. It was, for example, difficult for her to understand why she could not view the plates, the Urim and Thummim, and other sacred things. At times this altogether human thought caused her to murmur and question Joseph as to why she was denied this privilege.

Section 25 was given to Emma in July 1830, after Joseph and Emma had returned to their home in Harmony. Perhaps it was received near the time of her birthday, to encourage and instruct her. Section 25 is unique because it is the only section that is addressed to a woman. This revelation to Emma includes many elements that we might find in a patriarchal blessing. Some of the instructions, admonitions, and promises to Emma pertain to the present and others to the future. The promised opportunities and blessings are predicated upon faithfulness and obedience.

D&C 25 An Elect Lady—Emma Smith

D&C 25:12 My soul delighteth in the song of the heart; the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me.

1 Hearken unto the voice of the Lord your God, while I speak unto you, Emma Smith, my daughter; for verily I say unto you, all those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom.

verse 1 “Emma Smith, my daughter” This is not God the Father addressing Emma as his spirit-daughter. Rather, this is Jesus Christ referring to her as a spiritually begotten daughter, born again as his child through her baptism and his atonement.

“all those who receive my gospel are sons and daughters in my kingdom”

The scriptures teach the doctrine that all those who make the covenants of baptism can be born again into the kingdom of God and become sons or daughters of the Savior because they are “spiritually begotten” by him (see Mosiah 5:7; 4 Nephi 1:17; Mormon 9:26; Ether 3:14; Ephesians 1:5; Moses 6:64-68). Such persons are distinguished from all the other children of God who live on this earth through the reception of these covenants. Those who will not enter into such covenants are called the sons and daughters of men (see Moses 8:14-15), and others who sin to the extent that Cain did are called sons of perdition (Moses 5:24; D&C 76:31-32).

Those who are “sons and daughters in my kingdom” are members of the kingdom of God on earth. How do we maintain our positions as sons and daughters of God? We endure to the end. And what does that mean? It does not mean to hang on to your spiritual progress for dear life hoping that death will get you before you begin to backslide. Rather it means to continue to progress spiritually by pro-actively seeking the Spirit’s counsel as to how you might improve—of what you might repent—and then continuing to deny your natural self and obeying the Lord’s commands.

2 A revelation I give unto you concerning my will; and if thou art faithful and walk in the paths of virtue before me, I will preserve thy life, and thou shalt receive an inheritance in Zion.

verse 2 “I will preserve thy life” The Lord here may well be referring to her mortal life. This promise was literally fulfilled for Emma in the years following this revelation. Each time the mobs attacked Joseph, Emma and their children were also in danger. The conflict in Missouri with its extermination order and winter exodus killed many of the saints and proved very difficult for Emma, but through all these afflictions the Lord did preserve her life.

3 Behold, thy sins are forgiven thee, and thou art an elect lady, whom I have called.

verse 3 “thou art an elect lady, whom I have called” Elect does not mean “special” or “superior” but is a synonym for “called.” For example, elected officials are not intended to be special or superior citizens, but rather citizens called by vote of the people to serve the people. God’s called or elect people are those selected by God to serve him in doing his work upon the earth. They are called or elected in the premortal world because of the spiritual qualifications which they possessed at the time of their election. Can there be any doubt that Emma was especially valiant in the premortal world and that she was foreordained while in that realm to be the companion of the prophet of the restoration?

In March 1842 Joseph will explain that this verse has been partially fulfilled by Emma’s calling to preside over the newly organized Relief Society. At that time, “Joseph read to his wife the revelation given in July 1830, wherein she was called an elect lady and told the sisters that this appellation meant that she was to be elected to a certain work; this revelation was fulfilled in her election to the presidency of the Society” (Ivan J. Barrett, Joseph Smith and the Restoration, 506. Citing HC, 4:552-53).

The well-known scriptural passage “there are many called, but few are chosen” (D&C 121:34) is worth mentioning here. In this verse (D&C 121:34), the word called means “elected.” In the same verse (again, D&C 121:34) the word chosen means sealed up to eternal life or “exalted.”

4 Murmur not because of the things which thou hast not seen, for they are withheld from thee and from the world, which is wisdom in me in a time to come.

verse 4 As mentioned previously, Emma had wondered why she had not been allowed to view the plates and the Urim and Thummim (Joseph Fielding Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:125). The Lord admonishes her and tells her that it is for a wise purpose to be made known in time to come, why she and the world were deprived of this privilege.

5 And the office of thy calling shall be for a comfort unto my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun., thy husband, in his afflictions, with consoling words, in the spirit of meekness.

verse 5 “the office of thy calling” The Lord explains that Emma’s stewardship at present is to support her husband. While Joseph was engaged in the sublime work, he continually had to fend off the ignorant and the vicious. How needful, how wonderful, to have a wife—his closest friend and companion—to help, comfort, and console him.

6 And thou shalt go with him at the time of his going, and be unto him for a scribe, while there is no one to be a scribe for him, that I may send my servant, Oliver Cowdery, whithersoever I will.

verse 6 When Joseph traveled, if possible, Emma was to accompany him and function as his scribe—secretary, clerk, recorder. Emma was a literate and intelligent woman who had already served as scribe for portions of the book of Mormon translation. The reference here is to her later service as a temporary scribe for the Joseph Smith Translation—Joseph’s revision of the Bible.

7 And thou shalt be ordained under his hand to expound scriptures, and to exhort the church, according as it shall be given thee by my Spirit.

verse 7 In March 1842, in Nauvoo, Emma will be “ordained” or set apart as the first president of the Relief Society by Elder John Taylor.

We have subsequently developed a distinction between being “ordained” and being “set apart.” Men are ordained to offices in the priesthood and set apart to preside over stakes, wards, branches, missions, and auxiliary organizations. The sisters are set apart—not ordained—as presidents of auxiliary organizations and to other offices in those organizations. In this verse the word “ordained” is used in a general, generic sense to mean set apart.

“and to exhort the church” Is this calling of Emma’s to “exhort the church” consistent with the apostle Paul’s statement that women are not to “speak” in church (1 Corinthians 14:34-35)? The Prophet Joseph provided us with a correct interpretation of this statement of Paul’s in Joseph’s inspired revision of the Bible. Joseph changed this verse to say that women are not to “rule” in the Church. The implication is that women are to be directed in the Church by the priesthood. This principle was stated by the Prophet Joseph to the members of the first Relief Society:

You will receive instructions through the order of the priesthood which God has established, through the medium of those appointed to lead, guide and direct the affairs of the Church in this last dispensation; and I now turn the key in your behalf in the name of the Lord, and this Society shall rejoice, and knowledge and intelligence shall flow down from this time henceforth; this is the beginning of better days to the poor and needy, who shall be made to rejoice and pour forth blessings on your heads (HC, 4:607).

8 For he shall lay his hands upon thee, and thou shalt receive the Holy Ghost, and thy time shall be given to writing, and to learning much.

verse 8 At the time of this revelation, Emma had been baptized but not confirmed. She will be confirmed by her husband at a small, informal sacrament meeting held at the Smith home in Harmony in early August.

9 And thou needest not fear, for thy husband shall support thee in the church; for unto them is his calling, that all things might be revealed unto them, whatsoever I will, according to their faith.

verse 9 “thou needest not fear” Apparently Emma had been concerned about how Joseph could support a family by farming if he spent his full time in building the Church. The answer was that Joseph would support her, but not by farming. The support would rather come from the Church for which he labored (see D&C 24:3). The pronouns “them” and “their” in this verse refer to the saints—the members of the Church.

In the earliest printings of this revelation, the phrase “support thee in the Church” was rendered “support thee from the Church.” Here then was further evidence that Joseph and Emma were to receive their subsistence from the members of the Church and not be engaged in temporal labors themselves.

10 And verily I say unto thee that thou shalt lay aside the things of this world, and seek for the things of a better.

verse 10 This verse reminds me of a statement of Hugh Nibley’s. Referring to this mortal life, he said, “It isn’t the real life . . . this is not the real world” (Teachings of the Book of Mormon—Semester 1: Transcripts of Lectures Presented to an Honors Book of Mormon Class at Brigham Young University, 1988-90 [Provo: FARMS], 461). It would seem to me that the essence of spirituality is to live in this world and to succeed in it, but allow your overriding priority to be issues of the eternal life which follows this life.

11 And it shall be given thee, also, to make a selection of sacred hymns, as it shall be given thee, which is pleasing unto me, to be had in my church.

12 For my soul delighteth in the song of the heart; yea, the song of the righteous is a prayer unto me, and it shall be answered with a blessing upon their heads.

verse 12 “my soul delighteth in the song of the heart” Singing is an act of worship and of communion with God, and it delights him. Again, the pronoun “their” refers to the church members.

verses 11-12 Emma was a gifted musician with a particular talent for singing. With the help of William W. Phelps, Emma went to work, and a selection of hymns was made and finally published in February 1836. It contained ninety selections. In this collection were found many sectarian hymns and also a goodly number (thirty four) by Latter-day Saints, especially William W. Phelps, Parley P. Pratt, and Eliza R. Snow.

Among these were some of the “classic” LDS hymns including “The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning,” “I Know That My Redeemer Lives,” “Redeemer of Israel,” and “How Firm a Foundation.” The book was small in size and included the words of the hymns, but not music. The second collection of hymns was published in Nauvoo, Illinois, in 1841 and contained 340 selections. A third edition was planned at Nauvoo, but never printed.

13 Wherefore, lift up thy heart and rejoice, and cleave unto the covenants which thou hast made.

verse 13 “cleave unto the covenants” For a brief discussion of the interesting word cleave, see the commentary for D&C 11:19. Here the Lord is admonishing Emma to keep, or adhere to, the covenants she had made.

14 Continue in the spirit of meekness, and beware of pride. Let thy soul delight in thy husband, and the glory which shall come upon him.

verse 14 Pride is inevitably self-serving, while the Lord would command us to seek for the welfare, spiritual and physical, of others and not concentrate on ourselves (Matthew 10:39).

15 Keep my commandments continually, and a crown of righteousness thou shalt receive. And except thou do this, where I am you cannot come.

verse 15 “Keep my commandments continually” Here is an apt definition of enduring to the end (see the commentary for verse 1). The Lord is no respecter of persons. No one is given the greatest gift of all, the gift of eternal life, because of the good deeds of someone else. Ancestry, family name, church position, or the faithfulness of loved ones cannot guarantee eternal life. Eternal life can only be obtained by one who abides the covenants made personally by the Lord.

16 And verily, verily, I say unto you, that this is my voice unto all. Amen.

verse 16 “this is my voice unto all” This should be understood to mean the Lord’s counsel to Emma herein applies to all women in the Church.

Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught of women and their importance in the Lord’s plan:

We know so little, brothers and sisters, about the reasons for the division of duties between womanhood and manhood as well as between motherhood and priesthood. These were divinely determined in another time and another place. We are accustomed to focusing on the men of God because theirs is the priesthood and leadership line. But paralleling that authority line is a stream of righteous influence reflecting the remarkable women of God who have existed in all ages and dispensations, including our own. Greatness is not measured by coverage in column inches, either in newspapers or in the scriptures. The story of the women of God, therefore, is, for now, an untold drama within a drama. . . .

Just as certain men were foreordained from before the foundations of the world, so were certain women appointed to certain tasks. Divine design—not chance—brought Mary forward to be the mother of Jesus. The boy prophet, Joseph Smith, was blessed not only with a great father but also with a superb mother, Lucy Mack, who influenced a whole dispensation.

In our modern kingdom, it is no accident that women were, through the Relief Society, assigned compassionate service. So often the service of women seems instinctive, while that of some men seems more labored. It is precisely because the daughters of Zion are so uncommon that the adversary will not leave them alone. . . .

So often our sisters comfort others when their own needs are greater than those being comforted. That quality is like the generosity of Jesus on the cross. Empathy during agony is a portion of divinity!

When the real history of mankind is fully disclosed, will it feature the echoes of gunfire or the shaping sound of lullabies? The great armistices made by military men or the peacemaking of women in homes and neighborhoods? Will what happened in cradles and kitchens prove to be more controlling than what happened in congresses? When the surf of the centuries has made the great pyramids so much sand, the everlasting family will still be standing, because it is a celestial institution, formed outside telestial time. The women of God know this.

No wonder the men of God support and sustain you sisters in your unique roles, for the act of deserting home in order to shape society is like thoughtlessly removing crucial fingers from an imperiled dike in order to teach people to swim. . . .

Finally, remember: When we return to our real home, it will be with the “mutual approbation” of those who reign in the “royal courts on high.” There we will find beauty such as mortal “eye hath not seen;” we will hear sounds of surpassing music which mortal “ear hath not heard.” Could such a regal homecoming be possible without the anticipatory arrangements of a heavenly mother? (CR, April 1978, 13-15).

Emma Smith was at the Prophet’s side until his death at Carthage Jail on June 27, 1844. She married Lewis Bidamon in December 1847. She lived the remainder of her life in Nauvoo. She was 75 years old when she died in the mansion house on April 30, 1879.

Section 26 Common Consent

This section, given in July 1830, in Harmony. Joseph offered no information in the History of the Church about the circumstances in which section 26 was received.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 26 Common Consent

D&C 26:2 All things shall be done by common consent in the church.

1 Behold, I say unto you that you shall let your time be devoted to the studying of the scriptures, and to preaching, and to confirming the church at Colesville, and to performing your labors on the land, such as is required, until after you shall go to the west to hold the next conference; and then it shall be made known what you shall do.

verse 1 “you shall let your time be devoted to the studying of the scriptures” Joseph is instructed to continue his work in correcting the King James Bible. See the supplemental article Joseph Smith’s Inspired Revision of the Bible—The JST.

“and to confirming the church at Colesville” Colesville, New York, is about twenty miles north of Harmony, Pennsylvania. The branch at Colesville consisted mainly of the Joseph and Newel Knight families, but there were other interested persons in the area. As the foregoing historical summaries have made clear, Joseph is having trouble getting the newly baptized Colesville saints confirmed members of the Church because of persecutions in that town. Joseph is counseled by the Lord to complete that assignment.

“until after you shall go to the west to hold the next conference” Going “to the west” meant going northwest to Fayette, New York, a distance of about a hundred miles. The “next conference” will be held at Fayette on September 26 and 27, 1830.

2 And all things shall be done by common consent in the church, by much prayer and faith, for all things you shall receive by faith. Amen.

verse 2 Our church government is neither a theocracy nor a democracy. That is to say, the Lord exercises his sovereign authority through his authorized servants, but it is the privilege of the people to accept or reject—to agree or disagree. Church members do not have the power to nominate or elect, but they do have the right to decide whether they will sustain and support. This form of government has been called a theo-democracy, and it is the form of government that will exist during the Millennium. Should a majority of the saints refuse to sustain a name or a proposed action, it must be withdrawn. Elder Charles W. Penrose taught, “The voice of the people should respond to the voice of the Lord. It is the voice of the Lord and the voice of the people together in this Church that sanctions all things therein. . . . The Lord designs that every individual member shall take an interest therein, shall bear a part of the responsibility, and shall take upon him or her the spirit of the Church, and be an active living member of the body” (JD, 21:45-46).

A theo-democracy is the law of heaven as well as the law of his Church. The Lord said of his power, “Behold, I am from above, and my power lieth beneath” (D&C 63:59). That is, he doesn’t govern by some power or authority which comes from elsewhere. Rather, he governs by divine directive but acknowledges the agency or those governed and awaits their consent. His very power derives from those he governs who, by and large, love and obey him (Abraham 4:18)—thus he is powerful.

Should a member of the Church ever cast a negative vote for an individual being sustained to an office in the Church? President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:

I have no right to raise my hand in opposition to a man who is appointed to any position in this Church, simply because I may not like him, or because of some personal disagreement or feeling I may have, but only on the grounds that he is guilty of wrong doing, or transgression of the laws of the Church which would disqualify him for the position which he is called to hold (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:124).

When we do sustain an individual to a calling, we are not simply giving our passive consent. We are instead obligated to actively support and sustain that individual.

1830 August

The Knights, Sally and Newel, who became close friends of Joseph and Emma, visited the Smiths in Harmony in early August 1830. The four held a confirmation service for the purpose of confirming Sally and Emma. Both had been baptized in Colesville but not confirmed. Joseph went out to purchase wine for the sacrament to be administered at that service. As he did so he was met by an angel representing the Lord who instructed him concerning the sacrament [D&C 27 - The Sacrament Emblems].

Section 27 The Sacrament Emblems

The first four verses of this section were received in August 1830, and the remaining verses were received the following month, in September 1830 while Joseph was in Fayette in connection with a church conference being held there. To be more precise, those materials that were received in August 1830 included the first four verses, verse 5 through the word “Moroni,” the first part of verse 13 through the word “rejoice,” verse 14, and finally, these words from verse 18: “and be faithful until I come.”

Early in August 1830 Newel Knight and his wife, Sally, visited Joseph and Emma in Harmony, Pennsylvania. Both Sally Knight and Emma had been baptized June 28, 1830, in Colesville, but a mob had broken up the service, and they were unable to be confirmed members of the Church at that time. Therefore, during the visit in Harmony, plans were made for their confirmation service. During a confirmation service the sacrament was administered. As part of their preparation for this event, Joseph set out to procure wine to be used in the sacrament service. On his way he was met by a heavenly messenger who instructed him that it was not necessary to purchase wine from those in Harmony who were persecuting him, and that it really did not matter what was used for the emblems of the sacrament so long as they were partaken with an eye single to the glory of God and in remembrance of him. Joseph was further instructed to make his own wine with grape juice.

The story of what then happened is interesting. Joseph did obtain some grapes and squeezed them himself. This was in August, and grapes aren't really ripe until October. The juice that Joseph thus obtained was so bad that water was used for the confirmation service. In addition to the Smiths and the Knights, John Whitmer was also present at the service.

Fermented grape juice or wine continued to be used as the sacramental emblem. Even section 89, the Word of Wisdom, condones the use of wine for the sacrament. Over the years we have evolved to the use of water, particularly after the turn of the century, because water is plentiful, available, inexpensive, and easy to prepare. Since 1906 the Church has used water exclusively.

During the second part of this section the Lord promises that in the future there will be a great meeting during which the sacrament will be administered. This meeting will be attended by the Lord, Joseph, and several great prophets. Presumably this meeting will take place at the second coming of the Lord. Perhaps it is the meeting to occur at Adam-ondi-Ahman (see commentary for section 45).

D&C 27:15-18 The full armor of God.

1 Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Lord, your God, and your Redeemer, whose word is quick and powerful.

verse 1 “whose word is quick” Quick here does not mean swift but rather means something living and alive. Thus, to be quickened by the Spirit means to be given spiritual life. The world of the Lord is quick and powerful because it is a source of life, energy, and real power.

2 For, behold, I say unto you, that it mattereth not what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink when ye partake of the sacrament, if it so be that ye do it with an eye single to my glory—remembering unto the Father my body which was laid down for you, and my blood which was shed for the remission of your sins.

verse 2 “it mattereth not what ye shall eat or what ye shall drink when ye partake of the sacrament” Because the emblems of the sacrament are symbolic rather than mystically connected to the physical body and blood of the Lord, any food or liquid may, with permission of priesthood leaders, be used as the emblems by which we remember him. Some Christians believe that the bread and the wine actually become the body and blood of Christ, which the believers then really eat and drink. This is the doctrine of transubstantiation, a doctrine which the Church does not accept. In the Latter-day Saint view, after the emblems have been blessed, the bread is still bread and the water is still water, although they have been consecrated for a particular use as symbols of Christ’s flesh and blood, and in that capacity they are treated with respect.

3 Wherefore, a commandment I give unto you, that you shall not purchase wine neither strong drink of your enemies; verses 3-4 The commandment in these verses is not against using wine for the sacrament, which practice continued for some time, but against buying sacramental wine from the enemies of the Church. Apparently the Lord’s warning here was intended to protect Joseph from designing persons who would adulterate the wine and therefore attempt to poison Joseph and the other saints who partook of it. Joseph is counseled to use only wine that was made by the saints—“made new among you.” Some have interpreted this as a commandment to use only grape juice rather than fermented wine for the sacrament, but this cannot be correct, because the Church continued to use fermented sacramental wine both in Kirtland and in Nauvoo.

4 Wherefore, you shall partake of none except it is made new among you; yea, in this my Father’s kingdom which shall be built up on the earth.

verses 5-14 We have records indicating that each of the great prophets mentioned in these verses (with the possible exception of those mentioned in verse 10) ministered to the Prophet Joseph and restored some aspect of the gospel through him—particularly keys of authority. Perhaps these are the prophets who, at the meeting to be held at Adam-ondi-Ahman, will return their keys to Adam, who will in turn give them to the Savior. Then Christ will hold all of them, and he will reign as King of kings and Lord of lords during the Millennium.

5 Behold, this is wisdom in me; wherefore, marvel not, for the hour cometh that I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth, and with Moroni, whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon, containing the fulness of my everlasting gospel, to whom I have committed the keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim;

verse 5 “I will drink of the fruit of the vine with you on the earth” When Jesus blessed the wine at the Last supper, he told his disciples, “I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father’s kingdom” (Matthew 26:29). Most translators take “new” in this passage to mean “anew” or “again.” Elder John Taylor noted, “In partaking of the sacrament we not only commemorate the death and sufferings of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, but we also shadow forth the time when he will come again and when we shall meet and eat bread with him in the kingdom of God” (JD, 14:185). This great sacrament meeting, or perhaps this series of sacrament meetings, following the second coming is sometimes referred to as “the marriage supper of the Lamb” (Revelation 19:9; D&C 58:11; 65:3), and it may be similar to the sacrament meeting the resurrected Lord held with the Nephites when he visited them (3 Nephi 20:1-9).

This could refer to several visitations that the Savior will make to the saints as the time of the Millennium nears. For instance, there is the grand gathering at Adam-ondi-Ahman at which Adam will preside over his family (D&C 116). Perhaps there are other such meetings at which the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper will be administered and the Savior will be present.

“Moroni, whom I have sent unto you to reveal the Book of Mormon” We have discussed previously the fact that the prophet Moroni holds the keys for our dispensation for the coming forth of the Book of Mormon, the record of the stick of Ephraim or the stick of Joseph (Ezekiel 37:15-19).

“the stick of Ephraim” This phrase refers to Ezekiel 37:15-17. There is a fine point of distinction which should be made here. Technically, the two “sticks” are symbolic of the descendants or “houses” of Ephraim and Judah who had divided into two separate kingdoms and were, in Ezekiel’s time, bitter enemies. The “sticks” are not, technically, symbolic of the records of the two kingdoms. Thus, Ezekiel’s prophecy, on one level at least, is about the prophesied gathering and reconciliation of the houses of Ephraim and Judah, the northern and southern kingdoms, which together comprise all of Israel, including the Book of Mormon people and the Jews. Moroni is correctly said here to hold “the keys of the record of the stick of Ephraim,” that is, the record of the house of Ephraim, which is the Book of Mormon.

In contemporary LDS usage this fine distinction has been lost, and it is customary to speak of the Book of Mormon itself as the stick of Ephraim, rather than as the record of the stick of Ephraim. This usage is perhaps defensible, however, for the Bible and the Book of Mormon, as separate histories now joined, may themselves symbolize the two houses that have been separated but are soon to be joined as the union of their records foreshadows. Moreover, the term sticks, or writing tablets, makes no sense as a symbol for houses or descendants without some connection to their written records.

Speculation over how a “stick” could be thought of as scripture has led some to think the term refers to scrolls or tally sticks. Others note that in ancient Babylonia, where Ezekiel prophesied, scribes typically wrote not only on clay tablets and parchments but also on boards covered with wax. Wax writing boards were so easy to make and so practical to use that scribes used them for many different kinds of records, including business, religious, literary, military, and so forth. Scholars further note that the “stick” upon which Ezekiel wrote is translated from the Hebrew word ets, which means literally a tree, wood, or something wooden and could therefore be referring to a wax writing board. Other actions by Ezekiel seem to parallel what Babylonian scribes did when they wrote on writing boards. For example, he followed the Babylonian practice of writing the owner’s name on each board: “For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions; then . . . for Joseph, the stick [board] of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions” (Ezekiel 37:17).

6 And also with Elias, to whom I have committed the keys of bringing to pass the restoration of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began, concerning the last days;

verse 6 Whenever the name Elias is mentioned in any of our scripture, consider three possible meanings:

1. There is a specific person named Elias—the prophet Noah. His name is Elias in the same sense that Adam’s name is Michael. This knowledge comes from a sermon Joseph gave to the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles in 1839 (HC, 3:386). In this sermon he taught that Gabriel is Noah. In D&C 27:7 we will learn that Elias is the messenger who visited Zacharias to announce that his wife, Elisabeth, would bear a son. Hence, Elias is Gabriel is Noah.

2. The name Elias may be used as a title. The Prophet Noah accomplished one of the most important feats of restoration in the history of the earth following the Flood. Noah was thus given the keys of restoration or of preparing the way for the Savior and for the gospel. Hence when anyone does restorative or preparative kinds of work, he is really doing the work of Noah and may be called an Elias. An example is John the Baptist whose major role was in preparing the way for Christ and in setting the stage for the restoration of the gospel. Thus he is accorded the title—an “Elias.” Other examples of Eliases in this final dispensation include Moroni, Peter, James, John, Moses, Elijah, Raphael, and Michael (D&C 13; 110; 128:19-21).

3. The Greek transliteration of the Hebrew name Elijah is Elias. Generally, in the New Testament when the name Elias is used it refers to the prophet Elijah.

In this particular verse the Lord refers to “Elias” as one who will bring “to pass the restoration of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began.” There is no single Elias who fits this description regardless of how we define Elias. Elder Bruce R. McConkie has taught us that the Elias referred to in D&C 27 is not one man, but rather a composite group of Eliases whose combined mission it was to restore all keys and powers of the priesthood in this final dispensation (Mormon Doctrine, 221).

7 And also John the son of Zacharias, which Zacharias he (Elias) visited and gave promise that he should have a son, and his name should be John, and he should be filled with the spirit of Elias; verse 7 This verse refers to Gabriel or Noah as Elias, the angel who visited Zacharias.

8 Which John I have sent unto you, my servants, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Oliver Cowdery, to ordain you unto the first priesthood which you have received, that you might be called and ordained even as Aaron;

9 And also Elijah, unto whom I have committed the keys of the power of turning the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, that the whole earth may not be smitten with a curse;

10 And also with Joseph and Jacob, and Isaac, and Abraham, your fathers, by whom the promises remain; verse 10 Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, and Joseph are often called “the fathers” (D&C 2:2) or “the patriarchs” (Greek for “first fathers” or “ruling fathers”).

“the promises remain” The promises of the Lord are extended to the house of Israel by virtue of the Abrahamic covenant, made originally with Abraham and extended through Isaac and to Jacob and the house of Israel. For the particulars of the Abrahamic covenant see the commentary for 1 Nephi 14:8 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

11 And also with Michael, or Adam, the father of all, the prince of all, the ancient of days;

verse 11 This is an important verse in that it is the first to make clear that Michael is Adam and is also called the “ancient of days.” Michael is Hebrew for “who is like God.”

12 And also with Peter, and James, and John, whom I have sent unto you, by whom I have ordained you and confirmed you to be apostles, and especial witnesses of my name, and bear the keys of your ministry and of the same things which I revealed unto them;

verse 12 This verse summarizes the separate items that Peter, James, and John restored to earth. All of it is easily understandable—the Melchizedek Priesthood and the keys of that priesthood including the keys of the apostleship—except for the phrase “and of the same things which I revealed unto them.” The ambiguity of this phrase has led some to speculate that this phrase may refer to sacred ordinances.

13 Unto whom I have committed the keys of my kingdom, and a dispensation of the gospel for the last times; and for the fulness of times, in the which I will gather together in one all things, both which are in heaven, and which are on earth;

verse 13 Herein we are taught that we do have the appropriate keys, the authority to preside, and that this is the last or final dispensation—the dispensation of the “fulness of times.” David W. Patten, one of the first apostles and martyrs of this dispensation, said of the “dispensation of the fulness of times” that it “is made up of all the dispensations that ever have been given since the world began . . . in the which all things shall be fulfilled that have been spoken of since the earth was made” (HC, 3:51).

“for the last times; and for the fulness of times” These two phrases, both of which refer to our present dispensation, have a shade of different meaning. The phrase “last times” emphasizes the character of this as the last in a series of many basically similar dispensations. The phrase “fulness of times” emphasizes the unique nature of this dispensation as the one in which all things will be restored, the final gathering and restoration of Israel will take place, and all the words and promises of the Lord to other dispensations will be fulfilled.

14 And also with all those whom my Father hath given me out of the world.

verse 14 Those who have entered into the gospel covenant and hence are sons and daughters of Christ. They have gathered out of the world to the Lord’s earthly kingdom. This may well refer to all of us in the Lord’s latter-day kingdom. Perhaps we too will have the opportunity to partake of the sacrament with the Savior in the valley of Adam-ondi-Ahman!

verses 15-18 These verses deal with the metaphor of taking upon ourselves the full armor of God (Ephesians 6:11-17). The loins, heart, feet, and head represent those four parts of the body and four realms of human activity in which we are most at risk from evil influence. The loins symbolize procreative power. The heart symbolizes our conduct and what we love. The feet symbolize our course, our objectives, and our goals, and the head symbolizes our thoughts. When truth girds our loins, we are modest and virtuous, knowing the true significance and purpose of these powers. When the breastplate of righteousness covers our heart, our desires will be proper at all times and we will love righteousness. When our feet are shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, we will walk in holy paths. And when our head is covered with the helmet of salvation, our thinking will be enlightened by knowledge of the Lord's great plan. Additionally, the shield of faith will deflect the doubts that scoffers and critics will throw our way. Finally, our only weapon, and the only one we need, will be the sword of the Spirit, with which we can reach, touch, and cut to the quick those with whom we come in contact (see, Feet Shod With the Preparation of the Gospel of Peace, 2-7; Reeve, "Whole Armor of God," 193).

15 Wherefore, lift up your hearts and rejoice, and gird up your loins, and take upon you my whole armor, that ye may be able to withstand the evil day, having done all, that ye may be able to stand.

verse 15 "gird up your loins" See the commentary for D&C 36:8.

16 Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, which I have sent mine angels to commit unto you;

verse 16 "mine angels" The word angel (Greek angelos or Hebrew malach) in the Bible is simply the generic word for a messenger. So anyone authorized to bring a message from the presence of God is an "angel," whether they are spirits, translated, or resurrected beings.

17 Taking the shield of faith wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked;

18 And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of my Spirit, which I will pour out upon you, and my word which I reveal unto you, and be agreed as touching all things whatsoever ye ask of me, and be faithful until I come, and ye shall be caught up, that where I am ye shall be also. Amen.

verse 18 "ye shall be caught up" At the time of the Lord's second coming, the righteous who are still on the earth, and some of the dead who will come forth on the earth in a resurrected state, will be physically caught up from the earth before it is cleansed by fire (see D&C 88:96-98; 1 Thessalonians 4:15-17). The purpose for being caught up is not to be taken away to heaven or anywhere else, but to avoid the conflagration which will consume the wicked (who are not caught up) and everything else that is celestial upon the earth. Christ is coming here to rule and reign upon a cleansed earth. Compare that to Matthew 6:10: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven." After the great cleansing by fire, mortal saints will live out their appointed days upon the earth and then be changed to resurrected glory in the blink of an eye (see D&C 63:50-51). For further discussion of the Millennium, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 30, The Millennium.

According to Joseph Smith, "Christ and the resurrected saints will reign over the earth during the thousand years. They will not probably dwell upon the earth, but will visit it when they please, or when it is necessary to govern it" (TPJS, 268).

Section 28 Only the Prophet Receives Revelation for the Church

In addition to Sally Knight, there were other Colesville members who had been baptized, but because of the persecutions they had not been confirmed. Joseph received word that they awaited his return. Thus, on August 29, 1830, Joseph (in company with Hyrum Smith, John Whitmer, and David Whitmer) made the treacherous trip after praying mightily to the Lord to protect them. Joseph's enemies had advertised a five-dollar reward to anyone who reported Joseph's appearance in town.

On the way, the party of Mormons came upon a road crew that included some of Joseph's bitterest enemies. To the amazement of the foursome, "they looked earnest[ly] at us, but not knowing us, we passed on without interruption" (HC, 1:108-9). The group, led by the Prophet Joseph, were able to confirm the Colesville members and slip away without being noticed.

By late August 1830, persecution of Joseph and Emma in Harmony had intensified. Even Isaac Hale had turned against Joseph, and without Isaac's protection, Joseph and Emma were defenseless. Peter Whitmer, Sr., once again offered his house for a refuge, and in the last week of August, Newel Knight moved Joseph and Emma in a wagon to Fayette.

Joseph's presence was needed in Fayette for other reasons. Through the summer, Oliver Cowdery and the Whitmer family, including Hiram Page (see Character Vignette on Hiram Page following the commentary on this section), had begun to perceive themselves as independent authorities with the right to correct Joseph and receive revelation. Actually this belief came about quite naturally as all of these people were converts from congregational-type churches. In those churches, anyone could declare doctrine, and if the rest of the congregation agreed, the doctrine became a tenet of their faith. The Whitmers and Oliver Cowdery were as willing to believe revelations from Hiram Page as from Joseph Smith because of their background.

When Joseph arrived in Fayette, the Whitmers and Oliver were studying some revelations that Hiram Page had received. It seems that Hiram had obtained a stone that was four inches wide and a quarter of an inch thick. It had a hole in it so it could be hung around his neck. It was grayish-greenish in color and had light wavy lines running through it. He had used this seer stone to receive some revelations. Apparently one of these revelations pertained to the location of Zion.

In reading Ether 13 in the Book of Mormon, it was learned that the New Jerusalem or Zion was to be built upon the American continent. This caused much speculation in the Church as to the location of Zion. Hiram Page endeavored to settle the question by means of a revelation through his stone. At this point in church history, the members had not yet learned that there was but one appointed of the Lord to receive revelations for the Church.

Earlier in the summer, Oliver had written to Joseph about a mistake in section 20, verse 37. This verse outlines the requirements which a candidate for baptism must fulfill before being received in baptism: “And again, by way of commandment to the church concerning the manner of baptism—All those who humble themselves before God, and desire to be baptized, and come forth with broken hearts and contrite spirits, and witness before the church that they have truly repented of all their sins, and are willing to take upon them the name of Jesus Christ, having a determination to serve him to the end, and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins, shall be received by baptism into his church.”

Apparently Oliver felt that these requirements for membership placed too much power in the hands of whoever might interview an individual in order to assess his or her worthiness for baptism. He saw in verse 37 the seeds of priestcraft (HC, 1:104-5). The Whitmers had sided with Oliver, and it was only with much difficulty and after much anguish that Joseph was able to convince them of their error.

Oliver’s attempted correction of Joseph’s mistake also may have a plausible explanation. Verse 37 of section 20, without the part Oliver Cowdery objected to, is found in a manuscript written by Oliver Cowdery titled The Articles of the Church of Christ (see the commentary materials for section 20). Since much of that document was included in section 20, Oliver was probably upset that Joseph had made what he thought was an unwarranted insertion into something he had written. Joseph had inserted the phrase “and truly manifest by their works that they have received of the Spirit of Christ unto the remission of their sins.” Given Oliver’s Protestant background, which included the doctrine of salvation by and through the grace of God and not of works (Ephesians 2:8-9; Romans 10:19), perhaps Oliver felt that Joseph’s insertion placed too much emphasis on salvation by a man’s works. For a discussion of the issue of grace and works, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 4, chapter 11, Grace and Works.

Probably this incident, as well as the matter of Hiram Page’s revelations, were natural events caused by new converts’ trying to find their way in this new organization. If they had been left unchecked by Joseph, Satan certainly would have used them to his advantage, but let us not be too hard on these early members by thinking they were in some way deliberately trying to subvert Joseph and the Church.

At first Joseph was going to wait for the conference scheduled for September 26, 1830, to address this problem, but when he realized how far the error had spread among the saints, he decided to confront Hiram Page immediately. Initially Joseph was strongly resisted by Oliver Cowdery. Finally, however, he was able to convince Oliver and the Whitmers privately that Hiram Page’s revelations were not genuine. Hiram Page, Oliver, and the others, after becoming convinced of their errors, renounced the revelations as not being of God, and acknowledged that Satan had sought to overthrow their beliefs in the true plan of God.

Then Joseph petitioned the Lord for further direction and received section 28. This revelation came through Joseph to Oliver Cowdery and not to Hiram Page because Oliver was believing in the revelations which his brother-in-law was receiving. The Lord is therefore putting both Oliver and Hiram in their proper places. Oliver is told that he is to declare and teach the revelations and commandments of the Church but not write commandments or scripture. Only Joseph is authorized to receive revelations for the whole Church. Oliver is instructed further to tell Hiram Page that his revelations are not of God but are of Satan. The new converts in Kirtland will later be required to learn this same lesson (see D&C 43).

Newel Knight, who was an eyewitness to this affair, added a few notes of interest: “On my arrival [in Fayette for the conference] I found Brother Joseph in great distress of mind on account of Hyrum [Hiram] Page. . . . That night I occupied the same room that he did and the greater part of the night was spent in prayer and supplication” (Woodward, “Historical Development,” 404-05).

On September 26, 1830, the first item on the agenda for the conference was a discussion of the Hiram Page affair and the reading of section 28. Perhaps Oliver had talked privately with Hiram Page before the conference, according to the Lord’s command (verse 12). At any rate, to Joseph’s great relief, all present at the conference, including Hiram Page, renounced the stone and its “revelations” (HC, 1:115).

Another important aspect of this section is that Oliver is called on a mission to the “Lamanites” or Indian peoples. He is also told that the exact location of Zion will be revealed later.

1 Behold, I say unto thee, Oliver, that it shall be given unto thee that thou shalt be heard by the church in all things whatsoever thou shalt teach them by the Comforter, concerning the revelations and commandments which I have given.

verse 1 As a leading authority of the Church and an apostle of the Lord, Oliver Cowdery had the right to be heard by the Church, but he did not have the right to receive revelation for the Church on his own authority. In the priesthood line of authority, Joseph stood between Oliver and the Lord (see D&C 30:7).

2 But, behold, verily, verily, I say unto thee, no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., for he receiveth them even as Moses.

verse 2 The members already understood that the prophet Joseph received revelations from the Lord, but they did not yet understand that Joseph was the only one who could receive revelation for the Church. Many of these saints had been converted from churches with a very democratic structure, where church governance had been run more like a New England “town meeting”—from the bottom up—than by priesthood authority—from the top down. This religious background made it somewhat difficult for these saints to learn the correct order of the priesthood and made them vulnerable to movements, proposals, and revelations that had no divine authority. Joseph Smith stated the principle this way, “It is contrary to the economy of God for any member of the Church, or any one, to receive instructions for those in authority, higher than themselves; therefore you will see the impropriety of giving heed to them” (HC, 1:338).

We will learn that within six months, the new members in Kirtland will have to be taught this same lesson all over again (see D&C 43:3-7).

3 And thou shalt be obedient unto the things which I shall give unto him, even as Aaron, to declare faithfully the commandments and the revelations, with power and authority unto the church.

verses 2-3 “even as Moses . . . even as Aaron” Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery were to the Latter-day Saints as Moses and Aaron were to Israel. Joseph was to receive the revelations, as did Moses; Oliver was to preach and make them known, as did Aaron (see D&C 21:12). Joseph Fielding Smith wrote, “It was very necessary that Oliver Cowdery should receive this admonition, for he was inclined to take issue with the Prophet even in regard to matters of revelation. Much good came out of this unpleasant incident, for the members were taught that there was order in the Church and only one appointed to receive commandments and revelations for their guidance, and he was the one God had called” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:135).

4 And if thou art led at any time by the Comforter to speak or teach, or at all times by the way of commandment unto the church, thou mayest do it.

5 But thou shalt not write by way of commandment, but by wisdom;

verse 5 Oliver is told that he may give counsel and advice to the saints, but he is not to establish church doctrine or policy. The latter is the prerogative of the prophet only.

6 And thou shalt not command him who is at thy head, and at the head of the church;

verses 2-6 Joseph, not Oliver, is head of the Church, and only Joseph is authorized to receive revelations for the Church. Through this incident the members were taught that there is order in the Church.

7 For I have given him the keys of the mysteries, and the revelations which are sealed, until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead.

verse 7 The word “mystery” comes from the Greek mysterium which means a secret. Chauncey Riddle has taught that it means to “seal your lips.” Thus, one definition of a mystery is something of a sacred nature, and one should be cautious about sharing with others. This certainly agrees with Alma 12:9: “It is given unto many to know the mysteries of God; nevertheless they are laid under a strict command that they shall not impart, only according to the portion of his word which he doth grant unto the children of men, according to the need and diligence which they give unto him.”

As early as September of 1830, the Lord alludes to the fact that one day Joseph will be replaced by another holding the keys of the kingdom.

8 And now, behold, I say unto you that you shall go unto the Lamanites and preach my gospel unto them; and inasmuch as they receive thy teachings thou shalt cause my church to be established among them; and thou shalt have revelations, but write them not by way of commandment.

verse 8 Oliver is the first to be appointed as a member of the missionary party to the “Lamanites.” Others will follow including Peter Whitmer, Jr., (section 30), and then Parley P. Pratt and Ziba Peterson (section 32).

By the term “Lamanites,” of course, Joseph had reference to the American Indians.

9 And now, behold, I say unto you that it is not revealed, and no man knoweth where the city Zion shall be built, but it shall be given hereafter. Behold, I say unto you that it shall be on the borders by the Lamanites.

verse 9 This is the first clue we have as to the location of Zion—it is “on the borders by the Lamanites.” The specific location “shall be given hereafter.”

10 Thou shalt not leave this place until after the conference; and my servant Joseph shall be appointed to preside over the conference by the voice of it, and what he saith to thee thou shalt tell.

verse 10 This conference will be held September 26, 1830.

11 And again, thou shalt take thy brother, Hiram Page, between him and thee alone, and tell him that those things which he hath written from that stone are not of me and that Satan deceiveth him;

verse 11 It is interesting that Hiram Page could use a seer stone, which is a legitimate medium of revelation from the Lord, and yet receive revelations from Satan. Brigham Young said Joseph Smith taught him that it was intended that all men should have their own seer stones, but they were “kept from them in consequence of their wickedness, and most of those who do find one make an evil use of it” (Millennial Star, 26:118).

12 For, behold, these things have not been appointed unto him, neither shall anything be appointed unto any of this church contrary to the church covenants.

verse 12 “contrary to the church covenants” This phrase likely has reference to section 20, the “articles and covenants of the Church” which specifies who presides over the Church (see D&C 20:2-3).

13 For all things must be done in order, and by common consent in the church, by the prayer of faith.

14 And thou shalt assist to settle all these things, according to the covenants of the church, before thou shalt take thy journey among the Lamanites.

15 And it shall be given thee from the time thou shalt go, until the time thou shalt return, what thou shalt do.

16 And thou must open thy mouth at all times, declaring my gospel with the sound of rejoicing. Amen.

Hiram Page

He was about five years older than the Prophet. He studied medicine at a young age and traveled considerably in New York and Canada practicing medicine. He married Catherine Whitmer in 1825. He left the Church in 1838 when the Whitmers were excommunicated.

Oliver was asked not to depart on his mission to the Lamanites until after an important conference of the elders of the Church to be held on September 26, 1830. At this conference Joseph was appointed by the voice of the conference as the only one authorized to receive revelations for the Church. Also Joseph presented at this conference another important revelation concerning the Lord’s second coming and calamities to occur at his advent [D&C 29 - The Millennium].

Following the conference, another revelation was given to the Whitmer brothers, David, John and Peter, Jr. [D&C 30 - More Counsel to the Whitmers]. Peter, Jr., was called to accompany Oliver on his mission to the Lamanites. A new convert, Thomas B. Marsh, also received a revelation [D&C 31 - Thomas B. Marsh], and two additional missionaries were added to Oliver’s missionary group, Ziba Peterson and Parley P. Pratt [D&C 32 - Mission to the Lamanites].

Section 29 The Millennium

The Church was born into a period of intense millennialism—a time when the Savior’s second coming was thought to be imminent by many of America’s Christians. There was no lack of interest within the new Church of Christ. In fact, there seemed to even exist in the Church the feeling and belief and hope that the Savior’s advent might occur during the life span of the charter members of the Church in this dispensation. So expectant were the early Mormons that these were indeed the last days that they eventually began to constantly search for signs that might give further evidence that the winding up scenes had begun. Later developments in church history testify to this enthusiastic anticipation. For example, in the Millennial Star, a publication the Church will establish in England, Parley P. Pratt regularly published a column in which he reported news of disasters such as an earthquake in Scotland, a plague in the Middle East, volcanic eruptions in the West Indies, and other “supernatural” occurrences which signified the last days before the Lord’s second coming. The final event preceding the second coming was to be the restoration of Israel. Parley P. Pratt wrote of this restoration:

Thus, all things seem preparing, in a political point of view, for the great restitution of Israel; and it is a matter of certainty that when the Jews gather home and rebuild Jerusalem, the second coming of Christ and the Millennium are just at the door. . . . We feel that the Second Advent is near, with the same assurance which we feel in regard to the near approach of summer when we see the trees put forth their leaves and blossom (Millennial Star, 1:75).

Predicting the coming of the great apocalyptic calamity, in which corrupt secular governments would be replaced by the kingdom of God on earth, Wilford Woodruff will later write:

It seems as though the nations at the present time were insane and their kings, presidents and senators entirely destitute of all wisdom. But they will all soon learn there is a God in Israel who is about to take peace from the earth and cut off nations not a few for great Babylon is about to come, in remembrance before God (Woodruff Journal, 17 February 1841, spelling and punctuation changes made for clarity).

While on a mission in England in 1841, Wilford Woodruff will write to Willard Richards, “I feel as though it will be day of warning and not of many words to England. I think that what we do, we shall do quickly” (letter of February 3, 1840). As brother Woodruff was preparing to leave his mission in England, he wrote that “the saints universally felt that the judgments of God are near in this land and are anxious to gather with the saints in Nauvoo as soon as possible” (Woodruff Journal, March 15, 1841).

A spirit of urgency surrounded the Church’s plan to prepare the earth for the Millennium. This grand plan consisted of three essential parts:

1. Conversion of the Indians—gathering this “lost remnant of the House of Israel” who had dwindled in unbelief. The tool to be used in this gathering was the Book of Mormon—the “testimony of their fathers.”

2. Establishing the city called New Jerusalem, as prophesied by John the Revelator (Revelation 21:2) and the Book of Mormon prophets (Ether 13). The New Jerusalem is a city that must serve as a refuge for the believers, against the terrors that will precede the one thousand year reign of the Lord. It is also a place where the temple of God will be built to which the Savior will come.

3. Gathering the scattered elect of God unto the New Jerusalem. Section 29 was given a few days before an important conference of the Church held on September 26, 1830. This revelation was given by the Lord in anticipation of that gathering.

The Lord had commanded Oliver to tarry until after this conference before departing on his mission to the Lamanites. The doctrines contained in this section are of such importance that it was considered vital by the Lord that Oliver and his companions know them and be able to teach them to those to whom they preached during their great mission.

Section 29 is essentially a miscellany on the second coming of the Lord, the Millennium, and the preparation of the earth for the Lord’s advent. It is the first large revelation dedicated primarily to eschatological themes (Eschatology is the study of last or final matters such as the Lord’s second coming, the final judgment, and the life hereafter). It is likely that the prophetic passages in the inspired revision of Genesis (which was in progress at the time) led Joseph to inquire of the Lord for more revelation concerning the last days.

For a more complete discussion of the Millennium, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 30, The Millennium.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 29 The Millennium

D&C 29:7-9 Ye are called to bring to pass the gathering of mine elect.

D&C 29:12 Mine apostles who were with me in Jerusalem will judge Israel.

D&C 29:22-24 End of millennium . . . a new heaven and new earth.

D&C 29:27-29 Fate of the sons of perdition—where I am they cannot come, for they have no power.

D&C 29:34-35 All thing unto me are spiritual—not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal.

D&C 29:36-37 The devil rebelled against God, saying, Give me thine honor, which is my power; and also a third part of the hosts of heaven turned he away from me because of their agency; and they were thrust down, and thus came the devil and his angels.

D&C 29:46-47 Little children are redeemed from the foundation of the world—for power is not given unto Satan to tempt little children.

1 Listen to the voice of Jesus Christ, your Redeemer, the Great I AM, whose arm of mercy hath atoned for your sins; verses 2, 7-9 In these verses for the first time the Lord introduces the concept of gathering.

2 Who will gather his people even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, even as many as will hearken to my voice and humble themselves before me, and call upon me in mighty prayer.

verse 2 “as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings” This expression is used in two additional places in the Doctrine and Covenants (see also D&C 10:65 and D&C 43:24). It evokes a poignant image of a mother hen gathering her chicks about her in a time of danger. It is obvious that the Savior is motivated, even driven, to gather his people Israel about him. Another analogy that helps us to understand the Lord’s infinite love and concern is that of a mother who is happiest when her children are gathered about her. She is thus able to see them and touch them and nurture and teach them and assure herself that they are safe.

Note also in this verse the Lord’s description of those scattered Israelites who will be qualified to gather in this last dispensation.

3 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that at this time your sins are forgiven you, therefore ye receive these things; but remember to sin no more, lest perils shall come upon you.

4 Verily, I say unto you that ye are chosen out of the world to declare my gospel with the sound of rejoicing, as with the voice of a trump.

5 Lift up your hearts and be glad, for I am in your midst, and am your advocate with the Father; and it is his good will to give you the kingdom.

verse 5 “it is his good will to give you the kingdom” It is the Father’s good will or good pleasure to restore his kingdom to the saints.

6 And, as it is written—Whatsoever ye shall ask in faith, being united in prayer according to my command, ye shall receive.

7 And ye are called to bring to pass the gathering of mine elect; for mine elect hear my voice and harden not their hearts;

verse 7 “the gathering of mine elect” Who are the Lord’s elect? They are those individuals in and out of the Church who by the purity of their lives and thoughts maintain a high level of responsiveness to the Spirit of God. They readily perceive and comprehend spiritual truths.

8 Wherefore the decree hath gone forth from the Father that they shall be gathered in unto one place upon the face of this land, to prepare their hearts and be prepared in all things against the day when tribulation and desolation are sent forth upon the wicked.

verses 7-8 In 1830 the Lord commanded that the saints physically gather to a single place—Zion—which will later be designated to be in Jackson County, Missouri. Today the Lord still commands that the saints should gather to Zion, but Zion has been redefined as being wherever the saints are in the world. The doctrine that the center pole of the “tent” of Zion will one day be in Jackson County, Missouri, is still apparently true doctrine. The “stakes” of this tent are found all over the world.

The role of Zion in the lives of those saints who gather to Zion is here set forth. It is “to prepare their hearts and be prepared in all things against the day when tribulation and desolation are sent forth upon the wicked.”

For a discussion of the phenomena of scattering and gathering, see the introductory discussion to 1 Nephi 20 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

9 For the hour is nigh and the day soon at hand when the earth is ripe; and all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, saith the Lord of Hosts, that wickedness shall not be upon the earth;

verse 9 “they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up” Apparently this “burning” of the wicked is to be taken literally and not just figuratively. (Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:238.) The scriptures also talk about the time when “devouring fire” will be poured out upon the wicked (D&C 29:21; 35:14; 1 Nephi 22:17, 23; Ezekiel 38:22; 39:6). This will, of course, occur at the time of the Lord’s second coming to the earth in glory.

10 For the hour is nigh, and that which was spoken by mine apostles must be fulfilled; for as they spoke so shall it come to pass; verse 10 The time is near at hand for the great destruction of the wicked to begin.

11 For I will reveal myself from heaven with power and great glory, with all the hosts thereof, and dwell in righteousness with men on earth a thousand years, and the wicked shall not stand.

12 And again, verily, verily, I say unto you, and it hath gone forth in a firm decree, by the will of the Father, that mine apostles, the Twelve which were with me in my ministry at Jerusalem, shall stand at my right hand at the day of my coming in a pillar of fire, being clothed with robes of righteousness, with crowns upon their heads, in glory even as I am, to judge the whole house of Israel, even as many as have loved me and kept my commandments, and none else.

verse 12 The original Twelve whom Christ called during his mortal ministry in the Old World will have a role in judging those of the house of Israel. Several unanswered questions remain concerning the judgment of mankind. We have discussed previously the concept that the essence of the judgment will be evident at the instant of our resurrection since we will be resurrected with a celestial, terrestrial, or telestial body. What part of the judgment then remains? It will be exciting to learn exactly what role these original twelve apostles will have in the judgment of the house of Israel.

13 For a trump shall sound both long and loud, even as upon Mount Sinai, and all the earth shall quake, and they shall come forth—yea, even the dead which died in me, to receive a crown of righteousness, and to be clothed upon, even as I am, to be with me, that we may be one.

verses 14-21 We encounter for the first time in the Doctrine and Covenants the concept of the divinely orchestrated signs of the Lord’s second coming. These may be referred to as “signs of the times” or “signs of the coming of the Son of Man.” For a discussion of this subject, please see three chapters in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3. These are chapter 24, Sign’s of the Lord’s Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse. The commentary notes in this section will only be those not included in those chapters.

The Prophet Joseph said, “I will prophesy that the signs of the coming of the Son of Man are already commenced. One pestilence will desolate after another. We shall soon have war and bloodshed. The moon will be turned into blood. I testify of these things, and that the coming of the Son of Man is nigh, even at your doors” (HC, 3:390).

14 But, behold, I say unto you that before this great day shall come the sun shall be darkened, and the moon shall be turned into blood, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and there shall be greater signs in heaven above and in the earth beneath;

verse 14 “this great day” This expression refers to the great day of the coming of the Lord which will be a day of great destruction on the earth when all telestial elements will be destroyed from off the earth. Charles A. Callis, in General Conference said, “Now brethren and sisters, the great day of the Lord is coming. It is going to be a terrible day. The wicked are going to be destroyed, and when I say the wicked I do not mean everybody outside the Mormon Church. There will be countless millions of people not of this Church spared because they are not ripe in iniquity and to them we will preach the everlasting Gospel and bring them unto Christ” (CR, April 1935, 18).

When the natural signs (those that warn) shall lose their effect on humankind, they will be superseded by even greater signs in heaven and earth—signs that certainly will get our attention and will teach a stronger and more pointed message than their predecessors. These are the signs and punish and cleanse. Among these greater signs will be the pestilences and disasters that will precede the Lord’s coming, as described in verses 15-21. If humanity will not listen to the quiet natural signs we have already been given, the Lord will speak to us more loudly as the end approaches.

15 And there shall be weeping and wailing among the hosts of men; verse 16 “there shall be a great hailstorm” John the Revelator described this hailstorm in Revelation 16:21 and informed us that the hailstones will weigh about a talent each or somewhere between 50 and 100 pounds. Because there were several different weights of talents in the ancient world, more information would be needed to give an exact weight, but these are the broad limits.

16 And there shall be a great hailstorm sent forth to destroy the crops of the earth.

17 And it shall come to pass, because of the wickedness of the world, that I will take vengeance upon the wicked, for they will not repent; for the cup of mine indignation is full; for behold, my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not.

verse 17 “I will take vengeance upon the wicked” Vengeance is the application of punishment to wrongdoers. The Lord has said that “vengeance is mine” (Romans 12:19). The Lord’s vengeance is neither wrong nor unjust. It is the punishment the Lord metes out to satisfy the demands of justice so that the wicked may be forgiven and eventually receive some degree of glory. What form does the Lord’s vengeance or punishment take? It obviously causes suffering by those who receive it. Is this suffering for a good purpose, or is it purely punitive and meted out by the Lord to the unrepentant as punishment of discipline for their recalcitrance? We have previously discussed that there is nothing of purely punitive or arbitrary suffering in the Lord’s universe.

“the cup of mine indignation is full” This figurative cup symbolizes the accumulated iniquities of the wicked. After the death of the wicked, justice will demand that they drink that which they have prepared for themselves (see D&C 43:26; 103:3; Revelation 14:10). It is a bitter cup, figuratively full of the indignation, wrath, or anger of God at their failure to repent. This bitterness can be removed only by drinking the cup themselves and paying the full penalty for their sins (D&C 19:15-19).

“my blood shall not cleanse them if they hear me not” There are only two possibilities for fallen and sinful man: either he gets clean or he stays filthy. The only way to get clean is through the blood—the atonement—of Jesus Christ. Thus, those in the gospel covenant are sometimes said to be “washed in the blood of the lamb” (Ether 13:11; see also Alma 13:11; Revelation 7:14). Those few who steadfastly refuse to repent and accept the atonement of Christ, either in this life or in the spirit world, will be raised up “filthy still” to stand before God at the final judgment, and they will be cast out into outer darkness (D&C 88:35).

President Spencer W. Kimball taught: “But if we do not repent, then the Lord clearly lets us know that there will be discipline and a denial of blessings and advancement. The Lord teaches that he cannot forgive people ‘in’ their sins. He can only save them ‘from’ their abandoned sins” (Ensign, October 1982, 5).

verses 18-20 Those divinely orchestrated signs of the Lord’s second coming may be divided generally into two categories: those that warn and those that punish and cleanse (purge and destroy). The following three verses generally describe the category of signs that punish and cleanse. The sufferings these verses describe may be intended to be figurative (symbolic) or literal.

18 Wherefore, I the Lord God will send forth flies upon the face of the earth, which shall take hold of the inhabitants thereof, and shall eat their flesh, and shall cause maggots to come in upon them;

19 And their tongues shall be stayed that they shall not utter against me; and their flesh shall fall from off their bones, and their eyes from their sockets;

20 And it shall come to pass that the beasts of the forest and the fowls of the air shall devour them up.

21 And the great and abominable church, which is the whore of all the earth, shall be cast down by devouring fire, according as it is spoken by the mouth of Ezekiel the prophet, who spoke of these things, which have not come to pass but surely must, as I live, for abominations shall not reign.

verse 21 “the great and abominable church” This is the only occurrence of this phrase in the Doctrine and Covenants, though the great and abominable is probably identical to the churches built up “to get gain” in D&C 10:56 and “the church of the devil” in D&C 18:20.

The phrase “great and abominable church” does not refer to any particular denomination, neither Roman Catholics, nor Jews, nor Baptists, nor any other individual church. In its broadest definition, the great and abominable church is the collective term for all who oppose or fight against Zion. It is also a general term for any manifestation of Satan’s form of religion—religion practiced for money, gain, or pleasure, or religion that seeks to justify wickedness. For this reason the great and abominable church is called the whore of all the earth, because for her, everything is negotiable (all values, standards, and principles) and because anything can be bought or arranged for with enough money. All who qualify under the label of great and abominable church will be part of the telestial carnage at the time of the Lord's second coming.

22 And again, verily, verily, I say unto you that when the thousand years are ended, and men again begin to deny their God, then will I spare the earth but for a little season;

verse 22 “when the thousand years are ended” After the end of the Millennium, some mortals upon the terrestrial earth will once again rebel against God. This rebellion will be allowed to go on for a little while, but then there shall be another end—this time the end of the terrestrial world. This is often referred to as the “end of the earth,” as opposed to the “end of the world” which occurs at the beginning of the Millennium. Other scriptures tell us that after the Millennium, Satan will again get power over mortals and will gather all his forces for one final contest, the battle of the Great God, which Satan will lose (see D&C 88:110-16; Revelation 20:7-21:1). This is sometimes called the battle of Gog and Magog (see Revelation 20:8; Ezekiel 38-39). Then the earth itself will experience a change comparable to death and resurrection, passing away as a terrestrial world and being born again or resurrected as a celestial world (see D&C 88:26). A “new heaven and a new earth” (verse 23) are promised by the Lord and recorded by the sacred writers. Or, in other words, the planetary systems are to be changed. Could it be that the earth will be moved and take up its place in a new planetary system as a celestial planet?

23 And the end shall come, and the heaven and the earth shall be consumed and pass away, and there shall be a new heaven and a new earth.

verse 23 “there shall be a new heaven and a new earth” Just as man dies and is resurrected with a new eternal body, so will the earth die (at the end of the one thousand-year millennial period) and be resurrected. The earth will be resurrected with a celestial body. All of the matter upon the earth will be celestial matter. The earth will become the home of all those who lived upon the earth who are worthy of an eternal celestial reward.

24 For all old things shall pass away, and all things shall become new, even the heaven and the earth, and all the fulness thereof, both men and beasts, the fowls of the air, and the fishes of the sea; verse 24 All things shall be resurrected: the earth, man, animals, birds, fish, etc. Those who inherit the earth will be resurrected with a celestial body, and those who inherit lesser degrees of glory will be resurrected with terrestrial or telestial bodies.

25 And not one hair, neither mote, shall be lost, for it is the workmanship of mine hand.

verse 25 The earth and all things in it will be resurrected with eternal “perfect” bodies.

26 But, behold, verily I say unto you, before the earth shall pass away, Michael, mine archangel, shall sound his trump, and then shall all the dead awake, for their graves shall be opened, and they shall come forth—yea, even all.

verse 26 “Michael, mine archangel” Although Jewish and Christian tradition make Michael one of several archangels, the scriptures themselves refer predominantly to Michael, the archangel (see D&C 88:112; 107:54; Jude 1:9). Archangel in Greek means “first angel,” or “ruling angel,” or “presiding angel.” Though there may be other angels in positions of authority, there is only one angel who presides over all the others, and that is Michael who was first of all the angels of God and who presides over all who came after him. D&C 128:21 seems to give priority to Michael the archangel over Gabriel, Raphael, and other angels who were also in positions of authority in the premortal life. Christian tradition credits Gabriel with the trumpet blast that will wake the dead and bring them to judgment—as in “Gabriel, blow your horn!”—but this verse tells us that Michael will sound that great blast.

Resurrection is a priesthood ordinance, and the individual who holds all the priesthood keys of all of the dispensations of the earth is Adam. Apparently he has some role, perhaps a central role in the process of the resurrection of mankind. He likely holds the keys of the resurrection, which keys have not been given the prophets of the earth.

All of mankind, save for Satan and the third part of the hosts of heaven who followed him, will be resurrected under the supervision of Adam. Some will come forth with celestial bodies; some with terrestrial; others with telestial bodies; and a few with bodies destined for outer darkness. The reader may wish to review the sequence of the resurrection in the commentary for Alma 40:16-20 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

After the earth is cleansed and purified and becomes a celestial globe, Adam will preside over the children of men, who are of his posterity (D&C 107:54-57).

“then shall all the dead awake, for their graves shall be opened” Everyone who has ever lived on this earth will be resurrected. This includes the wicked and even those who will be cast into outer darkness at judgment. No one who has ever been born into this earth and received a mortal body will be denied resurrection.

27 And the righteous shall be gathered on my right hand unto eternal life; and the wicked on my left hand will I be ashamed to own before the Father;

28 Wherefore I will say unto them—Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels.

29 And now, behold, I say unto you, never at any time have I declared from mine own mouth that they should return, for where I am they cannot come, for they have no power.

verses 26-29 The judgment scene alluded to here is the judgment from the great white throne (see Revelation 20:11-15) that occurs after the second resurrection—that is, after all have been resurrected. This is the only judgment that involves all the dead at once. The “wicked” spoken of here are those who still at that time stubbornly refuse to repent, even after suffering the pains of hell in the spirit world. These are they who suffer the second death and who cannot be given any glory, because they will not come to Christ. They are to be cast out with the devil and his angels into outer darkness—spoken of figuratively in verse 28 as “everlasting fire”—and are called sons of perdition (D&C 76:31-38; see also McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 280-81).

The “righteous,” on the other hand, are all those who have repented, whether in mortality or in the spirit prison, and have turned to Christ to be saved. They include all who will be given some degree of glory, whether celestial, terrestrial, or telestial. For Jesus Christ saves and glorifies “all the works of his hands” (see D&C 76:43, 88). This is different from the earlier judgment scene at the second coming, where those on the Savior’s right hand are limited to those who repented in mortality, or would have repented, given the opportunity, and who will inherit the celestial kingdom.

30 But remember that all my judgments are not given unto men; and as the words have gone forth out of my mouth even so shall they be fulfilled, that the first shall be last, and that the last shall be first in all things whatsoever I have created by the word of my power, which is the power of my Spirit.

verse 30 “all my judgments are not given unto men” This phrase means that man is not given to know or completely understand the judgments of the Lord. Though we do not understand all the reasons for his actions, we may be certain that all of God’s judgments are just and right.

The Prophet Joseph wrote:

He [God] holds the reins of judgment in his hands; he is a wise lawgiver, and will judge all men, not according to the narrow, contracted notions of men, but, “according to the deeds done in the body whether they be good or evil.” . . . He will judge them “not according to what they have not, but according to what they have,” those who have lived without law, will be judged without law, and those who have a law, will be judged by that law. We need not doubt the wisdom and intelligence of the Great Jehovah; he will award judgment or mercy to all nations according to their several deserts, their means of obtaining intelligence, the laws by which they are governed, the facilities afforded them of obtaining correct information, and his inscrutable designs in relation to the human family; and when the designs of God shall be made manifest, and the curtain of futurity be withdrawn, we shall all of us eventually have to confess that the Judge of all the earth has done right (HC, 4:595-96).

“the first shall be last, and . . . the last shall be first in all things” The beginning of Christ’s work—creation—is to get us here to earth, to bring us from the spiritual realm to the temporal. The end of Christ’s work—redemption—is to get us home again, from the temporal realm back to the spiritual. So in this instance, as in many others, the first will be last and the last will be first—the end of Christ work will then be of primal importance.

“word of my power, which is the power of my Spirit” Both the phrases “word of my power” and “power of my Spirit” refer to Jesus Christ.

31 For by the power of my Spirit created I them; yea, all things both spiritual and temporal—

32 First spiritual, secondly temporal, which is the beginning of my work; and again, first temporal, and secondly spiritual, which is the last of my work—verses 31-32 All things have a spiritual as well as a temporal creation. That is all intelligences were first embodied with spirit matter (spirit bodies), and subsequently they were embodied with mortal matter (mortal bodies). The sequence apparently also applies to all things of the earth including animals, plants, and even the so-called “inanimate” things of the earth.

33 Speaking unto you that you may naturally understand; but unto myself my works have no end, neither beginning; but it is given unto you that ye may understand, because ye have asked it of me and are agreed.

verse 33 “that you may naturally understand” That we may understand with our limited, mortal, natural minds. Actually, the reference points of “the beginning” and “the end” are artificial and are used by the Lord only so that we mortals can make sense of his words. From God’s perspective, there is no beginning and no end, a concept that is impossible for us mortals to completely understand.

Likewise the division of things into temporal and spiritual is also an artificial human way of looking at things, for from God’s perspective all things are spiritual—all things have spiritual implications—and all that God does and says has eternal, spiritual significance.

34 Wherefore, verily I say unto you that all things unto me are spiritual, and not at any time have I given unto you a law which was temporal; neither any man, nor the children of men; neither Adam, your father, whom I created.

verse 34 An important verse stating clearly that none of God’s laws is purely temporal. Smith and Sjodahl in their Doctrine and Covenants Commentary wrote:

Man makes a distinction between temporal and spiritual laws, and some are very much concerned about keeping the two separate. To the Lord every thing is both spiritual and temporal, and the laws he gives are consequently spiritual, because they concern spiritual beings. When he commanded Adam to eat bread in the sweat of his brow, or Moses to strike the rock that the people might drink, or the Prophet Joseph to erect the Nauvoo House, or the saints in Utah to build fences and roads, such laws were for their spiritual welfare, as well as physical. To obey such laws, when given, is a spiritual duty. One who performs his daily labor “as to the Lord, and not to men” (Ephesians 6:7) derives spiritual benefit from whatever his duties are (156).

“neither any man, nor the children of men; neither Adam, your father” The Lord emphasizes the fact that no purely temporal commandment has ever been given to any man.

“Adam . . . whom I created” We know that the speaker here is the Lord Jesus Christ, and he speaking as though he were the Father by the principle of divine investiture of authority.

35 Behold, I gave unto him that he should be an agent unto himself; and I gave unto him commandment, but no temporal commandment gave I unto him, for my commandments are spiritual; they are not natural nor temporal, neither carnal nor sensual.

verse 35 “Him,” in this verse of refers to all mankind.

verses 36-39 From the second line in verse 36 to the end of verse 39 (the material between the two dashes) we find a parenthetical interruption to the original line of thought, which expands upon the origin and function of the devil. The subject begun in verse 36, the temptation of Adam, resumes in verse 40.

36 And it came to pass that Adam, being tempted of the devil—for, behold, the devil was before Adam, for he rebelled against me, saying, Give me thine honor, which is my power; and also a third part of the hosts of heaven turned he away from me because of their agency; verse 36 A very important verse! The only verse of scripture in all four standard works that states clearly that one-third of the hosts of heaven rebelled.

“being tempted of the devil” The word devil is from the Greek diabolos, meaning “one who separates or divides.”

“for he rebelled against me, saying, Give me thine honor, which is my power” Herein lies an important clue as to the very basis of God’s power. God has taught us that his power does not come from above; but from beneath (see D&C 63:59). That is, he would not, nor indeed can he, force any individual to do anything against that individual’s will. Agency is the law of heaven which God will not ever and cannot violate or abrogate. The great majority of God's creations hold him in high esteem and are inclined to obey him. When he commands, he does not force, rather he requests, and all of his creations are inclined to obey him because they hold him in the highest honor. See the discussion in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 14, The Power of God.

A scriptural example of God's use of his power occurred during the creation of this world, the Lord and those assisting him did not authoritatively command that the creation take place. Rather, they requested of the intelligences that they organize themselves. Then, they were obliged to "watch those things which they had ordered until they obeyed" (Abraham 4:18).

Satan, knowing the basis of God's power, made the laughable request of the Father "Give me thine honor." Satan knew that if all of the intelligences in God's kingdom honored him as they honor God, then Satan would possess the same power that God possesses—the intelligences would be inclined to obey him as they obey God. That Satan's request is completely ludicrous is obvious to all.

37 And they were thrust down, and thus came the devil and his angels; verse 37 Satan and his adherents, one-third of the hosts of heaven, were thrust down to earth, never to receive a mortal body and never to be resurrected.

38 And, behold, there is a place prepared for them from the beginning, which place is hell.

verse 38 Generally, the word hell in scripture refers to the spirit world, especially that part of the world of spirits we call prison. Here, however, hell is used to refer to the awful fate of the sons of perdition—outer darkness. There is no indication in scripture that there will ever be a redemption for these unfortunate souls.

39 And it must needs be that the devil should tempt the children of men, or they could not be agents unto themselves; for if they never should have bitter they could not know the sweet—verse 39 Is the devil's influence essential in order for a man to be able to use his agency to decide between right and wrong? If the devil and his minions were not here on earth, would our existence be all sweetness without any of the bitterness of temptation to do evil? It would not, as we would still experience adversity in the form of our natural self. But certainly the moral challenges of this world are greatly enhanced through Satan's skillful manipulations.

40 Wherefore, it came to pass that the devil tempted Adam, and he partook of the forbidden fruit and transgressed the commandment, wherein he became subject to the will of the devil, because he yielded unto temptation.

verse 40 There may be some connection between section 29 and Joseph's work on the King James Bible revision. He had started in June 1830 with Genesis. Section 29 contains reference to Adam, the Garden of Eden, the Creation, the Fall, etc.

“because he yielded unto temptation” Here is a pertinent reminder that whenever we give in to our natural self and to the promptings of Satan, we experience an automatic incremental increase in our inclination to give in to his promptings again and again. Contrariwise, when we are able to overcome our natural self and obey, we earn an incremental increase in an enhanced responsiveness to the promptings of the Spirit and a greater inclination to overcome our natural inclinations again. In short, obedience leads to protection from Satan's evil influences.

41 Wherefore, I, the Lord God, caused that he should be cast out from the Garden of Eden, from my presence, because of his transgression, wherein he became spiritually dead, which is the first death, even that same death which is the last death, which is spiritual, which shall be pronounced upon the wicked when I shall say: Depart, ye cursed.

verse 41 “he became spiritually dead, which is the first death” The “he” here refers to Adam. The first death is that temporary spiritual death which Adam and all of us experience because of the transgression of Adam. To become “spiritually dead,” as is written in this verse, does not imply that our spirit is destroyed or ceases to function. Rather this phrase simply means that we are separated from God. Through Christ's atonement and resurrection, he completely overcame this spiritual death (as well as physical death) for all people. That is, no one will ever suffer permanently because of Adam's transgression.

The second or “last” death is a permanent separation of man from God caused by a man's own sins and his persistent refusal to repent and be saved by the Savior's atonement. These are those who, in the final judgment following the Millennium, will be condemned by the Lord to outer darkness for eternity. He will say, “Depart, ye cursed.”

This verse suggests that these two deaths are the same—“even that same death which is the last death”—but they are the same only in that they are both spiritual deaths, that is, a separation of man from God.

42 But, behold, I say unto you that I, the Lord God, gave unto Adam and unto his seed, that they should not die as to the temporal death, until I, the Lord God, should send forth angels to declare unto them repentance and redemption, through faith on the name of mine Only Begotten Son.

verse 42 Apparently, the lives of Adam and his children before the Flood were lengthened so that no one died during Adam's dispensation without first having had the opportunity to accept or reject the gospel (see 2 Nephi 2:21). Further, it would seem that in Noah's pre-flood dispensation the Lord was particularly inclined to send to the earth angels to preach his gospel (Moses 5:58; 7:27). This longevity changed with the Flood (see Genesis 6:3), and it then became possible for people to die in ignorance. Perhaps that is why preaching the gospel to spirits in prison is often described as beginning with those “which sometime were disobedient [not ignorant], when once the long-suffering of God waited in the days of Noah” (see D&C 138:9; 1 Peter 3:20). Thus, through the preaching of Adam, Enoch, Noah, angels from heaven, and even God himself (see Moses 5:58), no one who died before the Flood died in ignorance.

43 And thus did I, the Lord God, appoint unto man the days of his probation—that by his natural death he might be raised in immortality unto eternal life, even as many as would believe; verse 43 “the days of his probation” This term means the days of our mortal lives. However, for those who are not blessed to be placed, at their mortal death, in a state of paradise in the spirit world, it also includes the experience in spirit prison. No one can be said to have utterly and permanently failed their test or probation until their resurrection takes place, when any change in glory is no longer possible and when those who have refused to repent will be “filthy still” and the Lord will command them to depart.

44 And they that believe not unto eternal damnation; for they cannot be redeemed from their spiritual fall, because they repent not;

verse 44 God does not condemn anyone to outer darkness except those who steadfastly refuse to repent and allow Christ to extend to them the blessings of the atonement.

45 For they love darkness rather than light, and their deeds are evil, and they receive their wages of whom they list to obey.

verse 45 To “list” to obey is to prefer, choose, or want to obey.

46 But behold, I say unto you, that little children are redeemed from the foundation of the world through mine Only Begotten; verse 46 The plan of salvation has made merciful provisions for those who die before the age of accountability and for the mentally handicapped.

47 Wherefore, they cannot sin, for power is not given unto Satan to tempt little children, until they begin to become accountable before me;

verse 47 Unaccountable children and the mentally handicapped are not assessed a penalty by the law of justice when they inadvertently sin. Should they never have a chance to live in mortality as accountable individuals, they will be judged by a merciful and all knowing Savior who will see to their eternal happiness and welfare.

48 For it is given unto them even as I will, according to mine own pleasure, that great things may be required at the hand of their fathers.

verse 48 This verse contains two ideas joined by the conjunction “that” which implies a relationship between the two.

“For it is given unto them even as I will, according to mine own pleasure”

One is tempted to interpret this phrase as meaning that the eternal reward of the unaccountable is meted out by the merciful Lord at his own good pleasure. But this meaning is difficult to connect to the second phrase in the verse. Hence, we must wonder if the Lord might be intending to say here that the premature deaths of some children or the mental handicaps of some individuals might be even orchestrated by the Lord “even as I will, according to mine own pleasure.” This is difficult doctrine, as we know that much of adversity here on earth is simply the result of the built-in nature of mortality. Most adversities are what we might term “mortal accidents.” I personally find it difficult to believe that all premature deaths and congenital handicaps are individually orchestrated by the Lord. See a discussion of this matter in chapter 1, volume 3 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, Adversity and Suffering. Particularly see the section titled “How Might We Categorize Adversities and Sufferings.” See also chapter 2 of that same volume, The Roles of Suffering in Our Lives.

“that great things may be required at the hand of their fathers” In the teaching of unaccountable children and in the rearing of mentally handicapped children there are great obligations and great challenges. Could it be that this verse is teaching us that the Lord may allow or even cause that some children may die before the age of accountability or that some children are born with mental handicaps so that their parents might be tested? During the period of time before children are accountable, “fathers” (parents) are to teach them correct principles. Otherwise, the “sin [will] be upon the heads of the parents” (D&C 68:25). Perhaps a similar obligation may bear upon those parents rearing mentally handicapped children.

49 And, again, I say unto you, that whoso having knowledge, have I not commanded to repent?

verse 49 The phrase “whoso having knowledge” refers to those who are accountable for their own sins.

50 And he that hath no understanding, it remaineth in me to do according as it is written. And now I declare no more unto you at this time. Amen.

verse 50 “he that hath no understanding” This phrase applies to those who are mentally deficient or to those who are too young to be accountable before the Lord. The Lord will judge them perfectly fairly according to what will make them happy and fulfilled for all eternity.

Section 30 More Counsel to the Whitmers

This is another revelation given to the Whitmer brothers: David, Peter, Jr., and John (see also sections 14, 15, and 16). At the time Joseph was still living in the Whitmer home in Fayette. Section 30 was received in September 1830 at the close of the quarterly conference of the Elders of the Church in Fayette, New York, but before anyone had returned home. Like section 23, this section is another composite revelation in that this material was printed as three different chapters in the Book of Commandments as chapters 30-32. In the 1835 Doctrine and Covenants these three were joined together to form one section. David is reminded to be obedient to those in authority over him and to stay at home. Peter is called to serve a mission to the Lamanites with Oliver Cowdery, and John is commanded to preach in the nearby area of Seneca Falls, New York, where lived a convert named Philip Burroughs.

1 Behold, I say unto you, David, that you have feared man and have not relied on me for strength as you ought.

verse 1 “you have feared man” This phrase refers to an over-concern with what people think and with political or social consequences. David had given too much weight to the opinions and feelings of people around him, particularly Hiram Page. Like David Whitmer, many of us worry too much about how our peers, colleagues, friends, neighbors, or family might react if we make a “big deal” of our religious convictions, yet we aren’t concerned enough about how God will react if we abandon or adjust those convictions in order to “get along.” The desire of some people to be considered broad-minded, intellectual, flexible, or non-dogmatic by the world is greater than their desire to be deemed faithful by the Lord—they cannot bring themselves to offend the idols of Babylon. It is true that people who are absolutely committed to the gospel are often also irritating to their more worldly neighbors because they will not negotiate or compromise their beliefs for the sake of better relations with others.

2 But your mind has been on the things of the earth more than on the things of me, your Maker, and the ministry whereunto you have been called; and you have not given heed unto my Spirit, and to those who were set over you, but have been persuaded by those whom I have not commanded.

verses 1-2 David Whitmer had been a strict Presbyterian and was always a man of high principles. It would be a mistake to think from these verses that he was worldly. He was engaged in farming about the time of his revelation, so “things of the earth” probably has reference to these farming activities, which may have prevented him from doing the work of the ministry. Since this revelation was received at harvest time, there is added reason for supposing that the Lord is referring to farming rather than worldliness. It is also possible that he is being rebuked at least in part for his role in the Hiram Page seerstone affair. David had been one of Hiram Page's chief supporters in that affair. It is understandable that the Lord was displeased with David Whitmer. David, after all, had been one of the three witnesses of the Book of Mormon. He had stood in the presence of an angel and had heard a voice from heaven testify to the truthfulness of the book and the divine calling of Joseph Smith. Yet when the first counterfeit revelations came along little more than a year later, David Whitmer was among the first to be misled.

“you have not given heed unto my Spirit, and to those who were set over you” The two things that would have kept David (or any or us) from erring were the promptings of the Holy Ghost and the counsel of church leaders, but he did not listen to either of these in the Hiram Page affair.

“those whom I have not commanded” This phrase refers to those outside the priesthood line of authority.

3 Wherefore, you are left to inquire for yourself at my hand, and ponder upon the things which you have received.

4 And your home shall be at your father's house, until I give unto you further commandments. And you shall attend to the ministry in the church, and before the world, and in the regions round about. Amen.

5 Behold, I say unto you, Peter, that you shall take your journey with your brother Oliver; for the time has come that it is expedient in me that you shall open your mouth to declare my gospel; therefore, fear not, but give heed unto the words and advice of your brother, which he shall give you.

verse 5 Note that Peter, Jr., is not rebuked. Apparently he was innocent in the matter of the Hiram Page seerstone. He is called to serve as a missionary to the Lamanites in the capacity of a “junior companion.” Along with Oliver Cowdery, Parley Pratt, and Ziba Peterson, Peter traveled by foot across New York, Ohio, Indiana, and Missouri to the federal Indian lands then beyond the borders of the United States. Peter remained faithful until his death in Missouri in 1836.

6 And be you afflicted in all his afflictions, ever lifting up your heart unto me in prayer and faith, for his and your deliverance; for I have given unto him power to build up my church among the Lamanites;

7 And none have I appointed to be his counselor over him in the church, concerning church matters, except it is his brother, Joseph Smith, Jun.

8 Wherefore, give heed unto these things and be diligent in keeping my commandments, and you shall be blessed unto eternal life. Amen.

9 Behold, I say unto you, my servant John, that thou shalt commence from this time forth to proclaim my gospel, as with the voice of a trump.

verse 9 John Whitmer is called to undertake a mission in his own neighborhood in Seneca County, New York.

10 And your labor shall be at your brother Philip Burroughs', and in that region round about, yea, wherever you can be heard, until I command you to go from hence.

verse 10 Apparently Philip Burroughs was a member of the Church in Seneca Falls, New York, which was just a few miles north of Fayette.

11 And your whole labor shall be in Zion, with all your soul, from henceforth; yea, you shall ever open your mouth in my cause, not fearing what man can do, for I am with you. Amen.

verse 11 “your whole labor shall be in Zion” Perhaps this is a foreshadowing of John Whitmer’s still future call to replace Oliver Cowdery as church historian (see D&C 47).

This verse contains the first mention of the concept of “Zion” in the Doctrine and Covenants. For a discussion of the concept of Zion see the introductory comments for section 101.

Section 31 Thomas B. Marsh

This is a general revelation to this new convert to the Church received at the close of the conference of the elders of the Church in September 26, 1830, in Fayette. It was received at the same time as section 30.

Born in Massachusetts November 1, 1799, Thomas Marsh was six years older than the Prophet. In his early twenties he joined the Methodist Church. However, on comparing its doctrines with scripture, he was unable to make them correspond. Thus he withdrew from all organized religion. He expected and, indeed, predicted the rise of a new church which would promulgate the pure truth.

At age 29, in 1829, he was moved by the Spirit to make a journey west during which he heard of the Book of Mormon. He then traveled to Palmyra and met Martin Harris at the office of E. B. Grandin. He was given some proof sheets containing sixteen pages of the Book of Mormon manuscript. On studying these few pages, he and his wife Elizabeth received a testimony of the Spirit.

He was a obviously one of the Lord's elect, prepared for the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ. In the words of Joseph Smith, "Here indeed was a man called to greatness by the Lord" (HC, 1:117). He later met Oliver Cowdery and remained with him two days, receiving from him the full story of the coming forth of the Book of Mormon.

After returning to his home near Boston, he kept up a correspondence with the Prophet and Oliver for the next year. Upon learning of the organization of the Church, he moved to Palmyra in September of 1830 and stayed for a while with the Smith family in Manchester. He was baptized by David Whitmer in Cayuga Lake, one of the Finger Lakes near Fayette, on September 3, 1830, and "in a few days" was ordained an elder by Oliver Cowdery. This ordination must have taken place before the September conference began, since Thomas B. Marsh was listed as one of the elders in attendance. His family accompanied him to Palmyra and joined the Church some time later.

He will be ordained an apostle April 25 or 26, 1835, at Kirtland, Ohio. In August, 1838, a year of tragic apostasy in Kirtland, he became disaffected and turned traitor to his brethren. At that time he had been president of the Quorum of the Twelve for more than three years.

In August 1838 the oft-quoted "cream strippings" incident occurred. Strippings are the last extra-rich bit of milk pressed from the cows udder when milking. Thomas's wife, Elizabeth, and George W. Harris's wife, Lucinda, desired to make cheese, and, as George A. Smith explained, "neither of them possessing the requisite number of cows, they agreed to exchange milk. . . . It was agreed that they should not save the strippings, but that the milk and strippings should all go together. . . . Mrs. Marsh, wishing to make some extra good cheese, saved a pint of strippings from each cow and sent Mrs. Harris the milk without the strippings” (JD, 3:283). From small beginnings the issue over the strippings escalated. Eventually a church trial was held. The bishop concluded that Elizabeth had defrauded Lucinda. Thomas appealed to the high council. When their decision affirmed the previous decision, he appealed to the First Presidency of the Church, who affirmed that Elizabeth was guilty. George A. Smith said that “Thomas B. Marsh then declared that he would sustain the character of his wife, even if he had to go to hell for it” (JD, 3:84). The Lord sought to change the course that Thomas was pursuing by giving him a revelation: “In it God told him what to do, and that was to sustain Brother Joseph. . . . But no, he took a course to sustain his wife and oppose the prophet of God, and she led him away.” After leaving the Church Thomas and Lucinda went to Richmond, Missouri, and, as Joseph Smith wrote, “made affidavit . . . to all the vilest slanders, aspersions, lies and calumnies towards myself and the Church that he could invent. . . . Now he has fallen, lied and sworn falsely, and is ready to take the lives of his best friends” (History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, ed. B. H. Roberts, 7 vols. [Salt Lake City: The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, 1932-51], 3:167). Among other things, Marsh made an affidavit to the effect that the “Mormons” had a company called “Danites,” organized for the purpose of murdering “enemies”—a statement he certainly knew to be false. He was eventually cut off for apostasy, at Quincy, Illinois, March 17, 1839. After that he became a vagabond, without resting-place, without peace, for many years.

In 1857, after the death of his wife Elizabeth, for whose sake he had left the Church, Thomas was rebaptized at Winter Quarters in Florence, Nebraska. He never again was restored to his standing among the Twelve. He then traveled to Salt Lake City, and asked forgiveness and reinstatement in the Church. President Young introduced him to the audience in the Bowery, on the 6th of September. He told the congregation that he had suffered greatly during his absence from the Church, but that he acknowledged the hand of the Lord in the chastisement he had received. He made the following significant remark concerning the beginning of his apostasy:

I became jealous of the Prophet, and then I saw double and overlooked everything that was right, and spent all my time in looking for the evil. I saw a beam in Brother Joseph’s eye, but it was nothing but a mote, and my own eye was filled with the beam. I talked with Brother Brigham and Brother Heber, and I wanted them to be mad like myself; and I saw they were not mad, and I got madder still because they were not. Brother Brigham, with a cautious look, said, “Are you the leader of the Church, Brother Thomas?” I answered, “No!” “Well then,” said he, “Why do you not let that alone?” Well, this was about the amount of my hypocrisy. I meddled with that which was not my business” (JD, 5:207).

At the conclusion of his address he was by unanimous vote received into full fellowship as a member of the Church. Had Thomas Marsh remained faithful after 1838, he would have been senior to Brigham Young and might have succeeded Joseph Smith as President of the Church when the Prophet was murdered in 1844 (see D&C 112).

1 Thomas, my son, blessed are you because of your faith in my work.

verse 1 The Lord commends him for his uncommon faith. From the moment he had read just sixteen pages of the Book of Mormon, he had evidenced his willingness to do whatever it took to join with the saints become a worker in the kingdom.

2 Behold, you have had many afflictions because of your family; nevertheless, I will bless you and your family, yea, your little ones; and the day cometh that they will believe and know the truth and be one with you in my church.

verse 2 “Behold, you have had many afflictions because of your family” The reference here is probably to Thomas’s extended family rather than his immediate family, for at this time his wife was an enthusiastic believer in the restored gospel, and their children were still quite small and unlikely to offer their parents much affliction.

“the day cometh that they will believe and know the truth and be one with you in my church” Thomas is promised that his children would eventually join the Church although, like most such blessings, this was conditioned upon Thomas’s continuing faithfulness (see 58:31-33).

3 Lift up your heart and rejoice, for the hour of your mission is come; and your tongue shall be loosed, and you shall declare glad tidings of great joy unto this generation.

verse 3 “and your tongue shall be loosed” Brother Marsh was a powerful speaker. At the time of the troubles in Clay County, Missouri, in 1836, he was a member of a committee selected to lay grievances of the saints before the authorities of the state. On one occasion at a meeting at the city of Liberty, he spoke of the persecution the saints had suffered, so eloquently that General Atchinson, in attendance at the meeting, and others wept. The meeting passed resolutions to assist the saints in finding a new location.

4 You shall declare the things which have been revealed to my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun. You shall begin to preach from this time forth, yea, to reap in the field which is white already to be burned.

verse 4 “You shall declare the things which have been revealed to my servant, Joseph Smith, Jun.” Thomas is reminded of the difference between what had been revealed to Joseph Smith and what had not. Certainly the Lord hoped to avoid another Hiram Page affair.

“already to be burned” This phrase should be understood as “all ready to be burned.” We might expect to read, “already to harvest” (D&C 4:4), but shortly after the harvest comes the burning of the fields to remove all the leftover stubble and chaff. Thomas was to harvest those who would listen to the gospel so they will not be burned with the stubble and other useless debris (see D&C 86:7; Matthew 13:24-30).

5 Therefore, thrust in your sickle with all your soul, and your sins are forgiven you, and you shall be laden with sheaves upon your back, for the laborer is worthy of his hire. Wherefore, your family shall live.

verse 5 “your sins are forgiven you” When a covenant individual in the Lord’s kingdom is earnestly striving to overcome his natural self and obey the commandments, the Lord will regularly justify (remove the penalties of sin) and sanctify (burn out of his soul—as if by fire—increments of the natural self and reveal to his heart increments of his attributes—gifts of the Spirit) him.

“Wherefore, your family shall live.” Thomas Marsh is promised that though he was to spend his time in missionary service, his family would be provided for. Those who labor full time for the Lord deserve and will receive appropriate compensation for their services, whether in form of money or compensating blessings or both.

6 Behold, verily I say unto you, go from them only for a little time, and declare my word, and I will prepare a place for them.

verse 6 “go from them only for a little time” Marsh’s family was dependent upon him for their support, hence he was not required to be gone from them for very long.

7 Yea, I will open the hearts of the people, and they will receive you. And I will establish a church by your hand; verse 7 “I will establish a church by your hand” That is, establish a branch of the Church.

8 And you shall strengthen them and prepare them against the time when they shall be gathered.

verse 8 “prepare them against the time when they shall be gathered” The concept of the literal gathering was taken seriously by the early Church. In 1832, Marsh led a group of saints from Kirtland, Ohio, to Jackson County, Missouri, as part of that literal gathering to Zion.

verses 9-13 The Lord gives special instructions to Brother Marsh. The Lord knows the spiritual dangers facing Thomas Marsh, and warns him of them.

9 Be patient in afflictions, revile not against those that revile. Govern your house in meekness, and be steadfast.

verse 9 “revile not against those that revile” To adopt Satan’s methods, even in opposition to Satan, is to leave holy ground and fall under Satan’s power. The end does not justify the means, and those who serve the Lord must employ the Lord’s methods in doing so. Reviling and contending are Satanic behaviors, even when done in defense of the Church.

“Govern your house in meekness, and be steadfast.” Thomas Marsh did neither. It was largely his inability to govern his household that led to his apostasy between 1838 and 1857 (see D&C 112).

10 Behold, I say unto you that you shall be a physician unto the church, but not unto the world, for they will not receive you.

verse 10 Brother Marsh was, at one time, a grocer. In those days a grocer was a dealer in herbs, spices, and wort (a liquid which is fermented to make beer). He had apparently acquired some skill in using herbs to treat some of the common illnesses of his day. His ability as a physician by today’s standards would be considered sadly lacking, but in his day the person who could use herbs skillfully to bring about healings was highly respected in his field. In this verse he is admonished to be a spiritual physician to the Church. In his sojourn in the Church he solved problems, resolved conflicts, and answered many questions for the members of the Church. When he was faithful, he had a reputation for receiving frequent and specific revelations in answer to his prayers. His calling as “physician unto the Church” was primarily to help heal the hearts, minds, and spirits of the members rather than their bodies.

11 Go your way whithersoever I will, and it shall be given you by the Comforter what you shall do and whither you shall go.

12 Pray always, lest you enter into temptation and lose your reward.

verse 12 If an individual fails to maintain regular communication with the Lord, his relationship with him will inevitably diminish over time.

13 Be faithful unto the end, and lo, I am with you. These words are not of man nor of men, but of me, even Jesus Christ, your Redeemer, by the will of the Father. Amen.

Section 32 Mission to the Lamanites

Section 32 was received within three weeks of the conference in Fayette on September 26-28, 1830, though the exact date is not known. Joseph reported that some time close to the September conference, the elders manifested a great desire to know if additional missionaries couldn't be sent with Oliver Cowdery and Peter Whitmer Jr., so that the Lamanites might enjoy the blessings of the gospel all the sooner (HC, 1:118). In consequence of their urging, Joseph inquired of the Lord and received in reply section 32. Section 32 was not printed in the Book of Commandments but was recorded in the Kirtland Revelation Book, and was included in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

It must be understood that today, few, if any, of the American Indians are believed to have descended from the people of Book of Mormon. In 1830, however, it was generally believed, even by Joseph Smith, that most, if not all, of the Native Americans originated from the Book of Mormon people. There was consequently much interest among the saints in the proposed mission to the Lamanites. It was hoped that the time had come for the redemption of the scattered remnant of the Book of Mormon peoples prophesied in the Book of Mormon. In section 32, two additional men are called to accompany Oliver Cowdery and Peter Whitmer, Jr., on their mission to the Lamanites. These are Parley P. Pratt and Ziba Peterson.

As soon as this revelation was received, Emma Smith and other sisters began collecting and making clothes and procuring other necessities for the four missionaries, since some of the four were not able to cover the costs themselves.

1 And now concerning my servant Parley P. Pratt, behold, I say unto him that as I live I will that he shall declare my gospel and learn of me, and be meek and lowly of heart.

verse 1 “learn of me, and be meek and lowly of heart” Because Parley was an ordained Baptist minister and missionary when he joined the Church, one might have expected him to have an agenda of his own, independent of Joseph or Hyrum or Oliver. Throughout his life of incredible service to the Church and in some of its highest offices, he remained for the most part “meek and lowly of heart.”

2 And that which I have appointed unto him is that he shall go with my servants, Oliver Cowdery and Peter Whitmer, Jun., into the wilderness among the Lamanites.

verse 2 “into the wilderness among the Lamanites” According to Elder Spencer W. Kimball: “Wilford Woodruff, president of the Lord’s Church, identified many of the larger [North American] tribes as ‘Lamanites’ . . . as have all the presidents and leaders of the Church since. So we look upon the name as proper and dignified and fully acceptable” (Kimball, Lamanites, 3).

It is important for the student of the scriptures to know that many truths have been revealed, and will continue to be revealed, by the Lord to his Church gradually and incrementally. The Lord did not in 1830 and does not now give all truths to his prophets as “writing on a wall.” Often, seeking and questioning over a period of many years is necessary for some revealed truths to finally become clear. The truths about the genealogical origins of the American Indians is a prime example of this principle. Other examples have included the Lord’s desire that polygamy be practiced in his Church, the church’s policy of Blacks and the priesthood, and the concept of Zion. This does not mean that Wilford Woodruff, Spencer Kimball, and the other latter-day prophets were not true prophets of God. They certainly were. This pattern of gradual revelation—always in response to prayerful and persistent wondering and questioning—is simply the nature of the Lord’s dealing with the prophets of his kingdom here in this mortal, telestial world.

3 And Ziba Peterson also shall go with them; and I myself will go with them and be in their midst; and I am their advocate with the Father, and nothing shall prevail against them.

verse 3 Ziba Peterson had been baptized on April 18, 1830, by Oliver Cowdery, and now as a member for less than six months he was called to the Lamanite mission. Ziba left the Church in 1833.

4 And they shall give heed to that which is written, and pretend to no other revelation; and they shall pray always that I may unfold the same to their understanding.

verse 4 “pretend to no other revelation” Coming so soon after the affair of Hiram Page and his “seer stone,” in which even Oliver had been deceived, it seems reasonable that the Lord would warn the elders here to stick to the scriptures and make no pretense of receiving other revelations.

“pray always” It is vital to maintain a constant attitude of prayer in order that we might conquer Satan and escape his servants (D&C 10:5), have the Spirit poured out upon us (see D&C 19:38), avoid temptation (see D&C 20:33; 31:12), keep our reward (see D&C 31:12), and receive understanding of the scriptures (see D&C 32:4).

5 And they shall give heed unto these words and trifle not, and I will bless them. Amen.

verse 5 “trifle not” To trifle is to deal lightly without appropriate seriousness or respect.

Character Vignette

Parley Parker Pratt

He was born in 1807 and was eighteen months younger than the Prophet. He grew up in Canaan, New York, and learned to work hard on a farm. As a boy, he became associated with the Baptist Church. At age nineteen he set out for the frontier, but got as far as the Kirtland area and decided to stay. There he laid the foundation of a home in the wilderness. At age twenty he returned to Canaan, his boyhood home, and married Thankful Halsey. The newly married couple then returned to their wilderness home in the Ohio territory.

About this time, Parley heard Sidney Rigdon preach. The Campbellites' version of the "ancient gospel in pure form" appealed to Parley. Still missing in Parley's mind was the authority or the proper priesthood line, however.

He determined to take up the ministry as his life's work, and in August 1830 he sold his property in Ohio and commenced his mission, which was to travel and preach to anyone who would listen, especially to the Indians. He traveled with his wife toward his boyhood home in Canaan. On arriving in Buffalo, he felt inspired to send his wife on ahead, and he remained in the area of Wayne County. From an old Baptist deacon named Hamlin, he heard of a strange new book, the Book of Mormon. He obtained a copy and eagerly read it. He then traveled to Palmyra and met with Hyrum Smith—talking with him all one night. He was almost immediately converted, and he and Hyrum traveled on foot to Fayette where he was baptized by Oliver Cowdery. He was also confirmed and ordained an elder.

He then joined his wife and family in Canaan. On telling them about the Restoration, his nineteen-year-old younger brother Orson Pratt was immediately converted. Parley returned to Palmyra. Orson also traveled to Fayette to inquire as to his duty in the kingdom.

Parley was called to the first group of missionaries sent out from Fayette to preach to the American Indians. He was the only member of the missionary group who was married.

Character Vignette

Sidney Rigdon

He was born in Pennsylvania in 1793 and was thus about thirteen years older than Joseph Smith. At age twenty-five he joined the Baptist Church, and a year later he obtained a license as a Baptist minister. He was given charge of a Baptist congregation in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania.

While engaged in the ministry, he became convinced that some of the Baptist doctrines were not scriptural. He was particularly concerned about the doctrine pertaining to the fate of unbaptized infants. He resigned his position and went into the tanning business. He then became acquainted with Alexander Campbell, the founder of the sect known as the Disciples or Campbellites. This sect held to the basic principles of the ancient gospel. He became a Campbellite minister and moved to the Kirtland area. He had many adherents in his congregation.

1830 October

In October 1830 the four missionaries called to preach to the Lamanites set out for the West and Indian territory. They began their work with the Catteraugus tribe near Buffalo, New York. Here they were fairly well received, and after leaving copies of the Book of Mormon they continued their journey west. On the way to Missouri, they stopped near Kirtland, Ohio, and taught the restored gospel to Sidney Rigdon, a Campbellite minister and former religious mentor of Parley P. Pratt. Sidney was the minister to several congregations of Reformed Baptists in the Kirtland area, and had been greatly influenced by the early teachings of Alexander Campbell, a well-known Protestant theologian and minister who was a leader of the Reformed Baptist or Disciple movement. These Protestant “Disciples,” eventually to be called “The Disciples of Christ,” in 1832 were ardently looking for a restoration of the New Testament gospel. When Sidney Rigdon formed a communal Christian society called “The Family” in August of 1830, however, it caused a break between Sidney and Alexander Campbell. The missionaries presented Sidney with a copy of the Book of Mormon, which he studied carefully for about two weeks. At the end of that time he concluded the book was of God, and he was baptized on November 14, 1830, in Mentor, Ohio. In addition to Sidney, more than one hundred of his congregation also believed and were baptized. Sidney’s joining the Church and accepting the Book of Mormon as inspired scripture caused the break with Alexander Campbell to become irreparable.

One of the converts was Frederick G. Williams, a practicing physician in the Kirtland area. Dr. Williams was forty-three years old at the time of his baptism. Also converted was Lyman Wight, a Campbellite and leader of a small group of families in the Kirtland area that were living in a type of united order on a small scale—the so-called “common stock family.” In a short time 130 people were baptized into the Church. Although this preaching to Sydney Rigdon and his followers may seem today like a diversion from the primary objective of this mission to the Indians, it resulted in one of the missionaries’ most significant accomplishments—the conversion of Reverend Rigdon and many of his followers.

The missionaries had been called, after all, to go to the Indian territory, and winter was coming. So about November 1, they left the congenial Kirtland area, and, joined by a fifth companion, the new Campbellite convert, Dr. Frederick G. Williams, they continued westward. Dr. Williams unhesitatingly gave up his profession on hearing the restored gospel and asked if he might join the missionaries. Their missionary labors were temporarily delayed with the arrest of Parley P. Pratt on trumped-up charges. This was an attempt by those who would conspire against them to thwart their missionary successes.

On the way, they proselyted and left copies of the Book of Mormon here and there. Then the severe winter of 1830-31 descended upon them. The Mississippi River was frozen over, and the usual carriage and horse-back travel were impossible. But despite the weather, under great suffering, they walked through snow and ice for 300 miles to the frontier village of Independence, Missouri. Upon arriving at Independence, two of the missionaries took work to help finance their mission while the other three continued a short distance to the Indian lands. Here it appeared they would have their greatest success among the Delaware Indians who lived just across the frontier in what is now the state of Kansas. Although the Indians were at first suspicious of the missionaries because they had been exploited by some previous Christian missionaries, their suspicion was soon alleviated by a moving address delivered by Oliver Cowdery. Chief Anderson of the Delaware tribe was very impressed and asked the missionaries to remain during the winter and teach them the Book of Mormon. Success appeared imminent, but their hopes were dashed when antagonistic Protestant missionaries influenced the Indian agent to evict the Mormon elders from Indian lands.

Meanwhile, turning our attention back to the missionaries in Missouri, since they had little access to the Indians, they preached loud and long to the Missouri settlers. At this point, Parley P. Pratt was selected to return east to get a new supply of copies of the Book of Mormon and to report on the mission's progress to Joseph Smith.

In order to support themselves in Missouri, the missionaries did such work as was available. They set up a tailor shop in Independence, and some of their patrons later became defenders of the Mormons when persecution raged. One of their customers, however, would later become an infamous enemy of the Church. This was Lilburn W. Boggs. Tradition has it that Peter Whitmer, Jr., made a suit for him on the occasion of his inauguration as Lieutenant Governor of Missouri.

What had this mission to the Lamanites actually accomplished? Although probably no Indians had been baptized, the work of preaching to the Lamanites had nevertheless begun. A large number of converts had been made, including such future leaders as Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge (see D&C 36). The missionaries had also provided the first contact with the Kirtland area and had laid the foundation of the future Zion in Independence, Missouri. Both Kirtland and Independence were to become important centers in the later history of the Church.

In October of 1830, the Lord gave a revelation to two little-known members of the Church, Ezra Thayre and Northrop Sweet, in which he called them to labor and emphasized the imminence of his eventual second coming [D&C 33 - The Eleventh Hour].

Ezra Thayre and Northrop Sweet were residents of Palmyra who were baptized in October 1830 by Parley Pratt before Parley and the other Lamanites missionaries departed at the end of that month. Shortly thereafter, still in October, these two visited the Prophet Joseph in Fayette to ask concerning the will of the Lord for them. In answer, they were instructed to preach the gospel, though it does not appear that they were called to leave Palmyra and their families to do so.

Northrop Sweet did not last long in the Church. He was ordained an elder within eight months after section 33 was received, and he moved to Ohio in compliance with the commandment given in section 37. Soon after arriving there, however, Northrop had false revelations instructing him to become the prophet for the Church. Before the end of 1831 he had left the Church and with others formed "The Pure Church of Christ," a venture that did not succeed.

Ezra Thayre, on the other hand, remained relatively faithful to the Church until after Joseph Smith's death. In May of 1831 Joseph will receive a revelation directing Ezra to prepare for a mission to Missouri, "even unto the borders by the Lamanites," which he will be formally called to undertake a month later on June 7 (see D&C 52:22). Because Ezra delayed so long after receiving this call, he was finally instructed to stay behind in Ohio, and Selah J. Griffin was sent to Missouri in his place. It is likely that Ezra Thayre's lack of diligence in obeying his call to Missouri grew out of his role in certain problems of the Thompson, Ohio, branch of the Church (see the introductory commentary for D&C sections 54 and 56). Ezra was at the time of his Missouri call already somewhat out of harmony with the Church and in need of repentance for pride, selfishness, and disobedience (see D&C 56:8). Apparently, Ezra Thayre later did repent and participated in the Zion's Camp march, eventually becoming a prominent member of the Church in Nauvoo. After the death of Joseph Smith, however, Ezra did not support Brigham Young and the Quorum of the Twelve, and eventually joined the Reorganized Church.

Section 33 The Eleventh Hour

Section 33's importance lies in its theme, which is the imminence of the Lord's second coming. In this section, the Lord uses the symbolism contained in the parable of the ten virgins as related in Matthew 25:1-13.

Jewish wedding customs of Jesus's day called for the bridegroom and his friends, after a bachelors' party of sorts, in processional array, to call for the bride who waited with her friends and attendants to be taken to the wedding feast. As the wedding celebration was held at night, friends and attendants of the bride sometimes grew weary and sleepy with waiting. When word was received that the bridegroom was coming, the bride's party would go out and meet them. Each member of the bride's party was expected by tradition and practical need to carry a lamp to find her way in the dark.

In the parable of the ten virgins, the bridegroom is Jesus. The ten virgins are those who profess a belief in Christ and are awaiting his second coming. Those attending the "wedding feast" are those who have received his gospel and have persisted in righteousness until his coming. They will celebrate as they receive the rewards promised the righteous. "Midnight" represents the unlikely and unexpected hour of his coming. The expression "the bridegroom tarried" refers to the fact that his coming is delayed to a time more distant than the saints expected. The "eleventh hour" is now—the time just before his return—when each of us must stay constantly prepared lest we lose our reward. When the hour of the bridegroom's coming arrived, the virgins arose and trimmed, or prepared, their lamps. It was then that the five foolish virgins discovered they had no oil.

Regarding the application of this parable to our day, President Spencer W. Kimball has explained:

I believe that the ten virgins represent the people of the Church of Jesus Christ and not the rank and file of the world. All of the virgins, wise and foolish, had accepted the invitation to the wedding supper; they had knowledge of the program and had been warned of the important day to come. They were not the Gentiles or the heathens or the pagans, nor were they necessarily corrupt and reprobate, but they were knowing people who were foolishly unprepared for the vital happenings that were to affect their eternal lives.

They had the saving, exalting gospel, but it had not been made the center of their lives. They knew the way but gave only a small measure of loyalty and devotion. . . . They had heard of his [the bridegroom's] coming for so long, so many times, that the statement seemingly became meaningless to them. Would he ever come? So long had it been since they began expecting him that they were rationalizing that he would never appear. Perhaps it was a myth.

Hundreds of thousands of us today are in this position. Confidence has been dulled and patience worn thin. It is so hard to wait and be prepared always. But we cannot allow ourselves to slumber. The Lord has given us this parable as a special warning. . . .

The foolish asked the others to share their oil, but spiritual preparedness cannot be shared in an instant. The wise had to go, else the bridegroom would have gone unwelcomed. They needed all their oil for themselves; they could not save the foolish. The responsibility was each for himself. This was not selfishness or unkindness. The kind of oil that is needed to illuminate the way and light up the darkness is not shareable. How can one share obedience to the principle of tithing; a mind at peace from righteous living; an accumulation of knowledge? How can one share faith or testimony? How can one share attitudes or chastity, or the experience of a mission? How can one share temple privileges? Each must obtain that kind of oil for himself.

In the parable, oil can be purchased at the market. In our lives, the oil of preparedness is accumulated drop by drop in righteous living. Attendance at sacrament meetings adds oil to our lamps, drop by drop over the years. Fasting, family prayer, home teaching, control of bodily appetites, preaching the gospel, studying the scriptures—each act of dedication and obedience is a drop added to our store. Deeds of kindness, payment of offerings and tithes, chaste thoughts and actions, marriage in the covenant for eternity—these, too, contribute importantly to the oil with which we can at midnight refuel our exhausted lamps.

Midnight is so late for those who have procrastinated (Faith Precedes the Miracle, 256).

1 Behold, I say unto you, my servants Ezra and Northrop, open ye your ears and hearken to the voice of the Lord your God, whose word is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword, to the dividing asunder of the joints and marrow, soul and spirit; and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart.

verse 1 “whose word is quick and powerful, sharper than a two-edged sword” See the commentary on this phrase in D&C 6:2.

“and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart” The Lord is perfectly perceptive of your heart and mind. It is impossible to hide anything from him. Ultimately each of us will be judged by him according to this perfect knowledge. The scriptures teach that we each will be rewarded by the Lord according to our “desires” (Alma 29:4; D&C 137:9). But the scriptural word desires means more than that which we may prefer, choose, or elect. Your desires are what you really are in your heart of hearts. Ultimately we each will be judged according to what we truly are at the very center of our mind and heart and not according to what we may say that we want.

2 For verily, verily, I say unto you that ye are called to lift up your voices as with the sound of a trump, to declare my gospel unto a crooked and perverse generation.

verse 2 “to declare my gospel unto a crooked and perverse generation”

Even those on the earth who are considered by human standards to be “good people” are controlled largely by their natural self until they accept Christ and his atonement and become new creatures through the sanctifying influence of the Spirit of God. By the standards of heaven they are “crooked and perverse” and “enemies to God” until they come to Christ.

3 For behold, the field is white already to harvest; and it is the eleventh hour, and the last time that I shall call laborers into my vineyard.

verse 3 “it is the eleventh hour”

The Lord confirms that this dispensation is the final one—the last one before the Savior’s second coming. This is the eleventh hour of the Lord’s “day,” and the crew of laborers of this final dispensation is the last. The Lord’s reference here is to the parable of the laborers in the vineyard (Matthew 20:1-16).

4 And my vineyard has become corrupted every whit; and there is none which doeth good save it be a few; and they err in many instances because of priestcrafts, all having corrupt minds.

verse 4 “my vineyard has become corrupted every whit”

Elder Hyrum M. Smith explained the special use of the term “corrupt” in this passage:

Let me explain, when I use the term “corrupt” . . . that I use it in the same sense that I believe the Lord used it when he made that declaration to Joseph Smith, the prophet, in answer to the prophet’s prayer. He did not mean, nor do I mean, that the ministers of religion are personally unvirtuous or impure. I believe as a class they, perhaps, in personal purity, stand a little above the average order of men. When I use the term “corrupt” I mean, as I believe the Lord meant, that they have turned away from the truth . . . and have turned to that which is false. A false doctrine is a corrupt doctrine; a false religion is a corrupt religion; a false teacher is a corrupt teacher. Any man who teaches a false doctrine, who believes in and practices and teaches a false religion is a corrupt professor, because he teaches that which is impure and not true (CR, October 1916, 43).

This same counsel might also apply to those within the Church who preach false doctrine. President Joseph F. Smith said:

Among the Latter-day saints, the preaching of false doctrines, disguised as truths of the gospel, may be expected from people of two classes, and practically from these only. They are:

First—the hopelessly ignorant, whose lack of intelligence is due to their indolence and sloth, who make but a feeble effort, if indeed any at all, to better themselves by reading and study; those who are afflicted with a dread disease which may develop into an incurable malady—laziness.

Second—the proud and self-vaunting ones, who read by the lamp of their own conceit; who interpret by rules of their own contriving; who have become a law unto themselves, and so pose as the sole judges of their own doings. These are more dangerously ignorant than the first.

Beware of the lazy and the proud! Their infection in each case is contagious. It would be better for them, and for all, that they be compelled to display the yellow flag of warning, that the clean and uninfected may be protected (Juvenile Instructor, volume 41, 178).

“they err in many instances because of priestcrafts” If a man represents himself as a priesthood or church leader, yet his primary motive is personal popularity, power, or financial gain rather than the selfless serving of his fellow man, then he is guilty of practicing priestcrafts or priestcraft. In other words, if his primary motive is worldly—the stuff of pride—then he is guilty of priestcraft. Might this occur within the Church of Jesus Christ as well as without the Church?

5 And verily, verily, I say unto you, that this church have I established and called forth out of the wilderness.

verse 5 “this church have I established and called forth out of the wilderness” This imagery is drawn from the book of Revelation where the Church of Jesus Christ, symbolized as a woman, is driven into the wilderness, or apostasy, by the great dragon who is Satan (see Revelation 12:1-17). Hence, to call the Church from out of the wilderness refers to the restoration of the Church upon the earth after centuries of apostasy.

6 And even so will I gather mine elect from the four quarters of the earth, even as many as will believe in me, and hearken unto my voice.

verse 6 “I will gather mine elect from the four quarters of the earth” This phrase—“the four quarters of the earth”—along with the phrase “the isles of the sea” are scriptural phrases, found especially in the book of Isaiah, that refer to the locations of scattered Israel (see also the commentary for D&C 29:7-9). The phrase “four quarters of the earth” is a metaphor meaning over the entire surface of the earth.

7 Yea, verily, verily, I say unto you, that the field is white already to harvest; wherefore, thrust in your sickles, and reap with all your might, mind, and strength.

verses 8-10 It is sobering for the young missionary, newly arrived in the mission field, to contemplate the idea that the Lord has commanded them to open their mouths—and particularly that it is a sin to fail to do so (see D&C 60:2).

8 Open your mouths and they shall be filled, and you shall become even as Nephi of old, who journeyed from Jerusalem in the wilderness.

verse 8 “and you shall become even as Nephi of old” In 2 Nephi 1:27, Lehi states that Nephi had the power of God with him when he taught his rebellious brothers. It was not Nephi who spoke, but “it was the Spirit of the Lord which was in him, which opened his mouth to utterance that he could not shut it.”

9 Yea, open your mouths and spare not, and you shall be laden with sheaves upon your backs, for lo, I am with you.

verse 9 “you shall be laden with sheaves upon your backs” See the commentary for D&C 31:5. Remember that the “sheaves” of grain are the people whom these missionaries will “harvest” through teaching them the gospel.

10 Yea, open your mouths and they shall be filled, saying: Repent, repent, and prepare ye the way of the Lord, and make his paths straight; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand; verse 10 “make his paths straight” In their Doctrine and Covenants commentary, Smith and Sjodahl explained:

Eastern potentates, when traveling from one part of the kingdom to another, would proclaim their coming and order their subjects to prepare the way for them, by building roads where there were none; if necessary by leveling hills and filling up depressions, and straightening out the winding paths. . . . To prepare the way of the Lord and make his paths straight is to acknowledge his sovereignty and to make all necessary preparations for his reception. He will not come to reign until all necessary preparations for his coming have been made. Joseph Smith said, “Hear this, O earth! The Lord will not come to reign over the righteous in this world . . . until everything for the Bridegroom is ready (HC, 5:291)” (174).

11 Yea, repent and be baptized, every one of you, for a remission of your sins; yea, be baptized even by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost.

verse 11 “and then cometh the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost” For a discussion of this important concept, see the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31.

12 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, this is my gospel; and remember that they shall have faith in me or they can in nowise be saved;

verse 12 “I say unto you, this is my gospel” The Lord teaches that faith, repentance, the baptism of water, and the baptism of the Spirit comprise the essence of his gospel. They are not merely the introductory or initial first principles of the gospel. Rather, they are the gospel.

“they shall have faith in me” Please never read this commandment of the Lord without reminding yourself that to have faith in the Lord is to obey his commandments. Faith is not merely something you hold and ponder in your mind. Rather, it is something you do. It is a principle of action.

13 And upon this rock I will build my church; yea, upon this rock ye are built, and if ye continue, the gates of hell shall not prevail against you.

verse 13 “upon this rock I will build my church” For a discussion of the word rock in the scriptures, see the commentary for D&C 11:24.

14 And ye shall remember the church articles and covenants to keep them.

verse 14 “the church articles and covenants” These instructions and procedures are found in section 20.

15 And whoso having faith you shall confirm in my church, by the laying on of the hands, and I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost upon them.

verse 15 “you shall confirm . . . and I will bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost” This verse teaches that those who lay hands on the head of a newly baptized individual to confirm them a member of the Church do not actually bestow the Holy Ghost. They perform the ordinance of confirmation, but the Lord alone bestows or withholds the gift of his Holy Spirit.

16 And the Book of Mormon and the holy scriptures are given of me for your instruction; and the power of my Spirit quickeneth all things.

verse 16 The Lord bears his testimony again of the truthfulness of the Book of Mormon (see also D&C 17:6). It is notable that the Lord prioritizes the scriptures in this verse—first, the Book of Mormon, and then the others.

“the power of my Spirit quickeneth all things” The Lord’s Spirit gives life to all things, that is, the Spirit makes the scriptures come to life in our hearts and minds.

17 Wherefore, be faithful, praying always, having your lamps trimmed and burning, and oil with you, that you may be ready at the coming of the Bridegroom—verse 17 Here is clear warning for the saints to maintain a state of spiritual readiness as the coming of the Lord draws ever closer. The Lord’s warning here to “pray always” is the sixth time in the first thirty-three sections of the Doctrine and Covenants that the Lord has repeated this instruction. It would seem that prayer is most important. The Lord's reference here is to the parable of the ten virgins in Matthew 25:1-13.

President Spencer Kimball wrote:

In our lives the oil of preparedness is accumulated drop by drop in righteous living. Attendance at sacrament meetings adds oil to our lamps, drop by drop over the years. Fasting, family prayer, home teaching, control of bodily appetites, preaching the gospel, studying the scriptures—each act of dedication and obedience is a drop added to our store. Deeds of kindness, payment of offerings and tithes, chaste thoughts and actions, marriage in the covenant for eternity—these, too, contribute importantly to the oil with which we can at midnight refuel our exhausted lamps (Faith Precedes the Miracle, 256).

18 For behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that I come quickly. Even so. Amen.

verse 18 “I come quickly” This is the first time the Lord uses the expression “I come quickly.” This phrase will be repeated several times more in the remainder of the Doctrine and Covenants. Intuitively we are usually inclined to understand this statement of the Lord to mean that his second coming is near, that he will be coming soon. President Joseph Fielding Smith provided an alternate interpretation:

“I come quickly.” This is a scriptural expression that occurs frequently, especially in the book of Revelation. This is “speaking after the manner of the Lord” (D&C 63:53). This does not mean that immediately the Lord will make his appearance, but when he does come he will come suddenly, when he is least expected. He told his disciples that the day would come when men were unawares, as the thief in the night. For this reason we should watch and pray, “For as a snare shall it come on all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth” (Luke 21:34-35). There is no excuse for any of us, then, not to be prepared, for we have been fully and frequently warned (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:157).

Fall 1830

In the late fall of 1830, a few important new converts to the Church and an investigator traveled to Fayette to meet Joseph. These men were given personal revelations. They included Orson Pratt, who had been converted by his older brother Parley P. Pratt [D&C 34 - Orson Pratt], Sidney Rigdon [D&C 35 - Sidney Rigdon Called as Scribe], and a former follower of Sidney Rigdon's, a successful hatter from Kirtland named Edward Partridge [D&C 36 - Edward Partridge]. Sidney Rigdon had already been baptized in Kirtland, but Edward Partridge waited until he met Joseph and then was baptized by him.

Character Vignette

Orson Pratt

Shortly after his arrival in Fayette, Orson was called to preach the gospel with his brother Parley in Missouri (see D&C 34; 52:26). After their mission, Orson became the first man in this dispensation to serve as an elders quorum president. He set the example for priesthood brethren by serving another mission (see D&C 75:14), for which he traveled “on foot near 4,000 miles, attended 207 meetings . . . baptized 104 persons and organized several new branches of the church” (Orson Pratt Diaries, 2 February 1833, as cited in Breck England’s The Life and Thought of Orson Pratt [Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1985], 31). After returning to Kirtland he worked on the limestone foundation of the temple before becoming a member of Zion’s Camp (see D&C 103:40).

While reading the Messenger and Advocate Orson learned that he was requested to be in Kirtland for a meeting on April 26, 1835. Within two days of reading the notice he arrived at the temple site and was ordained to the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles. During the time of his service in the Quorum he earned a “Certificate of Proficiency” in Hebrew and taught English grammar. He earned a certificate qualifying him to teach Hebrew as well.

Orson had begun his teaching career in December 1835. It was interrupted as religious persecution drove the Saints from Ohio to Missouri and from there to Illinois. In Illinois he led the department of literature and mathematics at the University of Nauvoo. Unfortunately, as his educational abilities soared, his faith wavered. He was excommunicated on August 20, 1842. Wilford Woodruff wrote the reason for the apostasy: “John C. Bennett was the ruin of Orson Pratt” (Wilford Woodruff Journals, August 1842, as cited in Breck England’s The Life and Thought of Orson Pratt [Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1985], 81). Within a few months, Orson confessed his sins and manifested deep repentance. He was rebaptized by the Prophet on January 20, 1843, and he received back the priesthood and the same power and authority as in former days.

After the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum, Orson was confident in the leadership of Brigham Young and followed him to the temporary encampments of Iowa Territory and on to the Rockies (see D&C 136:13). Orson kept a meticulous log of the miles traveled and astronomical and other scientific observations, and he calculated the latitude and longitude of prominent sites. He was one of two Latter-day Saints to first view the Salt Lake Valley: “We could not refrain from a shout of joy” (Orson Pratt, extracts from journal, in Millennial Star 12 [15 June 1850]: 178).

After traversing Emigration Canyon he dedicated the Valley and then helped plat the city of the Great Salt Lake. He returned to the Camps of Israel in Iowa and from there journeyed east to England. His literary contributions in England include a booklet, “The Kingdom of God,” and a pamphlet, “New Jerusalem, or the Spirit of Modern Prophecy,” and he served as editor of the newspaper The Millennial Star. He returned to America in the 1850s. Orson would eventually cross the Atlantic Ocean some sixteen times to share the gospel with those in the British Isles.

His Church service dramatically changed when he publicly announced the doctrine of plural marriage in 1852. His remaining years were spent defending the doctrine, and Mormonism in general. His philosophical writings led to tension between himself and Brigham Young. For Orson this was most disturbing, as writing was not always joyous to him: “Writing has always been tedious to me, but seeing the good that may be accomplished, I have whipped my mind to it, till I am nearly baldheaded, and grey-bearded, through constant application. I almost envy the hours as they steal away. . . . I wish to accomplish something ere I die, that shall not only be esteemed great by good and holy men, but that shall be considered great in the sight of God” (Orson Pratt letter to Parley P. Pratt, 2 November 1853, as cited in Breck England’s, The Life and Thought of Orson Pratt [Salt Lake City: University of Utah Press, 1985], 197-98).

Brigham Young chose to differ, saying to Orson, “You have been like a mad stubborn mule” (Ibid., 210). He counseled, “I want you to do just as you have done in your Apostleship, but when you want to teach new doctrine, to write those ideas, and submit them to me, and if they are correct I will tell you” (Ibid., 215). In spite of strong counsel, Brigham was very supportive of Orson Pratt. Upon overhearing another deride the Apostle he remarked, “If Brother Orson were chopped up in inch pieces, each piece would cry out Mormonism was true” (Ibid., 217).

The goodness that Orson accomplished in his life proclaimed his testimony. He presided over the territorial legislature, served as a regent of the University of Deseret, and debated the Reverend John Phillip Newman, chaplain of the United States Senate and pastor of the Metropolitan Church of Washington, D. C. He and his family were baptized over twenty-six hundred times for deceased kindred dead. In 1874 he was appointed historian and general church recorder, which position he held at the time of his death.

In 1875 when President Young reorganized the Quorum of the Twelve according to seniority in service, Orson, who had been ranked second in the Quorum, was now ranked fifth. John Taylor became the senior Apostle. Orson later published an affidavit in the Deseret News affirming his support for the change: “I unreservedly endorse John Taylor” (Deseret News, 1 October 1877).

Near the end of his life he suffered from severe diabetes. On September 19, 1880 he announced in a Tabernacle address that it was fifty years to the day since he had joined the Church. After the speech was concluded, Wilford Woodruff addressed the congregation: “We are not in the habit of flattering any man, but I want to say a few words concerning Brother Pratt. . . . I never saw a man in my life that I know of that has spent as few moments idly as he has. I have never seen a storm at sea so heavy-even when shipping seas over the bow, side and stern, but what he would read his book. . . .

He has improved his time. . . . I feel to thank God that we can still hear his voice” (JD, 21:314, 315).

Orson’s last speech was given in the Tabernacle on September 18, 1881. “Tomorrow—if I live till tomorrow—I shall be seventy years of age,” he said. “They are the years appointed to man. . . . I know what my hopes are. I know the plan of salvation” (Journal History of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Church Historical Department, The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, Salt Lake City, Utah, 18 September 1881).

Orson Pratt was the last surviving member of the original Council of the Twelve Apostles. He filled a total of seven missions and earned a life-long reputation as one of the most capable defenders of the faith.

On October 3, 1881, after telling Joseph F. Smith the inscription he wanted on his tombstone—“My body sleeps for a moment, but my testimony lives and shall endure forever”—Orson died.

Section 34 Orson Pratt

Shortly after Parley Pratt was baptized in Palmyra in early September 1830, he traveled to his family home in Canaan, Columbia County, New York, where some of his immediate family were sympathetic to the gospel message, though most were not. He did, however convert and baptize his younger brother, Orson Pratt, on September 19, 1830, which was Orson's nineteenth birthday. Parley then hurried back to Fayette for the church conference there on September 26, at which conference he was called to the Lamanite mission.

About six weeks after being baptized, Orson Pratt settled his affairs in Canaan and also traveled to Fayette to meet the Prophet Joseph and to be with the main body of the Church and to inquire of the Lord what his duties were to be. Orson wrote the following concerning his meeting with the Prophet on that occasion:

In October, 1830, I traveled westward over two hundred miles to see Joseph Smith the prophet. I found him in Fayette, Seneca Country, New York, residing at the home of Mr. Whitmer. I soon became intimately acquainted with this good man, and also with the witnesses of the Book of Mormon. By my request, on the 4th of November, the Prophet Joseph inquired of the Lord for me and received the revelation published in the Doctrine and Covenants, section 34 (Journal History, November 1830, 1).

Orson was one of the more capable and faithful men in the early history of the Church. This revelation foreshadows his faithfulness and his life of service in the Church.

1 My son Orson, hearken and hear and behold what I, the Lord God, shall say unto you, even Jesus Christ your Redeemer; verse 1 "My son Orson" The Lord has taught many times that all mankind may come unto him and become his sons and daughters (see D&C 25:1; Mosiah 5:7-8; 15:10-16; 3 Nephi 9:17-22; Moses 1:4-6; 6:68; Romans 8:14-18; 1 John 3:1-3). As spiritual sons and daughters of the Savior eternally, we have the promise that if we remain faithful, we will grow up to be like our heavenly parents, to be what they are and have what they have.

2 The light and the life of the world, a light which shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not;

verse 2 Jesus Christ is the "light and the life of the world" (John 8:12). For a thorough discussion of the concept of light in the scriptures, see The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15.

3 Who so loved the world that he gave his own life, that as many as would believe might become the sons of God. Wherefore you are my son; verse 3 “Who so loved the world” Jesus speaks of himself in the third person. This is a paraphrase of John 3:16-17.

4 And blessed are you because you have believed;

5 And more blessed are you because you are called of me to preach my gospel—verses 4-5 Believing is good, but preaching what we believe to others is even better.

6 To lift up your voice as with the sound of a trump, both long and loud, and cry repentance unto a crooked and perverse generation, preparing the way of the Lord for his second coming.

verse 6 “lift up your voice . . . both long and loud” The phrase “long and loud” is a perfect description of Orson Pratt’s ministry. He was a powerful and vigorous apologist for the Church to the time of his death in 1881.

“cry repentance unto a crooked and perverse generation” President Brigham Young said, “I wish we had more Elders to go and preach . . . ‘I know that Joseph Smith is a prophet of God, and this is the gospel of salvation, and if you do not believe it you will be damned, every one of you.’ When a man teaches that doctrine . . . it is one of the loudest sermons that was ever preached . . . because the Spirit bears testimony to it” (JD, 4:298-99).

In the Church, we are often embarrassed to teach the hard truth of the gospel straight on, fearing that it is offensive or untactful. We think we will have better success if we “soften” the truth a little and teach it obliquely. The Holy Ghost will testify to the straight and undiluted truth with greater power and greater motivation for change than he will to modified truths taught “tactfully.” The pure and undiluted gospel is offensive to the world. It always has been, but if we don’t sometimes risk offending others with the hard, straight truth, we won’t convert them either. These “offensive” proclamations include: Jesus Christ is the only way to salvation. All must repent and be baptized in Christ or they cannot be saved. Baptism by proper priesthood authority is the only gate into the kingdom of God. Only The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints enjoys the fulness of the gospel and priesthood authority in these latter days.

7 For behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, the time is soon at hand that I shall come in a cloud with power and great glory.

8 And it shall be a great day at the time of my coming, for all nations shall tremble.

9 But before that great day shall come, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon be turned into blood; and the stars shall refuse their shining, and some shall fall, and great destructions await the wicked.

verse 9 If the reader wishes to read a thorough discussion of the signs of the times, please study three chapters in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3. They are chapter 24, Signs of the Lord's Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Signs of the Lord's Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord's Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

10 Wherefore, lift up your voice and spare not, for the Lord God hath spoken; therefore prophesy, and it shall be given by the power of the Holy Ghost.

verse 10 Orson Pratt would later remark that this command of the Lord to prophesy seemed to him at the time “almost too great for a person of as humble origin as myself ever to attain to” (JD, 17:290-91). Orson Pratt possessed the gift of prophecy to an extraordinary degree.

11 And if you are faithful, behold, I am with you until I come—

12 And verily, verily, I say unto you, I come quickly. I am your Lord and your Redeemer. Even so. Amen.

verse 12 “I come quickly” See the commentary for D&C 33:18.

Section 35 Sidney Rigdon Called as a Scribe

In early December 1830, shortly after his conversion, Sidney Rigdon traveled the 300 miles from Kirtland to Fayette to meet the Prophet. He brought with him Edward Partridge. Sidney Rigdon had already been baptized by Parley P. Pratt in Kirtland, but Edward Partridge, a prosperous hatter and fellow Campbellite pastor with Sidney Rigdon, wanted to shake hands with the Prophet and feel good about him before finally committing to baptism. Rigdon and Partridge also wanted to persuade Joseph to come to Kirtland so that the new Ohio converts might meet him and catch his spirit.

There is some confusion regarding the date on which Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge arrived in Fayette. Section 35 was addressed to Sidney Rigdon and was received shortly after their arrival in Fayette. Two early versions of section 35 were printed in the Ohio Star, on January 5, 1832 and in the Painesville Telegraph on January 17, 1832. These both give the date of this revelation as December 7, 1830. Lucy Mack Smith, however, states that Sidney and Edward Partridge arrived at the Smith's new home in East Waterloo, near Fayette, the day before Edward was baptized. Since Partridge was baptized in December 11, 1830, Lucy's account has them arriving on December 10, thus conflicting with the December 7 date. The date of section 35 in all LDS printings has been given simply as December 1830.

In this revelation Sidney Rigdon is compared to John the Baptist as one who helped prepare the way for the Restoration. Even before he became a member of the Church, he was doing the Lord's work in preparing a group of people to receive the gospel.

At the time Joseph Smith was translating or writing his inspired revision of the King James Bible. Oliver Cowdery had been a scribe for the prophet in this project, but he was serving a mission to the Lamanites. Thus Joseph was without one of his trusted scribes. Sidney is called to act as scribe for Joseph. Sidney is also reminded that Joseph, even in his "weakness" or lack of sophistication, is the one who holds the keys for this dispensation.

1 Listen to the voice of the Lord your God, even Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, whose course is one eternal round, the same today as yesterday, and forever.

verse 1 "Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end" See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

"whose course is one eternal round" The concept contained in this phrase is a rich and vital one. We are governed by God's law. That law is absolute, completely reliable, unvarying, and its consequences are inescapable. For every action there is an identical result. These results follow without respect to person. It has always been thus, in Adam's day just as in ours and in the eternities to come. Thus, "the course of the Lord is one eternal round." For a more complete discussion of this phrase, see the commentary for D&C 3:2.

2 I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who was crucified for the sins of the world, even as many as will believe on my name, that they may become the sons of God, even one in me as I am one in the Father, as the Father is one in me, that we may be one.

verse 2 "even one in me as I am one in the Father" President Brigham Young once asked an interesting question: "How is it that the Latter-day Saints feel and understand alike, are of one heart and one mind, no matter where they may be when they receive the gospel?" (JD, 18:259). He then continued on to answer his own question. He taught that it is the influence of the Spirit of God who is the great unifier, whose mind is the mind and will of God the Father who brings us all to a "unity of the faith" (Ephesians 4:13). Indeed, we can all exclaim in the beautiful language of Ruth, "Thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God!" (Ruth 1:16).

For a more thorough discussion of the concept of the oneness of the Father and the Son, see the commentary for D&C 93:3.

3 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto my servant Sidney, I have looked upon thee and thy works. I have heard thy prayers, and prepared thee for a greater work.

verse 3 "I have . . . prepared thee for a greater work" Sidney Rigdon did much good as a Protestant minister in imparting to many people a preparatory understanding of faith, repentance, and baptism by immersion. The work he is called to here, however, to preach the fulness of the gospel, was an even "greater work."

4 Thou art blessed, for thou shalt do great things. Behold thou wast sent forth, even as John, to prepare the way before me, and before Elijah which should come, and thou knewest it not.

verse 4 "thou wast sent forth, even as John" In his labors as a Baptist minister and later as a Campbellite minister the hand of the Lord was over Sidney to direct him in the gathering of many earnest souls who could not accept the teachings of the sects of the day. He had prayed for further light. He was instrumental in preparing a number of intelligent and forceful men who later were to become leaders in the Church.

This passage gives one of several reasons why ministers and members of other churches cannot be labeled as "apostates" or even necessarily as opponents. This is because many of them have some gospel light with which, as servants of God, they prepare the world for greater light to come—even though they may not accept the fulness of the gospel themselves.

In many foreign lands the LDS Church now reaps the harvest sown by non-LDS missionaries who sometimes gave their lives to bring a little light to those who did not know Christ at all. Those noble souls will not lose their reward. In Sidney Rigdon's case, his preaching as a Protestant minister had prepared scores of people to recognize the restored gospel when it arrived in Ohio with the Lamanite missionaries. Sidney's groundwork also preceded the coming of Elijah the prophet to the Kirtland Temple in 1836 to restore the keys of the sealing power, and he prepared many Saints to receive the blessings of the temple. Those Latter-day Saints who can see other Christian churches and their members only as adversaries do not understand the difference between having some light and having the fulness thereof, and they apparently disregard the witness of section 35.

5 Thou didst baptize by water unto repentance, but they received not the Holy Ghost; verses 5-6 In Sidney's prior ministry, he had lacked authority. Now, as a priesthood holder Sidney will baptize with authority and be able to lay hands on those baptized, and they will receive the gift of the Holy Ghost.

6 But now I give unto thee a commandment, that thou shalt baptize by water, and they shall receive the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, even as the apostles of old.

7 And it shall come to pass that there shall be a great work in the land, even among the Gentiles, for their folly and their abominations shall be made manifest in the eyes of all people.

verse 7 "even among the Gentiles" This present dispensation of the gospel has consisted of what the Lord has called the times of the Gentiles (see D&C 45:25-30)—a period during which every (Gentile) nation, kindred, tongue, and people will have the opportunity to hear and accept the gospel of Jesus Christ (see also the commentary for 1 Nephi 13:42) in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

8 For I am God, and mine arm is not shortened; and I will show miracles, signs, and wonders, unto all those who believe on my name.

verse 8 "mine arm is not shortened" My power is not limited, and I will make it felt.

"I will show miracles, signs, and wonders unto all those who believe on my name" Only the faithful will perceive and recognize the miraculous works of God in the latter days. Those without faith either will not see them at all or will not recognize them as miraculous until the unmistakable destructive signs of the end, when it may be too late.

9 And whoso shall ask it in my name in faith, they shall cast out devils; they shall heal the sick; they shall cause the blind to receive their sight, and the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak, and the lame to walk.

verse 9 The restored gospel, with its divine priesthood, is characterized by and may be recognized by manifesting those gifts of the Spirit enjoyed by saints in other dispensations. This does not mean that every devil will be cast out, or that every sick person will be healed. It does mean that these miracles will at times be manifested among the faithful.

10 And the time speedily cometh that great things are to be shown forth unto the children of men; verse 11 “without faith shall not anything be shown forth except desolations upon Babylon” When there is not faith in the world there are not miracles or spiritual gifts. There is only God’s justice and punishment directed against Babylon.

Babylon is the world of the natural man, unrefined by the Spirit of the Lord. It is Satan’s world. The Lord often compares Babylon to a prostitute from whom anything can be bought for money. She willingly desecrates whatever is holy for money, power, immorality, or other carnal satisfactions. Her fornication is her willing desecration of whatever is holy—the sacred things of God such as religion, standards, values, and ethics. Like a whore, she sells or betrays for money that which is most sacred. Examples of her fornications include the illegal drug trade, the pornography business, or the abortion industry. These are promoted to the nations of the world by Satan and his servants with the promise of money and power to those who sell and with the promise of unhindered physical or sexual gratification to those who buy.

“drink of the wine of the wrath of her fornication” This interesting phrase is also found in the book of Revelation (14:8; 18:3; see also 17:2) and in two other places in the Doctrine and Covenants (86:3; 88:94). The “wrath of her fornication” is God’s anger over Babylon’s behavior. The “wine of the wrath of her fornication” is the bitter cup or the punishment prepared for her and her adherents to drink in order to answer the demands of God’s justice—destruction in this life, and the pains of hell in the life to come.

12 And there are none that doeth good except those who are ready to receive the fulness of my gospel, which I have sent forth unto this generation.

verse 12 “there are none that doeth good” What humans consider good and what God defines as good are often different. Since God “cannot look upon sin with the least degree of allowance” (D&C 1:31), then good or just from his celestial perspective must mean “perfectly good,” “absolutely innocent,” or “completely just and worthy.” Because humans can become completely just and worthy, absolutely innocent, or perfectly good only through the atonement of Christ, it then follows that the “good” can be only those who have entered into the gospel covenant or who are looking for it. Conversely, the “bad” are those who reject Christ or his covenant, however admirable their personal habits might be by relative human standards. Without the atonement, no one’s behavior qualifies as “good” before the Lord. With the cleansing power of the atonement, however, anyone can be made “good” (see D&C 76:69; 3 Nephi 27:16).

13 Wherefore, I call upon the weak things of the world, those who are unlearned and despised, to thrash the nations by the power of my Spirit; verse 13 “I call upon the weak things of the world” Why does the Lord choose the “weak things,” or the weak men, of the earth through whom to perform his works? One answer is that the “weak” men are more likely to be humble and teachable and responsive to the Lord’s directions. In addition it is vital that man learn to lean upon the true source of power, instead of leaning upon themselves or other men. A truly forceful, charismatic, and persuasive prophet or agent of the Lord might draw a following, but his adherents might be inclined to be attracted to him and his worldly charms rather than seeking for the Spirit of the Lord. People might become dependent upon the magnetic and dynamic leader himself and not realize that they need the Lord and his Spirit. Thus, the Lord chooses people as his agents who could not possibly succeed on their own resources. He does this to demonstrate that the agent is not as important as the Lord’s word. In Judges 7:2 we read: “Lest Israel vaunt themselves against me, saying, Mine own hand hath saved me.” Paul recorded: “I will destroy the wisdom of the wise, and will bring to nothing the understanding of the prudent” (1 Corinthians 1:19). Of those whom the Lord calls to labor in his vineyard, Paul wrote: “not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called: but God hath chosen the foolish things of the world to confound the wise; and God hath chosen the weak things of the world to confound the things which are mighty; and base things of the world, and things which are despised, hath God chosen, yea, and things which are not, to bring to nought things that are: that no flesh should glory in his presence” (1 Corinthians 1:26-29).

14 And their arm shall be my arm, and I will be their shield and their buckler; and I will gird up their loins, and they shall fight manfully for me; and their enemies shall be under their feet; and I will let fall the sword in their behalf, and by the fire of mine indignation will I preserve them.

verses 13-14 In spite of their “weakness” (lack of worldly sophistication or worldly intellectual attainments), the Lord’s servants in this final dispensation will “thrash the nations.” Threshing of grain in biblical times was done by treading out the grain on a threshing-floor. The valuable kernels are gathered and the straw or chaff is left to be burned or simply blown away by the wind. The meaning of this analogy in the context of missionary work is obvious.

verse 14 A “buckler” is a shield or a defense. Every missionary should take heart from the metaphors the Lord uses here to describe how he will enable and protect his missionaries: “Their enemies shall be under their feet,” “I will let fall the sword in their behalf,” and “by the fire of mine indignation will I preserve them.”

15 And the poor and the meek shall have the gospel preached unto them, and they shall be looking forth for the time of my coming, for it is nigh at hand—verse 15 “the poor and the meek shall have the gospel preached unto them” These are those who are unimportant in a worldly way in Babylon. They may have little money or little power or influence over others. “Poor” may also refer to those who are poor in spirit or poor in self-adulation as well as those who are poor in money. The “poor and the meek” are not usually so distracted by the world that they lose their place in the better one that is coming.

16 And they shall learn the parable of the fig-tree, for even now already summer is nigh.

verse 16 “the parable of the fig-tree” “And as [Jesus] sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what [shall be] the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?” (Matthew 24:3). Jesus responded by speaking of certain signs that would indicated the nearness of his coming. Among these signs was the “parable of the fig-tree.” “Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer [the Savior’s second coming] [is] nigh” (Matthew 24:32). Using the parable of the fig-tree, President Spencer W. Kimball made a prophetic pronouncement: “The leaves are commencing to show on the fig tree” (Ensign, May 1976, 74).

17 And I have sent forth the fulness of my gospel by the hand of my servant Joseph; and in weakness have I blessed him; verse 17 All of the gospel principles to which man is allowed access are being restored through Joseph in this final dispensation—“the fulness of my Gospel.” Wilford Woodruff wrote of the Prophet Joseph: “He lived until he received every key, ordinance and law ever given to any man on the earth, from father Adam down, touching this dispensation” (JD, 16:267).

“in weakness have I blessed him” Joseph Smith accumulated little money or formal education, and he never became a popular figure in the eyes of the world. Yet he stands as one of the twenty or so most important priesthood leaders in the history of the world—the head of the dispensation of the fulness of times.

18 And I have given unto him the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed, even things which were from the foundation of the world, and the things which shall come from this time until the time of my coming, if he abide in me, and if not, another will I plant in his stead.

verse 18 “I have given unto him the keys of the mystery of those things which have been sealed” Joseph Smith, as head of the dispensation of the fulness of times, holds the keys of all the heavenly information that will be revealed to the earth during this dispensation. Examples of his exercising these keys include his translation of the Book of Mormon, his inspired revision of the Bible, his translating the Book of Abraham, his revealing the ordinances of the temple, and his receiving and writing the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants. Apparently he still holds these keys and continues to exercise them from the other side of the veil (see D&C 90:3).

19 Wherefore, watch over him that his faith fail not, and it shall be given by the Comforter, the Holy Ghost, that knoweth all things.

verse 19 “watch over him that his faith fail not” Sidney is given charge to look out for Joseph’s spiritual welfare and to give him advice, counsel, and strength as directed by the Holy Ghost. Even prophets need the counsel of their priesthood brethren and the love, support, and service of those over whom they preside.

20 And a commandment I give unto thee—that thou shalt write for him; and the scriptures shall be given, even as they are in mine own bosom, to the salvation of mine own elect; verse 20 “thou shalt write for him” Joseph’s two scribes, Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer had been called on missions (D&C 28:8; 30:9-11). John Whitmer was later dispatched to Kirtland to watch over the group of new converts there. Joseph, therefore, needed a reliable scribe. Sidney Rigdon is called to fill that need, and he will become a major scribe for the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible.

“the scriptures shall be given, even as they are in mine own bosom” The reference here is to the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible (the “JST”). This does not necessarily mean that the JST will simply restore the original texts of the biblical books. The purpose of the JST goes beyond that. The texts will be rendered as God himself wants us to understand them—corrected, adapted, edited, revised, and supplemented especially for use of the saints in the latter days. See the supplemental article, Joseph Smith’s Inspired Revision of the Bible—The JST.

21 For they will hear my voice, and shall see me, and shall not be asleep, and shall abide the day of my coming; for they shall be purified, even as I am pure.

verse 21 “For they will hear my voice” Here is a sweeping promise to those elect who accept the restored gospel. They will hear and see the Lord, will not be caught asleep or unprepared when he comes, and will survive the great and terrible day of the Lord.

22 And now I say unto you, tarry with him, and he shall journey with you; forsake him not, and surely these things shall be fulfilled.

verse 22 “And now I say unto you, tarry with him” Sidney is not to return home to Ohio, but is to remain with Joseph.

23 And inasmuch as ye do not write, behold, it shall be given unto him to prophesy; and thou shalt preach my gospel and call on the holy prophets to prove his words, as they shall be given him.

verse 23 “And inasmuch as ye do not write” Sidney is warned that it is not his calling to write scripture. There is no doubt that Sidney is better educated and more experienced than Joseph. There is also no doubt that despite these differences, Joseph is the Lord’s anointed prophet. Just as was Oliver Cowdery (see D&C 28:2-7), Sidney is warned to use his talents to sustain Joseph and not try to control or eclipse him. It is Sidney’s calling to support Joseph and to preach and expound upon the things Joseph receives and to use the Bible (“call on the holy prophets”) to support Joseph’s teachings.

24 Keep all the commandments and covenants by which ye are bound; and I will cause the heavens to shake for your good, and Satan shall tremble and Zion shall rejoice upon the hills and flourish;

25 And Israel shall be saved in mine own due time; and by the keys which I have given shall they be led, and no more be confounded at all.

verse 25 “And Israel shall be saved” In the narrow sense, Israel is the infant Church that will survive and thrive to be caught up at the Savior’s coming. In the broader context, Israel is all the posterity of Jacob, including the Jews, the Book of Mormon peoples, the lost tribes, and the Gentiles who are adopted into the house of Israel. All these who believe shall be led to salvation by the keys of the priesthood held by the apostolic leaders of the latter-day Church.

26 Lift up your hearts and be glad, your redemption draweth nigh.

27 Fear not, little flock, the kingdom is yours until I come. Behold, I come quickly. Even so. Amen.

verses 26-27 The Lord's admonitions in these verses are often disobeyed among the faithful Latter-day Saints. Often even the most faithful members have difficulty obeying the commandment of the Lord to rejoice, be glad, and fear not. There is a tendency for the members to resist the joy that should already be theirs, and they continue to fear for their place in the kingdom. The Lord does not say that the kingdom "may be yours" or even "will be yours" (see D&C 25:1). As long as church members are faithful, they should know that the kingdom is already theirs. The physical reality of the Lord's millennial kingdom and his eventual heavenly kingdom is not visible yet, but they are coming, and the faithful saints already own a piece of them.

verse 27 "Behold, I come quickly." Remember that this expression does not mean that the Lord will come soon. Rather, it means he will come at a moment when he is not expected. See the commentary for D&C 33:18.

Section 36 Edward Partridge

See the introductory commentary for section 35. Edward Partridge was not yet quite converted to the restored gospel when he left Ohio with Sidney Rigdon to visit Joseph. He, like Sidney Rigdon, had first been introduced to the gospel by the missionaries to the Lamanites as they preached in the Kirtland area. Apparently, Edward Partridge was so well respected by others in his congregation that he was asked to investigate the claims of the restoration for them as well. He was so honest and humble, they felt, that he would not be deceived in spiritual things.

Lucy Mack recorded:

In December of the same year [1830], Joseph appointed a meeting at our house. While he was preaching, Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge came in and seated themselves in the congregation. When Joseph had finished his discourse, he gave all who had any remarks to make, the privilege of speaking. Upon this, Mr. Partridge arose, and stated that he had been to Manchester, with the view of obtaining further information respecting the doctrine which we preached; but, not finding us, he had made some inquiry of our neighbors concerning our characters, which they stated had been unimpeachable, until Joseph deceived us relative to the Book of Mormon. He also said that he had walked over our farm, and observed the good order and industry which it exhibited; and, having seen what we had sacrificed for the sake of our faith, and having heard that our veracity was not questioned upon any other point than that of our religion, he believed our testimony, and was ready to be baptized, "if," said he, "Brother Joseph will baptize me."

"You are now," replied Joseph, "much fatigued, brother Partridge, and you had better rest today, and be baptized tomorrow." "Just as Brother Joseph thinks best," replied Mr. Partridge, "I am ready at any time." He was accordingly baptized the next day (History of Joseph Smith, 191- 92).

Partridge was baptized by Joseph Smith and confirmed by Sidney Rigdon on the day following his arrival in Fayette. Joseph said of Edward Partridge that he is "a pattern of piety, and one of the Lord's great men" (HC, 1:128).

This revelation, section 36, was received about the same time as section 35. It is directed to Edward Partridge and calls him to the work.

1 Thus saith the Lord God, the Mighty One of Israel: Behold, I say unto you, my servant Edward, that you are blessed, and your sins are forgiven you, and you are called to preach my gospel as with the voice of a trump;

verse 1 "the Mighty One of Israel" The titles for Jehovah-Christ which emphasize his strength are more characteristic of the Old Testament period and the early Book of Mormon. These include such titles as one "strong and mighty," "the mighty one,” the “mighty God,” the God with a “mighty hand” or “strong hand” (see Genesis 49:24; Joshua 14:11; Isaiah 9:6; 10:21; 28:2-27; Mosiah 13:34).

2 And I will lay my hand upon you by the hand of my servant Sidney Rigdon, and you shall receive my Spirit, the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which shall teach you the peaceable things of the kingdom;

verse 2 “And I will lay my hand upon you by the hand of my servant Sidney Rigdon” Here is a poignant reminder that when one of the Lord’s appointed and authorized servants puts his hands upon the head of one to perform an ordinance, it is as though the Lord himself was placing his hands on that person to perform the ordinance. Edward Partridge was baptized by Joseph Smith and confirmed a member of the Church and given the gift of the Holy Ghost by Sidney Rigdon

“the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which shall teach you the peaceable things of the kingdom” Just prior to his crucifixion, Jesus promised his disciples the gift of peace (John 14:27). This peace is not the peace of the world but the inner peace that comes from the knowledge that one has found the truth, has had his sins remitted, and is on the path that leads to eternal life. This knowledge and assurance comes from the Holy Ghost, who is appropriately called the Comforter. Thus, all saints may, in this world of strife and turmoil, receive peace from Christ by the Holy Ghost and the assurance that the course they are pursuing is correct (see D&C 19:23; 59:23).

3 And you shall declare it with a loud voice, saying: Hosanna, blessed be the name of the most high God.

verse 3 “saying: Hosanna, blessed be the name of the most high God”
See the commentary for D&C 19:37.

4 And now this calling and commandment give I unto you concerning all men—verse 4 This verse alerts the hearer to the following four verses, verses 5-8, which are directed to the church leadership and concern church policy in dealing with all men.

5 That as many as shall come before my servants Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, Jun., embracing this calling and commandment, shall be ordained and sent forth to preach the everlasting gospel among the nations—verse 5 “this calling and commandment” The calling is the one just given to Edward Partridge in verse 1 “to preach my gospel.” The commandment is the commandment in verse 3 to declare the kingdom “with a loud voice.” In other words, whoever wants to be a missionary and preach the kingdom of God may, from this time on, be ordained and sent out by church leaders—provided they are worthy.

verse 6 “this untoward generation” The language here cites the King James translation of Acts 2:40 where the Greek word skolia—translated “untoward”—means “crooked” or “perverse.” Something that is crooked or perverse will not go straight towards its proper object, and is therefore untoward.

“hating even the garments spotted with the flesh” This is an allusion to Jude 1:23. Both Jews and Jewish Christians in Jesus’s day, largely due to rules in the law of Moses, had a tremendous aversion to bodily fluids and discharges (see Leviticus 13:47-59; 15). Garments spotted by disease or by the reproductive organs and their discharges were considered unclean and had to be either washed, torn, or burned depending upon the source and circumstances of the pollution.

Similarly, in the gospel covenant our aversion to moral disease or pollution ought to be so strong that we respond sharply and negatively to even the slightest indication of it. “Garments spotted with flesh are garments defiled by the practices of carnal desires and disobedience to the commandments of the Lord” (Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:163).

President Smith added: “We are commanded to keep our garments unspotted from all sin, from every practice that defiles. We are therefore commanded to come out of the world of weakness and forsake the things of this world” (Ibid., 1:150).

Elder Bruce R. McConkie also addressed this topic: “To stay the spread of disease in ancient Israel, clothing spotted by contagious diseases was destroyed by burning (Leviticus 13:47-59; 15:4-17). And so with sin in the Church, the saints are to avoid the remotest contact with it; the very garments, as it were, of the sinners are to be burned with fire, meaning that anything which has had contact with the pollutions of the wicked must be shunned” (Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 3:428).

7 And this commandment shall be given unto the elders of my church, that every man which will embrace it with singleness of heart may be ordained and sent forth, even as I have spoken.

verse 7 Even in Joseph Smith’s day, every worthy male member of the Church had at least some obligation to enter missionary service and preach the gospel of Jesus Christ (see also verses 4-5).

8 I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God; wherefore, gird up your loins and I will suddenly come to my temple. Even so. Amen.

verse 8 “gird up your loins” The Hebrews wore loose-fitting robes which were cumbersome if they had to work, run, or walk long distances. Hence, to prepare for any of these activities they would gather their loose clothing, bring it between their legs and tuck it in their sash. In this way they were left unencumbered. Hence, in biblical language, to “gird up your loins” is to prepare for a journey, for work, or for battle. An equivalent modern expression might be “Roll up your sleeves.”

“I will suddenly come to my temple” This is the first time in this dispensation the temple is mentioned. There was no temple in the Church at this time. Perhaps the Lord is simply foreshadowing the construction of future temples in Kirtland and Nauvoo. Again, the word “suddenly” means that he will come when he is least expected.

Section 37 Commandment to Move to Ohio

When they traveled to Fayette in December 1830, Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge had hoped to convince Joseph that he ought to visit the newly converted saints in Kirtland. They got more than their wish when in December 1830 the Lord gave this revelation which commanded all the saints in New York to move to “the Ohio,” largely because of the persecution of the saints in New York. In those days, Ohio was not a state but only a territory referred to as “the Ohio,” the “Ohio Reserve,” or the “Western Reserve.”

Section 37 was given to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon less than three weeks after Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge had arrived in Fayette from Kirtland.

By December 1830 the Church had grown to approximately two-hundred saints in the state of New York. As mentioned previously the Lamanite missionaries Oliver Cowdery, Peter Whitmer, Jr., Parley P. Pratt, and Ziba Peterson, had baptized nearly 130 people in the Kirtland, Ohio, area in the two or three weeks they had spent there in October on their way to Missouri. While in the Kirtland area, the Lamanite missionaries had ordained several elders, but apparently they left no single individual to preside over the new saints. Lyman Wight (see the “Brief Historical Setting for December 1830” at the conclusion of section 32) had acted as default leader, especially since Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge had traveled to New York to see the prophet Joseph Smith and inquire concerning the Lord’s will for them. Also, John Whitmer had been sent by Joseph from Fayette to preside over the Church in Kirtland. In spite of the efforts of Lyman Wight and John Whitmer, there was still some spiritual confusion that developed among these new members before Joseph Smith eventually arrived in February.

By the last week of January 1831, the first of the saints were ready for departure from New York. Sidney Rigdon delivered a parting sermon from the courthouse steps in Waterloo to the general populace, warning them to flee the wrath to come. Joseph traveled with Emma in a sleigh provided by Joseph Knight, Jr., and they arrived in Kirtland February 1, 1831.

Through the winter and spring, the New York saints made their way to Kirtland in small parties. By June 1831 the bulk of the New York converts had moved, many of them having sold their property in New York at a loss, to join the saints in Kirtland.

1 Behold, I say unto you that it is not expedient in me that ye should translate any more until ye shall go to the Ohio, and this because of the enemy and for your sakes.

verse 1 “it is not expedient in me that ye should translate any more until ye shall go to the Ohio” Joseph is commanded to pause in his efforts to write his inspired revision of the Bible.

The Lord gives two reasons for this commandment to move:

1. “because of the enemy” The opposition to the Church in New York had reached the point where at least some of their enemies had actually conspired to kill the saints. The saints were clearly in significant danger (D&C 38:13, 28-29, 31). Hence, it would seem that the move to the Ohio was at least in part to protect the saints.

2. “for your sakes” Apparently the Lord had something special in mind for the saints once they arrived in Kirtland. We will learn more of what the Lord had in mind in later sections.

2 And again, I say unto you that ye shall not go until ye have preached my gospel in those parts, and have strengthened up the church whithersoever it is found, and more especially in Colesville; for, behold, they pray unto me in much faith.

verse 2 “my gospel in those parts” They were to preach in New York one last time and strengthen the branches there, particularly Colesville, where the members had been faithfully praying for help and where the persecution of the saints and the schemes against them were the most severe.

3 And again, a commandment I give unto the church, that it is expedient in me that they should assemble together at the Ohio, against the time that my servant Oliver Cowdery shall return unto them.

verse 3 “a commandment I give unto the church” The Lord commands the saints to move to the Ohio. This was, in a way, the first gathering of the saints in this dispensation. Some of the New York saints looked on this exodus as a repetition of those of Lehi or Moses.

“against the time that my servant Oliver Cowdery shall return unto them” The New York saints are instructed to move to Kirtland in anticipation of Oliver’s return there. Oliver Cowdery was still the second elder of the Church and was a more important figure in its organization at this time than we sometimes acknowledge. The Church was genuinely looking forward to his return. Oliver was at this time in or near Jackson County, Missouri, on his Lamanite mission.

This particular phrase has reference to the fact that when Oliver returned to them from his mission to the Lamanites, he would have more information to give them regarding the location of the temple site in Zion. In other words, another reason for moving to the Ohio is to take the first step in gathering in the New Jerusalem.

Oliver did not arrive in Kirtland, however, until August 27, 1831, more than ten months after he left Fayette for Missouri, and about eight months after this revelation was received. Oliver, obedient to the Lord’s command, did not leave Missouri until Joseph went there in the summer of 1831 (see D&C 28:8-15) and, at the instruction of the Lord, personally accompanied Oliver back to Kirtland (see D&C 58:58).

4 Behold, here is wisdom, and let every man choose for himself until I come. Even so. Amen.

verse 4 “let every man choose for himself” Again, a reminder of the absolute sanctity of the principle of agency for every individual. The Lord will not, and indeed cannot, abrogate this principle.

1831 January

Before the saints left New York, Joseph received three more revelations. In the first, the Lord explained to the saints other reasons why they were to leave New York [D&C 38 - Reasons for the Removal of Church to Ohio]. The other two were given to James Covill, a former Baptist minister who was converted and baptized into the Church of Christ but left the Church shortly thereafter [D&C 39 - Revelation to James Covill] [D&C 40 - Judge Not]. Section 41 would be received in Kirtland.

Section 38 Reasons for Removal of the Church to Ohio

“The winter of 1830-31 was one of the most severe recorded in the eastern United States. The December snows were soft and deep; what little melting occurred was soon covered over by storms that maintained a four-foot level through February. Freezing rains in January enabled the wolves to run on the crust while heavier game sank through helplessly. Deer and elk could not find browse of twigs and shrubs. That winter the elk disappeared from the plains of Illinois and Missouri—never to return. A storm covered the breadth of the United States, blizzards whirled snow until familiar landmarks disappeared, and streams could be recognized only by breaks in the forests. Newspapers suspended publication when the mails could not go out. Human life maintained a precarious balance” (Mormon Enigma: Emma Hale Smith, Newell and Avery, 37).

On January 2, 1831, a quarterly conference of the Church was held in Fayette. Joseph briefly described the conference: “The year 1831 opened with a prospect great and glorious for the welfare of the kingdom; for on the 2nd of January, 1831, a conference was held in the town of Fayette, New York, at which the ordinary business of the Church was transacted; and in addition, the following revelation was received”—section 38 (HC, 1:140). Section 38 included reasons for the removal of the Church to the west.

The Lord’s command to move to the Ohio was upsetting to the saints, and when they assembled for the conference on January 2, they quizzed the Prophet about the revelation (section 37). There were hard feelings felt by some of them because of the sacrifices this move would require. Joseph had Sidney act as scribe, and he dictated section 38 to the conference as they sat watching and listening.

No official minutes of this conference were recorded, but fortunately some journal accounts exist describing the proceedings and the reception of Doctrine and Covenants 38. One is by John Whitmer:

The time had now come for the general conference to be held. Which was the first of January 1831 and according to this appointment the saints assembled themselves together. After transacting the necessary business, Joseph the Seer addressed the congregation and exhorted them to stand fast, looking forward considering the end [i.e., the object or goal] of their salvation. The solemnities of eternity rested on the congregation, and having previously received a revelation to go to the Ohio [section 37], they desired to know somewhat more concerning the matter. Therefore, the Seer inquired of the Lord in the presence of the whole congregation, and thus came the word of the Lord saying: [D&C 38].

After the Lord had manifested the above words, through Joseph the Seer, there were some divisions among the congregations, some would not receive the above as the word of the Lord: but that Joseph had invented it himself to deceive the people that in the end he might get gain. Now this was because, their hearts were not right in the sight of the Lord, for they wanted to serve God and man; but our Savior has declared that it was impossible to do so.

The conference was now closed, and the Lord had manifested his will to his people. Therefore they made preparations to journey to the Ohio, with their wives, and children and all that they possessed, to obey the commandment of the Lord (Whitmer, Early Latter-Day Saint History, 32-34; see also Woodford, "Historical Development," 1:491).

It would seem that, as is usually the case, the majority of the members gladly accepted this revelation which had been so dramatically delivered to Joseph in the presence of them all, while a small minority were shocked at the prospect of leaving their homes and their livelihoods and accepted the commandment to do so only grudgingly or not at all.

It is helpful to keep in mind as you study section 38 that Joseph Smith had spent much of the previous month, December 1830, revising by inspiration the book of Genesis—specifically he had received by revelation the book of Enoch (Moses 6:26 through Moses 7). The story of Enoch recorded there describes the establishment of Zion by Enoch in the period before the great Flood. In the previous section, section 37, the Lord had commanded the member of the Church to leave their homes and farms in New York and gather to Ohio to prepare to establish a Zion like Enoch's in their own day.

Joseph's mind was therefore saturated with the thoughts and expressions contained in the book of Enoch. Many of these expressions are found in this section. For example, the word "eternity" is found for the first time in the Doctrine and Covenants and it is mentioned nine times in section 38. Other examples include "Zion of Enoch" in verse 4 (Moses 7), "chains of darkness" in verse 5 (Moses 7:57), "wo, wo, wo" in verse 6 (Moses 7:25), and "veil of darkness" in verse 8 (Moses 7:61). Also the beginnings of the concept of the law of consecration emerge, as was practiced in the City of Enoch.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 38 Reasons for the removal of the Church to Ohio

D&C 38:27 I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one ye are not mine.

D&C 38:30 If ye are prepared ye shall not fear.

1 Thus saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, the Great I Am, Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the same which looked upon the wide expanse of eternity, and all the seraphic hosts of heaven, before the world was made;

verse 1 Given the setting in which section 38 was received (see the introductory commentary for this section), it was obviously expedient that the Lord reassure the gathered congregation that it was he, not Joseph, who was giving the revelation. He will continue this reassurance through verse 7.

“the Great I Am” One of the names Jehovah gave to himself is “I Am” (Exodus 3:14). Joseph Smith taught that the meaning of the name “I Am” is expressed in the saying that God is “omnipotent, omnipresent, and omniscient; without beginning of days or end of life; and that in him every good gift and every good principle dwell” (Lectures on Faith, number 2). The Lord also reminds the saints, by this title, that the God who is speaking to them and who desired to lead them by Joseph’s hand out of New York is the same God who led the children of Israel out of Egypt to a promised land by the hands of Moses and Aaron. Jesus Christ, the God of the Doctrine and Covenants, is Jehovah, God of the Old Testament and the Book of Mormon, who has led his people “out of Egypt” to establish “Zion” many times in the past. The saints who traveled to the Ohio viewed their journey as an exodus from New York and a gathering in the Ohio territory.

“Alpha and Omega” These are the first and last letters of the Greek alphabet. The name suggests that in him all things are encompassed. Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught that this name was used figuratively to “teach the timelessness and eternal nature of our Lord’s existence, that is, ‘from eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail’ (D&C 76:4)” (Mormon Doctrine, 31). Another idea expressed in the title “Alpha and Omega” is beginning and end—creation to final judgment.

“the wide expanse of eternity” Aside from this verse, the word expanse is found in scripture only in Abraham 4 and Facsimiles 1 and 2. In every case it is associated with the firmament, or atmosphere.

Presumably, God the Creator, before the creation took place, looked upon the vast expanse of space where creation was to be.

“all the seraphic hosts of heaven” Apparently there are animal-like creatures that reside in God’s presence called seraphs or seraphim (Isaiah 6:6). The singular form is seraph. Seraphim are apparently a high order of animals that serve the Lord in his heavenly court. Their name comes from the Hebrew root sarap, which means “to burn.” The name seraphim is plural and therefore means “the burning ones” or “bright, shiny ones” which likely refers to their glory.

Many animals and plants live in God’s presence, and it is likely that we have never heard of or seen many of them. John the Revelator saw and heard such animals in God’s presence (Revelation 5:8-14), and Joseph Smith recorded how these animals praised and glorified God (TPJS, 291-92).

In D&C 109:79, Joseph Smith describes Seraphs in God’s presence. Joseph refers to them as “bright, shining seraphs.” Joseph also taught that God dwells in “everlasting burnings” and that righteous beings (human and animal) dwell with him in a state of continual burning or glory (TPJS, 372-73, 347, 361).

Another type of winged heavenly creature that deserves mention is the cherub (singular) or cherubim (plural). Ezekiel teaches that cherubim also have hands and faces (Ezekiel 10:7, 14). Mesopotamian tradition and art represent them as winged bulls with human faces, but this may be metaphor and need not necessarily correspond with the literal truth.

An alternate explanation of seraphim and cherubim is that they are angels in the celestial presence of God who belong to the human family. Based on the evidence contained in this verse, Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote: “Seraphs are angels who reside in the presence of God. . . . It is clear that seraphs include the unembodied spirits of pre-existence, for our Lord ‘looked upon the wide expanse of eternity, and all the seraphic hosts of heaven, before the world was made.’ Whether the name seraphs also applies to perfected and resurrected angels is not clear” (Mormon Doctrine, 702-03).

2 The same which knoweth all things, for all things are present before mine eyes;

verse 2 “The same which knoweth all things” Certainly God has mental access to all facts—past, present, and future—“all things are present before mine eyes.” But the scriptural phrase to know is far richer than a mental accomplishment. To know is to have acquired a divine attribute. To know all things is to have acquired all divine attributes. For a discussion of this concept, see the section “What Does It Mean to ‘know’ a Spiritual Fact?” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 7, Spiritual Growth—Gifts of the Spirit.

3 I am the same which spake, and the world was made, and all things came by me.

verse 3 Jesus Christ, under the direction of the Father, is the Creator of this earth and other worlds without number. He accomplished this by speaking to, or commanding, his intelligences, and then he waited to see if he was obeyed (Abraham 4:18).

4 I am the same which have taken the Zion of Enoch into mine own bosom; and verily, I say, even as many as have believed in my name, for I am Christ, and in mine own name, by the virtue of the blood which I have spilt, have I pleaded before the Father for them.

verse 4 “I . . . have taken the Zion of Enoch into mine own bosom” To be “in the bosom” of someone is a Hebrew idiom derived from the fact that anciently a man’s clothing consisted of large flowing robes wrapped around his person and fastened with a sash, forming a spacious repository above the waist in which things, including children, were often carried. Something so carried was kept close to the chest or bosom, so the phrase “to be in the bosom of another” implied a very close and favored relationship. The Lord promises that all who have believed in his name shall also be taken into Christ’s bosom—a glorious promise indeed!

“the Zion of Enoch” The term Zion refers to a society of saints who have successfully gathered together to live the laws of the celestial kingdom among themselves here on the earth, who have actually succeeded in making God’s will “be done in earth as it is in heaven” (Matthew 6:10). God expects all of his earthly saints who are gathered to him to live in a Zion society; he would have his Church on earth be a Zion society.

The prophet Enoch (the seventh generation from Adam) built a city called Zion, so named by the Lord because they were united, righteous, and prosperous. They were of “one heart and one mind,” they must dwell “in righteousness,” and there must be “no poor among them” (Moses 7:18). This city of Enoch flourished for three hundred and sixty-five years and then the Lord, by some process not known to us, took it with all its inhabitants, “to his bosom,” thus saving them from destruction in the Flood that was to come. “And from thence went forth the saying, Zion is fled” (Moses 7:18, 19, 68, 69). Other examples of the successful establishment of a Zion society here on earth are the people of Melchizedek (JST, Genesis 14:32-26), the Book of Mormon people following the Savior’s visit to them, and, as stated, the Lord expects his latter-day Church to be a Zion society. This Zion society will be called the New Jerusalem (see Articles of Faith 1:10; Ether 13:1-12). When this New Jerusalem is well established, the Lord will bring the Zion of Enoch physically back to the earth to be joined together with the “New Jerusalem” Zion of the Latter-day Saints (see D&C 133:24; Moses 7:62-64).

These references to Enoch and Zion, in section 38, clearly anticipate what the saints themselves did not really know yet—that they were going to be invited to establish Zion, the New Jerusalem, in Missouri in their own lifetime.

“by virtue of the blood which I have spilt, have I pleaded before the Father for them” What gives Christ the right to plead our case before the Father or before the demands of justice? It is the virtue or power of the blood he voluntarily spilt for us in Gethsemane and on the cross (D&C 45:3-5). Without his atoning sacrifice, even a perfect being like Christ could not protect us from the demands of justice.

5 But behold, the residue of the wicked have I kept in chains of darkness until the judgment of the great day, which shall come at the end of the earth;

verse 5 “the residue of the wicked have I kept in chains of darkness”

Please review the commentary for D&C 29:42. In the period between Enoch and the Flood those who repented and accepted the gospel gathered to the Zion of Enoch. Later, when Zion had been taken up to heaven, converts were still taken physically from the earth and translated to Zion. This meant that the humanity they left behind was constantly becoming more wicked, stubborn, and rebellious as the more righteous individuals were slowly being taken away (see Moses 7:27). Those wicked and rebellious souls who were left behind were like the “residue” left in a pan as the liquid is boiled off. When these wicked and rebellious dregs, who had had every chance to accept the gospel, perished in the Flood, their spirits were consigned to hell to suffer there until the resurrection. At that time they will have to answer for themselves before God—having rejected the advocate Jesus Christ who would have pleaded their case for them. Still, even these hard cases may be redeemed through Christ and receive some degree of glory if they will repent.

“at the end of the earth” The end of the earth will occur at the end of the Millennium when all the remaining dead will be resurrected and brought to judgment. This expression should be kept distinct from the expression end of the world which will occur at the Lord’s second coming when the wicked will be cleansed from the earth. On both occasions there will be “a new heaven and a new earth.”

6 And even so will I cause the wicked to be kept, that will not hear my voice but harden their hearts, and wo, wo, wo, is their doom.

verse 6 “even so will I cause the wicked to be kept” At the final judgment, those hard hearted individuals who steadfastly refuse to repent will be “kept,” or inextricably ensnared in the “chains of hell” (Alma 12:9-11) and will unavoidably spend eternity in outer darkness.

7 But behold, verily, verily, I say unto you that mine eyes are upon you. I am in your midst and ye cannot see me;

verse 7 “mine eyes are upon you” Here is a reminder that the Lord knows each of us individually and intimately.

8 But the day soon cometh that ye shall see me, and know that I am; for the veil of darkness shall soon be rent, and he that is not purified shall not abide the day.

verse 8 This verse has reference to the second coming of the Savior—the great and dreadful day of the Lord. Only the celestial- and terrestrial-bound souls will abide that day.

9 Wherefore, gird up your loins and be prepared. Behold, the kingdom is yours, and the enemy shall not overcome.

verse 9 “the kingdom is yours” Note the practical meaning of this phrase emphasized by the present tense. In effect the Lord says, “The Kingdom of God on the earth and his heavenly kingdom are yours for the taking” (see also verse 15).

“the enemy shall not overcome” This is a comforting promise. The gospel has been restored to the earth. It will never again be removed or destroyed.

10 Verily I say unto you, ye are clean, but not all; and there is none else with whom I am well pleased;

verse 10 “ye are clean, but not all” The Lord says, in effect, “Generally, as a group, you are righteous and your motives are pure, but there are exceptions among you.” No doubt the reference here includes those members who questioned the integrity of the prophet Joseph, rejected his revelations, and accused him of trying to profit at their expense (see verse 14).

11 For all flesh is corrupted before me; and the powers of darkness prevail upon the earth, among the children of men, in the presence of all the hosts of heaven—

verse 11 “all flesh is corrupted before me” All are subject to their carnal or “natural-self” nature. We have always possessed this natural characteristic even as spirits in the premortal world and before, and this characteristic has always rendered it difficult to obey. But the fall of Adam with the resulting mortal bodies and this mortal setting has intensified this carnal or natural aspect of each of us.

12 Which causeth silence to reign, and all eternity is pained, and the angels are waiting the great command to reap down the earth, to gather the tares that they may be burned; and, behold, the enemy is combined.

verse 12 “Which causeth silence to reign” One of the signs of the times is a period of silence in heaven, a calm before the storm, just prior to the destroying angels’ being dispatched to earth to reap down the wicked. See the subtitle “Period of silence” in “Signs of the Seventh Seal—Prior to the Lord’s Second Coming” in Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 26.

“eternity is pained, and the angels are waiting” The wickedness of the world has reached the point where there are angels actually feeling pained over the situation, and they are awaiting the command to commence the final destruction of the earth. The world is fast becoming ripe in iniquity. The implication is that the destroying angels are anxious to get started (see Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43—the parable of the wheat and the tares)!

“the enemy is combined” As in a secret combination (see 3 Nephi 7:6-9; Moses 5:51). In other words, the enemies of the Church have combined together secretly to plan and effect the destruction of the saints.

13 And now I show unto you a mystery, a thing which is had in secret chambers, to bring to pass even your destruction in process of time, and ye knew it not;

verse 13 The Lord clearly warns the saints that they are in danger. The enemies of the Church have combined together to wreak havoc on the Church.

Regarding this verse and verse 28 in this section, Joseph Fielding Smith taught, “The Lord revealed that the wicked were plotting in ‘secret chambers’ the destruction of Joseph Smith and the Church” (Essentials in Church History, 1950, 121).

Elder Joseph F. Smith wrote:

The hatred of the wicked always has and always will follow the priesthood and the saints. The devil will not lose sight of the power of God vested in man—the Holy Priesthood. He fears it, he hates it, and will never cease to stir up the hearts of the debased and corrupt in anger and malice towards those who hold this power, and to persecute the saints, until he is bound (JD, 19:24).

It appears from the historical record that the center of this activity was the area around Colesville, New York. Sidney Rigdon had preached a strong sermon there just prior to the date of this revelation, and it had greatly increased the intensity of both pro- and anti-Mormon feelings. The existence and intent of the secret combinations, however, were still unknown to the saints.

14 But now I tell it unto you, and ye are blessed, not because of your iniquity, neither your hearts of unbelief; for verily some of you are guilty before me, but I will be merciful unto your weakness.

verse 14 The Lord is warning the saints in spite of the fact that some do not merit his merciful warning.

verses 16-17 (also verses 24-27, 34-36) In these following verses the Lord gives two commandments that are essential to the establishment of Zion: (1) be united, and (2) take care of the poor and the needy. These two commandments were later required at their hand when the Lord revealed in section 106:9 that the reason Zion was not redeemed was because the saints had failed to obey them. These commandments must be lived by the saints as a people, or Zion will not be established. More than 150 years have elapsed since this revelation. Are we, as yet, a Zion people?

16 And for your salvation I give unto you a commandment, for I have heard your prayers, and the poor have complained before me, and the rich have I made, and all flesh is mine, and I am no respecter of persons.

verse 16 “I give unto you a commandment” This commandment will be defined in verse 32—it is the Lord’s command that the saints move to the Ohio. Generally the commandment is given for the temporal and spiritual salvation of the saints. The specific reasons for this commandment are to save the saints from those who plot their deaths, to answer the prayers of the poor and provide for their temporal needs, to give the saints God’s law, and to endow them with power from on high—the verses 17-20 In order to understand the Lord's promises in these next four verses it is necessary to have an understanding of the successive stages of the earth's existence both past and future. These include:

1. Spirit earth. The first creation of the earth involved the embodiment of all of the earth's intelligences with bodies made of spirit matter. This creation includes those intelligences honored to receive a body after the image of their heavenly parents and also those intelligences making up the animals and plants and the physical or "inanimate" substances of the earth. The earth's first stage of existence was thus as a "spirit earth."

2. Preparatory creation. The spirit earth was created physically as the intelligences assigned to this earth were embodied with physical mortal bodies. Prior to the habitation of the earth by the family of man, the earth was infused with a sequence of increasingly complex microbial, plant, and animal life forms as it was prepared to receive the family of man. The earth likely existed in this form for millions of years.

3. Edenic earth. When the earth reach the state of being fully prepared to receive the human family, the earth was pronounced good and it was blessed with a terrestrial or paradisiacal state. The first man and woman were placed upon the earth. There was no death or any opportunity for procreation.

4. Telestial earth. After the fall of Adam the earth took on its present telestial state, intended to be the abode of all mankind for the duration of their mortal probationary state. The procreation of man began.

5. Terrestrial earth. At the onset of the Millennium, the earth will be burned or baptized by fire and "be renewed and receive its paradisiacal glory" (Articles of Faith 1:10). It will then be a new heaven and a new earth for the duration of the Millennium.

6. Celestial earth. Following the Millennium and an additional "little season" (D&C 29:22-25), the earth will die and be resurrected with a celestial eternal body. It will become like a sea of glass (D&C 130:7) and attain its sanctified and immortal state. It will be the celestial abode of exalted man forever and ever.

17 And I have made the earth rich, and behold it is my footstool, wherefore, again I will stand upon it.

verse 17 The Lord has provided the mortal earth with "enough and to spare" (D&C 104:17). Though the Lord will be absent from the mortal earth for a time, the day will come when he will again come to earth to govern—during the Millennium.

18 And I hold forth and deign to give unto you greater riches, even a land of promise, a land flowing with milk and honey, upon which there shall be no curse when the Lord cometh;

19 And I will give it unto you for the land of your inheritance, if you seek it with all your hearts.

verses 18-19 These verses likely have a double meaning. The Lord may be applying them to the Ohio Territory where he promises physical abundance based on the righteousness of the saints. Just as the promised land of the children of Abraham was Canaan, or the promised land for Lehi was the New World, so shall the Ohio be a promised land for the saints. These temporal promised lands, however, are symbolic of a future event. In this case it may have application to the millennial, terrestrial earth.

Without the keys of the priesthood and the sealing power, the earth would be “utterly wasted” (D&C 2:3) or smitten “with a curse” (Malachi 4:6) at the Lord’s second coming. But not Zion. For the saints in Zion the day of the Lord’s second coming will be “great” and not “dreadful.”

20 And this shall be my covenant with you, ye shall have it for the land of your inheritance, and for the inheritance of your children forever, while the earth shall stand, and ye shall possess it again in eternity, no more to pass away.

verse 20 Again, a verse with a dual meaning. The Lord offers a binding covenant: On one level, if the saints are completely faithful, the Zion City which they will found in the Ohio or in Jackson County, Missouri, will be a safe haven from which they will never be removed. On another level, the earthly Zion is symbolic of the celestial earth from which those who inherit celestial glory will never be removed.

21 But, verily I say unto you that in time ye shall have no king nor ruler, for I will be your king and watch over you.

22 Wherefore, hear my voice and follow me, and you shall be a free people, and ye shall have no laws but my laws when I come, for I am your lawgiver, and what can stay my hand?

verses 21-22 These verses refer to the Millennium when Christ will be the crowned political ruler of the world. All governments will be subject unto his government. He will make an end to all nations. He will rule over what has been termed the political kingdom of God which will embrace all people whether they are members of the Church or not.

verses 23-28 In order for the gathering in the Ohio to be a success, that is, in order for it to result in both the temporal and spiritual salvation of the saints, there are conditions to be met by the saints which are outlined in these six following verses.

23 But, verily I say unto you, teach one another according to the office wherewith I have appointed you; verse 23 In order for a Zion society to function as the Lord intends, each individual must do the work he is assigned (see D&C 84:109-110; 107:99-100; Romans 12:4-5).

24 And let every man esteem his brother as himself, and practise virtue and holiness before me.

verse 24 “let every man esteem his brother as himself” The importance of this command is illustrated by the Lord’s repeating the command in the following verse.

25 And again I say unto you, let every man esteem his brother as himself.

verse 25 Temporal and spiritual salvation will come to the saints as they learn to love each other as themselves; as they share their goods with one another, thus living the celestial laws of sacrifice and consecration. For example, if I truly love you as I love myself, then I cannot be happy if you are in want, and your well-being becomes a condition of my well-being. There is something of pride and worldliness in most of us which includes an element of competition or the competitive seeking after things of the world. When we hear of an adverse happening in the life of our neighbor—a friend or associate—we may feel, on one level, distressed and empathetic, but on another level we may sense a subtle satisfaction because we have gained a notch on them in the prideful and worldly competitive race of life. This we must overcome.

These same celestial laws will later be taught to the saints in the Ohio (see D&C 42:30-40).

26 For what man among you having twelve sons, and is no respecter of them, and they serve him obediently, and he saith unto the one: Be thou clothed in robes and sit thou here; and to the other: Be thou clothed in rags and sit thou there—and looketh upon his sons and saith I am just?

verse 26 Obviously not all of the Lord’s parables are in the New Testament. Here is the “parable of the man with twelve sons” which is unique to the Doctrine and Covenants. In this parable the Lord postulates a man who has twelve sons all of whom are obedient to him, and he does not favor any one above the others. The Lord then poses a question: Would such a man consider himself just and yet favor one son by clothing him in robes and providing for him a favored place in his household, and, at the same time, clothe another in rags and set him an unfavorable location? The Lord’s message here is clear. A righteous man, including God himself, would not do such a thing, yet the Lord points out that the circumstances of mortality often result in just these circumstances. Some have abundant possessions in excess of what they need, while others suffer in poverty. The Lord’s implication here is that these widely diverse economic circumstances are not always due to variations in the motivation, work ethic, or abilities of those involved. Hence, those with ample possessions must seek out those who suffer in poverty and come to their aid. Also, those who live with a paucity of possessions must not begrudge or resent those who have more.

27 Behold, this I have given unto you as a parable, and it is even as I am. I say unto you, be one; and if ye are not one ye are not mine.

verse 27 “if ye are not one ye are not mine” Elder Harold B. Lee spoke in conference about this vitally important concept:

If we are not united, we are not his. Here unity is the test of divine ownership . . . If we would be united in love and fellowship and harmony, this Church would convert the world, who would see in us the shining example of these qualities which evidence that divine ownership. . . .

If we, in our wards and our branches, are divided, and there are factions not in harmony, it is but an evidence that there is something wrong. If two persons are at variance, arguing on different points of doctrine, no reasonable, thinking persons would say that both were speaking their different opinions by the Spirit of the Lord. . . .

If it is so important, then, that this people be a united people, we might well expect that upon this principle the powers of Satan would descend for their greatest attack. We might well expect, also, that if there be those of apostate mind among us, they would be inclined to ridicule and to scorn this principle of oneness and unity as being narrow-minded or as being unprogressive (CR, April 1950, 97-98).

28 And again, I say unto you that the enemy in the secret chambers seeketh your lives.

verse 28 See verse 13 and its commentary.

29 Ye hear of wars in far countries, and you say that there will soon be great wars in far countries, but ye know not the hearts of men in your own land.

verse 29 “Ye hear of wars in far countries” The Lord mildly chastises his people or at least points out and chides them for one of their wholly human characteristics. The saints can read newspapers and discern what is going on in Europe or in other places around the world, but they do not know that the people across town, or around the corner, or down their own street are conspiring together to put them to death.

“ye know not the hearts of men in your own land” At the time of this revelation a major civil disturbance was not even considered a possibility in the United States. Keep in mind that we are still pre-Civil War. But even then there were evil men hatching evil plans for the country generally and for the saints in particular. The Civil War was one result of this hidden evil for the nation as a whole, while the expulsions from Missouri and Illinois were results for the saints in particular.

30 I tell you these things because of your prayers; wherefore, treasure up wisdom in your bosoms, lest the wickedness of men reveal these things unto you by their wickedness, in a manner which shall speak in your ears with a voice louder than that which shall shake the earth; but if ye are prepared ye shall not fear.

verse 30 “if ye are prepared ye shall not fear” This well-known phrase has wide application, but was likely intended here to encourage the saints to prepare for the calamities to occur before the Lord’s second coming. President Ezra Taft Benson provided us with the key to remaining prepared. He said, “Look to the prophets for the words of God, that will show us how to prepare for the calamities which are to come” (CR, October 1973, 89). If we do this, we need not fear our adversaries, even the schemes and plans of Satan himself.

31 And that ye might escape the power of the enemy, and be gathered unto me a righteous people, without spot and blameless—

32 Wherefore, for this cause I gave unto you the commandment that ye should go to the Ohio; and there I will give unto you my law; and there you shall be endowed with power from on high;

verse 32 The saints are promised that once they arrive in Kirtland, the Lord will give them: (1) “my law”—The law of the Lord to the Church (section 42 of the Doctrine and Covenants) which will be given to Joseph on February 9, 1831, only a few days after his arrival in Kirtland; and (2) an “endowment of power”—the blessings incident to temple work which will be received more than five years later on April 3, 1836, in the Kirtland Temple (see D&C 110). See The Temple in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 18. The word endow is originally from the Greek verb enduo, meaning “to be clothed.” This word has evolved in contemporary English to describe the bestowal of a gift of great proportions. In addition to the blessings incident to temple work, the saints will be blessed around the time of the dedication of the Kirtland Temple to receive a staggering outpouring of the Pentecostal gifts of the Spirit (see Acts 2:1-21).

33 And from thence, whosoever I will shall go forth among all nations, and it shall be told them what they shall do; for I have a great work laid up in store, for Israel shall be saved, and I will lead them whithersoever I will, and no power shall stay my hand.

verse 33 The Lord foreshadows the tremendous missionary effort, both domestic and international, that will take place in the Church.

34 And now, I give unto the church in these parts a commandment, that certain men among them shall be appointed, and they shall be appointed by the voice of the church;

verse 34 “certain men among them shall be appointed” The Lord foretells of certain men to be called to watch over the temporal affairs of the Church. This may well refer to the office of bishop under the law of consecration (see section 41).

35 And they shall look to the poor and the needy, and administer to their relief that they shall not suffer; and send them forth to the place which I have commanded them;

36 And this shall be their work, to govern the affairs of the property of this church.

37 And they that have farms that cannot be sold, let them be left or rented as seemeth them good.

verse 37 The Lord instructs those who are unable to sell their farms in time to leave New York in a timely manner as the Lord instructs. Many of the saints simply abandoned their lands in New York and traveled to the Ohio. Some, however, retained claim upon their lands and rented or leased them, to sell at a later date. An example of the latter was Joseph Knight Sr., who did not sell his land when he moved to the Ohio, but did so later when he got a better price.

38 See that all things are preserved; and when men are endowed with power from on high and sent forth, all these things shall be gathered unto the bosom of the church.

verse 38 Unbeknownst to the saints they will soon be instructed in the law of consecration and become a united order. Here the Lord urges them to preserve their material possessions so that they might later be contributed to the bishop’s storehouse—“gathered unto the bosom of the church”—and be utilized for the good of the members of the united order.

39 And if ye seek the riches which it is the will of the Father to give unto you, ye shall be the richest of all people, for ye shall have the riches of eternity; and it must needs be that the riches of the earth are mine to give; but beware of pride, lest ye become as the Nephites of old.

verse 39 “beware of pride” The essence of pride is an inappropriate seeking for the things of the world, the riches of the world, rather than for the riches of eternity. See “Pride” in The “Natural Self” and “Spiritual Self in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 5.

While wealth in itself is not evil, it is the natural course of things for the rich, or perhaps for their children or grandchildren, to become first proud and then unfaithful. If the rich take no measures to keep this from happening, or if they just don't give it much thought, it will happen, just as surely as an untended garden will become overgrown with weeds. Therefore, wealthy saints must be aware of the natural effect wealth has on people and must work actively and creatively to keep those weeds from their gardens. The natural progression, whether in one generation or the next, is to pride, then to unfaithfulness, and thence to wickedness and destruction. This sequence was repeatedly evidenced among the Book of Mormon people—"the Nephites of old."

40 And again, I say unto you, I give unto you a commandment, that every man, both elder, priest, teacher, and also member, go to with his might, with the labor of his hands, to prepare and accomplish the things which I have commanded.

41 And let your preaching be the warning voice, every man to his neighbor, in mildness and in meekness.

verse 41 Every member is a missionary, and every member is to warn his neighbor. Why warn? Why not just inform about the exciting message of the restored gospel? In a way the gospel is a warning to the world of its fallen state and of its need of repentance and of a Savior in order to escape the judgments of God, both at the second coming when the wicked will be burned and at the resurrection when those who are "filthy still" will be cast out with Satan and his angels (see 2 Nephi 9:16; D&C 88:102). We sometimes forget this necessary element of warning as we preach and teach the gospel. We are not, however, to pound the pulpit and preach "hellfire and damnation" in the usual sense or to loudly condemn or put down nonmembers, but to sound a warning to our neighbors in clarity and mildness and meekness.

42 And go ye out from among the wicked. Save yourselves. Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord. Even so. Amen.

verse 42 "Save yourselves" We readily avow that we are totally dependent upon the atonement of Jesus Christ for our salvation and exaltation, we also recognize clearly that a pro-active obedience to the commandments of God and an overcoming of one's natural self is essential. This, we must do ourselves. "For we know that it is by grace that we are saved, after all we can do" (2 Nephi 25:23).

"Be ye clean that bear the vessels of the Lord"

In ancient Israel, certain vessels (bowls, urns, vases, and other containers) and utensils were used in religious feasts and ceremonies. The vessels that were to be used in the temple had special significance and were handled only by those who were worthy and authorized and who had properly prepared themselves. In a somewhat similar manner, the Lord has indicated that his saints should come "out from among the wicked" and leave the worldliness of Babylon so that they will be worthy to "bear the vessels of the Lord" (Ludlow, Daniel H., A Companion to your Study of the Doctrine and Covenants, 2:317).

Section 39 Revelation to James Covill

Shortly after the conference of January 2, 1831, a man named James Covill came to the Prophet. His surname was actually Covell, but it is spelled Covill in most all of the church's literature. He had been a lay minister for the Baptist Church for about forty years. He was apparently converted to the Church and had entered into a covenant with the Lord to abide by any commandment which the Lord should give him through Joseph. He made this covenant known to Joseph. He was thus given this revelation. He is called to be baptized into the Lord's Church and to preach the gospel. To do so would have meant finding new employment. He would have had to leave the ministry in which he had been involved for forty years. He apparently never did obey the Lord's command to be baptized. He rejected this revelation from the Lord (see section 40).

1 Hearken and listen to the voice of him who is from all eternity to all eternity, the Great I Am, even Jesus Christ—verse 1 “the Great I Am” See the commentary for D&C 38:1.

2 The light and the life of the world; a light which shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not;

verse 2 “The light and the life of the world” Just how is Jesus Christ the light and life of the world. The concept of light in the scriptures is a rich and exciting one. See The Concept of Light, volume 1, chapter 15 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

3 The same which came in the meridian of time unto mine own, and mine own received me not;

verse 3 “the meridian of time” See a discussion of this phrase in the commentary for D&C 20:26.

4 But to as many as received me, gave I power to become my sons; and even so will I give unto as many as will receive me, power to become my sons.

verse 4 The meaning of this interesting verse hinges on the tense of the verb receive. To receive Jesus Christ is to accept him as your Lord and Savior and also as your Master—to follow his example to obey him. We see in this verse an illustration of the working of the concepts of both grace and works. Keep in mind that God's grace is his love for us, particularly that aspect of his love that inclines him to extend blessings to us that we do not fully merit. Our works are simply the efforts we expend in striving to obey the Lord's commands—in seeking to follow his example.

The first statement, “but to as many as received me, gave I power to become my sons,” suggests that to those who became converts to the Church and agreed to the baptismal covenant, the Savior mercifully (by his grace) gave the blessing of becoming his sons or daughters. This is a one-time merciful gift, given by the grace of God. However, in order to maintain that blessing, one must continue to strive diligently to obey—this is works: “even so will I give unto as many as will receive me, power to become my sons.” Thus we see the interaction between the Lord’s grace and our works.

5 And verily, verily, I say unto you, he that receiveth my gospel receiveth me; and he that receiveth not my gospel receiveth not me.

verse 5 “he that receiveth my gospel receiveth me” The word “gospel” is often used in the Church. What exactly does it mean? The word gospel means literally good news or glad tidings. It is the good news about Jesus Christ—his atonement, the establishment of his earthly kingdom, and the possibility of living forever in his celestial presence. If we were to strip away everything from the gospel but its very essence, especially the essence of receiving the gospel, we would likely conclude that to receive his gospel (and hence to receive him) is to accept him as your Lord and Master—your exemplar—and strive diligently to obey him and his example. The gospel, then, is him, his example, his commandments. To accept him is to obey him.

6 And this is my gospel—repentance and baptism by water, and then cometh the baptism of fire and the Holy Ghost, even the Comforter, which showeth all things, and teacheth the peaceable things of the kingdom.

verse 6 It would seem that members of the Church can read of the idea that the gospel is faith (implied in this verse), repentance, baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost and yet not completely comprehend why these “first principles and ordinances” are the very essence of the gospel. Please review the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon, particularly the discussion of the three parts of the ordinance of baptism. The most fundamental aspect of faith is a willingness to deliberately do, to deliberately obey, even when one is not certain (Alma 32:27-29). Repentance is fundamentally obedience. When an individual has established a pattern of disobedience and wishes to change, then we use the word repentance. Then there is baptism. It is by the three parts of the ordinance of baptism that we grow spiritually—that we progress to become like God. And this is the essence of our purpose here on earth. If we strive to obey and progress to become like him, then we may be blessed to live with him forever. And that is the essence of the gospel. See also Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 18, Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth.

7 And now, behold, I say unto you, my servant James, I have looked upon thy works and I know thee.

verse 7 James Covill was almost seventy-five years old when he met Joseph Smith, and he had been a Baptist minister for about forty years. Though not yet baptized, the Lord referred to Covill as “my servant James,” perhaps because of the preparatory ministry he had performed as a Baptist (see D&C 35:4), and the Lord had already blessed him greatly for his service in the past (see the following verse).

8 And verily I say unto thee, thine heart is now right before me at this time; and, behold, I have bestowed great blessings upon thy head; verse 8 We already know the sad history of Covill’s failure to accept the gospel and labor in it. In this verse we see obvious conditional clauses such as “now” and “at this time.” The Lord knew his heart and knew that he would not obey the commandments given to him.

9 Nevertheless, thou hast seen great sorrow, for thou hast rejected me many times because of pride and the cares of the world.

verse 9 Little more is known about James Covill. It is therefore impossible to say what things he had done that caused the Lord to give him this solemn warning. Obviously the things of the world (pride) had been his nemesis in the past, and just as obviously they would continue to be so in the future.

10 But, behold, the days of thy deliverance are come, if thou wilt hearken to my voice, which saith unto thee: Arise and be baptized, and wash away your sins, calling on my name, and you shall receive my Spirit, and a blessing so great as you never have known.

verse 10 “the days of thy deliverance are come” The Lord points out to Covill that this is indeed a watershed moment in his spiritual life. This is his chance. Unfortunately the moment came to naught.

11 And if thou do this, I have prepared thee for a greater work. Thou shalt preach the fulness of my gospel, which I have sent forth in these last days, the covenant which I have sent forth to recover my people, which are of the house of Israel.

verses 10-11 Notice the Lord’s uses of word “if” in these verses—again, a reminder that the Lord’s promises are conditional.

verse 11 “I have prepared thee for a greater work” By implication the Lord indicates that Covill’s service as a Baptist minister had been a great work. A greater work would be for him to accept and preach the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ. Though coming from circumstances similar to those of Sidney Rigdon, Covill presents a foil or contrast to Sidney's humility and obedience when he is presented with the same choices and when he is offered the same blessings.

“the covenant which I have sent forth to recover my people” This is the new and everlasting covenant of the gospel, by which the righteous descendants of Israel will be gathered back into the family, as will those adopted into Israel through their faith in Christ.

12 And it shall come to pass that power shall rest upon thee; thou shalt have great faith, and I will be with thee and go before thy face.

verse 12 “power shall rest upon thee” This phrase likely has reference to the gift of the Holy Ghost and the Melchizedek Priesthood.

13 Thou art called to labor in my vineyard, and to build up my church, and to bring forth Zion, that it may rejoice upon the hills and flourish.

14 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto thee, thou art not called to go into the eastern countries, but thou art called to go to the Ohio.

15 And inasmuch as my people shall assemble themselves at the Ohio, I have kept in store a blessing such as is not known among the children of men, and it shall be poured forth upon their heads. And from thence men shall go forth into all nations.

verse 15 “I have kept in store a blessing such as is not known among the children of men” The blessings of the keys of the sealing power and other ordinances requiring a temple had not yet been restored to the earth, but they would be restored when the saints gathered to the Ohio as commanded (see D&C 110:11-16). The reader must guard against interpreting the concept of the sealing power in its narrowest sense. See the commentary for Helaman 10:7 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

16 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that the people in Ohio call upon me in much faith, thinking I will stay my hand in judgment upon the nations, but I cannot deny my word.

verse 16 Apparently the new converts in Ohio had been praying that the Lord would change his plans to destroy the wicked prior to his second coming. But God is just and unchanging, and all his words must be fulfilled. Thus the prayers of the Ohio saints, though fervent, faithful, and sincere, were in vain on this point.

17 Wherefore lay to with your might and call faithful laborers into my vineyard, that it may be pruned for the last time.

verse 17 The expressions “lay to” or “go to” are generally positive expressions of send-off and an encouragement similar to “God speed” or “good luck” or even “go to work.” The metaphor of the world in this final dispensation as the Lord’s vineyard is, by now, a familiar one (Jacob 5).

18 And inasmuch as they do repent and receive the fulness of my gospel, and become sanctified, I will stay mine hand in judgment.

verse 18 “inasmuch as they do repent and receive the fulness of my gospel, and become sanctified” To become sanctified is to grow spiritually—to receive the incremental attributes of Christ by personal revelation which are contingent upon obedience to the gospel commands. Sanctification also includes the idea of having incremental pieces of the natural self burned out of the soul in consequence of a man’s obedience. See Justification and Sanctification in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17.

19 Wherefore, go forth, crying with a loud voice, saying: The kingdom of heaven is at hand; crying: Hosanna! blessed be the name of the Most High God.

verse 19 “The kingdom of heaven is at hand” What event is being referred to here? The reader should be reminded to distinguish between the kingdom of God on earth (God’s earthly church or kingdom) and the kingdom of God in heaven, or the kingdom of heaven (God’s kingdom in heaven). This verse is somewhat problematic. See a discussion of the phrase “the kingdom of heaven is at hand” in the commentary for Alma 5:50 in Learning to Love the Book of Mormon.

The phrase “at hand” might mean a few years or a few centuries.

In this particular verse the reference seems to be to the Lord’s second coming and the ushering in of the millennial kingdom of the Lord (see the following verse). There is always the possibility also that the phrase “the kingdom of heaven is at hand” may apply to each man who is never far from death. After death every man will return to God’s heavenly presence at least long enough to be judged (Alma 40:11-14).

“Hosanna!” See the commentary for D&C 19:37.

20 Go forth baptizing with water, preparing the way before my face for the time of my coming;

21 For the time is at hand; the day or the hour no man knoweth; but it surely shall come.

verse 21 The Lord obviously deliberately withholds from us the day and hour of his coming. He simply tells us to watch and be ready.

22 And he that receiveth these things receiveth me; and they shall be gathered unto me in time and in eternity.

verse 22 “in time and in eternity” “Time” refers to our present mortal lives. “Eternity” is that which extends beyond this present life. Thus, the phrase “in time and in eternity” is another way of saying both in this life and in the next.

23 And again, it shall come to pass that on as many as ye shall baptize with water, ye shall lay your hands, and they shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, and shall be looking forth for the signs of my coming, and shall know me.

verse 23 “shall be looking forth for the signs of my coming” It is interesting to note that it is a direct command for each of his people to be observant and watch for the signs of his coming. See three chapters in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3: chapter 24, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

That said, however, this has become a favorite subject of false teachers in the Church. For reasons that are not clear, when some contemporary saints approach this subject, they lose balance, discernment, and judgment. The only reliable guides on this subject are the scriptures and the prophets.

24 Behold, I come quickly. Even so. Amen.

Section 40 Judge Not

Within a few weeks of James Covill's "conversion" (see section 39), he fizzled out and left the Church, largely because of the fear of persecution and his unwillingness to leave his ministry and to his reluctance to obey the Lord's command to move to Ohio. He never was actually baptized into the Church.

Doubtless, the saints wondered how a man could be fully committed and have his heart right before the Lord one minute, and be out of the Church the next. The Saints' tongues likely wagged and passed judgment on their erstwhile Brother Covill. In one of the great verses of scripture, the Lord reminds us not to judge but to leave the judging to him: "It remaineth with me to do with him as seemeth me good" (D&C 40:3).

Section 40 was the last of the revelations now recorded in the Doctrine and Covenants to be received in New York.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 40 Judge Not

D&C 40:3 It remaineth with me to do with him as seemeth me good.

1 Behold, verily I say unto you, that the heart of my servant James Covill was right before me, for he covenanted with me that he would obey my word.

verse 1 Apparently at one time James Covill was truly convinced of the truth, and his intentions were pure.

2 And he received the word with gladness, but straightway Satan tempted him; and the fear of persecution and the cares of the world caused him to reject the word.

verse 2 "he received the word with gladness" The Lord's reference here is to the parable of the sower (Matthew 13:1-9, 18-23), particularly the man who received the word of God in stony places: "But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy [with gladness] receiveth it; Yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended" (Matthew 13:20-21).

Among all of the worldly influences that led James Covill away, the Lord particularly mentions "the fear of persecution." Again, the contrast between Covill and Sidney Rigdon is notable and informative.

3 Wherefore he broke my covenant, and it remaineth with me to do with him as seemeth me good. Amen.

verse 3 “he broke my covenant” Since he never was baptized, it is evident that the covenant which Covill had made with the Lord was personal. But the Lord had accepted it, and then Covill broke it.

“it remaineth with me to do with him as seemeth me good” There is only one who is qualified and authorized to judge a man; the Lord Jesus Christ (John 5:22). This statement by the Lord contains a veiled warning to all of us. We should not judge (Matthew 7:1-5).

Character Vignette

Newell Kimball Whitney

It may be noted that Brother Whitney’s first name, Newell is spelled with two “l’s” in most of the LDS scholarly literature, but with one “l” in the Doctrine and Covenants. Perhaps we may conclude that it is of little importance how we spell it. Brother Whitney was born in Vermont on February 5, 1795, and was thus almost eleven years older than the Prophet. After fighting in the War of 1812, he became an Indian trader at Green Bay, Lake Michigan. He next settled in the Ohio where he met Algernon Sidney Gilbert, a merchant in Painesville, Ohio. Together they established a successful store in Kirtland.

In 1822 he married Elizabeth Ann Smith, who has come to be known in our church history as Mother Whitney. When Oliver Cowdery and his fellow missionaries came to Kirtland (see section 32) en route to Missouri, the Whitneys were Campbellites and members of Sidney Rigdon’s congregation. On hearing the gospel preached by these elders, the Whitneys were converted.

Mother Whitney told the story that one night prior to the arrival of Elder Cowdery and his companions, she and her husband were praying to the Lord to learn how they might obtain the gift of the Holy Ghost. They “saw a vision as a cloud of glory” resting upon their house, and heard a voice from heaven saying, “Prepare to receive the word of the Lord, for it is coming.” Shortly afterwards Oliver Cowdery and his associates came with the Book of Mormon and with the message of the restored gospel (HC, 2:486, footnote).

Brief Historical Setting

Late in January, Joseph, Emma, and others traveled the 300 miles from Fayette to Kirtland by sleigh, arriving in Kirtland on February 1, 1831. Joseph and Emma were invited to live with the Newell K. Whitneys, and they did so for five months. Newell Whitney was a co-owner of the Gilbert and Whitney store in Kirtland along with A. Sidney Gilbert. Shortly after their arrival in Kirtland, Joseph received a revelation calling Edward Partridge to serve as the first bishop of the Church in this dispensation [D&C 41 - Edward Partridge Called as First Bishop]. For an introduction to Edward Partridge, see the introductory commentary for sections 35 and 36. Less than one week later, Joseph received a doctrinally important revelation introducing the law of consecration and other laws important to the conduct of church members in their everyday lives [D&C 42 - The Law].

Section 41 Edward Partridge Called as First Bishop

The story of the arrival of Joseph Smith in Kirtland was passed along in the Whitney family tradition and was related by Orson Whitney in his book Saturday Night Thoughts, (1921), 42-43:

About the first of February 1831, a sleigh drew up in front of the mercantile store of Gilbert and Whitney [A. Sidney Gilbert and Newell K. Whitney]. A stalwart young man alighted and walked into the store. Approaching the junior partner and extending his hand cordially, as if to an old and familiar acquaintance, he saluted him thus: "Newell K. Whitney, thou art the man!" The merchant was astonished. He had never seen this person before. "Stranger," he said, "you have the advantage of me. I could not call you by name as you have me." "I am Joseph the Prophet" said the stranger, smiling. "You have prayed me here, now what do you want of me?"

Joseph had previously seen in vision Newell K. Whitney and his wife praying that Joseph would come to Kirtland. Thus he was able to recognize him. Joseph and Emma stayed the night with the Whitneys and remained with them about five months. On her arrival in Kirtland, Emma was about six months pregnant with twins.

Section 41 was given February 4, about three days after the arrival in Kirtland. In this revelation the Lord calls Edward Partridge to be the first bishop in this dispensation—verse 9. The Church had to have a bishop before "the law" could be given—section 42.

Even before their conversion to the gospel, some of the saints in the Kirtland area had been trying, under the leadership of Sidney Rigdon, to live primitive Christianity—the pure and original Christianity of the New Testament—by following the teachings of the New Testament and nothing else. They had read in Acts that the early saints were "of one heart and one soul" and that they had "all things in common" (Acts 2:44-45; 4:32-35). They had formed a communal society called "the family" and practiced group ownership of all individual resources on the Isaac Morley Farm. They referred to this arrangement as having "common stock." When Sidney Rigdon joined the Church, he went to Fayette and invited the Prophet to Kirtland, but Joseph sent John Whitmer instead, and Sidney stayed in Fayette to act as scribe for the Prophet. Though most of "the family" in Kirtland had since joined the Church, they were still involved in living with "all things in common" when John Whitmer arrived from Fayette to preside over the community. Whitmer observed significant problems resulting from their attempting to live with the concept of "common stock," and he wrote to the Prophet and requested that he come to Kirtland. Joseph inquired of the Lord and was told to go quickly.

On his arrival in Kirtland, Joseph found a young and enthusiastic branch of the Church there which had grown to nearly one hundred members. His own observation was that the members were “striving to do the will of God, so far as they knew it, though some strange notions and false spirits had crept in among them. With a little caution and some wisdom, I soon assisted the brethren and sisters to overcome them. The plan of ‘common stock’ which had existed in what was called ‘the family,’ whose members generally had embraced the everlasting Gospel, was readily abandoned for the more perfect law of the Lord; and the false spirits were easily discerned and rejected by the light of revelation” (HC, 1:146-47).

John Whitmer added the following information to Joseph’s account: “About these days Joseph and Sidney arrived at Kirtland to the joy and satisfaction of the saints. The disciples had all things common, and were going to destruction very fast as to temporal things; for they considered from reading the scripture that what belonged to a brother, belonged to any of the brethren. Therefore they would take each other’s clothes and other property and use it without leave which brought on confusion and disappointment, for they did not understand the scripture” (Whitmer, Early Latter Day Saint History, 37). For example, when Levi Hancock was visiting “the family,” Heman Bassett, one of its members, took Levi’s pocket watch and sold it. He later explained that he had thought “it was all in the family” (Ibid.).

For the Lord to give the true law of consecration to the Church and thus to correct the “common stock” ideas of the members of “the family,” he needed someone to act as his agent in administering properties according to his law. Consequently, Edward Partridge was called to become the first bishop in the latter-day Church. Section 41 was the first revelation received in the Ohio. Its purpose was essentially to prepare the saints for section 42, which was received five days later, on February 9, 1831.

1 Harken and hear, O ye my people, saith the Lord and your God, ye whom I delight to bless with the greatest of all blessings, ye that hear me; and ye that hear me not will I curse, that have professed my name, with the heaviest of all cursings.

verse 1 “the greatest of all blessings” This is exaltation in the celestial kingdom of God (D&C 14:7).

“ye that hear me not will I curse, that have professed my name” The verb to hear is used here in the sense of “hearkening” or “obeying.” The Lord warns the hypocrite, the person who makes in good faith a covenant and then departs from it.

“the heaviest of all cursings” Being a covenant member of the Church is a great blessing but also a great responsibility. Those who have joined themselves to the Lord’s earthly kingdom by covenant are candidates for the greatest of all blessings. But, they have left behind the luxury of being ignorant and neutral fence sitters relative to the Lord’s commandments. They are committed to the Lord, and therefore any disobedience among them can bring upon them the greatest of all cursings or penalties.

The system of covenants allows them to rise higher or sink lower than they could otherwise have done. There is no blessing higher than that received by faithful saints, and no cursing harsher than that received by willful apostates.

2 Hearken, O ye elders of my church whom I have called, behold I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word;

verse 2 “I give unto you a commandment, that ye shall assemble yourselves together to agree upon my word” There is to be a special meeting of the elders in Kirtland to hear and ratify the Lord’s law. This meeting will take place five days later, on February 9, 1831, and the “law of the Church” (section 42) is to be given to the Church at that time.

“agree upon my word” According to the law of common consent (section 26), the elders must collectively agree to accept their responsibilities under the law of the Church (section 42) by their sustaining vote.

3 And by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law, that ye may know how to govern my church and have all things right before me.

verse 3 “by the prayer of your faith ye shall receive my law” In order for the elders, who will gather on February 9, 1831, to receive the law of the Lord given to his Church (section 42), they will be required to pray together in faith.

“that ye may know how to govern my church” The law that will be given is for the purpose of the governance of the Church and a standard for judging its members. It will be given specifically to the elders, whose place it was, at that time at least, to govern and judge the Church, because the first high priests were not ordained until June 3, 1831.

verses 2-3 To fully understand the significance of these verses, see the introductory commentary for section 42.

4 And I will be your ruler when I come; and behold, I come quickly, and ye shall see that my law is kept.

5 He that receiveth my law and doeth it, the same is my disciple; and he that saith he receiveth it and doeth it not, the same is not my disciple, and shall be cast out from among you;

verse 5 “My law” refers to section 42, which will be given February 9, 1831. It is typical of modern thought to define discipleship in terms of beliefs. When we want to know what this or that religion is, we ask, “What do you believe?” The Lord does not define discipleship in this way. Those who do the Lord’s will are his disciples. Those who profess belief in the gospel but will not live it are to be cast out, or excommunicated. True discipleship is determined by our actions, not only by our words or beliefs.

6 For it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom should be given to them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.

verse 6 “it is not meet” The word “meet” means proper, fitting, acceptable, permissible, right, necessary, or desirable.

President Joseph Fielding Smith discussed the limitations on sharing sacred things:

The things of the kingdom are not for the unworthy, whether they are in or out of the Church. It is the duty of the members to hold in the most solemn and sacred manner every commandment, every covenant, every principle of truth which the Lord has revealed for their salvation. He has given to the members, if they will humbly receive them, covenants and obligations which are not for the world. Things that are most holy and sacred, which are revealed to those who have made covenant to be “just and true,” and who have “overcome by faith,” things which are imparted to them as a means of bringing to pass their exaltation, should not be lightly treated, ridiculed, or spoken of before the world. “For it is not meet that the things which belong to the children of the kingdom should be given to them that are not worthy, or to dogs, or the pearls to be cast before swine.” Yet how often do we see the foolish, the ignorant and those who fail to comprehend the vastness of these sacred principles and covenants, treating them lightly and unworthily even before the world! (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:179-80).

Currently in the Church we have room for “less active” members. But when the Church as a whole begins again to live the law of consecration institutionally instead of individually as we now do, and we begin to establish Zion, there will quickly be no more middle ground for the passive and lukewarm to stand upon. Since Zion is a community of saints who are of one heart and one mind, who dwell in righteousness, and have no poor among them, the less active who will not dwell in righteousness, or who are not of one heart and one mind with the saints, must either repent or leave—otherwise Zion cannot be established.

Diversity is not necessarily a virtue in Zion, nor is Zion a pluralistic society. There will certainly be diversity of races and to a degree a diversity of cultures, of personalities, of interests, and of wants. But there will be no diversity of values, ethics, morals, or of religious beliefs and doctrine, for Zion will be of one heart and one mind in these essentials and will dwell in righteousness according to one law—the heart and mind of the Savior, which is the law of the Church.

7 And again, it is meet that my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., should have a house built, in which to live and translate.

verse 7 Joseph and Emma had just arrived three days earlier from New York and had no lodging. “In response to the Lord’s instructions a small home was built on the [Isaac] Morley farm for Joseph and Emma, where they lived for six months” (Dahl, “Joseph Smith Translation and the Doctrine and Covenants,” 107).

8 And again, it is meet that my servant Sidney Rigdon should live as seemeth him good, inasmuch as he keepeth my commandments.

verse 8 As a Protestant minister, Sidney Rigdon had had a fine home built for him by the several congregations to whom he ministered. When he joined the Church, however, the majority in those congregations requested that he leave the home they had built. Consequently, Sidney had no place for his family. The Lord instructs Sidney to take whatever measures he must in order to provide for his family, as long as he keeps the commandments. The implication is that he will be, at least in part, supported by the members of the church.

The “law of remuneration for services” is thus introduced in this verse and in the preceding verse, as the Lord specifies that the needs of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon should be met out of church funds.

9 And again, I have called my servant Edward Partridge; and I give a commandment, that he should be appointed by the voice of the church, and ordained a bishop unto the church, to leave his merchandise and to spend all his time in the labors of the church;

verse 9 “Edward Partridge” For an introduction to Edward Partridge, see the introductory commentary for sections 35 and 36.

“appointed by the voice of the church” The pattern of calling a bishop is illustrated. He is called by revelation received by one in authority, but he must be sustained publicly by the voice of the membership of the Church before he can be ordained.

Today, the procedure is essentially the same. A stake president seeks revelation to nominate a person to be bishop and sends that nomination to the First Presidency, who, in consultation with the Quorum of the Twelve, seek the Lord’s approval and then issue a call through the stake president. After a public sustaining vote of the ward members, the stake presidency, with approval of the First Presidency, ordains the individual to the office of bishop and sets him apart to preside over a particular ward.

10 To see to all things as it shall be appointed unto him in my laws in the day that I shall give them.

verses 10 Edward Partridge is called to be the first bishop of this final dispensation. It should be kept in mind that Edward Partridge was not a ward bishop. We didn't have wards or ward organizations until the Nauvoo period. He was a bishop of the Church under the law of consecration, and his duties were governed by that call. The ward bishop today may have a few of the same duties, but his role is by no means comparable. In the law of consecration, the bishop was the spiritual and temporal agent who directed the program, assigned stewardships, received properties and so on. The law of consecration was to be revealed shortly, so it was appropriate that Edward Partridge should be called as the first bishop in the Church before the law was revealed.

11 And this because his heart is pure before me, for he is like unto Nathanael of old, in whom there is no guile.

verse 11 “in whom there is no guile” See John 1:47. What a marvelous compliment is paid here to Edward Partridge! Guile is any form of deceit, fraud, hypocrisy, two-facedness, or otherwise presenting things as they are not. To be without guile is to be totally open and honest.

12 These words are given unto you, and they are pure before me; wherefore, beware how you hold them, for they are to be answered upon your souls in the day of judgment. Even so. Amen.

verse 12 “These words . . . are pure before me; wherefore, beware how you hold them” God's word is pure and holy and must not be taken (or “held”) lightly. We will be judged on how we treat God's holy word—with reverence, respect, and obedience—or with carelessness.

Section 42 The Law

When Joseph arrived in Kirtland from Fayette, he encountered a bunch of willing saints who were unskilled in the policies and doctrines of the Church. He first had to bring closure to the communal “family” and end its system of common stock. Then he had to put a stop to a sort of overly-emotional spiritual hysteria he found among some of the Kirtland saints. These excesses were of the sort that happen when people insist on increasing the intensity of their religious experience but lack the Spirit of God. In this situation, false spirits and human deceivers are only too happy to accommodate them.

Before the saints could seriously prepare to establish Zion, they had to be given the law of the Church, which, besides a high personal morality, included the celestial principles of sacrifice and consecration. Edward Partridge had been called as the first bishop in section 41, which office was needed in order to implement and administer the social and economic policies and principles of section 42. The law of the Church would also establish standards of personal behavior by which the saints would be judged by their new bishop, the common judge in Israel.

Section 42, which had been promised in D&C 38:32, was received February 9, 1831, in the presence of twelve elders, only eight days after Joseph’s arrival in Kirtland. The Lord had promised to reveal his law to the saints once they had moved to the Ohio (see D&C 38:32). However, after Joseph arrived in Kirtland, the Lord added one further stipulation. The elders had to agree upon the word of the Lord and were to unite in a prayer of faith. Only then would they receive the law designated to help the saints live peaceably together (see D&C 41:2-3). Accordingly, on February 9, 1831 twelve men were called together by Joseph, and they united in prayer and in faith and desire to receive the law. In response the Lord revealed his law to them (HC, 1:148).

We refer to this section as the law of the Church or the law of the Lord given to the Church. Only verses 1-73 were given at that time. The rest was received two weeks later on February 23. Verses 74-77 were recorded separately in the Kirtland Revelation Book, where they stood alone as a single revelation. This section was originally printed in the Book of Commandments as two chapters: verses 1 through 73 were chapter 44; verses 78 through 93 were chapter 47. It seems that some portions of section 42 may once have been introduced by specific questions asked of the Lord, much like we see in sections 77 (The Book of Revelation) or 113 (The Book of Isaiah). These questions and some other verses found in a few early copies do not now appear in section 42. All of these changes—the combining of originally separate parts and the omission of some elements—were made under the direction of Joseph Smith in the 1835 Doctrine and Covenants.

It should perhaps be noted again that Latter-day Saints understand inspiration to lie primarily in the Prophet Joseph rather than in the text. That is, the divine revelation was given through the Prophet and was often shaped by his vocabulary, thinking, and ability to express himself (D&C 1:24). As the Prophet's skills or understanding increased, he could edit and revise what had been written earlier as he saw ways of expressing the intent of the revelation more clearly or more exactly, and this has the effect of making such revisions even more inspired than the original—as, for example, in the Joseph Smith Translation. Uneasiness over these types of changes is a typically Protestant reaction, because Protestant thinking generally attributes inspiration primarily to the text. Thus, Protestants want to find the “earliest” text or the “most faithful” copies, while Latter-day Saints want to know the Prophet's latest and most mature judgment on how a revelation should be understood or expressed. The latest and most mature judgment of the prophet Joseph Smith and his successors on these early revelations is found in the present text of the Doctrine and Covenants.

Beyond the articles and covenants of the Church (section 20), which explain the duties of the members and the policies and practices of the Church, the law of the Church (section 42) will explain the standards of personal behavior and social organization upon which membership and fellowship in the Church and kingdom depends. This law of personal righteousness and consecration directly prepares church members to establish a Zion society, for if they live this law, they will be of one heart and one mind, will dwell in righteousness, and will have no poor among them (Moses 7:18). Receiving and living this law of the Church, including the law of consecration, is a necessary step, and a substantial one, in establishing Zion then or now.

Actually section 42 is a series of laws pertaining to many aspects of our lives. Let us summarize them in the order in which they appear in section 42:

1. The law of missionary work (verses 4-9, 63-69). The Lord summarizes the essentials of missionary work: (a) Go forth with the Spirit. (b) Preach only the gospel of Christ. (c) Go two by two. (d) Go forth in the name of Christ. (e) Lift up your voice enthusiastically.

2. The law of ordination or the law of authority to minister (verses 11-17). One must be ordained by recognized authority and teach only by the Spirit.

3. The law of moral conduct (verses 18-29, 74-93). The Lord gives anew to our dispensation commands not to kill, steal, lie, commit adultery, gossip, or do personal injury to your neighbor.

4. The law of consecration (verse 30-39, 53-55). The Lord commands that Zion be built up based upon the celestial law or the “law of consecration and stewardship.”

Let us first define some terms: The law of consecration is that law or principle which, if successfully lived by a group of people, will result in their becoming a unified, righteous people, a united order. Thus, the law of consecration is the principle, and the united order is what people become as they live the principle. The term order of Enoch was originally applied to the law of consecration. However, Joseph used this name for the governing board of nine general authorities who oversaw all activities relative to the law of consecration.

There are five characteristics of the “law of consecration and stewardship” when it is practiced in its ideal form:

a. Consecration. This is the belief and practice that the earth is the Lord’s and that everything a man has or is or accomplishes is owed back to the Lord because it is all his anyway. To enter into the united order, a complete inventory of a man’s possessions is taken and everything he owns is deeded legally or consecrated to the Church.

b. Agency. A man is respected as a free agent. He may enter or leave the order at his own pleasure without coercion or stigma. He has the right to negotiate for his job or for those things which he requires to fill the needs of his family. Thus the united order differs vastly from Marxist Communism.

c. Storehouse. On entering the order, all of a man’s possessions are placed in the storehouse. Also goods that are produced in excess of the needs of the man’s family are placed in the storehouse. At the discretion of the bishop, materials are distributed from the storehouse. These include the stewardships (see below) and food and materials that are needed by those who are unable to work.

d. Stewardship. After a man joins the order, those possessions which he needs to do his work and care for his family are deeded back to him—thus he owns them. These materials are given to him by the bishop from the storehouse and are referred to as his stewardship or inheritance. Private ownership is thus a feature of the law of consecration.

Each person in the order is assigned work according to his abilities, education, talents, and according to the needs of the order. All types of work are considered of equal importance, i.e., the collection of garbage is as important as the practice of law or medicine. A regular accounting is held between each person and the bishop to assess his performance and progress. Is he happy? Should he be reassigned? Does he have enough for his family’s needs?

e. Governing Board. The government of the order is vested in a central agency, the members of which are sustained by members of the order. This agency is presided over by the bishop and his counselors, and it has the power to adjust disputes normally arising among strongly individualized human beings.

This remarkable economic order was tried out in Ohio and Missouri briefly in 1832-34. Though practiced only a short time, it did show some promise. However, in those pioneer days, under severe persecution from neighbors, and with the undisciplined selfishness of certain members, the people could not give the order a fair trial, and it failed.

We should all keep in mind, however, that the law of consecration in the Church is not dead. It still is in force. All endowed members of the Church have made a covenant to live the law of consecration, and they will be held accountable for what they do with that law. President Spencer W. Kimball said:

Consecration is the giving of one's time, talents, and means to care for those in need—whether spiritually or temporally—and in building the Lord's kingdom. . . . We consecrate when we give of ourselves (Ensign, November 1977, 78).

5. The law of miscellaneous conduct (verses 40-43). The Lord commands us relative to pride, cleanliness, and industry.

6. The law of faith and healing (verses 43-52). The Lord divides people into three categories relative to faith and healing: (a) those who have faith to be healed and through ordination of the elders are healed; (b) those who have faith to be healed but are appointed unto death, so they are not healed; and (c) those who do not have the faith to be healed. They may have faith sufficient to call upon the elders but are not healed and must be treated by the ministrations of men. Are these categories all inclusive? Probably not. The Lord seems to allow even faithful people at times to suffer the vicissitudes and diseases and accidents of life without his intervention.

7. The law relative to scriptures (verses 56-61). We are commanded to learn the scriptures and use them in teaching others.

8. The law of remuneration for services (verses 70-73). All those who are required to spend their full time in church service including, of course, the General Authorities are provided funds sufficient for their needs.

D&C 42 The Law

D&C 42:6-7 Lifting up your voices . . . like unto angels of God.

D&C 42:14 If ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach.

D&C 42:17 The Comforter knoweth all things and beareth record of the Father and the Son.

D&C 42:22-25 Thou shalt love thy wife and cleave unto her and none else; thou shalt not commit adultery.

D&C 42:45-47 The law of mourning: Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection. And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them; And they that die not in me, wo unto them, for their death is bitter.

D&C 42:48 He that have faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed.

D&C 42:61 If thou shalt ask, thou shalt receive revelation upon revelation, knowledge upon knowledge, that thou mayest know the mysteries and peaceable things—that which bringeth joy, that which bringeth life eternal.

1 Hearken, O ye elders of my church, who have assembled yourselves together in my name, even Jesus Christ the Son of the living God, the Savior of the world; inasmuch as ye believe on my name and keep my commandments.

2 Again I say unto you, hearken and hear and obey the law which I shall give unto you.

verse 2 “hearken and hear and obey the law” In this particular verse, the law to which the Lord refers is the “law of the Church” which will be the sum and substance of this revelation, section 42.

It is important to keep in mind the significance of “the law” in an eternal sense. The law of the Lord in a very real sense is a revelation of his character and attributes. The laws are given to assist man in his quest to become like the Father and the Son. No one can come unto the Father except through obedience to the laws which Christ has given (see D&C 132:12). The violation of these laws is what constitutes sin (see 1 John 3:4). The Lord in his infinite love and wisdom often gives laws to his children commensurate with their preparation to receive those laws. Hence, the law of Moses was to prepare the children of Israel for higher laws. The laws given in this section of the D&C were to enable the saints to purify their lives in preparation for the establishment of Zion.

3 For verily I say, as ye have assembled yourselves together according to the commandment wherewith I commanded you, and are agreed as touching this one thing, and have asked the Father in my name, even so ye shall receive.

verse 3 “according to the commandment wherewith I commanded you” The command given to the elders of the Church to assemble themselves together was given by the Lord in D&C 41:2-3.

“and are agreed as touching this one thing” According to the law of common consent, the twelve elders present agreed in advance to accept and live the law that the Lord would give them. It was an exercise of faith in God to agree to live a covenant before the Lord revealed exactly what it was. A modern parallel may be found in going to the temple for the first time. Before we actually attend the temple, we agree to abide by the covenants which we will enter into therein even though we don’t know exactly what they are.

“And have asked the Father in my name” Even though the Lord wanted and intended to give the Church his law, he still required that they ask him for it before it would be given to them. The lesson here is the importance and efficacy of our petitions to our Heavenly Father. Even though we may need a particular blessing, and even though he may be eager to give it to us, we might not receive that blessing until we finally ask him for it directly in fervent prayer.

verses 4-9 These verses, along with verses 63-69, explain the law of missionary work.

4 Behold, verily I say unto you, I give unto you this first commandment, that ye shall go forth in my name, every one of you, excepting my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon.

verse 4 “every one of you” This phrase refers specifically to the twelve elders who were present when this revelation was received. They are commanded to leave immediately on missions to the West.

5 And I give unto them a commandment that they shall go forth for a little season, and it shall be given by the power of the Spirit when they shall return.

verse 5 “And I give unto them a commandment that they shall go forth for a little season” Joseph and Sidney were also to go on missions at this time, but were to stay out only a short time until the Spirit indicated they should return to Kirtland.

6 And ye shall go forth in the power of my Spirit, preaching my gospel, two by two, in my name, lifting up your voices as with the sound of a trump, declaring my word like unto angels of God.

verse 6 “two by two” One may well ask why the Lord has his missionaries proselyte as a companionship rather than alone. It is likely that it is for physical and spiritual safety and to fulfill the law of witnesses (John 8:7-8; 2 Corinthians 13:1).

“like unto angels of God” This is not a gratuitous comparison by the Lord. There is little or no difference between righteous and diligent missionaries for the Lord and angels.

7 And ye shall go forth baptizing with water, saying: Repent ye, repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

verse 7 “for the kingdom of heaven is at hand” For a discussion of this interesting phrase, see the commentary for D&C 39:19.

8 And from this place ye shall go forth into the regions westward; and inasmuch as ye shall find them that will receive you ye shall build up my church in every region—

verse 8 “he shall go forth into the regions westward” This statement refers largely to Missouri. In addition to gathering souls to the kingdom, the missionaries would prepare the area for the future gathering to Missouri.

9 Until the time shall come when it shall be revealed unto you from on high, when the city of the New Jerusalem shall be prepared, that ye may be gathered in one, that ye may be my people and I will be your God.

verse 9 “the city of the New Jerusalem” This is the first use of this phrase in the Doctrine and Covenants. The “city of the New Jerusalem” is Zion. It should be noted that Zion may be defined on two levels. On the first level, Zion is the Lord’s earthly kingdom, his Church. Zion has been established, and it is The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Scripturally, it is compared to a tent with its “center pole” in Jackson County Missouri and the “stakes” of the tent scattered all over the world. On another level, Zion, or the New Jerusalem, has not yet been established. Zion cannot be established until the Lord’s people are living the law of consecration and stewardship, are a unified people, and have no poor among them (D&C 105:5).

In 1831 in the Church, it was anticipated that this latter Zion, the New Jerusalem, would soon be established. In this verse, the Lord promises that the location of the New Jerusalem will be revealed in the future (see D&C 57:1-3). We will learn that the New Jerusalem is to be located in Independence, Missouri.

Though the ancient Jerusalem will eventually be built up for the purposes of the Lord, it will not be called “New” Jerusalem because it has existed from ancient times (see Ether 13:5).

10 And again, I say unto you, that my servant Edward Partridge shall stand in the office whereunto I have appointed him. And it shall come to pass, that if he transgress another shall be appointed in his stead. Even so. Amen.

verses 11-17 These verses explain the law of ordination or the law of authority to minister.

11 Again I say unto you, that it shall not be given to any one to go forth to preach my gospel, or to build up my church, except he be ordained by some one who has authority, and it is known to the church that he has authority and has been regularly ordained by the heads of the church.

verse 11 No one can preach the gospel as a missionary for the Church (“go forth to preach”) or as a teacher in the Church (“build up my church”) without having first been called, ordained, and set apart by the recognized authorities of the Church and sustained publicly by the membership. There are no secret callings or ordinations in the kingdom of God. This policy provides great protection against deception by those who have no authority.

President Harold B. Lee taught: “Now, if one comes claiming that he has authority, ask him, ‘Where do you get your authority? Have you been ordained by someone who has authority, who is known to the Church, that you have authority and have been regularly ordained by the heads of the Church?’ If the answer is no, you may know that he is an imposter. This is the test that our people should always apply when some imposter comes trying to lead them astray” (CR, October 1972, 127).

12 And again, the elders, priests and teachers of this church shall teach the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon, in the which is the fulness of the gospel.

verse 12 “the principles of my gospel, which are in the Bible and the Book of Mormon” At the time this revelation was received, the Pearl of Great Price had not yet been published. Additionally, those portions of the present Doctrine and Covenants known to the Church at that time were also implicitly included in the scriptures mentioned here in verse 12 by the wording of verse 13, since both the “covenants” and the “articles” that are to be taught by the Spirit refer specifically to the revelations of Joseph Smith. The term covenants was often used to mean “revelations,” as in the later title, Doctrine and Covenants, and “church articles” in verse 13 refers specifically to D&C 20.

13 And they shall observe the covenants and church articles to do them, and these shall be their teachings, as they shall be directed by the Spirit.

verse 13 “And they shall observe the covenants” The term covenants is likely used here to indicate the various commandments found in individual revelations of the Doctrine and Covenants. All commandments are also covenants because there is a promise and a blessing attached to each.

“church articles” This phrase is a reference to the rules and policies found in D&C 20, the articles and covenants of the Church of Christ. See the commentary on verse 12.

14 And the Spirit shall be given unto you by the prayer of faith; and if ye receive not the Spirit ye shall not teach.

verse 14 This verse can be read either as a command or as a statement of fact, and either way the statement is true. If a person does not have the Spirit, he is commanded not to teach; and in the sense of true teaching, without the influence of the Spirit he cannot teach.

True teaching takes place only Spirit to spirit. An eternal principle cannot be implanted in the heart of another without the influence of the Spirit of God. Actually we may actually say that true teaching takes place only “Spirit to spirit to spirit.” That is, effective learning of spiritual truth can occur only as a three-cornered transaction between the Spirit of God, the spirit of the teacher, and the spirit of the student.

15 And all this ye shall observe to do as I have commanded concerning your teaching, until the fulness of my scriptures is given.

verse 15 “until the fulness of my scriptures is given” This phrase likely refers mainly to Joseph’s inspired revision of the Bible. Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained:

When the Joseph Smith translation of the Bible—including in this revelation under the designation, “fulness of my scriptures”—came forth, then teachers were to use it and the various additional direct revelations. This, then, is a command to teach the changes and additions now found in the so-called Inspired Version (BYU Symposium on the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible, November 3, 1984, 2-3).

We may also interpret the phrase differently and conclude that the “fulness of my scriptures” also includes the Pearl of Great Price, the future revelations to be included in the Doctrine and Covenants, the JST, and even the sealed portion of the Book of Mormon.

16 And as ye shall lift up your voices by the Comforter, ye shall speak and prophesy as seemeth me good;

17 For, behold, the Comforter knoweth all things, and beareth record of the Father and of the Son.

verse 17 We are often guilty of depersonalizing the man with the title Holy Ghost. We must always remember that he is a supremely intelligent, loving, and sensitive divine being who yearns and labors for the exaltation of all of the Father’s children.

verses 18-29 These verses, along with verses 74-93, explain the law of moral conduct.

18 And now, behold, I speak unto the church. Thou shalt not kill; and he that kills shall not have forgiveness in this world, nor in the world to come.

verse 18 “I speak unto the church” Here the Lord is no longer specifically addressing the elders present on February 9, 1831, but rather the entire Church.

“Thou shalt not kill” It is common to refer to this command and to the commandments in the following verses 19 through 29 as a reiteration of the Ten Commandments of the Old Testament—a nostalgic review of some commandments that were tenets of the law of Moses. Is this correct? It is not. Verses 18 through 29 are not a reiteration of the law of Moses, the lesser law. Rather, they are a new legislation—a part of the higher law.

19 And again, I say, thou shalt not kill; but he that killeth shall die.

verses 18-19 Three penalties are specified for the murderer: (1) He shall not obtain forgiveness for his sin in this world or in the world to come (verse 18). This means that the redeeming powers of the Savior's atonement will not be available to him. He himself must bear the entire burden of this sin. Ultimately, if he repents, he will not be worthy of either the celestial or terrestrial glories, but may inherit a telestial glory. (2) He shall die (verse 19). This may imply that capital punishment is appropriate for him, or it may simply mean that he will suffer the second death which is a permanent and eternal spiritual death or separation from God. (3) He shall be delivered to and dealt with by the laws of the land (verse 79).

verse 19 President Joseph Fielding Smith said that the Church: "cannot destroy men in the flesh, because we do not control the lives of men and do not have power to pass sentences upon them which involve capital punishment. In the days when there was a theocracy on the earth, then this decree was enforced. What the Lord will do in lieu of this because we cannot destroy in the flesh, I am unable to say, but it will have to be made up in some other way" (Doctrines of Salvation, 2:97).

Perhaps it should be mentioned here that abortion, although a gravely serious sin, is not equal to murder. Those guilty of abortion are not denied the gift of repentance and may, if they do repent, receive the full blessings of the Savior's atonement and become once again candidates for the celestial kingdom (see Boyd K. Packer, CR, April 1992, 95).

See the discussion of the three most abominable sins in the sight of God in the commentary for Alma 39:5-6. See also Three Most Abominable Sins in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 18.

20 Thou shalt not steal; and he that stealeth and will not repent shall be cast out.

verse 20 "he that stealeth and will not repent shall be cast out" To be cast out is to be excommunicated.

21 Thou shalt not lie; he that lieth and will not repent shall be cast out.

verses 20-21 Those who steal or lie and will not repent are to be "cast out" or excommunicated.

22 Thou shalt love thy wife with all thy heart, and shalt cleave unto her and none else.

verse 22 Whereas all the previous commandments concerning personal behavior have been stated as "thou shalt nots," this commandment is a "thou shalt."

"Thou shalt" commandments leave no room for guessing. President Spencer W. Kimball explained: "When the Lord says all thy heart, it allows for no sharing nor dividing nor depriving. . . . The words none else eliminate everyone and everything. The spouse then becomes preeminent in the life of the husband or wife, and neither social life nor occupational life nor political life nor any other interest nor person nor thing shall ever take precedence over the companion spouse. We sometimes find women who absorb and hover over the children at the expense of the husband, sometimes even estranging them from him. The Lord says to them: ‘thou shalt cleave unto him and none else.’ Marriage presupposes total allegiance and total fidelity” (Faith Precedes the Miracle, 142-43).

Although biological attraction can happen spontaneously and without effort, maintaining a long-term, loving relationship in marriage usually does not. It is a goal that must be chosen and diligently pursued, a conscious decision for which husbands and wives may be held accountable. To ignore one’s spouse or the relationship that exists between husband and wife is a sin.

23 And he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her shall deny the faith, and shall not have the Spirit; and if he repents not he shall be cast out.

verse 23 “he that looketh upon a woman to lust after her” There is a difference in degree between carnal-mindedness and looking “upon a woman to lust after her.” Both are sins, but the former involves hypothetical thinking or sexual fantasies, while the latter involves intent to commit adultery if given an opportunity. That is why in the latter case the individual has actually committed adultery already in his or her heart (see Matthew 5:27-28)—because the act is desired, planned, and intended, though not yet carried out. In such a case, the desired act of adultery has become a personal idol.

24 Thou shalt not commit adultery; and he that committeth adultery, and repenteth not, shall be cast out.

25 But he that has committed adultery and repents with all his heart, and forsaketh it, and doeth it no more, thou shalt forgive;

26 But if he doeth it again, he shall not be forgiven, but shall be cast out.

verses 24-26 Verses 22-23 involve mental and emotional unfaithfulness, but these particular verses—verses 24-26—involve actual physical unfaithfulness. The law of the Church directs that unrepentant adulterers be excommunicated from the Church.

27 Thou shalt not speak evil of thy neighbor, nor do him any harm.

verse 27 To “speak evil” or bear false witness is to testify to or to pass along reports, insinuations, speculations, or rumors as if their were true, to the detriment of a fellow human being.

28 Thou knowest my laws concerning these things are given in my scriptures; he that sinneth and repenteth not shall be cast out.

verse 28 “he that sinneth and repenteth not shall be cast out” Repeated, blatant sin of any kind where there is no honest attempt to repent is not to be tolerated in or by the Church.

29 If thou lovest me thou shalt serve me and keep all my commandments.

verse 29 This verse provides a definition of what it means to love God. To truly love him is to obey him (John 14:15; 14:21). Obviously mortals cannot “keep all [of his] commandments” to perfection, so there is room for repentance here.

verse 30-39 These verses, along with verses 53-55, explain the law of consecration. Before studying these verses, please review the discussion of the “law of consecration and stewardship” in the introductory commentary for section 42.

30 And behold, thou wilt remember the poor, and consecrate of thy properties for their support that which thou hast to impart unto them, with a covenant and a deed which cannot be broken.

verse 30 Consecration, in the present context, means to give all we possess or may possess to the Church to administer to the poor and needy and to build Zion, the New Jerusalem. Only those who are willing to give everything to the Lord are worthy to receive everything from him. All church members who have been to the temple have covenanted to live the law of consecration, though at present the institutional expectations of the Church require them to live only the law of tithing (see D&C 119-120) and accept those demands on their resources that are made in their home wards and branches. Those individuals who have accepted the law of consecration by covenant yet will not observe the law of tithing or make other sacrifices of time or resources requested of them have broken their temple covenants.

“a deed which cannot be broken” Whatever property or other resources a family took with them into the covenant of consecration was to be legally transferred to the Church by deed. Technically, consecrated properties became the Church’s and would not be given back even if an individual changed his mind and wanted to leave. This part of the law was not implemented.

31 And inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me; and they shall be laid before the bishop of my church and his counselors, two of the elders, or high priests, such as he shall appoint or has appointed and set apart for that purpose.

verse 31 “inasmuch as ye impart of your substance unto the poor, ye will do it unto me” Resources used to help the poor and the needy are resources given to the Savior (Matthew 25:40; Mosiah 2:17).

“or high priests” According to Orson Pratt (HC, 1:150,152), these words were added both here in verse 71 by Joseph Smith several years after section 42 was received. The words referring to a “high council” in verse 34 were also added. In February 1831, when this revelation was first received, there were no high priests or high council in the Church, because the organization of the Church had not yet been fully revealed. Later, after these offices had been revealed, Joseph adjusted verses 31, 34, and 71 to include high priests in their proper places.

32 And it shall come to pass, that after they are laid before the bishop of my church, and after that he has received these testimonies concerning the consecration of the properties of my church, that they cannot be taken from the church, agreeable to my commandments, every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property, or that which he has received by consecration, as much as is sufficient for himself and family.

verse 32 “every man shall be made accountable unto me, a steward over his own property” A steward is a manager. In this system an individual consecrates all of his possessions to the Church and receives back, as his own private property, a stewardship, sufficient for his needs and that of his family. He is to manage this stewardship, and manage it well, for the enrichment of himself, his family, and the kingdom.

33 And again, if there shall be properties in the hands of the church, or any individuals of it, more than is necessary for their support after this first consecration, which is a residue to be consecrated unto the bishop, it shall be kept to administer to those who have not, from time to time, that every man who has need may be amply supplied and receive according to his wants.

verse 33 “which is a residue” Stewards are expected to meet their own needs out of the produce of their stewardship. Should a steward or manager produce more than he or she personally needs, the amount left over, or residue, is forwarded to the bishop for the support of others in the system with no residue, or even shortfalls. The residue is also to be used to build the kingdom (see verse 35).

“according to his wants” Stewards and their families are not expected to live in poverty. Although personal extravagance would be a violation of principle, stewards are expected to take their just wants from the produce of their stewardships (compare D&C 82:17). It appears, for example, that if music is a large part of one’s life, or woodworking is a large part of another’s, it would be acceptable for the one to have musical instruments and for the other to have woodworking tools. In disputed cases the bishop judges what is a “just” want or desire and what is selfishness or extravagance.

34 Therefore, the residue shall be kept in my storehouse, to administer to the poor and the needy, as shall be appointed by the high council of the church, and the bishop and his council;

verse 34 “the high council of the church” See the commentary for verse 31.

35 And for the purpose of purchasing lands for the public benefit of the church, and building houses of worship, and building up of the New Jerusalem which is hereafter to be revealed—

36 That my covenant people may be gathered in one in that day when I shall come to my temple. And this I do for the salvation of my people.

verse 36 Just imagine the exciting spirit that would occur in a community able to live the law of consecration. It is obvious that in order for the community to be successful, they would have to leave behind the slackers, the critics, and the me-firsts. Together, they would become of one heart and one mind and would experience remarkable spiritual growth.

This verse refers to the Lord's visit to his temple announced in Malachi 3:1-3. We are not given to know which temple, but we would presume that the time is following the Lord's second coming when there will exist on the earth a true Zion society.

37 And it shall come to pass, that he that sinneth and repenteth not shall be cast out of the church, and shall not receive again that which he has consecrated unto the poor and the needy of my church, or in other words, unto me—

38 For inasmuch as ye do it unto the least of these, ye do it unto me.

39 For it shall come to pass, that which I spake by the mouths of my prophets shall be fulfilled; for I will consecrate of the riches of those who embrace my gospel among the Gentiles unto the poor of my people who are of the house of Israel.

verse 39 “that which I spake by the mouths of my prophets shall be fulfilled” The prophets mentioned here would include Isaiah (see Isaiah 60:3-7, 16; 61:5-6) who taught that the riches of the Gentiles would be brought to Zion in the last days. This theme is continued in the Epistles of Paul, who insisted that Gentile converts share their wealth with Israel by “contributing” to or “communicating” with the “poor” of Israel (see Acts 24:17; Romans 15:26-27; 1 Corinthians 16:1-3; Galatians 6:6; 1 Timothy 6:18; Hebrews 13:16). The Greek word translated communicate in the King James Version of the New Testament is usually some form of koinoneo, which means “to have in common.” It can also be translated as “share,” and from this comes our common sense of “communicate,” which is to share ideas by making them common knowledge (apply to Galatians 6:6; 1 Timothy 6:18; Hebrews 13:16).

“I will consecrate of the riches of those who embrace my gospel among the Gentiles unto the poor of my people who are of the house of Israel” How have the rich among the Gentiles helped the poor of the house of Israel? In the book of Mormon, the United States of America is referred to as the “great gentile nation.” This is not to say that there would be none of the house of Israel in America, but that as a nation it would not be thought of as part of the house of Israel. This great Gentile nation consists of people from many other countries. The Lord has blessed the United States with great wealth and temporal abundance. From the early days of the Church, saints in the United States have enjoyed prosperity and temporal wealth unknown to most of mankind throughout history. Through their faithfulness in paying their tithes, supporting missionaries, and giving other contributions, these saints of the great gentile nation made it possible for the work of the kingdom to go forth to the nations of the earth. Now saints in many nations who enjoy temporal prosperity—other Gentiles—join in and contribute resources to the work, so the kingdom can more quickly fulfill its destiny.

“the poor of my people who are of the house of Israel” This phrase does not imply that those living the law of consecration will be poverty-stricken. It refers to those in Zion who produce less than they need. Even in Zion there may be needy, but their needs will be met through the consecration of new converts and the surpluses, or residues, of the more productive stewards.

verses 40-42 These verses explain the law of miscellaneous conduct.

40 And again, thou shalt not be proud in thy heart; let all thy garments be plain, and their beauty the beauty of the work of thine own hands;

verse 40 “let all thy garments be plain” Those who have accepted the law of consecration and received a stewardship by covenant must not expend the resources of their stewardship on unnecessary extravagance such as expensive clothes. The law of consecration is not intended to subsidize the lifestyles of the rich but to put their surplus resources—beyond what is sufficient for their needs—into the hands of brother and sister saints who do not have sufficient for their needs. The principle here is that the genuine need of others must have priority over selfish wants (see Alma 1:27). This verse also encourages personal creativity and industry. The implication is that garments that one makes are more beautiful and less expensive than those one might purchase.

41 And let all things be done in cleanliness before me.

verse 41 The spirit of those of the Lord’s people who live the law of consecration is one of beauty, cleanliness, simplicity, and nobility.

42 Thou shalt not be idle; for he that is idle shall not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer.

verse 42 “Thou shalt not be idle” It is obvious that a good work ethic among the members of a Zion society is essential. A celestial individual can and will work hard without the incentive of direct, personal gain. Consecration is a celestial law because only the celestial can live it unselfishly, without leaving their share of the work to be done by others. The failure to establish Zion in the past has been largely due to too many in the Church who violate this principle.

It is contrary to the justice of God for those who do not keep their covenants to benefit as though they do. Under the law of consecration, this means that those who will not work to support themselves and to help the poor and needy have no claim upon, and must not be given, the fruits of the laborers. Covenant blessings require covenant obedience. In the welfare program of the Church today, this principle is understood to mean that the needy should be faithful to their covenants and first exhaust their own resources, including their own labor, before making a claim on the resources produced by the labor of other saints. The faithful who cannot work, but who would if they could, are entitled to support. Those who are not faithful or who will not work for themselves but expect to be supported by the labor of others must not be allowed to do so.

verses 43-52 These verses explain the law of faith and healing—the Lord’s will concerning the blessing of the sick. The main points are: 1. The saints are obligated to tenderly care for the sick, even the sick who lack the faith to be healed. 2. It is appropriate to treat the sick with such medicines as are available—in this case herbs and foods. 3. The elders of the Church should be called to bless the sick by the laying on of hands. 4. Not all of the faithful saints who are blessed by the elders will recover. 5. Those who lack the faith to be healed are still candidates for the celestial kingdom, and caring for them is still the responsibility of the members.

43 And whosoever among you are sick, and have not faith to be healed, but believe, shall be nourished with all tenderness, with herbs and mild food, and that not by the hand of an enemy.

verse 43 It would seem that some members of the Church believe that all illness should be dealt with only through priesthood administrations. This is not the official doctrine of the Church, as was stated in a Church News editorial:

Every man, woman, and child should care for his or her body as the temple of God which it is. Attention should be given to proper rest and exercise, and a well-balanced diet. The Lord has given us the Word of Wisdom to assist us further in better caring for our bodies.

There are times when we should pray for the sick, and through the priesthood lay hands upon the head of the ill and bless them. . . . But our belief in the divine power of healing should in no way preclude seeking competent medical assistance. Dr. James

E. Talmage, a member of the council of the Twelve, in 1921 said in an address: "I say some have charged us with inconsistency, for they say: 'If you believe in the gift of healing, what is the need of doctors, what is the need of surgeons, why build hospitals?' Because we know that 'there is a law irrevocably decreed in heaven before the world was, and when we attain any blessing it is by obedience to that law upon which it is predicated.' And the law is, in the instance under consideration, that we shall do all we can of ourselves. . . ."

We must do all we can, and then ask the Lord to do the rest, such as we cannot do. Hence we hold the medical and surgical profession in high regard. . . . When we have done all we can then the Divine Power will be directly applicable and operative (Church News, February 19, 1977, 16).

44 And the elders of the church, two or more, shall be called, and shall pray for and lay their hands upon them in my name; and if they die they shall die unto me, and if they live they shall live unto me.

verse 44 "they shall die unto me, and if they live they shall live unto me"

When one is enduring faithfully in the new and everlasting covenant at the time of one's death, then one is said to die "unto Christ" or "in Christ." Those who are blessed by the elders and recover from their illness have an obligation to live unto Christ, to be his faithful, covenant sons and daughters in building up his kingdom on earth.

45 Thou shalt live together in love, insomuch that thou shalt weep for the loss of them that die, and more especially for those that have not hope of a glorious resurrection.

46 And it shall come to pass that those that die in me shall not taste of death, for it shall be sweet unto them;

verse 46 How is it that the righteous "shall not taste of death"? President Joseph Fielding Smith explained:

To some members of the Church the saying that those who die in the Lord shall not taste of death has been a hard saying. They have seen good faithful men and women suffer days and at times for months before they were taken. But here the Lord does not say they shall not suffer pain of body, but that they shall be free from the anguish and torment of soul which will be partaken of by the wicked, and although they may suffer in body, yet death to them will be sweet in that they will realize that they are worthy before the Lord (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:186).

Some have added to this thought. Though a person's death may be painful, even excruciating, being dead will be a sweet relief and rest to them, for they will rest in paradise with the certain knowledge that the Lord judges them worthy of celestial glory.

47 And they that die not in me, wo unto them, for their death is bitter.

verse 47 Those who die unrepentant will suffer the pains of hell in the world of spirits. See a discussion of suffering under the heading “How Might We Categorized Adversities and Sufferings?” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 1, Adversity and Suffering.

The combination of verses 45-47 is often referred to as the “Lord’s law of mourning.”

48 And again, it shall come to pass that he that hath faith in me to be healed, and is not appointed unto death, shall be healed.

verse 48 It does seem unlikely that the Lord has assigned each of us a specific date for our death. It seems equally unlikely that he orchestrates the circumstances and causes of our death. This would require a degree of micro-managing of the affairs of man that seems uncharacteristic of the way in which God interacts with mortal man. On the other hand, when the disease processes here on earth that characterize this mortal existence combine to produce a potentially fatal illness, a merciful God, may certainly decide that the time is right for us to pass from this mortal phase.

49 He who hath faith to see shall see.

50 He who hath faith to hear shall hear.

51 The lame who hath faith to leap shall leap.

52 And they who have not faith to do these things, but believe in me, have power to become my sons; and inasmuch as they break not my laws thou shalt bear their infirmities.

verse 52 Lacking the faith to be healed is not necessarily a sin of a less than celestial character, and in such cases the Lord expects the saints to support and care for the afflicted under the law of consecration.

verses 53-55 These verses, along with verses 30-39, explain the law of consecration.

53 Thou shalt stand in the place of thy stewardship.

verse 53 This is a command to all the saints living the law of consecration. The Lord seems to be saying that each person should make do with their own stewardship. The other idea which may be conveyed here is that the saints are to live near and work with the land and other parts of the stewardship they have been given. He desires no “absentee” stewards holding a stewardship from the Lord but investing their time or resources elsewhere.

54 Thou shalt not take thy brother’s garment; thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother.

verse 54 “Thou shalt not take thy brother’s garment” The law of consecration is not a system of common ownership or group ownership as was the system of “common stock.” One’s stewardship under the law of consecration is legally one’s own private property. The system of consecration practiced at this time was neither communal nor communistic in the usual sense of those words, but a system of individually controlled and privately owned stewardships working cooperatively toward the same goal—to establish Zion.

“thou shalt pay for that which thou shalt receive of thy brother” If a steward needs something from another, he must pay a fair price for it. If he cannot pay, he is to go to the bishop for it, and his needs will be met from the storehouse.

55 And if thou obtainest more than that which would be for thy support, thou shalt give it into my storehouse, that all things may be done according to that which I have said.

verses 56-61 These verses explain the law relative to scriptures.

56 Thou shalt ask, and my scriptures shall be given as I have appointed, and they shall be preserved in safety;

verse 56 This verse, and the following five verses, refer to the Joseph Smith Translation which was being worked on at the time this revelation was received (see Dahl, “Joseph Smith Translation and the Doctrine and Covenants,” 110). Verses 56-61 may also refer to the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants, particularly since verse 59, “my law to govern my church,” likely refers to section 42 itself (see D&C 38:32, 36; 41:3; 43:8).

57 And it is expedient that thou shouldst hold thy peace concerning them, and not teach them until ye have received them in full.

verse 57 “hold thy peace concerning them” The Lord instructs the Church not to use the JST and the other new scriptures in preaching publicly until they had been given “in full,” or completed. The Lord’s reasons for this command are not entirely clear. Some have suggested that it may have increased the persecution experienced by the saints.

58 And I give unto you a commandment that then ye shall teach them unto all men; for they shall be taught unto all nations, kindreds, tongues and people.

verses 56-58 These verses refer to Joseph’s inspired revision of the Bible.

59 Thou shalt take the things which thou hast received, which have been given unto thee in my scriptures for a law, to be my law to govern my church;

verse 59 “my law to govern my church” This phrase seems to be a clear reference to section 42, the law of the Church (see the same phrasing in D&C 38:32, 36; 41:3; 43:8—all referring to section 42). Thus the phrase “my scriptures,” as used here and in verse 56, obviously includes the Doctrine and Covenants as well as the JST.

60 And he that doeth according to these things shall be saved, and he that doeth them not shall be damned if he so continue.

61 If thou shalt ask, thou shalt receive revelation upon revelation, knowledge upon knowledge, that thou mayest know the mysteries and peaceable things—that which bringeth joy, that which bringeth life eternal.

verse 61 “revelation upon revelation” This is exactly how Joseph received the Doctrine and Covenants, the JST, and other scriptures—successive revisions gradually added here a little and there a little.

“the mysteries and peaceable things” For a discussion of the “mysteries” see the commentary for D&C 6:7. For a discussion of the “peaceable things” see the commentary for D&C 36:2.

62 Thou shalt ask, and it shall be revealed unto you in mine own due time where the New Jerusalem shall be built.

verse 62 This promise will be fulfilled in D&C 57:1-3.

verses 63-69 These verses, along with verses 4-9, explain the law of missionary work.

63 And behold, it shall come to pass that my servants shall be sent forth to the east and to the west, to the north and to the south.

64 And even now, let him that goeth to the east teach them that shall be converted to flee to the west, and this in consequence of that which is coming on the earth, and of secret combinations.

verse 64 “that which is coming on the earth” From the perspective of the Kirtland Saints, “that which is coming” would include the Civil War, which would devastate the nation, mark the beginning of “modern war,” and probably be the beginning of the wars of the last days (see D&C 87:1-3).

“and of secret combinations” The only way to escape the evil that men do to one another is to flee to Zion.

65 Behold, thou shalt observe all these things, and great shall be thy reward; for unto you it is given to know the mysteries of the kingdom, but unto the world it is not given to know them.

66 Ye shall observe the laws which ye have received and be faithful.

verse 66 “the laws which ye have received” Again, another reference to section 42.

67 And ye shall hereafter receive church covenants, such as shall be sufficient to establish you, both here and in the New Jerusalem.

verse 67 “ye shall hereafter receive church covenants” More commandments and covenants are yet to be received including the temple ordinances and covenants. At the time of this revelation it was anticipated that the temple ordinances would be an anchor for the saints both in Kirtland and in Missouri.

68 Therefore, he that lacketh wisdom, let him ask of me, and I will give him liberally and upbraid him not.

verse 68 The Lord repeats the well-known scriptural thought found in James 1:5-6.

69 Lift up your hearts and rejoice, for unto you the kingdom, or in other words, the keys of the church have been given. Even so. Amen.

verse 69 “the keys of the church” The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints is the kingdom of God upon the earth. Therefore, to be given the keys of the Church is to be given possession and control of the earthly kingdom of God.

verses 70-73 These verses explain the law of remuneration for services. All whose labor for the Church prevents them from earning their own livelihood are to be remunerated from the consecrations and surpluses of the Church. Their support shall be administered by the bishop of the Church, who was then Edward Partridge.

70 The priests and teachers shall have their stewardships, even as the members.

71 And the elders or high priests who are appointed to assist the bishop as counselors in all things, are to have their families supported out of the property which is consecrated to the bishop, for the good of the poor, and for other purposes, as before mentioned;

72 Or they are to receive a just remuneration for all their services, either a stewardship or otherwise, as may be thought best or decided by the counselors and bishop.

73 And the bishop, also, shall receive his support, or a just remuneration for all his services in the church.

verses 74-93 These verses, along with verses 18-29, explain the law of moral conduct.

verses 74-77 These verses describe the Lord's law to the Church on marital fidelity and divorce. In the following verses, to "receive" means to receive into full fellowship through baptism. To "cast out" means to cast out of the Church by excommunication.

If an individual divorces his or her spouse because the spouse has committed adultery, that individual is to remain in good standing and fellowship in the Church. Those members who leave their spouse in order to have a sexual relationship with someone else, however, are to be excommunicated. Even a legal divorce and remarriage, if pursued with adulterous motives, is still adultery in the sight of God (see Matthew 19:3-9). Those who are married but are living with someone other than their spouse are not to be received into the Church without repentance. Those who are not married but have been sexually active may also be received into the Church if they will genuinely repent and begin to live chaste lives.

The eternal purposes of sex and marriage are so sacred and such a necessary part of our exaltation that disregard for a loving, faithful, and functional marriage cannot escape the Lord's condemnation. Marriage partners are commanded to love one another and no one else (verse 22), are not to pursue or even consider in their hearts any other sexual partners (verse 23), and may not divorce a faithful spouse and remarry just to get a new partner (verse 75). Single people are to be faithful to their future spouse, whether they marry in this life or the next, and they are to repent of any sexual activity or other sins before being fellowshipped into the Church (verse 77).

74 Behold, verily I say unto you, that whatever persons among you, having put away their companions for the cause of fornication, or in other words, if they shall testify before you in all lowliness of heart that this is the case, ye shall not cast them out from among you;

75 But if ye shall find that any persons have left their companions for the sake of adultery, and they themselves are the offenders, and their companions are living, they shall be cast out from among you.

76 And again, I say unto you, that ye shall be watchful and careful, with all inquiry, that ye receive none such among you if they are married; verses 78-87 These verses discuss the relationship of the law of the Church to the law of the land: local, state, and federal. If members of the Church break the law of the land, they are to be turned over to the civil authorities for judgment. Church membership does not protect us from the law of the land and gives us no shield from civil justice.

77 And if they are not married, they shall repent of all their sins or ye shall not receive them.

When individuals break the law of the Church, they are to be dealt with in church disciplinary councils. Church disciplinary councils cannot impose any penalty or sanction other than loss of membership or fellowship and therefore will not hear cases involving violation of secular law or suits for damages. The Church determines only issues of sin, which is violation of God's law (see verse 87). Civil law decides all issues of crime, which is violation of civil law, and the Church leaves civil justice to the courts. Thus, an individual might be tried in the civil courts and then brought before a church disciplinary council because the act violated both civil law and the law of God.

78 And again, every person who belongeth to this church of Christ, shall observe to keep all the commandments and covenants of the church.

79 And it shall come to pass, that if any persons among you shall kill they shall be delivered up and dealt with according to the laws of the land; for remember that he hath no forgiveness; and it shall be proved according to the laws of the land.

80 And if any man or woman shall commit adultery, he or she shall be tried before two elders of the church, or more, and every word shall be established against him or her by two witnesses of the church, and not of the enemy; but if there are more than two witnesses it is better.

81 But he or she shall be condemned by the mouth of two witnesses; and the elders shall lay the case before the church, and the church shall lift up their hands against him or her, that they may be dealt with according to the law of God.

82 And if it can be, it is necessary that the bishop be present also.

83 And thus ye shall do in all cases which shall come before you.

84 And if a man or woman shall rob, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land.

85 And if he or she shall steal, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land.

verses 84-85 Note that these verses distinguish between robbing and stealing. Robbery carries the meaning of accosting an individual and forcefully taking his or her belongings. Stealing implies taking the possessions of another unbeknown to him or her.

86 And if he or she shall lie, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of the land.

87 And if he or she do any manner of iniquity, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law, even that of God.

verses 88-93 These verses deal with the proper way of handling personal disputes or injuries in the Church. Personal differences are to be taken by the injured party first to the offending party. The assumption is that brothers and sisters in Zion will act in good faith to resolve their differences and remain brothers and sisters. Saints are not to begin by working through third parties or by complaining or making accusations until the offender finally hears about it from the third party. This approach violates the law of the Church. Instead, the injured party is to go privately to the offender, state his or her complaint, and resolve it confidentially. If the offender will not confess and repent, the injured party is to take the matter to proper church leaders, but still privately and confidentially, “not to the members” (verse 89). At this point the church leaders can decide whether or not an injury can be proved. If the offense can be proved, then the offender will confess and repent or be subject to church discipline with the possible loss of membership or fellowship.

Private offenses are to be handled by the Church privately, giving the offender the opportunity to make amends to the injured and to God and not to suffer public humiliation for a private fault. “Note the caution that this remedy is to be private—‘not before the world.’ This is not done in order to hide the facts, but rather to increase the chance that the correction will improve the life of a brother or sister” (Dallin H. Oaks, “Speaking Today: Criticism,” 72).

Public offenses, however, are generally wrought by more high-handed, rebellious, and proud individuals. Therefore, church discipline for public offenses is to be made public, in order that the offending individuals may be ashamed and curb their pride (see verse 91), thus giving them greater motivation for repentance. Unfortunately, for those whose pride is very great, a public rebuke will often cause them, in self-justification, to become dissident former members, and enemies of the Church.

88 And if thy brother or sister offend thee, thou shalt take him or her between him or her and thee alone; and if he or she confess thou shalt be reconciled.

89 And if he or she confess not thou shalt deliver him or her up unto the church, not to the members, but to the elders. And it shall be done in a meeting, and that not before the world.

90 And if thy brother or sister offend many, he or she shall be chastened before many.

91 And if any one offend openly, he or she shall be rebuked openly, that he or she may be ashamed. And if he or she confess not, he or she shall be delivered up unto the law of God.

92 If any shall offend in secret, he or she shall be rebuked in secret, that he or she may have opportunity to confess in secret to him or her whom he or she has offended, and to God, that the church may not speak reproachfully of him or her.

93 And thus shall ye conduct in all things.

1831 February

Concerning the reaction of the Church to the new law, John Whitmer stated: “After the above law or revelation was received, the elders went forth to proclaim repentance according to commandment, and there were members added to the church. Though Bishop Edward Partridge visited the church in its several branches, there were some that would not receive the Law. The time has not yet come that the law can be fully established, for the disciples live scattered abroad and are not organized; our [numbers] are small and the disciples untaught, consequently they understand not the things of the Kingdom. There were some of the disciples who were flattered into the church because they thought that all things were to be common, therefore they thought to glut themselves upon the labors of others” (Early Latter Day Saint History, 42).

Concerning the reception of the law by the Church, Joseph noted in a letter to Martin Harris: “We have received the laws of the Kingdom since we came here and the Disciples in these parts have received them gladly” (Woodford, Historical Development, 1:527).

Joseph began planning for the growth of the Church in Kirtland, knowing that converts from the eastern United States and Canada would soon be flowing in, for Kirtland was to be the central staging area for establishing Zion further west “on the borders by the Lamanites” (D&C 28:9). The growth of the Church in Kirtland would also bring some tensions between old and new members or between local and eastern members. The problems of getting along in a rapidly growing community that was trying to live the law of consecration intensified as new arrivals came in from New York and elsewhere, and as more of those who had been prepared for the gospel by the preaching of Sidney Rigdon (see D&C 35:4) were converted in the Kirtland area. The reader will note that most of the next fifteen or so revelations deal with better organizing the Church, resolving disputes between members, and combating the influence of false spirits and deceivers among the members.

On arriving in Kirtland, Joseph found a few members of the Church presuming to receive revelations and consequently teaching false doctrines. The Lord warned against these counterfeit claims and false teachings [D&C 43 - Spurious Revelations].

Also in February, the Lord announced that an important conference of the elders of the Church should be held. The date for this conference was set for June 1831 [D&C 44 - Conference of June 1831]. This turned out to be a great convocation of the elders at which the office of high priest was revealed to the Church.

Section 43 Spurious Revelations

By the spring of 1831, the number of church members in Kirtland and its vicinity had increased to more than a thousand. These saints met in more than twenty branches of the Church.

As the Church grew in size, so did the intensity of persecution felt by the members. The Church existed in a highly charged and critical environment where local journalists were quick to pounce upon and criticize anything they could get their hands on, such as the doctrinal content of Joseph's revelations and/or those individuals whose names appeared in the revelations. For this reason Joseph began to identify certain persons in the revelations by code names such as "Enoch" for Joseph Smith, "Ahashdad" for Newell K. Whitney, and "Pelagoram" for Sidney Rigdon. Journalists were also anxious to write about the failings of individual members of the Church and thus produce evidence that Mormonism was a deluded sect.

In April 1830, ten months prior to Joseph's receiving section 43, the Lord had instructed the saints that it was only through Joseph Smith that revelation would come for the building of Zion. Speaking of Joseph, the Lord said, "Him have I inspired to move the cause of Zion in mighty power" (D&C 21:7). The Lord reiterated this doctrine at the time of the Hiram Page affair in D&C 28:2: "But, behold, verily, verily, I say unto thee, no one shall be appointed to receive commandments and revelations in this church excepting my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., for he receiveth them even as Moses."

This instruction was difficult for some of the saints to follow since many had come from religious backgrounds that permitted any member of the congregation to proclaim doctrine for the entire assembly. These were Protestant churches that were very democratic in their structure, working from the bottom up, and the new converts were mostly unfamiliar with the idea of a priesthood order working from the top down or a hierarchy of spiritual authorities over the Church. Thus, the Lord needed to make clear to the Kirtland saints how he would reveal his will to them in his restored Church. Also, section 28, with its clear statement concerning the unique role of the Prophet in receiving revelation for the Church, had been given in Fayette, and very few of the New York saints had arrived in Kirtland. The revelations did not yet exist in printed form and were accessible to the Kirtland saints only, if at all, by private, handwritten copies. Most of the Kirtland saints may therefore have simply been unfamiliar with the information in section 28.

Spurious revelations and visions claimed by early converts to the Church provided critics further fuel for inflammatory articles which were written to cast doubt on the unusual beliefs of the Mormons. For example, one of the early converts, Heman Basset, claimed to have received a revelation in Kirtland from an angel. After reading this revelation to others, Basset would show them a picture of what he claimed to be a group of angels. Another person known as Black Pete claimed to have received messages from heaven in the form of letters floating across the sky. While seeking to obtain a closer look at one of these traveling messages, he “ran off a steep wash bank twenty-five feet high, passed through a tree top” growing parallel with the water below and fell into the Chagrin River. Black Pete emerged from the stream with only a few scratches, but “his ardor had somewhat cooled” (JD, 11:3-4). John Whitmer recorded in his history of the Church an account of one of the early converts, a woman known only as Mrs. Hubble. He wrote: “About these days there was a woman by the name of Hubble who professed to be a prophetess of the Lord, and professed to have many revelations, and knew the Book of Mormon was true, and that she should become a teacher in the Church of Christ. She appeared to be very sanctimonious and deceived some who were not able to detect her in her hypocrisy: others however had the spirit of discernment, and her follies and abomination were made manifest” (Early Latter Day Saint History, 42-43).

Some other church members also began teaching incorrect principles. In a discourse given years later in Ogden, Utah, Elder George A. Smith commented on this problem that existed in the early Church: “There was a prevalent spirit all through the early history of this Church, which prompted the elders to suppose that they knew more than the Prophet. Elders would tell you that the prophet was going wrong” (JD, 11:7). Many members became confused and bewildered by the different claims. Under these circumstances the Prophet went to the Lord for guidance and in February 1831, a few days after he had received section 42, Joseph received section 43 which warned against the counterfeit claims and false teachings of these misguided church members. This revelation emphasized that the Lord had appointed only one person, Joseph Smith, to receive revelation for the Church. Other members might receive revelation for their own needs, stewardships, and specific callings, but they did not have authority to receive revelation for the Church.

Section 43 was directed to the elders of the Church—those directing church affairs in the branches and preaching the gospel among nonmembers—that they might have insight regarding these spurious revelations coming forth from some misguided saints.

The elders were told in section 43 that they are sent forth to teach and not be taught, and they were given a warning which they were to deliver to the nations of the earth regarding the Lord’s second coming and millennial reign (verses 20-26).

John Whitmer recorded the effect that section 43 had upon the Kirtland saints: “After this commandment was received, the saints came to understanding on this subject, and unity and harmony prevailed throughout the church of God: and the saints began to learn wisdom, and treasure up knowledge which they learned from the word of God, and by experience as they advanced in the way of eternal life” (Early Latter Day Saint History, 44).

Scripture Mastery

D&C 43:15-16 Ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach.

1 O hearken, ye elders of my church, and give ear to the words which I shall speak unto you.

verse 1 Section 43 was apparently delivered to Joseph directly in response to his inquiry about Mrs. Hubble and her “revelations.” It was received in the presence of twelve elders, who represented all of the elders of the Church.

2 For behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, that ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church, through him whom I have appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations from my hand.

verse 2 “ye have received a commandment for a law unto my church” This phrase refers to section 42. The Lord seems to imply, “You have received an important revelation from my authorized servant Joseph, and now you are inclined to believe the rantings of someone like Mrs. Hubble?”

3 And this ye shall know assuredly—that there is none other appointed unto you to receive commandments and revelations until he be taken, if he abide in me.

verse 3 Here, then, is the Lord’s clear statement on the matter: Only the prophet speaks to the Church for the Lord. As one might expect, there have been many Mrs. Hubbles in the Church since 1831. President Joseph F. Smith wrote, “Whenever you see a man rise up claiming to have received direct revelation from the Lord to the Church, independent of the order and channel of the priesthood, you may set him down as an imposter” (JD, 24:188-90).

4 But verily, verily, I say unto you, that none else shall be appointed unto this gift except it be through him; for if it be taken from him he shall not have power except to appoint another in his stead.

verses 3-4 The Reorganized LDS Church bases its law of succession to the presidency upon these verses. In their church the president appoints his own successor. Later on, the appropriate law of succession to the presidency will be made clear. The Lord will reveal that the “keys of presidency” after the death of the president lie with the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles (section 107).

Between 1831 and 1835 these verses do define the law of succession to the presidency of the Church. It is interesting to note that if Joseph Smith should have fallen because of iniquity, he still would have been the only one authorized to appoint his successor.

An interesting historical point is that Joseph, perhaps because of this verse, in July 1834 ordained David Whitmer to be “President of the Church of Christ.” Actually Brother Whitmer was ordained to be president of the Church in Missouri and president of the high council. We would now consider this office analogous to that of the stake president. Whitmer thought he was the president in Missouri just as Joseph was the president in Ohio, and that the two of them were thus equal in rank. When he was excommunicated by the high council in Missouri, he didn’t believe they had the power to excommunicate him because only the “common council of the church” can excommunicate the president (see D&C 107:82). Whitmer’s objections evidence that he misunderstood what office he was being called to accept. This misconception likely helps explain why he was the only one of the three witnesses to never come back to the Church after his excommunication. He must have reasoned, “I hold the keys of the presidency. The Church should come back to me—not me to the Church.”

President Joseph Fielding Smith explained the order of priesthood succession as follows: “We frequently hear discussions in our classes and between brethren to the effect that any man could be called, if the authorities should choose him, to preside over the Church, and that it is not the fixed order to take the senior apostle to preside, and any member of that quorum could be appointed. The fact is that the senior apostle automatically becomes the presiding officer of the Church at the death of the president. If some other man were to be chosen, then the senior would have to receive the revelation setting himself aside” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:189).

5 And this shall be a law unto you, that ye receive not the teachings of any that shall come before you as revelations or commandments;

6 And this I give unto you that you may not be deceived, that you may know they are not of me.

7 For verily I say unto you, that he that is ordained of me shall come in at the gate and be ordained as I have told you before, to teach those revelations which you have received and shall receive through him whom I have appointed.

verse 7 “he that is ordained of me . . . and be ordained” The first use of the word ordained here probably means something like “called,” “directed,” or “approved.” The second use of ordained carries the usual, more specific, meaning.

Those who are truly acting under God’s direction will come into the Church through the gate of baptism and then be ordained to teach what the Lord has already given through the Prophet.

8 And now, behold, I give unto you a commandment, that when ye are assembled together ye shall instruct and edify each other, that ye may know how to act and direct my church, how to act upon the points of my law and commandments, which I have given.

verse 8 The Lord instructs the leaders of his Church, in this case the elders, in what they should do when they meet together. We may well expand the applicability of this verse to all assemblies of the saints.

“ye shall instruct and edify each other” To instruct is one thing, but to instruct and edify is something more. Edify comes from the same root as edifice and means “to build up.” Both of these are accomplished if the saints are taught by the influence of the Spirit of God. Today this instructing and edifying may take place in priesthood meetings, Relief Society meetings, and auxiliary class meetings.

9 And thus ye shall become instructed in the law of my church, and be sanctified by that which ye have received, and ye shall bind yourselves to act in all holiness before me—verse 9 “ye shall bind yourselves” The Lord refers to the principle of covenant making. What is a covenant? Is covenant-making a pertinent topic even today?

From a time even before the creation of the earth, God has made covenants with his children (Abraham 3:24-28). In each dispensation the making of eternal covenants has been God’s method of binding us to gospel principles essential to our spiritual progress and eventual exaltation. In entering into a covenant, a person tends to bind himself by his own integrity. He feels a sense of responsibility to act in a certain way. As the Lord enters into covenants with a people, he acknowledges that people as “his people.” Covenants are equally important to us today in this final dispensation as they have been to the saints of dispensations past. Today we are said to be a “covenant people.” We enter into sacred and binding commitments and obligations with the Lord. What are these covenants? We begin with the baptismal covenant. Men receive the Melchizedek priesthood only after agreeing to accept the “oath and covenant” of that priesthood. We then continue on to enter into those covenants available to us in the temple including the endowment and the new and everlasting covenant of marriage.

We must not enter into these covenants lightly as they involve solemn obligations. There are unimaginable blessings reserved for those who keep their covenants. These blessings will be realized both in the eternities and here on earth. There are also damning penalties or “cursings” which await those who break their covenants. As we progress in mortality through the sequence of available covenants, the potential blessings increase for those who keep them, as does the gravity of the punishment for those who do not. Today a special caution or warning is issued by the ecclesiastical leader to the man who is about to receive the Melchizedek priesthood. The man to receive the Melchizedek does so by entering into the “oath and covenant of the priesthood.” In D&C 84 the Lord has warned that if a man should enter into this covenant and later fail to live up to it, it would have been better for him in the eternities if he had never made the covenant in the first place. The ultimate covenant man may enter into here on earth is likely the blessing of having his calling and election made sure. And what is the potential penalty for those who turn all together from this covenant? They have committed the unpardonable sin and are banished to live with Satan forever.

While making a covenant involves a two-way promise made equally between God and man, it is God, not man, who fixes the terms of the agreement. He is the author of the covenant and the guarantor of its terms. Angels function as witnesses. It is man's role to accept or reject the terms of the covenant.

Since Old Testament times, covenants have been entered into with solemn ceremonies or rituals. In making a covenant, the individual takes an oath that includes a conditional cursing: "May thus and such befall me if I should violate this obligation." Animal sacrifices also often accompanied the swearing of oaths. One scholar explained that anciently the sacrificial animal was cut in two, and the individual making the covenant passed between the two pieces (Genesis 15:10, 17; Jeremiah 34:18). This implied that the violator of the covenant would be treated like the sacrificial animal that is cut in two! (M.H. Pope. "Oaths" in The Interpreter's Dictionary of the Bible. 1962. 3:576). This ritual imagery implied the Lord's warning that a covenant-breaking Israel might fall victim to the punishing sword. For ancient Israel this warning proved to be more than just metaphorically valid.

In the scriptures there are other words and phrases that are used synonymously with "covenant" and "entering into covenants." Examples include the term "word" and the phrase "obey my word" (Numbers 30:2; 1 Chronicles 16:15; Psalm 105:8). Phrases such as "take upon us the name of Christ" (Alma 46:18), "keeping the commandments" (Alma 48:15), and "maintenance of the sacred word of God" (Alma 44:5) are all the scriptural equivalents of entering into a covenant with the Lord. For further discussion of covenants in the Lord's earthly kingdom, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 3, Covenants and Covenant Making.

10 That inasmuch as ye do this, glory shall be added to the kingdom which ye have received. Inasmuch as ye do it not, it shall be taken, even that which ye have received.

11 Purge ye out the iniquity which is among you; sanctify yourselves before me;
12 And if ye desire the glories of the kingdom, appoint ye my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and uphold him before me by the prayer of faith.

verse 12 "appoint ye my servant Joseph Smith, Jun." This is a command for the Church to "provide" for Joseph's temporal support (see verse 13). Larry E. Dahl explains: "Webster's 1828 American Dictionary of the English Language and modern dictionaries agree that one of the meanings of the word appoint is to 'furnish; equip with things necessary.’ That seems to be the intent of these verses. Joseph Smith needed, in addition to a house, the faith and prayers of church members, and provisions of ‘food and raiment’ so that he could accomplish what the Lord had commanded him to do” (Joseph Smith Translation and the Doctrine and Covenants, 111).

“uphold him before me by the prayer of faith” Daily prayer for church leaders ought to be part of every saint’s spiritual life “if ye desire the glories of the kingdom.” But the expression “prayer of faith” (emphasis added) implies more than simple prayer. It requires the prayerful individual to get up off his or her knees and work to do whatever they can to support the leader.

13 And again, I say unto you, that if ye desire the mysteries of the kingdom, provide for him food and raiment, and whatsoever thing he needeth to accomplish the work wherewith I have commanded him;

verse 13 “if ye desire the mysteries of the kingdom” Providing Joseph with the necessary support would free him to provide the saints with revelations, scriptures (such as working on the JST), commandments, etc.

14 And if ye do it not he shall remain unto them that have received him, that I may reserve unto myself a pure people before me.

verse 14 Sacrifice does bring forth the blessings of heaven, and those who supported Joseph did aid materially in the establishment of Zion, while those who neglect this duty are not worthy of Zion. Though many of the Kirtland Saints sacrificed much for Zion, in the long run and as a group they failed to keep this commandment of the Lord. Consequently, the blessings they and the Church after them might have received through Joseph, had he not been forced to stop work on the JST in order to support his family, were never received (HC, 136-37). This verse also implies the threat of excommunication or disfellowship for those members not worthy of Zion.

15 Again I say, hearken ye elders of my church, whom I have appointed: Ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach the children of men the things which I have put into your hands by the power of my Spirit; verse 15 “hearken ye elders of my church, whom I have appointed: Ye are not sent forth to be taught, but to teach” The world has neither the power nor the knowledge to instruct the Latter-day Saints in the gospel of Jesus Christ. Babylon cannot instruct Zion in the things of God. God has called us to teach them. We are the teachers of the world.

16 And ye are to be taught from on high. Sanctify yourselves and ye shall be endowed with power, that ye may give even as I have spoken.

verse 16 The term “endowed with power” seems to refer to those ordinances which will later be received in the Kirtland Temple and the keys of the priesthood which will be restored there.

17 Hearken ye, for, behold, the great day of the Lord is nigh at hand.

verse 17 The Savior’s second coming in glory is near.

18 For the day cometh that the Lord shall utter his voice out of heaven; the heavens shall shake and the earth shall tremble, and the trump of God shall sound both long and loud, and shall say to the sleeping nations: Ye saints arise and live; ye sinners stay and sleep until I shall call again.

verse 18 This verse and the next refer to the Lord’s second coming.

“the trump of God shall sound both long and loud” The horn or trumpet that will blow to signal the return of Christ and the resurrection of the just (see 1 Thessalonians 4:16; Alma 29:1).

“Ye saints arise and live” At the Lord’s second coming, those who have been born again and sanctified by the gospel covenant will be resurrected to receive the Lord in their glorified flesh. If the reader wishes to review the complete sequence of the resurrection, see the introductory commentary for Alma 40:16-20.

19 Wherefore gird up your loins lest ye be found among the wicked.

verse 19 “gird up your loins” See the commentary for D&C 36:8.

20 Lift up your voices and spare not. Call upon the nations to repent, both old and young, both bond and free, saying: Prepare yourselves for the great day of the Lord;

verse 20 This dispensation is known as the times of the Gentiles when the gospel will be preached to all the nations of the earth, sparing none. Toward the end of this dispensation, the Gentiles will have had their chance, and the times of the Gentiles will end. Then the gospel will be taken primarily to covenant Israel. Thus, in this dispensation, the first (covenant Israel) will be last (to receive the gospel).

21 For if I, who am a man, do lift up my voice and call upon you to repent, and ye hate me, what will ye say when the day cometh when the thunders shall utter their voices from the ends of the earth, speaking to the ears of all that live, saying—Repent, and prepare for the great day of the Lord?

verse 21 This verse is a continuation of the previous verse (note the colon following the word saying in verse 20). Thus, the speaker here is not the Lord, but rather the collective missionaries of the latter-day Church.

In effect, the missionaries say, “If you hate and reject me, a mere mortal, for saying these things, what will you do when God himself says them to you with the voice of overwhelming natural disasters until you either repent or die?”

22 Yea, and again, when the lightnings shall streak forth from the east unto the west, and shall utter forth their voices unto all that live, and make the ears of all tingle that hear, saying these words—Repent ye, for the great day of the Lord is come?

23 And again, the Lord shall utter his voice out of heaven, saying: Hearken, O ye nations of the earth, and hear the words of that God who made you.

24 O, ye nations of the earth, how often would I have gathered you together as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, but ye would not!

verse 24 The Lord’s desire to gather the Gentile nations is just as strong as his desire to gather Israel (see Matthew 23:37).

verses 17-25 The Lord will use all kinds of natural phenomena to convince the people of the earth to repent and prepare for his second coming. Speaking of this method of warning the people of earth, Brigham Young said:

Do you think there is calamity abroad now among the people? Not much. All we have yet heard and all we have experienced is scarcely a preface to the sermon that is going to be preached. When the testimony of the elders ceases to be given, and the Lord says to them, “Come home; I will now preach my own sermons to the nations of the earth,” all you now know can scarcely be called a preface to the sermon that will be preached with fire and sword, tempests, earthquakes, hail, rain, thunders and lightnings, and fearful destruction. . . . You will hear of magnificent cities, now idolized by the people, sinking in the earth, entombing the inhabitants. The sea will heave itself beyond its bounds, engulfing mighty cities. Famine will spread over the nations (JD, 8:123; see also D&C 88:88-92).

See Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 26, Sign’s of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

26 Behold, the day has come, when the cup of the wrath of mine indignation is full.

verse 26 “the cup of the wrath of mine indignation is full” The Lord is fully ready to punish the wicked. The Lord’s wrath and indignation are neither wrong nor unjust. He metes out punishment to satisfy the demands of justice so that the wicked may be forgiven and eventually receive some degree of glory.

For those who have repented and come to the Savior, he has already drunk for us the bitter cup of God’s wrath—he has suffered the agony of the atonement. Those who will not repent must drink it themselves at some future time (D&C 19:16-19). What form does the Lord’s punishment take? It obviously results in suffering by those who receive it. Is this really punishment in the purest sense? Please remember that in God’s universe, there is nothing of suffering that is purely punitive. All suffering experienced by any individual as the result of God’s justice is inevitably for the eternal betterment of that individual.

27 Behold, verily I say unto you, that these are the words of the Lord your God.

28 Wherefore, labor ye, labor ye in my vineyard for the last time—for the last time call upon the inhabitants of the earth.

29 For in mine own due time will I come upon the earth in judgment, and my people shall be redeemed and shall reign with me on earth.

verse 29 “in mine own due time” No one knows the time of his coming (Matthew 24:36; D&C 49:7), but when he comes, he will come unexpectedly (“quickly”).

30 For the great Millennium, of which I have spoken by the mouth of my servants, shall come.

31 For Satan shall be bound, and when he is loosed again he shall only reign for a little season, and then cometh the end of the earth.

verse 31 Apparently Satan’s being bound during the Millennium is the result of two separate phenomena:

1. Satan will actually be restrained by the power of God. God will mandate that Satan’s freedoms be limited. President Joseph Fielding Smith taught concerning the binding of Satan: “There are many among us who teach that the binding of Satan will be merely the binding which those dwelling on the earth will place upon him by their refusal to hear his enticings. This is not so. He will not have the privilege during that period of time to tempt any man” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:192).

Apparently, Satan will be bound, at least in part, by priesthood power that will cast him out and will not allow him the exercise of any influence.

2. The Lord will destroy telestial wickedness from off the earth, and thus there will not be people on the earth who will respond to his promptings. The prophet Nephi wrote, “Because of the righteousness of his [the Lord’s] people, Satan has no power;

wherefore, he cannot be loosed for the space of many years; for he hath no power over the hearts of the people, for they dwell in righteousness, and the Holy One of Israel reigneth” (1 Nephi 22:26).

President George Q. Cannon added further insight to divine limitations to be placed upon Satan:

We talk about Satan’s being bound. Satan will be bound by the power of God; but he will be bound also by the determination of the people of God not to listen to him, not to be governed by him. The Lord will not bind him and take his power from the earth while there are men and women willing to be governed by him. That is contrary to the plan of salvation. To deprive men of their agency is contrary to the purposes of our God. . . .

Satan only gains power over man through man’s exercise of his own agency; and when Satan shall be bound, as the Lord says he will be for a thousand years, one of the great powers that will help bring this to pass will be man’s agency. The Lord has never forced men against their will to obey him. He never will do so. If Satan, therefore, has power with man, it is because man yields to his influence. . . .

The time is not far distant when great judgments will be poured out upon the wicked inhabitants of the earth. Every prophet who has looked forward to our day has seen and predicted that the wicked would be destroyed. Their destruction means the destruction of Satan’s power [including the literal destruction of the wicked]. The righteous will be left, and because of their righteousness the Lord will have mercy upon them; they, exercising their agency in the right direction, will bring down his blessings upon them to such an extent that Satan will be bound (Gospel Truth, 1:86-87).

“when he is loosed again he shall only reign for a little season” When the Millennium is over, Satan will be allowed once more to tempt mortals upon the earth and will have influence again for a short time. We may assume that there will appear on the earth mortals who are inclined to respond to his ministrations. There will then be a great last battle, sometimes called the battle of Gog and Magog (see Revelation 20:8) or the battle of the great God (see D&C 88:114), in which Satan and all his servants will be defeated forever. Then the earth will be cleansed once again and will go through a process similar to death and resurrection, at the end of which it will be made a celestial world to be inhabited by all those who lived upon it who are worthy of the celestial kingdom.

“and then cometh the end of the earth” Note, again, that at the onset of the Millennium will come the “end of the world.” And at the end of the Millennium will come the “end of the earth.”

32 And he that liveth in righteousness shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye, and the earth shall pass away so as by fire.

verse 32 “changed in the twinkling of an eye” The “twinkling of an eye” is a blink. When righteous mortals die during the Millennium, they will simply pass from mortality to a resurrected state in the twinkling of an eye.

“the earth shall pass away so as by fire” At the end of the Millennium, the earth will also “die” and be melted down, so to speak (see 2 Peter 3:10-11), just as raw materials are melted down and made pure in the refiner’s fire. The earth will then be “resurrected” as a pure, celestial world.

33 And the wicked shall go away into unquenchable fire, and their end no man knoweth on earth, nor ever shall know, until they come before me in judgment.

verse 33 The “wicked” here are those who are “filthy still” at the resurrection of the unjust after the end of the Millennium. These are the ones who still refuse to repent even after suffering hell in the spirit world. They will not receive any degree of glory. They are the sons of perdition (see D&C 76:31-38, 43-48).

34 Hearken ye to these words. Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Savior of the world. Treasure these things up in your hearts, and let the solemnities of eternity rest upon your minds.

verse 34 “let the solemnities of eternity rest upon your minds” The word “solemnity” means something very serious or sublimely important. The “solemnities of eternity” are the facts of our eternal life. The Lord counsels the saints to let the serious things of eternity, the Lord’s covenants, the great blessings that will be given the faithful, and all matters of a spiritual nature rest on their minds. How marvelous it would be if we would be continually guided by an eternal perspective!

35 Be sober. Keep all my commandments. Even so. Amen.

Section 44 Conference of June 1831

In February 1831 the Lord gave this revelation, and in it he commands that an important conference of the elders of the Church be held. No date for the conference is actually set in the revelation, but Joseph is told to set the date. Since the organization of the Church, three major conferences of the elders had been held. The first was on June 9, 1830, the second on September 26, 1830, and the third on January 2, 1831. In D&C 20:61 the Lord had instructed the elders of the Church to meet in conference every three months.

Some church historians have suggested, on the evidence of John Whitmer's history, that a general conference was held in Kirtland on March 4, 1831. The original Whitmer manuscript, however, reads June 4, 1831, a date that was later changed to read March 4. No other evidence for a March conference exists, and in a letter to Hyrum dated March 3-4, Joseph mentioned the Lord's commandment that the elders gather to Kirtland, but he said nothing about a conference then in progress (Dean Jesebe, Personal Writings of Joseph Smith, 230-31).

This conference was convened on June 3, 1831, and did turn out to be one of the great conferences during which the office of high priest was revealed, and Joseph became a high priest. The location of Zion also was revealed (section 52), and the Lord called missionaries to go to Zion and help build up the New Jerusalem (also section 52).

By the end of February 1831, there were not enough Ohio saints to consecrate sufficient land to support all the new converts that would soon be coming to Kirtland expecting to receive stewardships. An obvious solution to this problem was to call the full-time missionaries from their various fields of labor and reassign them to the Kirtland area to increase the number of local converts with local resources to consecrate (see verses 1-4). Thus, instead of producing converts who left everything somewhere else to come to Kirtland and strain the meager resources there, the elders in Kirtland would find local converts who could provide additional resources for the gathering saints in Kirtland. The shortage of resources in Kirtland at that time was also one reason why many arriving eastern saints were sent on to Jackson County, Missouri (see Backman and Perkins, "United Under the Laws of the Celestial Kingdom," 173-77).

This intensified proselyting in the Kirtland area did have the desired effect of increasing the amount of land and other resources available to the bishop's storehouse. Thus, the Church was strengthened in Kirtland and more eastern saints were able to gather there.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto you my servants, it is expedient in me that the elders of my church should be called together, from the east and from the west, and from the north and from the south, by letter or some other way.

verse 1 “my servants” This revelation was directed to Joseph and Sidney rather than to the elders or to the Church. The Lord is instructing them on how to meet the problems of the Church.

“it is expedient in me that the elders of my church should be called together, from the east and from the west” The commanded conference of elders was to include the New York saints who were still in New York at this time, the Kirtland saints, and all the elders previously sent out on missions to various parts of the country. Therefore it would be necessary to hold the conference in the spring after the New York saints had a chance to gather to Ohio and the missionaries could be contacted and called to Kirtland.

President David O. McKay explained the purposes of church conferences:

Reference to the Doctrine and Covenants will disclose the fact that there are four principal purposes for holding conferences of the Church: (1) to transact current church business [D&C 20:62], (2) to hear reports and general church statistics [D&C 73:2], (3) to “approve of those names which I the Lord have appointed, or to disapprove of them” [D&C 124:144], and (4) to worship the Lord in sincerity and reverence, and to give and to receive encouragement, exhortation, and instruction” [D&C 58:56; 72:7] (CR, October 1938, 130-31).

2 And it shall come to pass, that inasmuch as they are faithful, and exercise faith in me, I will pour out my Spirit upon them in the day that they assemble themselves together.

verse 2 Here is yet another benefit the saints enjoy when they meet in conference. The Spirit is poured out upon them and they are instructed and edified by that Spirit.

3 And it shall come to pass that they shall go forth into the regions round about, and preach repentance unto the people.

verse 3 To preach “repentance” is to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ. It is to teach of Christ’s atonement and resurrection and their implications in the eternal lives of investigators. The Lord commands that the missionaries go forth in the “regions round about”—the Kirtland area.

4 And many shall be converted, insomuch that ye shall obtain power to organize yourselves according to the laws of man; verse 4 “many shall be converted” The population of the Church in Ohio, and particularly in Kirtland, increased roughly 50 to 100 percent annually between 1830 and 1838 (see Backman, The Heavens Resound, 140).

5 That your enemies may not have power over you; that you may be preserved in all things; that you may be enabled to keep my laws; that every bond may be broken wherewith the enemy seeketh to destroy my people.

verses 4-5 “That your enemies may not have power over you” President Joseph F. Smith wrote:

When the Lord restored the gospel, the spirit of gathering came with it. The Lord commanded the people to gather together, and that they should not only be organized as a church, but that they should be organized under the laws of the land, so that they might not be helpless and dependent and without influence or power; but that by means of united effort and faith they should become a power for the accomplishment of righteousness in the earth (CR, April 1900, 47).

It was important for the young Church to avoid lawsuits and other forms of legal harassment. The law in Ohio at that time required any religious society, that desired to be incorporated so that they could legally own property as a church and perform all the functions of a church, to register the name of their church and the names of their trustees with the clerk of common pleas. In this law, no recognition was given to a central organization, but each congregation in each community was required to register within their own county. Each congregation had to have at least twenty members in order for them to be able to incorporate. Therefore, it was important for the Church to have at least that many in each congregation. If they did not qualify, they would be denied authority to perform marriages, hold tax-free property, and have their own cemetery, etc.

One might also read into this counsel from the Lord a general admonition to the elders of the Church to obey the laws of the land as they went about preaching, “that your enemies may not have power over you.”

“that you may be enabled to keep my laws” This phrase refers to the law of the Church contained in section 42.

6 Behold, I say unto you, that ye must visit the poor and the needy and administer to their relief, that they may be kept until all things may be done according to my law which ye have received. Amen.

verse 6 “that they may be kept until all things may be done according to my law which ye have received” Joseph and Sidney had to make certain that the poor were taken care of until such time as the law of the Church with its law of consecration and stewardship of property could be fully implemented among the saints for that same purpose.

President George Q. Cannon recorded the following insight into the character of the Prophet Joseph:

At no time during the prophet’s career did the care of the poor escape his attention or become a matter of indifference to him. He was a man of large benevolence, and his sympathies were quickly aroused by any tale of sorrow or appeal for relief. In the most busy and trying periods of his life those who went to him for counsel in their troubles, always found him willing to listen, and they were sure to receive encouragement and assistance. To extend comfort to the bruised spirit, and to help the needy and distressed appeared a constant pleasure to him. His hospitality, also, was a marked feature in his character. His house was always open to entertain the stranger. One of the most cherished recollections of many of the old members of the Church is the kindness with which they were treated by “Brother Joseph,” and the warm welcome he gave them to his house upon their arrival at Kirtland and other places where he lived (Life of Joseph Smith, 109-10).

In March 1831, as Joseph was working on the inspired revision of the Bible, he came to Matthew 24, the great discourse given on the Mount of Olives by Jesus after his disciples had asked him about his second coming and the “end of the world.” It seems likely that Joseph’s pondering these verses was the trigger for receiving a revelation in March about events to transpire in the future [D&C 45 - The Second Coming of the Lord].

Also in March, the Lord revealed guidance to Joseph and the Church regarding the question of whether nonmembers should be allowed to attend sacrament meetings. The Lord also taught the saints how to discern valid gifts of the Spirit from manifestations of evil spirits [D&C 46 - Gifts of the Spirit].

Section 45 The Second Coming of the Lord

The arrival of the Prophet Joseph in Kirtland marked the beginning of a period of rapid growth in the membership of the Church. By early June 1831 the Church had grown to two thousand in number. Civic leaders, priests, newspaper editors, and parishioners joined together in an effort to stop the conversion of their neighbors to the new religion. In his history the prophet recorded, “Many false reports, lies, and foolish stories, were published in the newspapers, and circulated in every direction, to prevent people from investigating the work, or embracing the faith” (HC, 1:158). During these trying times of slander and abuse, the Lord blessed the saints with revelations of comfort, peace and assurance. One of these revelations was section 45, of which the prophet wrote, “To the joy of the saints who had to struggle against every thing that prejudice and wickedness could invent, I received the following: [D&C 45]” (Ibid.). Joseph received section 45 on March 7, 1831.

At the time section 45 was received, Joseph Smith had been in Kirtland scarcely more than a month, and the large majority of the New York saints were still in New York, not due to arrive in Kirtland for weeks.

In 1831, as now, the exact circumstances and details of the second coming of Christ generated a lot of speculation, much of it unhealthy, among the saints. In Kirtland during this period, counterfeit spiritual phenomena and false spirits accompanied extreme doctrinal speculations about the second coming and were greatly troubling to the Church. Section 45 may have been given in part to answer some of the questions of the members and to quiet down the extreme speculations and doctrinal hysteria in which some were indulging.

Just three days before his crucifixion, Jesus and his disciples left the temple and climbed the Mount of Olives, where they had a dramatic view of the temple and Jerusalem. Here his disciples asked the Lord about his second coming in glory. They asked, “When shall these things be . . . and what is the sign of thy coming?” (JS-M 1:4). His lengthy and detailed answer provides one of the most important revelations on the signs of the times and of the second coming. Known as the Olivet discourse because it was given on the Mount of Olives, the full discourse is given in Matthew 24 and 25. Joseph Smith’s inspired corrections of the Olivet discourse are so significant that they have been included in the Pearl of Great Price (Joseph Smith-Matthew). Mark and Luke also recorded portions of the discourse, though not as fully as did Matthew (see Mark 13:1-37; Luke 21:5-36). In response to his disciples’ questions the Lord spoke of the temple in Jerusalem in the latter days, the last days of the world, and of the signs that would precede his second coming.

Section 45 expands on Matthew’s account, as the Lord revealed to his latter-day Church additional insights concerning the subjects of his Olivet discourse. Section 45 is one of the most powerful views into the future that is available in all of our recorded scripture.

As one reads section 45, it is sometimes difficult to know to whom the Lord is speaking and to what period of time he is referring. Thus for clarification the verse commentary will serve to orient the reader to the Lord's audience.

D&C 45 The Second Coming of the Lord

D&C 45:3-5 Listen to him who is the advocate with the Father, who is pleading your cause before him—Saying: Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did no sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified; Wherefore, Father, spare these my brethren that believe on my name, that they may come unto me and have everlasting life.

D&C 45:36-39 Parable of the fig tree.

D&C 45:51-53 These wounds are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.

verses 1-10 Introduction and salutation from the Lord

1 Hearken, O ye people of my church, to whom the kingdom has been given; hearken ye and give ear to him who laid the foundation of the earth, who made the heavens and all the hosts thereof, and by whom all things were made which live, and move, and have a being.

verse 1 “Hearken, O ye people of my church” “hearken ye and give ear”

The Lord's injunction for his people to listen is repeated ten times in the first fifteen verses of section 45. This strong emphasis on hearing and receiving this information identifies section 45 to be of major doctrinal importance to the Church, both in 1831 and today.

2 And again I say, hearken unto my voice, lest death shall overtake you; in an hour when ye think not the summer shall be past, and the harvest ended, and your souls not saved.

verse 2 “lest death shall overtake you”

Those who fail to heed the Lord's warning voice run the risk of being found unredeemed from sin when the Lord returns. Also, none of us is getting out of this mortal life alive. The end of the world comes every day for somebody, and not in the too distant future for all of us. When our last day arrives we will not be spared the pains of hell if our souls are not yet saved.

“in an hour when ye think not the summer shall be past” Summer is the time to labor and to prepare a harvest with which one may survive the winter. President Joseph Fielding Smith noted:

In all ages of the world it has been the peculiar belief of men that the sayings of the prophets were to be fulfilled in times still future. That is true of the people today. We have had ample warning of the nearness of the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. . . . In this revelation [section 45] we are given the warning that the summer is passing and if we are heedless of the warning we will find the summer past, the harvest ended and our souls not saved. While no man knows the day or the hour, yet if we are taken unawares, we will be without excuse for the signs are ample and we now see them being fulfilled (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:195).

3 Listen to him who is the advocate with the Father, who is pleading your cause before him—verse 3 Unless our Savior pleads our case, we will not be exalted. He defends us, not by citing our merits, not by arguing our righteous deeds, but by arguing from his position as Savior of the world which he merits by virtue of his awful and selfless sacrifice. He pleads for us for his sake. It is as if he were saying to those who enforce the demands of justice, “Show mercy to him not for him, but for me.” He pleads for those who accept and enter into his everlasting covenant and endure in it and for those who would have had they had the opportunity (D&C 137:5-9).

4 Saying: Father, behold the sufferings and death of him who did no sin, in whom thou wast well pleased; behold the blood of thy Son which was shed, the blood of him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified; verse 4 “him whom thou gavest that thyself might be glorified” In some way we don’t fully understand, when each of us is exalted, we add to the glory—the light and spiritual assets—of the Father (and the Son).

5 Wherefore, Father, spare these my brethren that believe on my name, that they may come unto me and have everlasting life.

verse 5 “Father, spare these my brethren” The Savior pleads for each of his people (members of his earthly kingdom) to be spared from the demands of the law of justice which dictate that no one who has sinned (“no unclean thing”) can enter the kingdom of heaven (1 Nephi 15:34; Alma 11:37).

verses 3-5 These verses may be used as evidence that the Father is the enforcer of the demands of justice. Certainly the Father is the epitome, essence, and personification of justice. He is by his very nature just. It is not in his nature to be otherwise. The Father may exercise his influence in enforcing the law of justice. These verses support this possibility. Here, the Son is pleading our case before the Father.

There is, however, evidence to suggest that it is not the Father who is the enforcer of justice. See a discussion of this interesting topic in “Who or What Enforces the Law of Justice?” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 12, The Law of Justice.

6 Hearken, O ye people of my church, and ye elders listen together, and hear my voice while it is called today, and harden not your hearts;

verse 6 “while it is called today” This phrase refers to this dispensation from the restoration of the gospel to the second coming of the Lord (see D&C 65:23). For each of us who live in this dispensation, this phrase also refers to the period between our mortal birth and our resurrection. Thus, it includes the time we spend on earth and in the world of spirits. Other scriptural phrases that refer to this same period of time include “today” and “the day of this life.” Hence, “tomorrow” begins at the resurrection, after which change is no longer possible, and when we enter into a “new day” of our spiritual existence. “Yesterday” can also be understood in reference to the period of our premortal life.

7 For verily I say unto you that I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the light and the life of the world—a light that shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not.

verse 7 “I am Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

“a light that shineth in darkness and the darkness comprehendeth it not”

The Savior’s light shines throughout the universe. It even shines on the wicked and unworthy. But they “comprehendeth it not”—they do not perceive or benefit from it. It is as though the light does not shine on them. For a more thorough discussion of the light of Christ, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15, The Concept of Light.

8 I came unto mine own, and mine own received me not; but unto as many as received me gave I power to do many miracles, and to become the sons of God; and even unto them that believed on my name gave I power to obtain eternal life.

verse 8 “I came unto mine own, and mine own received me not” This phrase refers to the children of the covenant that Jehovah, or Christ, made with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, or Israel—particularly those belonging to Jesus’s own tribe of Judah. Jesus refers here to the generation of Jews who rejected him.

Even though the Jews did not receive him, we should not say that they were responsible for his crucifixion. Not all, or even most, of the Jews of Jesus’s day shared responsibility for that crime, nor does any Jew born after that time. To argue that subsequent generations of Jews are guilty of the blood of Christ is to suppose some sort of “original sin” or “inherited guilt” passed from parents to their children, which idea, of course, is ludicrous.

“unto as many as received me gave I power” Those Jews in Jesus’s day who received him and his teachings were given the gospel, the priesthood, the new and everlasting covenant, and the fulness of gospel ordinances.

9 And even so I have sent mine everlasting covenant into the world, to be a light to the world, and to be a standard for my people, and for the Gentiles to seek to it, and to be a messenger before my face to prepare the way before me.

verse 9 “I have sent mine everlasting covenant into the world” This phrase refers to the restoration of the gospel of Jesus Christ in this latter day.

“to be a standard for my people” The word standard is a synonym for an ensign (compare D&C 98:34; 105:39). Both terms refer to a sign, banner, flag, emblem, or other object that can be raised or held aloft to help troops, followers, disciples, or members gather or rally to the correct side or the correct place, or to help keep them oriented and in their proper place once they have been organized.

Ultimately, Jesus Christ himself, raised up on the cross in his sacrificial role as the Lamb of God, is the ensign to the nations, who will gather the faithful to himself and keep them oriented and in their right place in Zion once they have been gathered.

Today the ensign raised up to the nations in the latter days is his restored gospel, his everlasting covenant, his Zion. To this latter-day ensign the Gentiles will gather, and in so doing they will also gather to the Christ who was crucified and raised up on the cross—the ultimate ensign. It is appropriate that the church’s publication most directly responsible for proclaiming the restored gospel of Jesus Christ to the world is appropriately called the Ensign.

“and for the Gentiles to seek to it” We have mentioned previously that our dispensation begins with the times of the Gentiles (see verse 28)—that period when the gospel is taken and taught first to the Gentiles, and then later to the Jews—just as the preceding dispensation began with the gospel’s being taken first to the Jews, and then also to the Gentiles (see 1 Nephi 13:42). The Gentiles are the inhabitants of all the nations of the earth, from Albania to Zimbabwe, every nation, kindred, tongue, and people. Preaching the gospel to all the world in this manner is a work primarily reserved for our latter-day dispensation.

“to be a messenger before my face” Just as John the Baptist was an Elias who prepared the way for Christ, so the latter-day Church prepares the way for the millennial kingdom of God that will be established at the second coming of Christ.

10 Wherefore, come ye unto it, and with him that cometh I will reason as with men in days of old, and I will show unto you my strong reasoning.

verse 10 “I will reason as with men in days of old” This phrase carries with it the idea that Christ will “reason with” or try to convince men that his covenant and gospel are on the earth and comprise our only way home—back to his presence.

verses 11-14 These verses contain a teaching example involving Enoch. In connection with the Lord's coming there will be a cleansing of wickedness and a destruction of the wicked. Enoch escaped wickedness by living righteously and being translated. Thus if one lives as righteously, one may escape destruction at the Lord's coming.

11 Wherefore, hearken ye together and let me show unto you even my wisdom—the wisdom of him whom ye say is the God of Enoch, and his brethren, verse 11 “let my show unto you even my wisdom—the wisdom of him whom ye say is the God of Enoch” At the time this revelation was received, the prophet Joseph had already received the revelation now known as Moses 6-7, the book of Enoch. The Lord seems to be pointing out that Enoch and his people created a Zion society and were taken to heaven by the same Lord who is now speaking and by the same celestial principles that are now being revealed to the people. The Lord is just as able to lead us to Zion, and then to heaven, today as he was able to lead Enoch and his people to Zion, and then to heaven, in their day, and he will do so if members of the Church will keep his commandments.

12 Who were separated from the earth, and were received unto myself—a city reserved until a day of righteousness shall come—a day which was sought for by all holy men, and they found it not because of wickedness and abominations;

verse 12 “Who were separated from the earth, and were received unto myself” According to Moses 7:21, the Zion of Enoch and its people were taken physically off the earth before the Flood, just as the future inhabitants of Zion will be taken physically off the earth before the burning (see D&C 88:96-98; 1 Thessalonians 4:17; 1 Nephi 13:37). Joseph Smith explained that the people of Enoch were not taken to the direct presence of God, but were translated to a terrestrial order (TPJS, 170). This would be roughly the same level of glory as found in Eden before the fall and which will exist during the Millennium after the earth receives its paradisiacal glory (see Articles of Faith 1:10, where “paradisiacal” refers to a state like Eden). Joseph further stated that God “appointed unto him [Enoch] a ministry unto terrestrial bodies,” and that Enoch's saints are “held in reserve to be ministering angels unto many planets” (HC, 4:209-210).

“a city reserved until a day of righteousness shall come” When this earth has been raised to a terrestrial glory during the Millennium, then the Zion of Enoch shall be physically returned to the earth (see D&C 133:24; Moses 7:63).

“a day which was sought for by all holy men, and they found it not because of wickedness and abominations” After recording that Enoch was translated, Paul says that Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and their seed after them (they obviously knew what had taken place as pertaining to the people of Melchizedek and others) “looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God” (Hebrews 11:5-10), that is, they “sought for the city of Enoch which God had before taken” (JST, Genesis 14:34). But as Paul said, and as the Lord confirms in this verse, even these “holy men . . . found it not [it was not available to the people of the earth] because of wickedness and abominations” (D&C 45:11-12; Hebrews 11:11-16; Mormon Doctrine, 2nd ed., 804-05).

13 And confessed they were strangers and pilgrims on the earth;

verse 13 “strangers and pilgrims on the earth” This phrase is commonly found in scripture (see Hebrews 11:13-16; 1 Peter 2:11; see also Ephesians 2:19). In the Bible, the word stranger most often refers to someone who lives in a land though his citizenship is somewhere else. A pilgrim is someone on a journey—just passing through. Those who look for the establishment of righteousness upon the earth and long to be citizens of Christ’s kingdom when he returns must not feel too much at home in this telestial or fallen world. By virtue of Jesus Christ and the covenants we have made with him, we are already citizens of a better country than any now found upon the earth. In this telestial realm we are pilgrims just passing through—citizens of a better world forced to wait and dwell in Babylon until Zion is established.

In this particular verse those holy men, who longed for a better world, readily, and doubtless regretfully, confessed that they themselves were “strangers and pilgrims on the earth.” That is, they regretted that the earth was not more righteous, so that they would not be “strangers and pilgrims.”

verse 14 This promise that the City of Zion shall return, and that holy men of all ages, in their resurrected state, shall dwell therein, will have millennial fulfillment. Of that glorious day, the Lord said unto Enoch: “Then shalt thou and all thy city meet them there, and we will receive them into our bosom, and they shall see us; and we will fall upon their necks, and they shall fall upon our necks, and we will kiss each other; And there shall be mine abode, and it shall be Zion, which shall come forth out of all the creations which I have made; and for the space of a thousand years the earth shall rest” (Moses 7:63-64).

In giving revealed direction to Noah, the Lord said: “Remember the everlasting covenant, which I made unto thy father Enoch; that, when men should keep all my commandments, Zion should again come on the earth, the city of Enoch, which I have caught up unto myself. And this is mine everlasting covenant, that when thy posterity shall embrace the truth, and look upward, then shall Zion look downward, and all the heavens shall shake with gladness, and the earth shall tremble with joy; And the general assembly of the church of the first-born shall come down out of heaven, and possess the earth, and shall have place until the end come. And this is mine everlasting covenant, which I made with thy father Enoch” (JST, Genesis 9:21-23). All who have received the fulness of the gospel and its ordinances have received this same promise made to the patriarchs. We are the “children of the promise” made to the fathers.

verses 15-16a (to the colon) The Lord is addressing the saints in 1831.

15 Wherefore, hearken and I will reason with you, and I will speak unto you and prophesy, as unto men in days of old.

verse 15 “I will speak unto you and prophesy, as unto men in days of old”

God is willing to give us the same covenant promises and the same gospel that he gave to Adam, Enoch, Noah, Abraham, and so on. If we are faithful to our covenants, we will, according to the promises of God, be like the ancient saints. That is, we will be patriarchs (and matriarchs) of an innumerable posterity in a glorious promised land, the celestial kingdom. This promise is guaranteed to us by the same gospel covenants that were given our ancient fathers. God is willing, and even anxious, to deal with each of us as he dealt with Adam and Eve or with Abraham and Sarah. All that was ever available to them is available to us through the restoration of the gospel. Thus, God is the same in his dealings with human beings yesterday, today, and forever (Hebrews 13:8).

16a And I will show it plainly as I showed it unto my disciples as I stood before them in the flesh, and spake unto them, saying:

verse 16a “I will show it plainly” Beginning with this verse, the Lord begins to tell the latter-day Church what he told his ancient disciples when they asked him about the details of his second coming. The “it” the Lord will show us is the “day of righteousness” (verse 12) that will begin with his return to the earth at his second coming.

verses 16b-59 He is now speaking to his disciples on the Mount of Olives. This quotation begins following the colon which follows the word saying and extends to the end of verse 59, excepting the editorial comment in verse 34 and the first five words of verse 35 (compare JS-M in the Pearl of Great Price).

16b As ye have asked of me concerning the signs of my coming, in the day when I shall come in my glory in the clouds of heaven, to fulfil the promises that I have made unto your fathers, verse 16b The Lord’s citation of the Olivet discourse, the same as is contained in Matthew 24 and 25 and in Joseph Smith–Matthew, begins in this verse with the words “As ye have asked of me.” The Savior interrupts the quotation after verse 33 to make an explanatory comment (which includes verse 34 and the first five words of verse 35) but continues it in verse 35 with “Be not troubled.” He seems to end the account at the end of verse 59 and begins speaking directly to Joseph Smith in verse 60.

“in the clouds of heaven” This phrase is a reference to the prophecy in Daniel 7:13, where Daniel saw in a dream the end of the world and the second coming of Christ.

“to fulfil the promises that I have made unto your fathers” All the promises of the gospel will be fulfilled for the righteous at their glorious resurrection, which takes place at the Lord’s second coming.

17 For as ye have looked upon the long absence of your spirits from your bodies to be a bondage, I will show unto you how the day of redemption shall come, and also the restoration of the scattered Israel.

verses 16-17 “ye have looked upon the long absence of your spirits from your bodies to be a bondage” By the time of the Lord’s second coming, the righteous dead, including many of Jesus’s ancient disciples, will look upon their time in the spirit world without their bodies as a severe limitation (see also D&C 138:50). While spirits in paradise are without pain, they cannot accomplish many things that can be done only with a body. A body of flesh and bones is not, as in Greek philosophical thought, a limitation. Rather, it is an enabling factor. It is ability, potency, and power, and we will dearly miss its use in the spirit world where we will be temporarily deprived of that means to effect, to create, and to accomplish.

“the day of redemption” This phrase refers to the day when we actually return to our physical bodies and receive celestial, terrestrial, or telestial glory. This redemption or salvation puts us, as Joseph Smith taught, beyond the reach of all of our enemies which are death, hell, and the devil (see the commentary for 2 Nephi 28:23).

“the restoration of the scattered Israel” The Lord’s apostles were anxious to know the signs of the Lord’s second coming because they understood that a major resurrection of the righteous would occur at that time. They were anxious to know how long they would have to wait after their deaths until their resurrection. We actually know that the resurrection of the righteous, the “morning of the first resurrection,” begins at the time of the Savior’s resurrection. While some of the righteous dead may be resurrected between the Savior’s resurrection and his second coming, many of the righteous dead will have to wait until his coming just prior to the Millennium to be resurrected. His apostles were also aware that the Lord’s second coming would not occur until after the final gathering of Israel, “the restoration of the scattered Israel.”

verses 18-24 The Lord is speaking to his disciples about events that would happen in their own day. These include the tribulations that will fall upon Jerusalem and its people in the first century AD. We now know that all of these prophecies were all fulfilled with the events surrounding the devastating Roman destruction of Jerusalem in AD 70.

18 And now ye behold this temple which is in Jerusalem, which ye call the house of God, and your enemies say that this house shall never fall.

19 But, verily I say unto you, that desolation shall come upon this generation as a thief in the night, and this people shall be destroyed and scattered among all nations.

verse 19 “desolation shall come upon this generation” A place is made desolate by being turned into a wasteland without inhabitants. A person is made desolate by being left alone without companions or comfort. The people of “this generation,” that is, the Jews of the second half of the first century, will be made desolate as individuals, and their homes and cities will become desolate places. An incredibly large number of Jews will die (Josephus said it was over a million—Josephus, The Jewish War, 450), and many of the remainder will be driven out or sold as slaves into all corners of the world. Their temple will be destroyed so thoroughly that not one stone would be left standing upon another (see verse 20).

“this people shall be destroyed” In AD 68, the Roman general Vespasian and his son Titus took a large Roman army into Israel to subdue rebellious Judah. In AD 70 Titus surrounded Jerusalem and placed it under siege. Soon the starvation of the Jews inside the walls of Jerusalem began. Citizens of Jerusalem who ventured outside the walls to search for roots to eat, if seized, were crucified by the Roman soldiers. Sometimes hundreds of Jews hanging on crosses could be seen from the city walls. A trench was dug around the city in order to make its isolation complete. Prisoners of war were cut open, while still alive, to enable soldiers to search their bodies for gold which they might have swallowed. Six hundred thousand persons died within the walls, and the dead bodies, too numerous to be buried, were left in the houses. The Zealots, a fanatical sect whose members maintained that God would save them at the last moment, went about murdering and urging the people to resistance. Within the walls of the Holy City, rival political factions stole the possessions of citizens and the food from the mouths of women and children. Pressed by the famine, mothers ate their babies. In their madness, the political gangs fought and killed each other for control of the city and even burned each other’s food supplies, all while the common enemy, the Romans, waited outside the walls for the inevitable (Ibid., 387-401, 416-17). Even Titus was sick at heart at the daily horrors he witnessed or heard about. At length the temple became a fort. Titus attacked it as such. A Roman soldier, contrary to order, set fire to it. After a while the scene was one of carnage and plunder. Six thousand Jews perished in the flames. In this awful war more than a million and a half of the Jews perished, and many were sold into slavery.

Like the generation before the Flood, the generation of the Babylonian conquest, and the generations at the end of the Jaredite and Nephite societies, so was the generation of the first Jewish revolt. Because the people had become ripe in iniquity, the Spirit of the Lord had ceased striving with them, and Satan had full power over their hearts. Drunk with their own sins and with anger and rage, they could not be reached, would not repent, and were sealed up to destruction.

“and scattered among all nations” Just as the lost ten tribes had been taken into bondage and scattered eight hundred years previously, the Jews will be dispersed among every nation on earth. Today, the dispersed of Israel in many cases are not even aware of their Israelite heritage, having been absorbed ethnically and culturally by the nations in which they dwell.

20 And this temple which ye now see shall be thrown down that there shall not be left one stone upon another.

21 And it shall come to pass, that this generation of Jews shall not pass away until every desolation which I have told you concerning them shall come to pass.

verses 21 The Savior spoke the words of the Olivet discourse during the last week of his life. Jerusalem fell in AD 70. Thus, his promise “that this generation of Jews shall not pass away until every desolation . . . shall come to pass” was fulfilled. Some of the disciples who heard Jesus speak those words were still alive when the legions of Titus put the temple to the torch.

Actually, a “generation” is a notoriously difficult measure of time to define. Is a generation (1) twelve to sixteen years, the biological minimum; (2) twenty years, an average for birth of a firstborn; (3) thirty years, the average age difference between most parents and children; (4) seventy years, the biblical human life span; or (5) a hundred plus years, the length of the longest individual life within a generation? Whenever the Lord gives a warning that “this generation shall not pass away,” it is better to repent immediately and avoid the vagaries of the definition of a “generation.” There exists even the possibility, however, that “this generation” can even refer to this dispensation. When the term is used, for example, in D&C 84:4, it could mean anytime between the restoration of the gospel and the Lord’s second coming.

22 Ye say that ye know that the end of the world cometh; ye say also that ye know that the heavens and the earth shall pass away;

verse 22 “the end of the world” By now, the reader knows that the phrase “end of the world” coincides with the second coming of the Savior. Elder Bruce R. McConkie explained:

The end of the world is the end of unrighteousness or of worldliness as we know it, and this will be brought about by “the destruction of the wicked.” When our world ends and the millennial era begins, there will be a new heaven and a new earth (Isaiah 65:17-25; D&C 101:23-24). Lust, carnality, and sensuousness of every sort will cease, for it will be the end of the world (Mormon Doctrine, 848).

We thus learn that the scriptural phrase “end of the world” refers to the destruction of the earth at the Lord’s second coming in glory.

“the heavens and the earth shall pass away” The phrase “end of the earth” (in this case “the earth shall pass away”) refers to the destruction and celestialization of the earth at the end of the Millennium.

23 And in this ye say truly, for so it is; but these things which I have told you shall not pass away until all shall be fulfilled.

verse 23 “until all shall be fulfilled” The Lord has prophesied of the latter-day restoration of the gospel and the establishment of Zion, the fall of Jerusalem, the destruction of the temple in Jerusalem, and the destruction and scattering of the Jewish people. All of these will transpire before the second coming of the Lord.

24 And this I have told you concerning Jerusalem; and when that day shall come, shall a remnant be scattered among all nations; verse 24 “shall a remnant be scattered among all nations” Those Jews who escape the great destructions of AD 70—“a remnant”—shall be scattered among all nations. In AD 70, the blood of the “Jews” would have been carried into the world mainly through those of the tribes of Judah, Benjamin, and Levi.

verses 25-50 Prior to the Lord’s second coming there are to be given signs to warn the people of this advent and invite all to repent. These are called “signs of the times.” These will occur in such a way that only those who are watching for them in faith and have the Spirit will recognize them for what they are. Those who do not have the Spirit will rationalize them away and will find alternative explanations for the Lord’s signs. “And unto you it shall be given to know the signs of the times” (D&C 68:11). Later on, the signs of the Lord’s coming will serve not only to warn, but also to punish and cleanse. For a relatively thorough discussion of the signs of the times, please see three chapters in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine volume 3: chapter 24, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

25 But they shall be gathered again; but they shall remain until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

verse 25 The Jews shall be eventually gathered again, but they shall remain scattered until the time of the Gentiles be fulfilled. It would appear that the gathering of the Jews will occur in two phases. There will be a physical gathering to the land of Palestine. This has already begun and is, in fact, well underway. This verse, however, refers to the priesthood gathering or the gathering of the Jews to the Savior and to his gospel and earthly kingdom. This will not commence until “the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.”

In order to understand the meaning of the phrase “the times of the Gentiles” or “days of the Gentiles” (2 Nephi 27:1), one must first understand the meaning of the concept of the “great Gentile nation.” Any nation that does not have the Messiah as its king is a Gentile nation. The “great Gentile nation” seen in prophecy is the United States of America. The “times of the Gentiles” is the latter-day period when only Gentile nations exist on the earth before the beginning of the Millennium. The fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ in that latter day will be in the hands of the missionaries of the great Gentile nation—the missionaries of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. Through the efforts of these “Gentile” missionaries, the gospel will be disseminated to those of the house of Israel wherever they may be found throughout the world. The “times of the Gentiles” will also be a time of universal apostasy and much wickedness. The “fulfillment of the times of the Gentiles” will be when the Lord Jesus Christ takes control of the secular government of the earth and there are no more “Gentile governments.” The actual fulfillment of the “times of the Gentiles” will apparently occur when the Lord, some time before his second coming in glory, sets his foot on the Mount of Olives to rescue the Jews from a great marauding force. The mount will cleave in twain. The Lord will show unto the Jews the wounds in his hands and in his feet. At that moment the Jews will realize that Jesus is the Messiah. The Jews will experience great remorse and will repent and accept Christ and his gospel and his Church. This event will mark the fulfillment of the times of the Gentiles, and it will usher in the “day of the Jew.”

A simpler criterion for the end of the “times of the Gentiles” is when the Gentile nations of all the world have had their fair chance to accept or reject the gospel. At that time it will be taken from them and will go once again to the children of Judah

The Lord said, “But many [that are] first shall be last; and the last [shall be] first” (Matthew 19:30). During the days of the mortal Christ and his apostles the gospel was taken first to the Jews and then to the Gentiles. In this dispensation the order is reversed. The gospel is taken first to the Gentiles and then to the Jews.

The question is often asked, “Has the gathering of the Jews to their promised land begun?” Just as the scattering of a people occurs because of apostasy, so does gathering occur because of repentance and acceptance of Christ and his gospel. By this criterion, and as discussed above, one might argue that the real prophesied gathering of the Jews has not yet commenced. Yet who can doubt that the spirit of gathering has begun to move upon the Jews scattered throughout all parts of the world. Elder George Q. Morris said in conference:

This statement by a writer is very interesting: “Strangely enough when the State of Israel was reborn in 1948, it was a nation of 600,000, the same number which the Bible reports that Moses led out of bondage in Egypt. It now numbers some two million, the same number which it is said populated the ancient kingdom of Solomon, when Israel was in all its glory.” That is why we may now say that the Jews have returned to Palestine (CR, April 1960, 100-01).

26 And in that day shall be heard of wars and rumors of wars, and the whole earth shall be in commotion, and men’s hearts shall fail them, and they shall say that Christ delayeth his coming until the end of the earth.

verse 26 “in that day” This phrase refers to that day, time, or generation in which the times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled (compare verse 30).

“wars and rumors of wars” As we approach the end of the times of the Gentiles and come closer to the second coming of Christ, social and political conditions on the earth will deteriorate and the earth will become a very dangerous place.

“men’s hearts shall fail them” People will become disheartened; there will be widespread despair, discouragement, despondency, and depression.

27 And the love of men shall wax cold, and iniquity shall abound.

verses 27 “the love of men shall wax cold” As we approach the end of the world, we can expect natural human affection to decrease outside of Zion. Practical evidences of this loss might include an increase in spouse and child abuse, an increase in divorce rates, an increase in abortion, and a decrease in parental responsibility toward their children. Traditional families will cease to be the norm or even to be valued.

28 And when the times of the Gentiles is come in, a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness, and it shall be the fulness of my gospel; verse 28 “when the times of the Gentiles is come in” The Lord now goes back and summarizes again, in verses 28-30, the “times of the Gentiles.” They began with the restoration of the gospel. The expression “a light shall break forth among them that sit in darkness” has reference to the restoration of the gospel.

29 But they receive it not; for they perceive not the light, and they turn their hearts from me because of the precepts of men.

verse 29 “they receive it not” This phrase has reference to the majority of the world, those “that sit in darkness.”

30 And in that generation shall the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled.

verse 30 The times of the Gentiles will be fulfilled when the latter-day Church has completed its mission to take the gospel to every nation and when the majority of Gentiles have rejected it in favor of “the precepts of men.”

verse 31 “an overflowing scourge; for a desolating sickness shall cover the land” It is probably fair to say that it is not possible to speculate as yet as to what this “desolating sickness” might be. A careful reading of this verse in association with the prior verse places this “overflowing scourge” in the generation in which the time of the Gentiles are fulfilled which has not happened as yet. Because of our experience, here on earth, with the devastating effects of AIDS, we can well imagine the occurrence of an awful plague.

Elsewhere in the Doctrine and Covenants we are taught that this scourge “shall continue to be poured out from time to time, if they repent not, until the earth is empty” (D&C 5:19), and that “it shall not be stayed until the Lord come” (D&C 97:23; see also D&C 84:97). Whatever the scourge is to be, the prophecy of its arrival cannot be fulfilled until after the gospel has been taught in every nation and to every kindred, tongue, and people, and the Gentiles have rejected it. Nor can this prophecy be deemed fulfilled until the sickness has covered the whole land and left it “desolated,” which our contemporary diseases have not yet done.

It is possible, I suppose, that the “scourge” spoken of could include such non-biological plagues as some form of wickedness, crime, war, or utter despair that will descend upon Babylon at the end (see Zechariah 14:12, 15, 18, in which the plague is said to consume the flesh of the wicked at the last day).

32 But my disciples shall stand in holy places, and shall not be moved; but among the wicked, men shall lift up their voices and curse God and die.

verse 32 “But my disciples shall stand in holy places” Where is safety? in the latter-day Kingdom of God.

President Ezra Taft Benson defined “holy places”: “Holy men and holy women stand in holy places, and these holy places include our temples, our chapels, our homes, and the stakes of Zion, which are, as the Lord declares, ‘for a defense, and for a refuge from the storm, and from wrath when it shall be poured out without mixture upon the whole earth’ (D&C 115:6)” (“Prepare Yourselves for the Great Day of the Lord,” 68).

33 And there shall be earthquakes also in divers places, and many desolations; yet men will harden their hearts against me, and they will take up the sword, one against another, and they will kill one another.

verse 33 “there shall be earthquakes also in divers places, and many desolations” As the end approaches, disasters that leave the land desolate, such as earthquakes, famines, floods, droughts, storms, and wars, will increase. Yet, as in the days of Noah, the people will not listen, but will thirst all the more for wickedness and violence.

After this verse the Lord interrupts his citation of the Olivet discourse for an explanation contained in the next verse. He then resumes the discourse in verse 35 with “Be not troubled.”

34 And now, when I the Lord had spoken these words unto my disciples, they were troubled.

35 And I said unto them: Be not troubled, for, when all these things shall come to pass, ye may know that the promises which have been made unto you shall be fulfilled.

verse 35 “Be not troubled” Those saints who are obedient and prepared can well afford to be calm and serene in the coming turmoil.

“ye may know” The occurrence of all the promised curses and plagues upon the wicked will be a testimony to the faithful that the promised blessings will also come and that the end is very near.

36 And when the light shall begin to break forth, it shall be with them like unto a parable which I will show you—

37 Ye look and behold the fig-trees, and ye see them with your eyes, and ye say when they begin to shoot forth, and their leaves are yet tender, that summer is now nigh at hand;

verse 37 “And as [Jesus] sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what [shall be] the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?” (Matthew 24:3). Jesus responded by speaking of certain signs that would indicated the nearness of his coming. Among these signs was the “parable of the fig-tree.” One characteristic of a fig tree is that it does not put forth its leaves until relatively late in the season, long after most trees are in full leaf. The Savior used this feature in a parable concerning his second coming. “Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer [the Savior’s second coming] [is] nigh” (Matthew 24:32). Using the parable of the fig-tree, President Spencer W. Kimball made a prophetic pronouncement: “The leaves are commencing to show on the fig tree” (Ensign, May 1976, 74).

38 Even so it shall be in that day when they shall see all these things, then shall they know that the hour is nigh.

39 And it shall come to pass that he that feareth me shall be looking forth for the great day of the Lord to come, even for the signs of the coming of the Son of Man.

verse 39 “he that feareth me shall be looking forth for the great day of the Lord to come” Those who reverence the Lord will be looking forward to the second coming—they will want it to come. For them the Lord’s second coming will be deliverance from the wickedness of the fallen world of Babylon. The signs leading up to his coming will only be perceived as such by those who respond to the Spirit of God. Thus, only those who look forward to his coming and are worthy to respond to the promptings of the Spirit will recognize the signs of his coming and understand them for what they are. Again, if the reader wishes to review a rather comprehensive review of this topic, please see the reference above to the three chapters in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3 (see the commentary for verse 24).

40 And they shall see signs and wonders, for they shall be shown forth in the heavens above, and in the earth beneath.

41 And they shall behold blood, and fire, and vapors of smoke.

42 And before the day of the Lord shall come, the sun shall be darkened, and the moon be turned into blood, and the stars fall from heaven.

43 And the remnant shall be gathered unto this place;

verse 43 This verse refers to the remnant of the Jewish people who have been scattered throughout the world. By the time of his second coming, these Jews shall have begun to gather “unto this place,” that is, to the place where Jesus spoke these words to his disciples—in Old Jerusalem.

44 And then they shall look for me, and, behold, I will come; and they shall see me in the clouds of heaven, clothed with power and great glory; with all the holy angels; and he that watches not for me shall be cut off.

verse 44 “then they shall look for me” The antecedent for they is the “remnant” described in verse 43 who fear God and are looking for the coming of their Messiah but do not yet know that their longed-for Messiah is Jesus Christ. The Jews have the prophecies of the Old Testament concerning the last days and the coming of the Messiah. They will recognize some of the signs and will be looking for his coming. Then they will see him coming in the clouds of heaven, and the prophecy of Jesus to the Jews in Matthew 26:64 will be fulfilled: “Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven.”

45 But before the arm of the Lord shall fall, an angel shall sound his trump, and the saints that have slept shall come forth to meet me in the cloud.

verse 45 “before the arm of the Lord shall fall” Before the judgment of the Lord falls upon the wicked. Before this mighty judgment upon the world, the archangel Michael will sound his trumpet (see D&C 29:13, 26) and the righteous, both living and dead, will be lifted up off of the earth to meet Christ in the air (see also D&C 88:96-98; 133:56; 1 Thessalonians 4:15-17).

46 Wherefore, if ye have slept in peace blessed are you; for as you now behold me and know that I am, even so shall ye come unto me and your souls shall live, and your redemption shall be perfected; and the saints shall come forth from the four quarters of the earth.

verse 46 “if ye have slept in peace blessed are you” Those righteous dead who enjoyed the peaceful rest of paradise between death and resurrection, as opposed to suffering for their sins in hell, will come forth from the four quarters of the earth. They will be resurrected (their “redemption shall be perfected”) and raised up to meet Christ in the air at his coming.

47 Then shall the arm of the Lord fall upon the nations.

verse 47 Once the saints, both living and dead, have been raised up to meet the Lord, the judgment of the Lord will fall upon the earth and the wicked who remain upon it.

This passage, like most others dealing with the last days, leaves ambiguous the fate of those mortals who are worthy of terrestrial glory but not of celestial glory when the Savior comes. Since the millennial earth will possess a terrestrial glory, however, and since the terrestrial are referred to elsewhere as “Christ’s at his coming” (D&C 88:99) and as being resurrected in the first resurrection (see verse 54), though not in the “morning of the first resurrection,” it is possible that the living who are worthy of a terrestrial glory will also be protected at the moment of his coming in glory.

Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:

Some members of the Church have an erroneous idea that when the millennium comes all of the people are going to be swept off the earth except righteous members of the Church. That is not so. There will be millions of people—Catholics, Protestants, agnostics, Mohammedans, people of all classes and of all beliefs—still permitted to remain upon the face of the earth, but they will be those who have lived clean lives, those who have been free from wickedness and corruption. All who belong, by virtue of their good lives, to the terrestrial order, as well as those who have kept the celestial law, will remain upon the face of the earth during the millennium (Doctrines of Salvation, 1:86).

48 And then shall the Lord set his foot upon this mount, and it shall cleave in twain, and the earth shall tremble, and reel to and fro, and the heavens also shall shake.

verse 48 “this mount” This phrase refers to the Mount of Olives on which the Savior was sitting when he gave this great discourse. Parley P. Pratt, in a pamphlet published while Joseph Smith was still alive, described the great events depicted here:

Zechariah, chapter 14, has told us much concerning the great battle and overthrow of the nations who fight against Jerusalem, and he has said, in plain words, that the Lord shall come at the very time of the overthrow of that army; yet, in fact even while they are in the act of taking Jerusalem, and have already succeeded in taking one-half the city, spoiling their houses and ravishing their women. Then, behold, their long-expected Messiah, suddenly appearing, shall stand upon the Mount of Olives, a little east of Jerusalem, to fight against those nations and deliver the Jews. Zechariah says the Mount of Olives shall cleave in twain, from east to west, and one-half of the mountain shall remove to the north while the other half falls off to the south, suddenly forming a very great valley into which the Jews shall flee for protection from their enemies as they fled from the earthquake in the days of Uzziah, king of Judah; while the Lord cometh and all the saints with him. Then will the Jews behold that long, long-expected Messiah, coming in power to their deliverance, as they always looked for him. He will destroy their enemies and deliver them from trouble at the very time they are in the utmost consternation, and about to be swallowed up by their enemies. But what will be their astonishment when they are about to fall at the feet of their Deliverer and acknowledge him their Messiah! They discover the wounds which were once made in his hands, feet, and side; and on inquiry, at once recognize Jesus of Nazareth, the King of the Jews, the man so long rejected. Well did the prophet say that they shall mourn and weep, every family apart, and their wives apart. But, thank heaven, there will be an end to their mourning; for he will forgive their iniquities and cleanse them from uncleanness. Jerusalem shall be a holy city from that time forth, and all the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon. She shall be lifted up and inhabited in her place, and men shall dwell there. There shall be no more utter destruction of Jerusalem, “And the Lord shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one Lord, and his name one” (Zechariah 14:9) (Voice of Warning, 32-33).

49 And the Lord shall utter his voice, and all the ends of the earth shall hear it; and the nations of the earth shall mourn, and they that have laughed shall see their folly.

verse 49 This verse hints at the anguish, despair, and self reproach of the wicked just prior to their destruction at the return of the Lord.

50 And calamity shall cover the mocker, and the scorner shall be consumed; and they that have watched for iniquity shall be hewn down and cast into the fire.

verse 50 The wicked will then be consumed by burning, and the earth will be purified by fire to render it a fit habitation for Christ and his saints.

“they that have watched for iniquity” Perhaps this refers to those who keep their eyes open for the opportunity to commit (and materially benefit from) sin, who watch for their chance at wickedness and take it when it comes.

51 And then shall the Jews look upon me and say: What are these wounds in thine hands and in thy feet?

52 Then shall they know that I am the Lord; for I will say unto them: These wounds are the wounds with which I was wounded in the house of my friends. I am he who was lifted up. I am Jesus that was crucified. I am the Son of God.

53 And then shall they weep because of their iniquities; then shall they lament because they persecuted their king.

verses 51-53 These verses describe the long-awaited collective repentance and conversion of the Jews. This is not repentance for the death of Christ, for these Jews are not guilty of that. Rather, it is the same repentance that all who come to Christ must experience. Though a few individual Jews have joined the Church since its founding in 1830, the mass conversion described in scripture will not take place, nor will the gathering of Israel be completed, until after the coming of the Lord. When the Gentile nations have heard and rejected the gospel and the world is ripe in iniquity, then the times of the Gentiles will be over, the Savior will return, and the Jews will be converted and redeemed. But this great mass conversion will await the personal appearance of Christ to the Jews in Jerusalem.

54 And then shall the heathen nations be redeemed, and they that knew no law shall have part in the first resurrection; and it shall be tolerable for them.

verse 54 “then shall the heathen nations be redeemed” The saints of God, those who will inherit his celestial kingdom, will be resurrected before Christ descends from the heavens to the earth and before the wicked are punished (see verses 45-48). Then after the resurrection of the celestial saints, and after the Savior descends to the Mount of Olives (see verse 48), and after his arm has fallen upon the wicked to destroy them (see verse 47), and after he has conversed with and converted the Jews at Jerusalem (see verses 51-53), then the resurrection of terrestrial—“heathen”—dead will take place (see also D&C 88:99) in what might be called the “afternoon” of the first resurrection. But it is still the first resurrection during which they will be raised and not the second or last resurrection (for the wicked) at the end of the thousand years (see Revelation 20:5-6).

Generally the scriptures divide the world into just two categories—Jews and Gentiles (or heathens). The Bible translates the same words, goyim in Hebrew and ethnikoi in Greek, variously as either “the Gentiles,” “the nations,” or “the heathen.” In this last dispensation, however, it is possible to further divide the Gentile nations into “Christian nations”—those Gentile nations who have some knowledge of Jesus Christ—and “heathen nations”—those Gentile nations who have no knowledge of Christ (McConkie, Mormon Doctrine, 346-47). This is the distinction intended here by the use of “the heathen nations” (compare D&C 90:10). These heathen nations, who know nothing of Christ or of his commandments, are also referred to as they who “have sinned without the law” (D&C 76:72), or “the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited . . . who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it” (D&C 76:73-74).

The common denominator for all these descriptions is the idea that as a general rule and because of their ignorance, these peoples may be judged more leniently for their transgressions than either Israel or the so-called Christian nations. Because they didn’t have the Lord’s commandments, the heathen will be less likely to be judged “wicked” than will members of the Church or other Christians who knew and rejected the commandments. Thus, this particular verse holds out much greater hope for the unbaptized heathen than did the majority of Christian churches in 1831, most of whom taught that the unconverted “heathen” burned in hell forever and ever.

It should carefully noted that being a members of a heathen nation does not dictate an inheritance in any particular kingdom of glory. While there may be a general pattern for the majority of those in the heathen nations to inherit terrestrial glory, those in the heathen nations have just as much chance for celestial glory as the Jews or anyone else, and perhaps even more. Each man will be judged on his own merits. The critical considerations, as we have discussed previously, are threefold: (1) what spiritual progress an individual has made prior to coming to earth; (2) the circumstances encountered during mortality; and (3) the amount of spiritual progress or growth the individual makes here on earth (for a more complete discussion of this important concept, see the commentary for 2 Nephi 1:18). There will always be many exceptions to any general pattern or rule. We know, for example, that those individuals who lived and died without even hearing gospel will be judged as if they had heard the gospel and had an opportunity to live it. Those who would have received it and endured in it, had they had the opportunity, will be raised up to the celestial kingdom of God (D&C 137:5-9). Each man will be perfectly-fairly judged by an all-knowing and loving Savior.

“and it shall be tolerable for them” Once every man has received his final reward, whether it be celestial, terrestrial, or telestial, he will ultimately find it “tolerable.” We can be assured that every man will be comfortable with his final reward. It will be where he belongs—an environment to which he is completely well suited. He will live among those with whom he is comfortable.

55 And Satan shall be bound, that he shall have no place in the hearts of the children of men.

verse 55 “Satan shall be bound” During the thousand years, Satan’s influence will be nullified. See the commentary for D&C 43:31.

56 And at that day, when I shall come in my glory, shall the parable be fulfilled which I spake concerning the ten virgins.

verse 56 Though many people think the Olivet discourse is limited to Matthew 24, a careful reading of Matthew 25 clearly shows that the three parables given there (the parable of the ten virgins, the parable of the talents, and the parable of the sheep and the goats) were part of the same discourse (note especially Matthew 25:1, 31).

verses 57-59 Prior to studying these next three verses, the reader is urged to review the discussion of the parable of the ten virgins in the introductory commentary for section 33.

57 For they that are wise and have received the truth, and have taken the Holy Spirit for their guide, and have not been deceived—verily I say unto you, they shall not be hewn down and cast into the fire, but shall abide the day.

verse 57 “abide the day” This phrase means to survive that particular day, the day of destruction at Christ’s second coming.

58 And the earth shall be given unto them for an inheritance; and they shall multiply and wax strong, and their children shall grow up without sin unto salvation.

verse 58 “the earth shall be given unto them for an inheritance” This phrase might refer to one of two things. First, it may suggest that the “wise virgins” represent both the celestial and terrestrial people who will not be hewn down at the Lord’s second coming and will inherit the millennial earth as a place of abode. Secondly, it may refer to the wise virgins as those celestial beings whose ultimate inheritance will be the celestialized earth.

59 For the Lord shall be in their midst, and his glory shall be upon them, and he will be their king and their lawgiver.

verse 59 The Lord ends his citation of the Olivet discourse after this verse, and he begins speaking to Joseph Smith in the following verse.

verses 60-75 The Lord gives counsel to our own dispensation through the Prophet Joseph. The description of the latter-day Zion in verses 66 through 71 makes it sound much like the Zion of Enoch.

60 And now, behold, I say unto you, it shall not be given unto you to know any further concerning this chapter, until the New Testament be translated, and in it all these things shall be made known;

verse 60 Until March 7, 1831, the date of Joseph's receiving section 45, Joseph and Sidney had worked on the JST for the book of Genesis only. Here in verses 60-61 the Lord invites them to begin work on the New Testament. The translation of Joseph Smith–Matthew (Matthew 23:39 through Matthew 24) began the next day, March 8, 1831 which indicates the importance the Prophet Joseph placed upon the work. See the supplemental article, Joseph Smith's Inspired Revision of the Bible.

“this chapter” This phrase likely refers to Matthew 24 which, of course is now found in the Pearl of Great Price as JS-M.

“in it all these things shall be made known” The antecedent of it is the JST of the New Testament, especially Joseph's translation of Matthew 24. This particular chapter, Joseph Smith–Matthew, does indeed reveal details of Christ's prophecies to his disciples about the second coming, details that were lost between the first century and 1831. The information found there was intended specifically for the saints of the latter days in order to prepare them for what was coming.

61 Wherefore I give unto you that ye may now translate it, that ye may be prepared for the things to come.

62 For verily I say unto you, that great things await you;

63 Ye hear of wars in foreign lands; but, behold, I say unto you, they are nigh, even at your doors, and not many years hence ye shall hear of wars in your own lands.

verse 63 “ye shall hear of wars in your own lands” This prophecy undoubtedly refers to the Civil War, at this time still thirty years away, and perhaps also to other wars we have not yet experienced (see D&C 38:29-32; 87:1-8).

verses 64-75 The tribulations and judgments that will be poured out upon the world prior to the second coming will be so extensive and devastating that if the Lord did not prepare a means of preservation, his people too would perish. But he has prepared a means for his people to escape those terrible times. That means is Zion, a place of safety, peace, and refuge.

The Prophet Joseph understood this doctrine, for he also taught that Zion was the place of deliverance in the last days:

Without Zion, and a place of deliverance, we must fall, because the time is near when the sun will be darkened, and the moon turn to blood, and the stars fall from heaven, and the earth reel to and fro. Then, if this is the case, and if we are not sanctified and gathered to the places God has appointed, with all our former professions and our great love for the Bible, we must fall. We cannot stand. We cannot be saved, for God will gather out his saints from the Gentiles, and then comes desolation and destruction, and none can escape except the pure in heart who are gathered (TPJS, 71).

64 Wherefore I, the Lord, have said, gather ye out from the eastern lands, assemble ye yourselves together ye elders of my church; go ye forth into the western countries, call upon the inhabitants to repent, and inasmuch as they do repent, build up churches unto me.

verse 64 “western countries” The safety of the saints lay in moving from their eastern homes in New York and Pennsylvania and gathering to the West—Ohio, Missouri, and eventually the Great Basin of Utah. The saints did not actually establish a Zion in Missouri though it will soon be designated as the location of Zion (see D&C 57:1-3). Through following the prophet Brigham Young to the mountains of the West, the saints were spared the desolating slaughter of the Civil War.

65 And with one heart and with one mind, gather up your riches that ye may purchase an inheritance which shall hereafter be appointed unto you.

verse 65 “purchase an inheritance” Here the Lord makes it clear to the saints how they are to acquire lands in “the western countries” to establish Zion. They are to “gather up” their riches and buy the lands.

66 And it shall be called the New Jerusalem, a land of peace, a city of refuge, a place of safety for the saints of the Most High God;

verse 66 Zion or the New Jerusalem will be larger than just one city, but the center place will be in Jackson County, Missouri. The Doctrine and Covenants Student Manual explains: “In the scriptures four words seem closely related to the concept of Zion: gathering, preparation, defense, and refuge. The tribulations and judgments that will be poured out upon the world prior to the Lord’s second coming will be so extensive and devastating that if the Lord did not prepare a means of preservation, his people too would perish. But he has prepared a means for his people to escape those terrible times; that means is Zion” (98).

67 And the glory of the Lord shall be there, and the terror of the Lord also shall be there, insomuch that the wicked will not come unto it, and it shall be called Zion.

verse 67 “glory of the Lord . . . terror of the Lord” For the righteous saints, Zion will be glorious, but for its enemies Zion will be terrible. The power of the Lord will terrify all Zion’s enemies so that they will fear to approach her.

verses 68-71 In the period before the coming of the Savior, there will be no peace or security anywhere or with anyone outside of Zion. The rest of the world will become an armed camp, and the whole world will be full of blood and schemes “as it was in the days of Noah” (JS-M 1:41). Those who will neither commit violence nor suffer it must flee to Zion, the only refuge of safety on earth.

68 And it shall come to pass among the wicked, that every man that will not take his sword against his neighbor must needs flee unto Zion for safety.

69 And there shall be gathered unto it out of every nation under heaven; and it shall be the only people that shall not be at war one with another.

70 And it shall be said among the wicked: Let us not go up to battle against Zion, for the inhabitants of Zion are terrible; wherefore we cannot stand.

verses 72-75 In church periodicals before 1844, verses 72-75 were not printed with section 45, even though they did appear in the 1833 Book of Commandments and in the 1835 Doctrine and Covenants. This oddity may have been due to an editorial decision not to reproduce a prohibition that was no longer relevant nor to suggest to the church’s enemies that the saints might be hiding something (see verse 72).

72 And now I say unto you, keep these things from going abroad unto the world until it is expedient in me, that ye may accomplish this work in the eyes of the people, and in the eyes of your enemies, that they may not know your works until ye have accomplished the thing which I have commanded you;

verse 72 “keep these things from going abroad unto the world” It was not yet the right time to publish or preach to the world the things found in this revelation, as they could be misunderstood or distorted and could arouse the anger of the world against the saints more quickly as they tried to establish Zion in Missouri. Those outside of the Church who studied this revelation would realize that they would not be included in Zion, and they may well have regarded the revelation as a threat against them.

73 That when they shall know it, that they may consider these things.

74 For when the Lord shall appear he shall be terrible unto them, that fear may seize upon them, and they shall stand afar off and tremble.

75 And all nations shall be afraid because of the terror of the Lord, and the power of his might. Even so. Amen.

Section 46 Gifts of the Spirit

This section was given March 8, 1831, the day following Joseph's receiving of section 45, in response to two needs or questions that had arisen.

The first question was, exactly who ought to be admitted to sacrament meetings. John Whitmer wrote in his history of the Church: "In the beginning of the Church, while yet in her infancy, the disciples used to exclude unbelievers, which caused some to marvel and converse on this matter because of the things written in the Book of Mormon [3 Nephi 18:22-34]. Therefore the Lord deigned to speak on this subject that his people might come to understanding" (HC, 1:163-64, footnote). In verses 3 through 6 of section 46, the Lord commands that no one who desires to attend be excluded from the "public meetings" of the Church, including sacrament meetings.

The second question concerned a problem of major proportions that arose in the Kirtland area in the spring of 1831. There appeared among the saints a variety of peculiar spiritual manifestations and practices. Prior to Joseph's arrival in Kirtland, the several hundred new converts in Ohio were leaderless. These new converts had joined the Church with little formal instruction and preparation except for a personal witness of its truthfulness. They brought with them considerable baggage—a variety of prior religious experiences and notions. When the four missionaries to the Lamanites left the Kirtland area, they did missionary work among the Quakers (see section 49). They had some success and converted several including Jesse Gause, Reynolds Cahoon, Burr Riggs, and Leman Copley. Once these men became latter-day saints they could no longer remain in the Shaker commune. The only congregation they could turn to was that of the new members in the Kirtland area. Under the influence of these Shaker converts, the worship of the leaderless branch took on the flavor of these erstwhile Quakers.

In the absence of a tempering, authoritative influence, the newly received gospel seemed to act as a catalyst and, like an organism gone wild, peculiar behaviors—both traditional and unique—became epidemic. Prior to his coming to the Ohio, Joseph had sent John Whitmer to preside there. After a short time, John wrote an urgent message to the Prophet that consisted, in summary, of but one word: Help! (The above adapted from James R. Christianson's essay, "And Now Come . . . Let Us Reason Together," Studies in Scripture, Volume One, The Doctrine and Covenants, 201).

As reported by John Whitmer:

Some had visions and knew not what they saw. Some would fancy themselves that they had the sword of Laban and would wield it . . . like an Indian in the act of scalping. Some would slide on the floor . . . like a serpent . . . which they termed sailing in the boat to the Lamanites preaching the gospel (Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith, Lyndon W. Cook, 134).

Parley P. Pratt wrote:

Some very strange spiritual operations were manifested which were disgusting rather than edifying. Some persons would seem to swoon away and make unseemly gestures, and be drawn or disfigured in their countenances. Others would fall into ecstasies and be drawn into contortions, cramps, fits, etc. In short a false and lying spirit seemed to be creeping into the Church (Autobiography, 61).

These weird and unrestrained spiritual excesses were viewed with delight and relish as fodder by an already hostile press, and most of the revelations Joseph received in the spring of 1831 dealt in some way with this problem (sections 46, 49, 50 and 52).

The major theme of section 46 is gifts of the Spirit. Just what is a gift of the Spirit? It would seem that the concept of “gifts of the Spirit” is associated with some confusion in the Church. There are perhaps three different concepts that merit our consideration all of which might fit into the category of “gifts of the Spirit”:

1. Free gifts. It would seem that at times the Lord temporarily grants to individuals upon the earth divine abilities. These are not particularly earned through any special effort or accomplishment by the individual to whom they are given but rather are given to the Church to edify the saints. These same gifts might be given to authorized priesthood holders for the purpose of administering the affairs of the kingdom and in order to move the work along. These gifts are not given as signs to non-believers.

2. Proclivities or “talents” that we brought with us from the premortal world. These were doubtless earned in the premortal world over a long period of time through assiduous effort on the part of each individual who possesses them. We may describe an individual here on earth, for example, as particularly “gifted” in music or art or in a host of other special abilities. These talents were not given as free gifts but were earned gradually “line upon line, precept upon precept.” The individual who earned this type of gift paid the price of assiduous effort and dedication. While the veil between heaven and earth does obscure our memory of these abilities, and to some extent the abilities themselves, the veil is not impenetrable. These abilities, or potential abilities (which is perhaps a better description of their earthly manifestation) do penetrate the veil. We are required to discover them and re-develop them. When we do so, that process is most exciting and fulfilling as these abilities return to us rapidly and with unusual efficacy.

3. The third type of gifts of the Spirit are those attributes of God and Christ that we may receive by personal revelation in return for our obedience to gospel commands. For a more thorough discussion of this type of gift, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 7, Spiritual Growth—Gifts of the Spirit and chapter 8, The Blessings of Spiritual Gifts.

These gifts are the very essence of our spiritual progress. Indeed, there is no spiritual growth without the ministrations of the Spirit and his granting of these gifts of the Spirit. Our growth toward godhood is measured in the summation of spiritual gifts we are able to earn and receive. These gifts provide us the knowledge, understanding, and divine characteristics that we acquire as we strive toward godhood. We can certainly itemize several including a testimony of the Savior, a witness of the restored gospel, a conviction of the plan of salvation, a testimony of the Prophet Joseph and of the modern-day prophet, and love and testimony of the scriptures. Trying to itemize them, however, is an exercise in futility since our spiritual growth is an individual affair and the lessons we must be taught as we grow—the spiritual gifts we must acquire—are legion. Each individual brings with him from the premortal world an individual level of growth, unique strengths, individual weaknesses, and widely varying knowledge. Our growth in mortality must be individually tailored to suit our unique and individual needs. You may need to be granted a spiritual truth by the Spirit only once, while I may need several tellings.

As you consider the gifts mentioned in section 46 and in Article of Faith 7, you must decide for yourself into which of these three categories of gifts of the Spirit each belongs, though it seems to your author that the Lord is mostly speaking of the free gifts described in category (1) above.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 46 Gifts of the Spirit

D&C 46:11-12 Free gifts—to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God.

D&C 46:30 He that asketh in the Spirit asketh according to the will of God; wherefore it is done even as he asketh.

verses 1-7 These verses were apparently given by the Lord to correct what had become the practice of the Church at that time in excluding nonmembers from its services. With this correction, church practice would then agree with the policy described in 3 Nephi 18:22-33 and perhaps also in Moroni 6:7-9.

1 Hearken, O ye people of my church; for verily I say unto you that these things were spoken unto you for your profit and learning.

2 But notwithstanding those things which are written, it always has been given to the elders of my church from the beginning, and ever shall be, to conduct all meetings as they are directed and guided by the Holy Spirit.

verse 2 “notwithstanding those things which are written” Though the scriptures state clearly that nonmembers should not be kept out of meetings of the saints (see 3 Nephi 18:22-33), the Lord teaches that the last word in the meetings is that of the presiding elder and the promptings he receives from the Holy Ghost. The Church is, after all, a “living church” (D&C 1:30), one that receives and responds to the direct revelations of the God granted through the Spirit.

3 Nevertheless ye are commanded never to cast any one out from your public meetings, which are held before the world.

verse 3 The previous verse notwithstanding, here is one principle that must not be violated in sacrament meetings. Certainly, however, any who are disruptive or constitute a danger to those in attendance in the meeting may be asked to leave.

There are, of course, meetings that are not public, such as bishopric and presidency meetings, council meetings, and meetings held in temples. Attendance at these meetings may be controlled.

4 Ye are also commanded not to cast any one who belongeth to the church out of your sacrament meetings; nevertheless, if any have trespassed, let him not partake until he makes reconciliation.

verse 4 “Ye are also commanded not to cast any one who belongeth to the church out of your sacrament meetings” This instruction refers to all members including even those who are disfellowshipped or on probation as well as any who have offended others or who might be deemed unacceptable for any other reason. All members of the Church have a covenant obligation, and therefore a logical right, to attend sacrament meeting—even those who are “out of favor” with their brothers and sisters.

“if any have trespassed, let him not partake” This phrase refers to a member of the Church who attends sacrament meeting who is unrepentantly guilty of serious sin and plans to partake of the sacrament in his sinful and unrepentant state. Elder David O. McKay taught that “to partake of the sacrament unworthily is to take a step toward spiritual death” (CR, October 1929, 14-15). Therefore out of love and concern for the individual, as well as out of duty to maintain the high standards of the Church, presiding authorities should not allow one who is known to be involved in serious sin to partake of the sacrament. It is nothing less than mockery for a person to partake of the sacrament as though renewing sacred promises to keep covenants when that person has no intention of keeping the commandments. A leader who prevents this from happening preserves the sanctity of the ordinance and also protects the would-be partaker from a sin of hypocrisy, mockery, and defiling what is sacred. It therefore is imperative that we each examine ourselves before we partake (1 Corinthians 11:27-29).

5 And again I say unto you, ye shall not cast any out of your sacrament meetings who are earnestly seeking the kingdom—I speak this concerning those who are not of the church.

verse 5 It is, of course, altogether appropriate for investigators of the Church to attend sacrament meetings.

6 And again I say unto you, concerning your confirmation meetings, that if there be any that are not of the church, that are earnestly seeking after the kingdom, ye shall not cast them out.

verse 6 “your confirmation meetings” In the early days of the Church it was common to baptize people on one day and then later to confirm them in a public meeting held specifically for that purpose. Today, it is more common for an individual to be baptized and then be confirmed at least a week later in a sacrament meeting.

7 But ye are commanded in all things to ask of God, who giveth liberally; and that which the Spirit testifies unto you even so I would that ye should do in all holiness of heart, walking uprightly before me, considering the end of your salvation, doing all things with prayer and thanksgiving, that ye may not be seduced by evil spirits, or doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men; for some are of men, and others of devils.

verse 7 “ye are commanded in all things to ask of God” This verse makes it clear that we are to invite the Lord to be involved in all of the affairs of our lives. It is a commandment to do so.

“that which the Spirit testifies unto you” Perhaps the central and overriding theme of section 46 is the importance of following the promptings of the Spirit in all aspects of our lives.

“considering the end of your salvation” This phrase refers to keeping in mind your ultimate goal of salvation—celestial resurrection and exaltation. As we prayerfully live out our lives, we should give careful consideration to how each of our daily choices will affect our exaltation.

“doctrines of devils, or the commandments of men” It is true that false doctrines may simply be examples of how sincere individuals can follow their own intuitions and get things wrong. Or, they may be actually inspired of Satan.

8 Wherefore, beware lest ye are deceived; and that ye may not be deceived seek ye earnestly the best gifts, always remembering for what they are given;

verse 8 Perhaps the most effective protection against our being deceived is to develop the gift of discernment. When we are in constant communication with the Spirit of God, we become adept at recognizing his promptings. The individual who is constantly prayerful, diligent in his callings, and obedient in his personal life does benefit, virtually daily, from communication with the Spirit of God. Whether the Spirit prompts him in his every-day life, grants unto him the special gifts or favors he needs to fulfill his callings, or sanctifies him through bestowing the earned gifts of the Spirit, he learns to know and recognize the Spirit of God. He is seeking earnestly the best gifts—those communicated by the Lord’s Spirit. It is then difficult for a contrary spirit to connect with him, as he recognizes the difference. He has the power of discernment.

Elder Marion G. Romney warned against supernatural manifestations that are not worked by the power of the Holy Ghost:

The world today is full of counterfeits. It has always been so. Away back in the days of Moses, when Aaron’s rod became a serpent, then Pharaoh’s wise men, sorcerers and magicians “cast down every man his rod, and they became serpents” (Exodus 7:11-12). Isaiah warned against seeking “unto them that have familiar spirits, and unto wizards that peep, and that mutter (Isaiah 8:19) (CR, April 1956, 70-71).

9 For verily I say unto you, they are given for the benefit of those who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do; that all may be benefited that seek or that ask of me, that ask and not for a sign that they may consume it upon their lusts.

verse 9 As we speak of gifts of the Spirit in section 46, it seems apparent that we are speaking of those special spiritual blessings and favors the Lord grants to his righteous followers—those “who love me and keep all my commandments, and him that seeketh so to do.” The Lord delights to give these gifts freely to those who seek to build his kingdom and those who are striving to obey and serve him. They are not given as signs to convert the nonbeliever. Rather, they are given to the righteous as a reward for their faith. These are likely fundamentally different from those gifts of the Spirit that constitute our incremental spiritual growth (see the introductory discussion for this revelation).

“and him that seeketh so to do” This profoundly important phrase is the key to our being considered righteous and even “perfect” by the Lord. No one perfectly keeps all the commandment all of the time. In fact we all fall well short of this accomplishment. But the Lord knows us perfectly. He does not expect perfection. What he does expect is earnest and diligent striving.

“not for a sign that they may consume it upon their lusts” The righteous individual who prays for blessings from the Lord and, in fact, succeeds in receiving those blessings, inevitably desires to receive blessings from the Lord for the correct reasons. Most always they desire to bless others in their life or to further the work of the Lord’s earthly kingdom. It is, of course, possible to desire the Lord’s blessings for the wrong reasons. For example, an individual may desire a blessing for the purpose of popularity or influence over others. Or, he may desire a blessing from the Lord to prove to himself that the Lord exists and can give blessings. He may seek after a blessing to prove to all around him that he is worthy of the Lord’s blessings. There are a host of worldly reasons why the proud may desire the blessings of the Lord. We may say that those guilty of pride desire a blessing from the Lord that they may “consume it upon their lusts.” If any person desires blessings in order to benefit themselves, it is unlikely that the blessings will eventually result in the blessing of others.

10 And again, verily I say unto you, I would that ye should always remember, and always retain in your minds what those gifts are, that are given unto the church.

verse 10 The Lord is about to enumerate some of the gifts of the Spirit which he is willing to provide to members of his Church.

11 For all have not every gift given unto them; for there are many gifts, and to every man is given a gift by the Spirit of God.

verse 11 Beginning here, there is a need for the reader to understand which type of gifts are described here in section 46 (see the discussion of the different types of gifts of the Spirit in the introductory commentary for this section).

Certainly we are not speaking here of talents because talents are not given without prior (in the premortal experience) long-term diligent effort to acquire them. They are not given free of charge to any man, let alone guaranteed “to every man.”

And we are likely not speaking of those gifts of the Spirit that are increments of the attributes of God or Christ and the essence of our spiritual growth. Each of this latter type of gifts of the Spirit must be earned through obedience, and they also do not come with any guarantees.

In section 46, we are speaking of those “free” gifts or blessings that are given to the obedient and righteous as rewards for their faith. These gifts may persist with an individual throughout his mortal life, as long as he remains faithful and righteous, or they may be given ad hoc by the Lord for a specific reason or situation, and the need for the particular blessing may pass. It is most interesting in this verse to learn that the Lord intends to give to every righteous man at least one of these free gifts if he seeks for it in the correct manner.

12 To some is given one, and to some is given another, that all may be profited thereby.

verse 12 “that all may be profited thereby” The gifts of the Spirit are distributed one to Brother X, some others to Sister Y, and others still to Brother or Sister Z, so the saints will better understand that we need and depend upon each other. The Lord intends us to join together in one body to complement each other’s strengths and compensate for each other’s weaknesses. Collectively, we possess all necessary gifts. One person may enjoy the gift of healing, and another the gift of knowledge. Sometimes our leaders ask us to do something that seems not to be one of our gifts so we can grow. In this manner, the Church—all of us together as a group of brothers and sisters—possess every necessary gift. And so it follows that we need each other, each of the members needs the whole body (Romans 12:4-5). By design, no single individual is intended to be spiritually self-sufficient.

verses 13-25 The Lord now enumerates several specific gifts of the Spirit.

13 To some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know that Jesus Christ is the Son of God, and that he was crucified for the sins of the world.

verse 13 It is most unlikely that those blessed with this wonderful gift can expect to see the Lord in open vision. They will not possess a knowledge of Jesus Christ that is out of the realm of faith. Faith in or a testimony of the Lord Jesus Christ is the result of the Savior's actually being revealed to an individual by the Holy Ghost. Those with this blessed gift will possess a personal witness or testimony of the Savior that is unusually strong.

14 To others it is given to believe on their words, that they also might have eternal life if they continue faithful.

15 And again, to some it is given by the Holy Ghost to know the differences of administration, as it will be pleasing unto the same Lord, according as the Lord will, suiting his mercies according to the conditions of the children of men.

verse 15 "the differences of administration" This phrase is first used in 1 Corinthians 12:5, where the Greek means "the different kinds of ministries" or "differences in ways of serving." The full sense might be rendered something like "the differences in how God has equipped each of us to serve." To know these differences of administration is to recognize how God has endowed different individuals with different gifts and with different "styles" or ways of doing things. By extension, it follows that church leaders who recognize the differences of God-given gifts and ways of using them among the individual saints will also know how best to utilize these different individuals for the benefit of all. They possess the gift of administering in the affairs of the Church.

16 And again, it is given by the Holy Ghost to some to know the diversities of operations, whether they be of God, that the manifestations of the Spirit may be given to every man to profit withal.

verse 16 "to know the diversities of operations" Again, the Greek behind the parallel at 1 Corinthians 12:6 means the "differences in activities" or the "different kinds of things that go on." It is a gift of the Spirit to be able to see what is really going on around us, to recognize the operation or activity of an influence, movement, or trend, to know what is at work and whether it is of God. Blessed is the flock whose shepherd has this gift.

17 And again, verily I say unto you, to some is given, by the Spirit of God, the word of wisdom.

18 To another is given the word of knowledge, that all may be taught to be wise and to have knowledge.

verses 17-18 “the word of wisdom . . . the word of knowledge” The “word of wisdom” refers to the gift of possessing wisdom and not to the commandment known as the Word of Wisdom.

The “word of knowledge,” in its narrowest sense is merely the ability to assimilate facts or information and to convey that information.

What is the essential difference between knowledge and wisdom? Wisdom is the ability to view, understand, and apply knowledge in its proper long-term perspective—even in its eternal perspective. It is to have both knowledge and judgment, insight, and common sense. It is to be able to apply knowledge for the benefit of oneself and others.

19 And again, to some it is given to have faith to be healed;

20 And to others it is given to have faith to heal.

21 And again, to some is given the working of miracles;

22 And to others it is given to prophesy;

23 And to others the discerning of spirits.

verse 23 “the discerning of spirits” The Greek words behind this phrase in 1 Corinthians 12:10 mean “the ability to tell whether a spirit is of God or not.” This is the gift of discernment. Note that a “spirit” does not necessarily refer to a single supernatural being in the usual sense, but may also refer to more general or subtle forces or influences at work in the Church. Thus the phrase “a spirit of rebellion” may not refer to a single evil spirit, but to a general influence upon, or a tendency manifested by, or a feeling detected in many saints at once. This general influence of evil may also be referred to in the singular as a “spirit.” The gift of discernment allows its possessors to analyze also these more general forces and influences at work in a family, ward, or other organization and to know whether they are or are not from God.

24 And again, it is given to some to speak with tongues;

verse 24 There seem to be at least three manifestations of the gift of tongues:

1. when individuals are enabled to learn to speak with ease and fluency a foreign but known language (see Acts 2);

2. when persons are enabled to speak the pure or Adamic language; and

3. when persons speak under the influence of the Holy Ghost, they speak with the tongue of angels. They speak what God or his ministering servants would speak if they were present. The prophet Joseph Smith cautioned the saints about the gift of tongues. He explained that it is one of the least of the gifts but generally the one most sought after (TPJS, 246). He warned that Satan may seek offer his own counterfeits in order to deceive the people (Ibid. 25, 229).

25 And to another is given the interpretation of tongues.

26 And all these gifts come from God, for the benefit of the children of God.

27 And unto the bishop of the church, and unto such as God shall appoint and ordain to watch over the church and to be elders unto the church, are to have it given unto them to discern all those gifts lest there shall be any among you professing and yet be not of God.

verse 27 Bishops in the Church have available to them the gift of an uncommon degree of discernment.

28 And it shall come to pass that he that asketh in Spirit shall receive in Spirit;

verse 28 “He that asketh in Spirit” is one who asks for a gift of the Spirit for appropriate reasons. This verse, then, simply says that he who prays appropriately for a gift of the Spirit will receive that gift (see verse 30).

29 That unto some it may be given to have all those gifts, that there may be a head, in order that every member may be profited thereby.

verse 29 He who presides over the Church possesses all necessary free gifts. He also has an abundant of those spiritual gifts incident to his considerable spiritual growth.

30 He that asketh in the Spirit asketh according to the will of God; wherefore it is done even as he asketh.

verse 30 Part of the process of acquiring gifts of the Spirit is to possess the gift and discernment to know which gifts we need “according to the will of God.”

31 And again, I say unto you, all things must be done in the name of Christ, whatsoever you do in the Spirit;

verse 31 As fallen and sinful beings, we cannot expect to command the powers of heaven in our own unworthy names. Christ alone in his perfect and infinite righteousness is worthy of the great blessings and powers of heaven. Therefore, when we act, pray, or speak in the name of Jesus, we acknowledge that we do so as those who have become one with him, and that we are his servants exercising his rights and powers with his permission. Since Christ is the only perfectly sinless, righteous, and worthy being, it is his name only that can command the powers of heaven, but he allows those who are his to “take his name upon them” and to use its power in his service.

32 And ye must give thanks unto God in the Spirit for whatsoever blessing ye are blessed with.

verse 32 Let us never neglect the necessity of expressing gratitude for the blessings we do receive (D&C 59:21).

33 And ye must practise virtue and holiness before me continually. Even so. Amen.

verse 33 The gifts of the Spirit are available to all who will pay the price, which includes obeying the commandments—practicing “virtue and holiness before me continually,” seeking perfection with all one’s heart, and entering into a covenant relationships with the Lord. These covenants are made at the time of partaking of the sacrament as we commit ourselves to repent of specific ways in which we fall short of the Savior’s example. The gifts will be the greatest in those who seek most earnestly. They are available to all within the Church who have been baptized by water and by the Spirit. George Q. Cannon wrote of spiritual gifts that seem to fit into both the “free gift” and spiritual growth categories:

How many of you . . . are seeking for these gifts that God has promised to bestow? How many of you, when you bow before your Heavenly Father in you family circle or in your secret places contend for these gifts to be bestowed upon you? How many of you ask the Father, in the name of Jesus, to manifest himself to you through these powers and these gifts? Or do you go along day by day like a door turning on its hinges, without having any feeling upon the subject, without exercising any faith whatever; content to be baptized and be members of the Church, and to rest there, thinking that your salvation is secure because you have done this?

If any of us are imperfect, it is our duty to pray for the gift that will make us perfect. Have I imperfections? I am full of them. What is my duty? To pray to God to give me the gifts that will correct these imperfections. If I am an angry man, it is my duty to pray for charity, which suffereth long and is kind. Am I an envious man? It is my duty to seek for charity, which envieth not. So with all the gifts of the gospel. They are intended for this purpose. No man ought to say, “Oh, I cannot help this; it is my nature.” He is not justified in it, for the reason that God has promised to give strength to correct these things, and to give gifts that will eradicate them (Millennial Star, April 1894, 260-61).

Brief Historical Setting

John Whitmer was named church historian in March 1831 [D&C 47 - John Whitmer Named Church Historian].

During the spring of 1831, the New York saints continued to arrive in the Ohio territory. The concern of those already in Ohio was: “Where will we put them? Where will we find sufficient land for them?" The Lord gave counsel [D&C 48 - Land for Gathering in Ohio].

Section 47 John Whitmer Named Church Historian

Since the time of Adam and Eve, the saints of the Lord have been instructed to keep records of both their spiritual and temporal affairs, their divine revelations, and their history. In our own time this commandment is found in D&C 21:1 and elsewhere. Some great prophets have obeyed this commandment, to the benefit of millions who came after them. These prophets include Adam, Enoch, Abraham, Moses, Nephi, Mormon, Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John, among many others.

Prior to March 1831, Oliver Cowdery had acted as historian and recorder though he had never been formally called and set apart to the job. On March 8, 1831, the same day Joseph received section 46, he also received section 47. In section 47, John Whitmer is named official church historian. Actually he was called to the position previously by a council of elders. (It has been suggested, with tongue in cheek, that perhaps he was the only one out of town when the council met.) His acceptance of the call was half-hearted. He told Joseph he would rather not be the church historian, but that if it was the Lord's will, then he would accept. Joseph inquired, and this revelation was the Lord's answer. On April 9, 1831, John Whitmer was sustained in his twin callings as both church historian and church recorder by a special meeting of elders in Kirtland. D&C 69:2-8 also gives John additional instructions on his duties as church historian.

He served as custodian of the records until his excommunication on March 10, 1838, at Far West.

Not only was his acceptance of the call half-hearted, but his execution of the office was mediocre. His historical record turned out to be a "mere sketch of the things that transpired." His total work consisted of 85 pages, 75 per cent of which was simply a copy of the revelations received by Joseph during those years.

After his excommunication, he refused to deliver up to the Church his documents. Because of his refusal, Joseph wrote him a letter asking him again to give up his records, and that if he did not, then Joseph and some of the other brethren would proceed to write a history of their own. At that point in church history, Joseph did proceed to dictate an account of the history of the Church from its beginning. This project continued to the death of the Prophet and beyond. From these records, the Church published in 1951 the History of the Church which covers the period of time from the Church's inception to a short period following Joseph's death.

At John Whitmer's death, his history was given to his nephew John C. Whitmer of Richmond, Missouri. The Whitmers eventually willed the history to the Reorganized LDS Church, which has since published it.

1 Behold, it is expedient in me that my servant John should write and keep a regular history, and assist you, my servant Joseph, in transcribing all things which shall be given you, until he is called to further duties.

verse 1 “keep a regular history” The historical records kept up to this time in the Church had been rather irregularly attended to. The Church needed a permanent historian. The prophet Joseph Smith wrote of the value of keeping accurate and complete records:

If you assemble from time to time, and proceed to discuss important questions, and pass decisions upon the same, and fail to note them down, by and by you will be driven to straits from which you will not be able to extricate yourselves, because you may be in a situation not to bring your faith to bear with sufficient perfection or power to obtain the desired information; or, perhaps, for neglecting to write these things when God has revealed them, not esteeming them of sufficient worth, the Spirit may withdraw and God may be angry; and there is, or was a vast knowledge, of infinite importance, which is now lost (HC, 2:198-99).

“assist you . . . in transcribing all things which shall be given you” John Whitmer’s duties were not confined to keeping the records or writing a history. He is here called to transcribe anything that may come to Joseph. At the time Joseph and Sidney were working on the JST. While Sidney Rigdon functioned as scribe for most all of that project, it was John Whitmer who transcribed much of the manuscript of the JST. To transcribe here means to produce another clearer, cleaner copy of what Sidney had written as he took dictation from the prophet. John Whitmer also functioned as scribe for the project on occasion.

2 Again, verily I say unto you that he can also lift up his voice in meetings, whenever it shall be expedient.

3 And again, I say unto you that it shall be appointed unto him to keep the church record and history continually; for Oliver Cowdery I have appointed to another office.

verse 3 “it shall be appointed unto him to keep the church record and history continually” In addition to being the church historian, John Whitmer was also to serve as the church recorder and keep the records that we would refer to today as membership and statistical records.

“Oliver Cowdery I have appointed to another office” This likely refers to Oliver’s calling as “second elder of this church” (D&C 20:3) and as the leader of the Lamanite mission (see D&C 28:8; 30:5-6), where Oliver was still serving at the time this revelation was received.

4 Wherefore, it shall be given him, inasmuch as he is faithful, by the Comforter, to write these things. Even so. Amen.

Section 48 Land for Gathering in Ohio

After section 37, commanding the saints to gather in the Ohio, the spirit of gathering was poured out upon them, and in the spring of 1831, many saints began the westward move from New York. Some in the Church even wondered if the Ohio might be the place of gathering spoken of in the Book of Mormon, the New Jerusalem.

The law of consecration and stewardship had not yet been implemented in Kirtland mostly because there were not sufficient properties in the Kirtland area to provide for even the local saints, let alone for the many who would shortly be gathering to Ohio from the East. The question was how to provide for the newcomers.

The saints in Kirtland became agitated and concerned wondering where all these New York saints would live, and they inquired of Joseph. Section 48 was given in response to their inquiries.

The Lord commands the Kirtland saints to share any extra lands with the immigrants, and if sufficient lands are not available, then the immigrants should buy additional lands (verses 1-3).

Another question also arose among both the saints already in Kirtland and those migrating into the Kirtland area from the east. The question was, how permanent is our stay here in Kirtland? Should we buy homes and farms, or should we rent? Will the law of consecration be instituted here, or will Zion be located somewhere else? The Lord told both groups that their stay in Kirtland was only temporary, and they should, insofar as possible, save their money for the time in the future when they might begin to build a city in another gathering place, the location of which was not yet revealed (verses 4-6). We, of course, know now that Ohio was a place where the saints gathered while the Lord prepared them to establish Zion in the land of Missouri.

1 It is necessary that ye should remain for the present time in your places of abode, as it shall be suitable to your circumstances.

verse 1 The Lord uses the phrase “present time” three times in the first three verses of this section implying that the Ohio would be only a temporary place of gathering.

And yet in D&C 51:17 the Lord advises the saints to act as though they would be in Ohio for years, and in D&C 64:21 they were told to maintain a strong presence in Kirtland for at least five more years, until the Kirtland Temple could be dedicated.

2 And inasmuch as ye have lands, ye shall impart to the eastern brethren;

verse 2 The Kirtland saints are commanded to consecrate what property they possessed to the needs of the New York saints who would soon be arriving. Many in Ohio obeyed this commandment for the benefit of incoming saints who had already given up their own homes and lands to gather to Kirtland. Joseph and Emma themselves lived in shared or borrowed lodgings for much of their time in Kirtland.

3 And inasmuch as ye have not lands, let them buy for the present time in those regions round about, as seemeth them good, for it must needs be necessary that they have places to live for the present time.

verse 3 The Lord is still addressing the Kirtland saints. He says that when the consecrated Ohio properties are all given out as stewardships, those New York saints who are still arriving will have to find accommodations in the area as best they can and at their own expense.

4 It must needs be necessary that ye save all the money that ye can, and that ye obtain all that ye can in righteousness, that in time ye may be enabled to purchase land for an inheritance, even the city.

verse 4 Zion is not to be located in Ohio. The saints are instructed by the Lord to not expend all of their financial resources in Ohio. Rather, they are to earn and save as much money as they can in hopes that they may one day invest that money in the land and city of Zion. “The city” in this verse is the New Jerusalem. This city is to be built through the sacrifice and consecration of the saints. The Church had first learned about the city from Ether 13:3-8 and two previous revelations received by Joseph Smith, D&C 28:9 and D&C 42:6-9. The location of this city had not been revealed at this point in the church’s history (see verse 5). Three months later, in June 1831, the Lord will reveal that Missouri is the place for the gathering (see D&C 52:2-3), but he will not reveal the specific location as being Jackson County until July of 1831 (see D&C 57:1-3).

“land for an inheritance” This phrase suggests that each individual’s share of the land or city of Zion is rightfully his through the Abrahamic covenant. Among the other blessings promised in the Abrahamic covenant is that the righteous children of Abraham will receive a holy land on which to dwell (for a summary of the Abrahamic covenant, see the commentary for 1 Nephi 14:8). This promise, of course, is extended also to those Gentiles who accept Christ and his gospel and become Christ’s sons and daughters and members of the house of Israel by adoption. Our portion in the earthly Zion is a symbol and token of our portion in the coming celestial world, the ultimate “promised land.”

5 The place is not yet to be revealed; but after your brethren come from the east there are to be certain men appointed, and to them it shall be given to know the place, or to them it shall be revealed.

verse 5 “there are to be certain men appointed” This phrase refers to an advance party of saints that would be sent ahead to scout the area, make the necessary arrangements, purchase the land, and lay the foundations of the New Jerusalem in order to prepare Zion for the gathering of the saints. This commandment was obeyed, and the prophecy that the place would be revealed to these men was fulfilled three or four months later when sections 52 and 57 were received.

6 And they shall be appointed to purchase the lands, and to make a commencement to lay the foundation of the city; and then shall ye begin to be gathered with your families, every man according to his family, according to his circumstances, and as is appointed to him by the presidency and the bishop of the church, according to the laws and commandments which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive. Even so. Amen.

verse 6 “they shall be appointed to purchase the lands” The Lord has already revealed in D&C 45:65 how the land of Zion was to be acquired: it was to be purchased. The saints would not find the lands they sought unoccupied, nor would Joseph lead the Church to take them by conquest as Joshua had done in obtaining the lands of the Canaanites. The Lord expected the Church generally and the saints individually to purchase the lands that would be pointed out to them.

“then shall ye begin to be gathered with your families” The basic unit of Zion, or the Church and kingdom of God upon the earth, is the family.

“as is appointed to him by the presidency and the bishop of the church” Today the First Presidency of the Church holds the keys of gathering and instructs the saints as to who should gather where, when, and how. President Harold B. Lee taught this point clearly:

*It would be well, before the frightening events concerning the fulfillment of all God's promises and predictions are upon us, that the saints in every land prepare themselves and look forward to the instruction that shall come to them from the First Presidency of this Church as to where they shall be gathered (Ye Are the Light of the World, 167).*

In March of 1831, there was no First Presidency. The presiding leadership of the Church on the earth at that time was Joseph Smith who was the “first elder” of the Church and Oliver Cowdery, who was the “second elder” (see D&C 20:3). In January 1832 Joseph will be ordained president of the high priesthood. Though most historians might date the organization of the First Presidency from that time, it was not actually referred to as the First Presidency until 1834. It is interesting also to note that Joseph Smith will not receive the “keys of gathering” Israel until Moses returns them to him on April 3, 1836 in the Kirtland Temple.

A careful reading of this particular phrase, however, suggests that it does not refer to the gathering of Israel, but rather to the gathering of each man and his family to Zion and to the law of consecration and stewardship where he will receive a stewardship “according to his family” and “according to his circumstances.” And this “as [it] is appointed him by the presidency and the bishop of the church.”

Brief Historical Setting

1831 May

The infamous Shaker affair occurred in May 1831. At the urging of a new convert to the Church, the former Shaker Leman Copley, the best missionaries in the Church, Sidney Rigdon and Parley P. Pratt, were dispatched by the Lord to visit the Shaker settlement. These two missionaries, accompanied by Brother Copley, took with them a revelation given by the Lord specifically for the Shakers [D&C 49 - The Shakers]. This missionary experience ended negatively when the missionaries, after delivering their message, were summarily rejected by the Shakers. Further, the Shakers were angered when Parley P. Pratt, following the Shakers’ rejection of his message, “shook the dust off his garments” as a testimony against them. Leman Copley was also angered by Parley’s undiplomatic gesture, so much so that he left the Church and evicted the Colesville saints from his land (see Historical Setting for section 51 below).

The peculiar spiritual manifestations in the Kirtland area in the spring of 1831 did not disappear with one rebuke. In May, again it was necessary for the Lord to speak to Joseph on the matter [D&C 50 - Teaching by the Spirit].

Section 49 The Shakers

In May 1831 a new convert to the Church, fifty-year-old Leman Copley, came to the Prophet Joseph. He had recently been baptized, but he was afraid to accept ordination to preach and wanted to know the will of the Lord on the matter. According to Shaker historical records, Copley, though he had been a member of the Shakers, could not manage to live the celibate lifestyle which was encouraged among the Shakers. He had moved away from the Shakers but still admired their doctrines. He was anxious to see the truth preached to his former associates, for whom he still had great affection and respect. Also, though honest-hearted in his acceptance of the restored gospel, he still retained the idea that the Shakers were right in some particulars of their doctrine. Accordingly, he asked Joseph to send missionaries to the Shakers that they might also have the opportunity to hear and accept the Gospel. He asked for two of the best missionaries in the Church, Sidney Rigdon and Parley P. Pratt. Joseph consented to inquire of the Lord "in order to have a more perfect understanding on the subject." Section 49 was thus received.

In this section the Lord does extend calls to Sidney, Parley, and to Leman Copley. Joseph had initially been reluctant to send Brother Copley, because he was not adequately prepared to serve as a missionary. Both Sidney and Parley, however, had an extensive background of experience with the Shakers. Sidney had lived in the area for years and was acquainted with their leaders and their doctrine. Parley had relatives that were Shakers and thus was also acquainted with them.

Elders Rigdon, Pratt, and Copley fulfilled the mission appointed to them by this revelation. They visited the settlement of Shakers, preached the gospel to them, and even read section 49 to them in its entirety. They were rejected, as the Shakers "utterly refused to hear or obey the gospel" (Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt, 65).

One cannot understand section 49 without knowing what the Shakers were teaching, practicing, and believing. The following is a brief review of this interesting people.

They resided in a communal group in North Union, Ohio, fifteen miles from Kirtland. Today this area is known as Shaker Heights and is near Cleveland.

The Shakers began as a break-off from the Quakers. The Quakers, or Society of Friends, had been founded in England in the 1640s, the founders believing that the scriptures were only a portion of God's revelation and that new revelation was to be expected.

Two English Quakers, James and Jane Wardley, stated that God's spirit of revelation was frequently manifest to them in Quaker meetings by means of a violent shaking of their bodies. They broke off from the Quakers, and their group became nicknamed the Shaking Quakers.

The Shaking Quakers or Shakers gave equal place to women and men in church organization and predicted that since Christ had first appeared in the form of a man, his second appearance would be in the form of a woman. When a woman named Ann Lee (married name Ann Stanley) joined their group, the Wardleys became convinced that she fulfilled this prediction. She was a pious woman who had suffered greatly, especially in childbearing, since all four of her children died as infants. She also had suffered as a wife, as her husband eventually deserted her. Because of this suffering, many in this small sect, in addition to the Wardleys, came to believe that Ann Lee was the Messiah whose return they were awaiting.

They actually believed that God was both male and female. The scriptural basis for this belief was Genesis 1:27, “In his own image . . . created he them” (both male and female). God, they believed, first made his appearance in the form of a male, Jesus Christ. In Ann Lee, the female principle of God was made manifest, and in her the promise of the Second Coming was fulfilled. The Shakers also believed that even angels and spirits are both male and female—that is, have dual natures.

They believed that Christ’s kingdom upon the earth began with the establishment of the Shaker Church. From the days of the ancient apostles the Lord had sent no one to preach until the Shakers were raised up to call in the elect in a new dispensation. Thus, they believed that the Millennium had begun with the ministry of Ann Lee.

Mother Ann, as she came to be called, believed that sexual relations were at the root of most all the evils in the world. She therefore advocated celibacy for both men and women, even though she herself had been married and given birth to four children (who had all died at birth).

After severe persecution in England, Mother Ann claimed to have received a revelation directing her to America in 1774 to establish the Church of the United Society of Believers in Christ’s Second Appearing—the Shakers’ official name. By 1831 their membership had peaked at between five and ten thousand. There were about eighteen Shaker communities in the United States, and all were known for their piety, order, and industry. Their numbers remained this strong, due to a few converts and hundreds of civil war orphans whom they claimed, until 1874, and then it began to decline. Today only a handful of very old Shakers remain. The only active community that exists is located at Sabbathday Lake, Maine.

Some additional practices and beliefs of this unique group were:

1. The ruling authority of the Shakers was vested in a committee—usually four persons, two females and two males.

2. Private ownership of property was eliminated, and several communal groups (called united orders) were established throughout the United States. They believed in separation from the world and group ownership of possessions. Ostentation, luxury, and private ownership of property were regarded as sinful and un-Christian.

3. Confession was all that was necessary for forgiveness of sins. Thus the outward ordinances, baptism and the laying on of hands, were unnecessary and had ceased with the apostolic age. Their confessions were given openly.

4. It was possible for people to live without sin.

5. Although the Shakers did not forbid marriage, they believed that those who lived a celibate life abided a higher law. They referred to celibacy as "the cross," probably having metaphorical reference to the cross some chose to bear.

6. Pork was forbidden in their diet, and many ate no meat.

7. The resurrection consisted of the restoration or raising of the spirit but not the physical body.

8. Their dress and manners remained similar to those of the Society of Friends, the Quakers. They were also hard working farmers reminiscent of the Amish. They made beautiful furniture which is highly prized even today. In general they believed in a strong work ethic. They invented many useful industrial tools.

9. They were called Shakers because of their ceremonies. They would sing, dance, clap their hands in regular time, hold hands, embrace, form circles, shake, and shout peculiar things. The women would spin around for minutes without stopping. Men would touch only other men, and women would touch only other women.

10. They lived in dormitories and ate in a dining hall. Men were kept strictly separate from the women, however.

11. They were pacifists.

12. They believed that the need for physical ordinances such as baptism had ceased with the ancient apostles.

13. Sickness and disease were regarded as sins against God.

14. There are some interesting parallels between the Shakers' beliefs and Mormonism: They believed in continuous revelation, and they had a Book of Moses. They denied the doctrine of the trinity. Ann Lee had spiritual spectacles that she put on so she could read documents. They had holy anointings, a united order, Melchizedek priesthood, and Aaronic priesthood. Important men in U.S. history allegedly appeared to Ann Lee including John Adams, George Washington, and Thomas Jefferson. They believed in a mother in heaven. They believed that the time had come for the New Jerusalem to be built, and they laid out the ground where the temple would stand. They collected and printed their own hymns. They were temperance people and avoided tobacco, alcohol, tea and coffee. They had a roll of parchment of John the Revelator.

At one point a member of the Shakers, a man named Joseph B. Dylk decided that he, not Ann Lee, was the millennial Lord Jesus Christ, and he broke with the main body of the Shakers.

The three missionaries arrived at North Union on a Saturday evening and were allowed to give to the group a long discussion of the gospel. They spent the night, and the next morning they spoke in the regular Sunday meeting. After Sidney Rigdon read section 49 to the Shakers in their meeting as part of his comments, they were rather abruptly rejected and dismissed. Parley P. Pratt, unwisely it seems, would not let the meeting come to a close without a witness against the Shakers. He arose and shook his coattails: “He shook the dust from his garments as a testimony against us, that we had rejected the word of the Lord Jesus” (The Teachings of Spencer W. Kimball, 13). This greatly angered the Shakers’ leader, Ashbel Kitchell, and he severely rebuked Parley. Not only did Kitchell vent his anger on Elder Pratt, but also upon Leman Copley.

This experience was so upsetting to Brother Copley that it caused him to re-evaluate his membership in the restored Church. To make matters worse, when he arrived back at his farm in Thompson, Ohio, where the Colesville branch of the Church had settled after arriving from New York, he found them upset with him for getting the missionaries involved in this misadventure (see the Historical Setting for section 51 below). Thus, rejected by the saints, he ejected them from his farm and returned to North Union and begged for membership again with the Shakers. His betrayal forced the saints to abandon the improvements they had made to his farm and move on to Missouri immediately. This mission, intended originally to bring people to Christ, resulted in problems for the saints.

With this background, then, section 49 is more easily understood.

D&C 49 The Shakers

D&C 49:7 The hour and the day no man knoweth, nor shall they know until he come.

D&C 49:20 It is not given that one man should possess that which is above another, wherefore the world lieth in sin.

1 Hearken unto my word, my servants Sidney, and Parley, and Leman; for behold, verily I say unto you, that I give unto you a commandment that you shall go and preach my gospel which ye have received, even as ye have received it, unto the Shakers.

2 Behold, I say unto you, that they desire to know the truth in part, but not all, for they are not right before me and must needs repent.

verse 2 “they are not right before me” In spite of their industry, there were obviously several things that were “not right” among the Shakers. Their rejection of the sacred nature of marriage, sexuality, and the family could alone account for the Lord’s statement here.

3 Wherefore, I send you, my servants Sidney and Parley, to preach the gospel unto them.

4 And my servant Leman shall be ordained unto this work, that he may reason with them, not according to that which he has received of them, but according to that which shall be taught him by you my servants; and by so doing I will bless him, otherwise he shall not prosper.

verse 4 “Leman shall be ordained unto this work” As already mentioned, Copley had been concerned about being ordained to the priesthood, which the Lord here commands be done.

“not according to that which he has received of them” There is a tendency to preach to those of another faith by assuming their point of view and trying to persuade them that the restored gospel must be true. Such an approach avoids any confrontation between the old and the new and is not how the Lord wanted this mission to be undertaken. The Shakers were to be confronted with the simple truth.

“otherwise he shall not prosper” The Lord asked a lot of Leman Copley. He still had a high regard for the Shakers and for their religion, but he had to choose. He could teach the restored gospel with the courage of his testimony to his former friends, or he could lose his conviction of the truth and come under condemnation.

5 Thus saith the Lord; for I am God, and have sent mine Only Begotten Son into the world for the redemption of the world, and have decreed that he that receiveth him shall be saved, and he that receiveth him not shall be damned—verse 5 “I am God, and have sent mine Only Begotten Son into the world” Keep in mind that it is Jesus Christ who speaks in the Doctrine and Covenants, though here, as elsewhere he speaks the words of the Father, whom Christ represents as though he were the Father. He speaks by “the divine investiture of authority.”

6 And they have done unto the Son of Man even as they listed; and he has taken his power on the right hand of his glory, and now reigneth in the heavens, and will reign till he descends on the earth to put all enemies under his feet, which time is nigh at hand—verse 6 “they have done unto the Son of Man even as they listed” To list is to desire. This phrase means that the Shakers did not look forward to Christ’s second coming. Rather they looked for the return of the “Christ spirit,” a spirit that would infuse their leader and render him or her spiritual and not carnal. They believed four persons had been given this spirit in its fulness: Adam, Abraham, Christ, and Ann Lee.

“the right hand of his glory” This expression refers to the light and power of the Lord and implies that he possesses all power. Indeed, the Lord was given all power in heaven and on earth. He reigns supreme in heaven. On this Earth His supremacy has not yet been fully recognized, but it will be: for all enemies will be put under His feet, and the will of God will be done as it is done in heaven.

“which time is nigh at hand” This contradicts the Shaker teaching that Christ had already come to earth a second time in the form of Ann Lee.

7 I, the Lord God, have spoken it; but the hour and the day no man knoweth, neither the angels in heaven, nor shall they know until he comes.

verse 7 The deliberate suspense that is generated by anticipation and uncertainty in the hearts of the saints serves an important function in the Lord's training of his people (see also Matthew 24:36). While we wait, not knowing the day of his coming, we prepare ourselves. If we knew the time of his coming, some would find occasion to procrastinate their repentance. But keeping the uncertainty of the future in focus enables and motivates us to prepare continually—not just individually, but as a Church as well.

8 Wherefore, I will that all men shall repent, for all are under sin, except those which I have reserved unto myself, holy men that ye know not of.

verse 8 “all are under sin” All men are guilty of sin (Romans 3:23). While we remain in mortality, our only hope of perfection is the perfection “in Christ” promised by the Lord's servant Moroni (Moroni 10:32-33). As long as we are sincerely striving to obey his commandments, the Lord extends the blessings of his atonement to us, and he consequently considers us perfect.

“except those which I have reserved unto myself, holy men that ye know not of” There are men who have been made “perfect in Christ” (Moroni 10:32-33), who have been taken by God for his own purposes and whose carnal natures have been erased or otherwise overcome. We are taught by Joseph Fielding Smith that these are “translated persons such as John the Revelator and the three Nephites” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:209).

9 Wherefore, I say unto you that I have sent unto you mine everlasting covenant, even that which was from the beginning.

verse 9 “mine everlasting covenant” This phrase refers to the gospel. The central purpose of the gospel is to enable us to be forgiven of our sins through the atonement of Jesus Christ and then to return to celestial glory.

10 And that which I have promised I have so fulfilled, and the nations of the earth shall bow to it; and, if not of themselves, they shall come down, for that which is now exalted of itself shall be laid low of power.

verse 10 “that which I have promised I have so fulfilled” The promises made to the fathers—Abraham (Genesis 17:17-21; 22:16-18; Abraham 2:6-11), Isaac (Genesis 26:3-5), and Jacob (Genesis 28:13-15), as well as to Lehi, Nephi, and Moroni—about the fulness of the gospel coming once again to their posterity have been fulfilled in the restoration of the gospel in this latter day. The Gentile nations will either repent and bow before Jesus Christ, and thus become the seed of Abraham by adoption, or they will not repent and will be laid in the dust by the power of God.

“if not of themselves, they shall come down” If the people of the nations do not accept the gospel, they shall be brought down into the dust.

“for that which is now exalted of itself” This phrase refers to those whose natural self dictates that they are fully self sufficient in all things.

11 Wherefore, I give unto you a commandment that ye go among this people, and say unto them, like unto mine apostle of old, whose name was Peter:

verse 11 “this people” The Shakers.

“like unto mine apostle of old, whose name was Peter” Peter is mentioned in this verse because the message in verses 11-14 is essentially Peter’s message to the Jews on the day of Pentecost as recorded in Acts 2:38. Moreover, Peter’s clear teaching in this New Testament passage corrects a major doctrinal error of the Shakers—baptism is necessary to salvation.

verses 12-28 These verses are addressed directly to the Shakers by the Lord and correct many of their false doctrines.

12 Believe on the name of the Lord Jesus, who was on the earth, and is to come, the beginning and the end; verse 12 Note the “was” and “is to come.” The Lord again reminds the Shakers that the Lord’s second coming is yet in the future.

13 Repent and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, according to the holy commandment, for the remission of sins;

verse 13 Because the Shakers did not believe in the necessity of baptism—they believed that one could live without sin—this verse was obviously meant to correct that view. They were guilty of sin and needed to repent. The “holy commandment” mentioned here likely refers to Peter’s great charge to the Jews found in Acts 2:38 to “repent, and be baptized.”

14 And whoso doeth this shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost, by the laying on of the hands of the elders of the church.

verses 14 The Shakers rejected baptism but believed in the gifts of the Spirit. Hence, the Lord teaches them that the gift of the Holy Ghost is received only after one has entered the gate of repentance and baptism (2 Nephi 31:17). The prophet Joseph Smith maintained that the true gifts of the Spirit are enjoyed only by those who have the gift of the Holy Ghost (HC, 5:27; see also Acts 2:37-38).

15 And again, verily I say unto you, that whoso forbiddeth to marry is not ordained of God, for marriage is ordained of God unto man.

verse 15 This corrects another major doctrinal error of the Shakers. While they technically did not forbid marriage, the social pressure against it was enough to drive people like Lemman Copley out of their community if they could not be celibate.

Because marriage, sexuality, and family are important parts of God's eternal plan, Satan will always try to destroy them or turn men's minds away from their proper uses. Throughout the history of Christianity, one may detect the workings of the adversary in those branches of the historic Christian church that forbade marriage or, like the Shakers, insisted that a higher reward is available in heaven for the celibate.

It is wrong to encourage celibacy (see Genesis 2:24; 1 Timothy 4:3; Hebrews 13:4). President Spencer W. Kimball bore testimony about the importance of marriage:

In magazines we frequently see articles on this anti-marriage revolution. . . . Let me say again, marriage is honorable. It is a plan of God. It is not a whim, a choice, a preference only; it's a must ("Marriage Is Honorable," in Speeches of the Year, 1973, 261).

16 Wherefore, it is lawful that he should have one wife, and they twain shall be one flesh, and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation;

verse 16 "it is lawful that he should have one wife" This phrase doesn't seem intended to teach the necessity of one wife, as contrasted with more than one wife. Rather, it teaches the necessity of having a wife and that marriage is endorsed by God and is part of his plan for the human family.

"and all this that the earth might answer the end of its creation" The earth was created to be a home and testing ground for billions of mortal beings. Without marriage and procreation upon the earth to create future generations of mortals, the purpose (or end) for which the earth was created, would be thwarted. Celibacy is, hence, an apostate doctrine, one in which Satan obviously delights.

Another of the "end[s] of [the earth's] creation" is the formation of an eternal celestial family—each member of which is sealed into the family by a "welding link" of the gospel covenants. This future family, members of which will only be those who inherit celestial glory, will obviously have a vital function in the lives of celestial beings for all eternity.

17 And that it might be filled with the measure of man, according to his creation before the world was made.

verse 17 This is the first scripture in the Doctrine and Covenants to deal with the topic of premortal existence. The "measure of man" is the number of human beings created to live upon the earth, and this number is fixed (see Talmage, Articles of Faith, 194; Smith, Gospel Doctrine, 94; and Brigham Young, in JD, 8:352). The word "his" refers back to "man." The earth was created to be filled with the measure or number of spirit children who were begotten with the intent that they should live here. And when were these spirits begotten or created? “Before the world was made.”

A certain number of spirits will be born into mortality during the Millennium when the earth is in its terrestrial or paradisiacal state, but these persons will also be part of the “measure of man,” the number of those designated to experience their mortality upon this earth. For an interesting discussion of just who it is that qualifies to be born during the Millennium, See the subtitle, “Generational trials” under the heading “Purpose of the Millennium” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 30, The Millennium.

18 And whoso forbiddeth to abstain from meats, that man should not eat the same, is not ordained of God; verse 18 This corrects yet another doctrinal error among the Shakers. It is wrong to forbid the eating of meat.

Note the obvious error in this verse created by the double negative. The verse says that whoso forbiddeth to abstain from meats . . . is not ordained of God. If a person forbids to abstain from meats, then he encourages the eating of meat. The intent is that whoso commandeth to abstain from meat . . . is not ordained of God.

19 For, behold, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and that which cometh of the earth, is ordained for the use of man for food and for raiment, and that he might have in abundance.

verse 19 “ordained for the use of man for food and for raiment” Contrary to some current thinking in the world around us, animals are meant (“ordained”) to be used by human beings for food, for leather, for fur, and so forth. These are purposes for which they were created. There is no sin in killing animals for human use. The sin is in wasting what is killed (see verse 21). Humans do have an obligation to justify the death of an animal by using it for the benefit of humanity, which is the purpose of its creation, whether for food, clothing, or income. Abraham, the friend of God and father of the faithful, was, after all, a shepherd, and Peter was a commercial fisherman. They made their living from the wholesome use of animals.

20 But it is not given that one man should possess that which is above another, wherefore the world lieth in sin.

verse 20 It was never intended by God that one human being should have more of the earth’s bounty than another. The celestial law is equality through consecration and stewardship. Division into rich and poor upon the earth is the result of the natural man and the design and workings of Satan. This unnatural division destroys the rich by the pride of their riches and by giving rise to the feeling that they are superior to the poor and deserve better treatment simply because they are rich. It also destroys the poor with the trials of poverty, starvation, exposure, disease, and by suggesting the feeling that the poor are inferior simply because they are poor. One reason why the “world lieth in sin” is that we generally prefer and sustain Babylon’s economic systems based on competition motivated by self-interest rather than Zion’s economic system based on cooperation motivated by compassion. This is the spirit of the law of consecration.

But what of the inevitable consequence that those who labor diligently in this life tend to accumulate more material riches than those who lack the same industry? Do those who work hard and accumulate more commit sin? Should they give away all of their “extra” accumulations? It seems likely that among a people not given to live the law of consecration, this inevitable disparity will be tolerated by the Lord.

21 And wo be unto man that sheddeth blood or that wasteth flesh and hath no need.

verse 21 President Spencer W. Kimball quoted from President Joseph F. Smith in general conference:

I do not believe any man should kill animals or birds unless he needs them for food, and then he should not kill innocent little birds that are not intended for food for man. I think it is wicked for men to thirst in their souls to kill almost everything which possesses animal life. It is wrong, and I have been surprised at prominent men whom I have seen whose very souls seemed to be athirst for the shedding of animal blood (CR, October 1978, 64).

22 And again, verily I say unto you, that the Son of Man cometh not in the form of a woman, neither of a man traveling on the earth.

verse 22 “the Son of Man cometh not in the form of a woman” Neither Ann Lee nor Joseph Dylk is Jesus Christ. The Shakers believed that God was both male and female and was therefore adequately represented by both male and female forms, that Christ had already come as a male in the meridian of time, and that “she” therefore had returned at the second coming in the female form of “Mother Ann” Lee. Once again, this verse corrected the Shaker belief.

“neither of a man traveling on the earth” The Lord adds that the Son of Man will not come disguised as any mortal living on the earth, male or female. He will come as the scriptures explicitly describe him as coming: “in clouds of heaven” with power and great glory (Matthew 26:64). He will be universally acknowledged and hailed as the Messiah.

23 Wherefore, be not deceived, but continue in steadfastness, looking forth for the heavens to be shaken, and the earth to tremble and to reel to and fro as a drunken man, and for the valleys to be exalted, and for the mountains to be made low, and for the rough places to become smooth—and all this when the angel shall sound his trumpet.

verse 23 “be not deceived” The second coming has not occurred, and the Millennium has not begun. Continue your watchful waiting and be aware of the signs of his coming. If the reader desires to review a comprehensive discussion of these signs, see three chapters in volume 3 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine: chapter 24, Sign’s of the Lord’s Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Sign’s of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

24 But before the great day of the Lord shall come, Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness, and the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose.

verse 24 Here the Lord lists two of the things that must yet happen before the day of his appearance in glory.

“Jacob shall flourish in the wilderness” This statement is a remarkable prophecy that modern Israel, the restored Church, will be driven into the wilderness where they will prosper and grow. Of this verse Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote: “The physical gathering here alluded to is the assembling of the Latter-day Saints in the tops of the mountains in western America. It is there that Zion shall flourish upon the hills and rejoice upon the mountains. The wilderness referred to is the then-uninhabited areas that were colonized by Brigham Young less than a score of years later” (Millennial Messiah, 210-11).

“the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose” Part of the gathering of Israel in the latter days is the gathering of the Lamanites and their coming to a knowledge of their ancestral heritage and of the gospel. Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote: “And as to the day when the Lamanites shall blossom as the rose, it has scarcely commenced. They are not yet, except in a beginning degree, the pure and delightsome people of whom the scriptures speak” (Ibid., 211). Before the Savior comes again, the descendants of the Book of Mormon peoples will join the Church in increasing numbers and will have claimed their rights as children of Israel. As a people, they will then have “blossom[ed] as the rose.”

25 Zion shall flourish upon the hills and rejoice upon the mountains, and shall be assembled together unto the place which I have appointed.

verses 25 Before the second coming of Christ the saints will have established a flourishing Zion upon the earth. Which definition of Zion might we apply here (see the commentary for D&C 42:9)?

verses 26-28 It is difficult to know where the message to the Shakers, which began in verse 12, ends. Are verses 26-28 addressed to the Shakers or to Sidney Rigdon, Parley Pratt, and Leman Copley? Notice that “shall not be confounded” (verse 27) is a phrase from the writings of Peter (see 1 Peter 2:6), in whose style the message to the Shakers was to be delivered (see verse 11). Nevertheless, the command to “go forth as I have commanded you,” in verse 26 makes it likely that at least these last three verses are directed to the missionaries.

26 Behold, I say unto you, go forth as I have commanded you; repent of all your sins; ask and ye shall receive; knock and it shall be opened unto you.

27 Behold, I will go before you and be your rearward; and I will be in your midst, and you shall not be confounded.

verse 27 “I will go before you and be your rearward” God will be both their scout and their rear guard.

28 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, and I come quickly. Even so. Amen.

Did the appointed missionaries fulfill the Lord’s command to go among the Shakers and preach the gospel? John Whitmer wrote that Sidney Rigdon, Parley P. Pratt, and Leman Copley “went and proclaimed [the gospel] according to the revelation given them, but the Shakers hearkened not to their words and received not the gospel at that time, for they are bound in tradition and priestcraft; and thus they are led away with foolish and vain imaginations” (HC, 1:169n.).

We must not leave this episode without commenting on what became of Leman Copley. For his betrayal of the saints, in evicting them from his lands, he was disfellowshipped, but he was back in full fellowship again by October 1832. In 1834 he took a stand against the Church by testifying in a court case against the prophet Joseph Smith brought by another apostate, Philastus Hurlbut, and for this he was excommunicated. On April 1, 1836, he asked for forgiveness and was re-baptized! We then lose track of him and only know that he did not gather with the saints in Missouri or Illinois, and he did not go west with the saints. He died in Ohio in 1860 and is buried in Thompson, Ohio.

Section 50 Teaching By The Spirit

The missionaries called to proselyte among the Lamanites (see section 32), after successfully preaching the gospel in the Kirtland area and converting many, had left the Kirtland area about November 1, 1830, to continue westward on their mission. The newly converted saints in the Kirtland area were left mostly to themselves until Joseph arrived in Kirtland about February 1, 1831. Their natural leaders, Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge, had traveled to Fayette in December 1830 to see the Prophet Joseph and had remained in New York. We have commented previously on the false influences and beliefs that had crept in among the Kirtland saints. Satan had sought to take advantage of their inexperience and lack of strong local leadership by encouraging these false influences among them. We have previously discussed the peculiar spiritual manifestations that became rampant among these Ohio saints (please review the background materials for sections 28, 43 and 46). Parley P. Pratt, having just returned from his missionary excursion to the Shakers in May of 1831, encountered the manifestations of false spirits, and he quickly found that he did not know how to handle them:

As I went forth among the different branches, some very strange spiritual operations were manifested, which were disgusting, rather than edifying. Some persons would seem to swoon away, and make unseemly gestures, and be drawn or disfigured in their countenances. Others would fall into ecstasies, and be drawn into contortions, cramps, fits, etc. Others would seem to have visions and revelations, which were not edifying and which were not congenial to the doctrine and spirit of the gospel. In short, a false and lying spirit seemed to be creeping into the Church.

All these things were new and strange to me, and had originated in the Church during our absence [from Kirtland], and previous to the arrival of President Joseph Smith from New York.

Feeling our weakness and inexperience, and lest we should err in judgment concerning the spiritual phenomena, myself, John Murdock, and several other elders went to Joseph Smith and asked him to inquire of the Lord concerning these spirits or manifestations. After we had joined in prayer in his translating room [Joseph was working on his inspired revision of the Bible], he dictated in our presence the following revelation. Each sentence was uttered slowly and very distinctly, and with a pause between each sufficiently long for it to be recorded by an ordinary writer in long hand (Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt, 61-62).

In this way and under these circumstances, section 50 was received for the Church on May 9, 1831.

Parley P. Pratt's description of Joseph's receiving of section 50 might mislead some into thinking that the revelatory process was simply one of Joseph's taking spiritual dictation from the Lord. Such a simplistic view might lead one to believe that once written down, a revelation could never be altered or edited since it was the directly dictated words of the Lord. Indeed, Parley P. Pratt went on to say: “This is the manner in which all his written revelations were dictated and written . . . as he dictated them, so they stood” (Ibid, 62). We know that all Joseph’s revelations have undergone editing and alteration after their initial writing. Joseph himself edited them, and many have been altered since Joseph’s death. Brother Pratt’s observations are thus misleading, in a sense. While he may have described accurately Joseph’s receiving section 50, his description falls short of explaining to us the process whereby we now possess the revelations in the Doctrine and Covenants in their current form. Orson Pratt said: “Joseph the Prophet, in writing the Doctrine and Covenants, received the ideas from God, but clothed these ideas with such words as came to his mind” (Minutes of the School of the Prophets, Salt Lake Stake, December 9, 1872, 3). Thus we learn that revelation is a process, not an event. Revelations are usually given a little at a time—line upon line.

Section 50 provides for us helpful guidelines in discerning “false spirits” or manifestations that are not from God. It has become also an important missionary section, as it teaches us much about the importance of teaching the gospel using the vital influence of the Spirit of the Lord.

D&C 50 Teaching By the Spirit

D&C 50:13-15 Unto what were ye ordained? To preach my gospel. And then received ye spirits which ye could not understand, and received them to be of God; and in this are ye justified?

D&C 50:17-22 He that preacheth and he that receiveth . . . are edified and rejoice together.

D&C 50:23-24 That which is of God is light, and the light groweth brighter until the perfect day.

1 Hearken, O ye elders of my church, and give ear to the voice of the living God; and attend to the words of wisdom which shall be given unto you, according as ye have asked and are agreed as touching the church, and the spirits which have gone abroad in the earth.

verse 1 “the voice of the living God” The living God is, of course, Jesus Christ.

“the words of wisdom” Any counsel from the Lord might be appropriately referred to as words of wisdom. This phrase has nothing to do, of course, with section 89.

2 Behold, verily I say unto you, that there are many spirits which are false spirits, which have gone forth in the earth, deceiving the world.

verse 2 “false spirits” It is likely that these false spirits are a combination of the natural man himself with his predictable inclination for ostentatious and overtly sensually gratifying religious expressions, those among the members who are deliberate deceivers, and the influences of Satan and his minions. These false spirits may encourage false ideas, false doctrines, and false practices of worship.

3 And also Satan hath sought to deceive you, that he might overthrow you.

verse 3 Apparently Satan is able to orchestrate counterfeit spiritual experiences for some individuals, even members of the Lord’s Church. Joseph Smith once observed: “Nothing is a greater injury to the children of men than to be under the influence of a false spirit when they think they have the spirit of God” (HC, 4:573).

4 Behold, I, the Lord, have looked upon you, and have seen abominations in the church that profess my name.

verse 4 This verse implies a culpability on the part of those involved in false religious practices.

5 But blessed are they who are faithful and endure, whether in life or in death, for they shall inherit eternal life.

verse 5 Just as the previous verse lays blame on those involved in false religious practices, in this verse the Lord affirms those who, by virtue of their righteousness, remain pure in their ideas, doctrines, and worship practices. They are not deceived by those influences that would lead them astray.

6 But wo unto them that are deceivers and hypocrites, for, thus saith the Lord, I will bring them to judgment.

verse 6 Whenever the Church of Jesus Christ has been on the earth, there have always been spiritual pretenders and spiritual deceivers to be found in the Church. The word hypocrite means stage actor or one who plays a part. These pretenders would have others believe that they have spiritual gifts which they don’t actually possess. Some of them manage to remain undetected by the rest of the saints or by their leaders. Consequently, it follows that no idea, doctrine, literature, or business proposition should be accepted simply because it is promoted by a member of the Church, for it is not church membership or association that is the test of trustworthiness but habitual and observable compliance with the accepted principles of righteousness. These hypocrites can do great damage to other weaker members of the Church who are often brought to believe they represent the Church.

7 Behold, verily I say unto you, there are hypocrites among you, who have deceived some, which has given the adversary power; but behold such shall be reclaimed;

verse 7 “such shall be reclaimed” The deceived or disillusioned shall be reclaimed, but not the deceivers, for the unrepentant hypocrites and pretenders will be cut off from Christ and his Church either in this life or the next (see the following verse).

8 But the hypocrites shall be detected and shall be cut off, either in life or in death, even as I will; and wo unto them who are cut off from my church, for the same are overcome of the world.

verse 8 “the same are overcome of the world” Once an individual is cut off from the Lord’s Church, the spirit is withdrawn, and influences of the world inevitably overtake and dominate them.

9 Wherefore, let every man beware lest he do that which is not in truth and righteousness before me.

verse 9 The spirit of appropriate worship in the Lord’s Church is to be conservative: avoid exaggeration, embellishment, or overly dramatizing. Our religion must be what we really believe, what we really feel, and what we really are—not a role we adopt for church occasions.

10 And now come, saith the Lord, by the Spirit, unto the elders of his church, and let us reason together, that ye may understand; verse 10 “let us reason together” We have previously commented on this phrase (see the commentary for D&C 45:10). The Lord has an agenda for each of us. It is, above all else, that he wants to live with us forever after this life. He wants us home. When he reasons with us, his intent is not to face us with cold and unbiased logic. Rather, it is to attempt to convince us of the eternal benefits of becoming and remaining his people. He will do all he can, within the limits placed on him by our needing a fully mortal experience, to ensure that we have every chance to get home.

11 Let us reason even as a man reasoneth one with another face to face.

verse 11 In this verse the Lord indicates the personal, one-on-one relationship he would like to maintain with each of his children.

12 Now, when a man reasoneth he is understood of man, because he reasoneth as a man; even so will I, the Lord, reason with you that you may understand.

verses 12 The Lord wants us to clearly understand his counsel, hence he condescends to reason with us on our level. “Behold, I am God and have spoken it;

these commandments are of me, and were given unto my servants in their weakness, after the manner of their language, that they might come to understanding” (D&C 1:24).

13 Wherefore, I the Lord ask you this question—unto what were ye ordained?

verse 13 “unto what were ye ordained” Joseph Smith received section 50 in the presence of “a number of elders” (HC, 1:170). It would seem that the Lord is speaking directly to those elders. The Lord answers his question in the next verse.

14 To preach my gospel by the Spirit, even the Comforter which was sent forth to teach the truth.

15 And then received ye spirits which ye could not understand, and received them to be of God; and in this are ye justified?

verses 13-15 The Lord gently rebukes his servants for having trouble discerning these false manifestations. The implication is that if the elders there present had been worthy of the influence of the Holy Ghost, they would have had no trouble with their spiritual discernment.

16 Behold ye shall answer this question yourselves; nevertheless, I will be merciful unto you; he that is weak among you hereafter shall be made strong.

verse 16 The Lord evidences his kindness and long suffering for these fledgling members of the Church in Kirtland.

verses 17-22 In these six following verses lie the very essence of powerful gospel teaching—teaching by the Spirit of God.

17 Verily I say unto you, he that is ordained of me and sent forth to preach the word of truth by the Comforter, in the Spirit of truth, doth he preach it by the Spirit of truth or some other way?

18 And if it be by some other way it is not of God.

19 And again, he that receiveth the word of truth, doth he receive it by the Spirit of truth or some other way?

20 If it be some other way it is not of God.

verses 17-20 These verses are concerned with the teaching of spiritual truths and not secular truths. They explain that spiritual truths may be taught and received by the Spirit of God or without the Spirit of God. Both the speaker of spiritual truth and the hearer of spiritual truth may or may not be in tune with, or possess, the influence of the Spirit of God at the moment of teaching. God’s way of teaching and hearing is for both the teacher and hearer to possess the Spirit of God. If either the hearer or the teacher is not in tune with the spirit, then the teaching is “not of God.”

A spiritual truth spoken or received without the Spirit of God may be mentally understood, but it will not affect an individual's thinking and behavior. Though he may give mental assent to the truth, he will not act on it.

The influence of the Spirit of God not only allows an individual to accept spiritual truth and be profoundly influenced by it, but it also allows him or her to discern the difference between truth and error. The basis of the power of spiritual discernment is the Spirit of God.

21 Therefore, why is it that ye cannot understand and know, that he that receiveth the word by the Spirit of truth receiveth it as it is preached by the Spirit of truth?

22 Wherefore, he that preacheth and he that receiveth, understand one another, and both are edified and rejoice together.

verses 21-22 To be edified is to be spiritually taught, built up, added to.

If either the speaker or the hearer of truth lacks the influence of the Spirit, then there is no spiritual connection made. There is no spiritual edification or uplift. On the other hand, if both the speaker and the hearer of spiritual truth possess the influence of the Spirit of God—that is they both respond to his influence—then both the speaker and hearer are jointly edified. This is the ultimate achievement in gospel teaching.

The young missionary in the Church today simply must learn the principle contained in these verses. If he or she can teach the principles of the gospel in a way that allows the Spirit to bear witness to him or her (to the missionaries themselves) each and every time they teach them, they then provide the investigator with the best possible chance of feeling the Spirit's influence. If the missionary is successful, then "both [the missionary and the investigator] are edified and rejoice together."

23 And that which doth not edify is not of God, and is darkness.

verse 23 The hearer who is responsive to the influence of the Holy Ghost is automatically a discerner of truth. They can identify what is true and edifying and also what is untrue and not edifying. They can avoid that which is dark and untrue (see verse 25).

24 That which is of God is light; and he that receiveth light, and continueth in God, receiveth more light; and that light groweth brighter and brighter until the perfect day.

verses 24 As we grow spiritually we receive through personal revelation increments of the attributes of Christ and our hearts are changed so that we become new creatures. In so doing we actually are allowed to partake of the light of Christ. Increments of his light become our light, and in this way we grow to become like him. For a discussion of this fascinating topic see The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15.

25 And again, verily I say unto you, and I say it that you may know the truth, that you may chase darkness from among you;

26 He that is ordained of God and sent forth, the same is appointed to be the greatest, notwithstanding he is the least and the servant of all.

verse 26 “He that is ordained of God and sent forth, the same is appointed to be the greatest” He who possesses the fulness of the gospel, the gift of the Holy Ghost, the priesthood of God, and the ordination to preach is a teacher and leader over all those who do not have these qualifications no matter how young or unlearned he may be.

“notwithstanding he is the least and the servant of all” But keep in mind the profound truth that all who lead in the kingdom of God, in contrast to leaders in worldly organizations are servants to those to whom they minister just as Jesus Christ, who presides over our universe, is the servant of all (Matthew 20:25-28).

27 Wherefore, he is possessor of all things; for all things are subject unto him, both in heaven and on the earth, the life and the light, the Spirit and the power, sent forth by the will of the Father through Jesus Christ, his Son.

verse 27 “he is possessor of all things; for all things are subject unto him” The righteous and diligent Melchizedek Priesthood holder who is on the Lord’s errand is entitled to call upon all of the powers of heaven for help. The Lord’s ministering angels are subject to him. He may call upon all of the resources of heaven including the light of Christ and the power of God.

28 But no man is possessor of all things except he be purified and cleansed from all sin.

29 And if ye are purified and cleansed from all sin, ye shall ask whatsoever you will in the name of Jesus and it shall be done.

30 But know this, it shall be given you what you shall ask; and as ye are appointed to the head, the spirits shall be subject unto you.

verse 28-30 Let us not make the mistake of believing that a man must be perfect before he can receive all of the blessings of heaven as he engages himself in the work of the Lord. The key is that he is honestly and diligently trying to overcome himself. He is striving to live the commandments, and seeking sincerely to serve the Lord. Then, by virtue of the Savior’s atonement, he is regularly justified and sanctified as he covenants to keep the Lord’s commands and as he keeps those covenants. This cleansing is accomplished on an ongoing basis by the Spirit of God through the ordinance called the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost. The reader is referred to the discussion of the three parts of the ordinance of baptism. See Baptism—the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 18. As the individual is thus cleansed, he is then considered by the Lord to be “perfect” (Moroni 10:32-33).

This individual may then ask in righteousness for anything necessary to perform his calling, and receive it. The man who is properly in tune with the Spirit will have his prayers answered because he is prays for things which are appropriate (see the commentary for D&C 46:30).

“as ye are appointed to the head” This phrase means “as you are ordained to lead.”

31 Wherefore, it shall come to pass, that if you behold a spirit manifested that you cannot understand, and you receive not that spirit, ye shall ask of the Father in the name of Jesus; and if he give not unto you that spirit, then you may know that it is not of God.

verse 31 “if you behold a spirit manifested that you cannot understand”

Those who are in the service of the Lord will sometimes find themselves in situations that are spiritually uncomfortable. If they are uncertain as to the true nature of the situation, whether it is of God or not, then they can petition the Father who will assist them in discerning the situation. Perhaps it is desirable in this verse to interpret the word “spirit” in a broader sense. Evil situations can arise for various reasons. Certainly they may be the direct result of the ministrations of an evil spirit—one of the followers of Satan himself. They may also be the product of the potential evil that is intrinsic in man—the natural side of each individual. This natural tendency of all men, when unchecked by the Spirit of God can result in an evil “spirit” whether or not Satan or one of his adherents is directly involved.

32 And it shall be given unto you, power over that spirit; and you shall proclaim against that spirit with a loud voice that it is not of God—verse 32 The diligent servant of God is given power both to discern and to rebuke an evil situation, an evil spirit.

33 Not with railing accusation, that ye be not overcome, neither with boasting nor rejoicing, lest you be seized therewith.

verses 33 “Not with railing accusation . . . neither with boasting nor rejoicing” Keep in mind that the Lord’s servant operates by virtue of the priesthood which is borrowed power from God. The servant does not function by his own power. Thus, he must not allow himself to lose his proper humility. He is merely the servant or instrument of God. A loss of proper perspective or humility in this matter can lead to a loss of priesthood power (D&C 121:43-44).

34 He that receiveth of God, let him account it of God; and let him rejoice that he is accounted of God worthy to receive.

verse 34 “let him account it of God” Let he who receives blessings from God give thanks to God for those blessings (D&C 59:21).

35 And by giving heed and doing these things which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive—and the kingdom is given you of the Father, and power to overcome all things which are not ordained of him—verse 35 “these things which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive” The Lord refers to the revelations (commandments) in the Doctrine and Covenants—those which the saints had already received and those which they would yet receive.

“and the kingdom is given you of the Father, and power to overcome all things which are not ordained of him” This parenthetical promise of the Lord is contingent upon the individual’s “giving heed and doing these things which ye have received, and which ye shall hereafter receive.”

36 And behold, verily I say unto you, blessed are you who are now hearing these words of mine from the mouth of my servant, for your sins are forgiven you.

verse 36 This promise—that the Lord will forgive the sins of those gathered to hear Joseph receive this revelation—is also contingent upon the Lord’s commandment to be obedient in the previous verse.

37 Let my servant Joseph Wakefield, in whom I am well pleased, and my servant Parley P. Pratt go forth among the churches and strengthen them by the word of exhortation; verse 37 “my servant Joseph Wakefield” Joseph Wakefield, from Watertown, New York, was apparently a convert in the New York period. In this verse he is called to be a companion to Parley P. Pratt in visiting the branches of the saints in order that they might rebuke the adverse spirits and correct the errant practices that had appeared. Joseph Wakefield was excommunicated in 1834. Among other things, he was offended that Joseph Smith once came out of his translating room in Kirtland and immediately began playing with children, a practice he thought incompatible with the dignity and high office of a prophet (see Cook, Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 69, 134).

38 And also my servant John Corrill, or as many of my servants as are ordained unto this office, and let them labor in the vineyard; and let no man hinder them doing that which I have appointed unto them—verse 38 “my servant John Corrill” Baptized four months earlier in January of 1831, John Corrill is also called on a mission. Like Joseph Wakefield, Corrill was among the first group of men to be ordained to the office of high priest on June 3, 1831, a month following receipt of this revelation. Corrill became disaffected in Missouri and was excommunicated from the Church on March 17, 1839.

39 Wherefore, in this thing my servant Edward Partridge is not justified; nevertheless let him repent and he shall be forgiven.

verse 39 “in this thing my servant Edward Partridge is not justified” Apparently Bishop Partridge had attempted for some reason unknown to us to interfere with the missionary callings confirmed by the Lord in verses 37 and 38. His mistake may have been due to inexperience. He had been in the Church less than six months at the time. Here he is assured that he will be forgiven if he repents of his error.

40 Behold, ye are little children and ye cannot bear all things now; ye must grow in grace and in the knowledge of the truth.

verse 40 The Lord reminds the church members there assembled that they are as yet immature in their gospel understanding. They needed to grow spiritually.

41 Fear not, little children, for you are mine, and I have overcome the world, and you are of them that my Father hath given me;

verse 41 The Lord also assures the members of his deep affection and intimate relationship with them. Those obedient to their covenants are “given” by the Father to Jesus Christ to become Christ’s children.

“I have overcome the world” We are able to overcome the world by striving diligently to keep the commandments. If we endure, we will be exalted by virtue of the Savior’s atonement. The Father’s expectations of his only begotten Son were far higher. In order for the Savior to overcome the world he had to live a sinless life and then atone for all of the sins of mankind. Because he has “overcome the world” we can take heart and be at peace, for his atonement will cover for our deficiencies. We can “overcome the world” far more easily than he did. He has made it all possible.

42 And none of them that my Father hath given me shall be lost.

verse 42 As far as Jesus is concerned if those members remain faithful, they will not be lost. There is, of course, the issue of their agency, and we have already learned that Joseph Wakefield and John Corrill apparently will lose their inheritance.

43 And the Father and I are one. I am in the Father and the Father in me; and inasmuch as ye have received me, ye are in me and I in you.

verse 43 Let us not speak glibly about this verse and suppose that we thoroughly understand it. It is likely that there is something, and perhaps many things, about the oneness of the Father and the Son that we simply don't understand—indeed, that we are not as yet given to understand (see the commentary for D&C 93:3). We are taught in this verse that we have an opportunity to share in this exciting oneness!

44 Wherefore, I am in your midst, and I am the good shepherd, and the stone of Israel. He that buildeth upon this rock shall never fall.

verse 44 “the stone of Israel” Here the Savior identifies himself as “the stone of Israel.” In scripture he is often referred to as the “rock” or “stone.” This implies that he is our “sure foundation,” firm supporter, refuge, fortress of impregnable strength (see Genesis 49:24; Isaiah 8:14; 28:16; Psalm 118:22; Matthew 7:24; 21:42; John 10:11; Alma 5:38-39; 3 Nephi 11:39-40).

45 And the day cometh that you shall hear my voice and see me, and know that I am.

verse 45 This exciting pronouncement has a few possible interpretations. It may refer to the Lord's second coming wherein those righteous on the earth and the righteous who are caught up to meet him will see his face. Or it could refer to a private audience with him which might occur here on earth, as we enter the world of spirits (2 Nephi 9:41; Alma 40:11-14), or as we are resurrected and meet him at the great and last judgment.

46 Watch, therefore, that ye may be ready. Even so. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

The Colesville saints arrived in the Kirtland area from New York in the spring of 1831, and a recent convert, a former Shaker by the name of Leman Copley, allowed them to move onto his land in Thompson, Ohio, about twenty miles outside Kirtland (see D&C 49 and its commentary). In May of 1831 the Lord commanded the Colesville saints, while in Thompson, Ohio, to begin to live the law of consecration [D&C 51 - Law of Consecration].

Section 51 Law of Consecration

In May 1831 the saints from Colesville, New York, began to arrive in Ohio. The saints in Ohio had been instructed to divide their land with their eastern brethren (D&C 48:2), and it was the duty of Edward Partridge who had been appointed bishop (D&C 41) to take care of the newcomers.

The Colesville saints were settled in Thompson, Ohio, about sixteen miles east of Kirtland on a 759-acre plot owned by Lemam Copley, a new convert, who had agreed to allow the saints to use his land. Here they would form a united order separate from the one getting started in Kirtland. This branch consisted largely of the extended family of Joseph Knight Sr., including Joseph's son, Newel, and their friends and acquaintances. Newel Knight was appointed president of the branch at Thompson. The Colesville saints had been particularly persecuted in New York and had given up much to gather to Ohio. Bishop Partridge asked for divine guidance. He and the Prophet were particularly anxious to know how to provide for them. The Prophet inquired of the Lord for him and received this revelation in May 1831.

The experience of Orson Pratt, who was present when Joseph received this revelation at Thompson, Ohio, was reported later by another individual:

No great noise or physical manifestation was made; Joseph was as calm as the morning sun. But he [Orson Pratt] noticed a change in his [Joseph's] countenance that he had never noticed before, when a revelation was given to him. Joseph's face was exceedingly white, and seemed to shine (Millennial Star, August 11, 1874, 498-99).

The Thompson saints immediately went to work improving the farm by fencing the property and planting crops. They were commanded to settle on the land as if they were going to be there "for years" (verse 17). However, their stay turned out to last only a very "little season" (verse 16)—only about a month. After the unpleasant missionary experience among the Shakers (see commentary for D&C 49), Lemam Copley left the Church, broke his agreement with the Colesville saints, and evicted them from his land.

In section 54 the Colesville saints will be commanded to move to Independence, Missouri, to begin to establish Zion. They would thus become the first group of saints to be commanded to move to Zion.

Section 51 contains important principles upon which the law of consecration is based. The Lord was beginning to train the saints in the principle of consecration as a preparatory step before they should be permitted to journey to Zion. The city of Zion was, of course, to be established upon this principle. Review the background material for section 42 regarding the law of consecration. It should be mentioned that the law of consecration, to this point, had been unfolded a little at a time—line upon line. It will continue to be revealed slowly to the saints. While some who read section 42 believe that it contains the law of consecration, it was only a beginning. Additions to the law may be found in sections 48, 51, 56, 57, 70, 78, 82, 83, 85, 90, 92, 96, 101, 104, and 105.

As originally received, section 51 directs the saints to legally deed over all their property and possessions to the bishop as agent for the Church. Stewardships would then be appointed back to them, and they were given legal title to their stewardship. Should a steward over consecrated property leave the Church, he could maintain his stewardship, but could take nothing else of his originally consecrated property with him. This was all in accordance with the law of the Lord given earlier (see D&C 42:30-32). In March 1833, however, a Missouri court held that irrevocably deeding all of one's property to the Church was not a practice that should be allowed, since it conflicted with the court's views of fairness and its understanding of the intent of British common law. The Missouri court ordered that property formerly consecrated to the Church be returned to its original owner in the specific case of an apostate member named Bates. Since the intent of section 51 was that that all aspects of consecration should be strictly legal, Joseph revised the wording of the revelation to accommodate the court's decision by deleting the verse between the present verses 2 and 3 that instructed Edward Partridge to retain legal title to consecrated properties. Joseph also added verse 5, which clarifies that stewardships are the private property of their stewards.

While the specific forms of consecration observed in Ohio and later in Missouri are no longer practiced today, the law of consecration itself has never been rescinded. The obligations of consecration laid upon the Church by the law of the Lord (see D&C 42:30-39) are still binding and are observed today largely by the payment of tithes and offerings, by accepting church callings, by sacrificing the time and other resources sometimes necessary to magnify those callings, and by entering into covenants to make whatever further temporal sacrifices the Lord may ask of us.

1 Hearken unto me, saith the Lord your God, and I will speak unto my servant Edward Partridge, and give unto him directions; for it must needs be that he receive directions how to organize this people.

verse 1 “how to organize this people” Edward Partridge was the only bishop in the Church, and the responsibility for the organization and temporal welfare of the incoming saints fell to him.

2 For it must needs be that they be organized according to my laws; if otherwise, they will be cut off.

verse 2 “it must needs be that they be organized according to my laws” Zion can be created only if the Lord's people are organized based upon the principles of heaven (D&C 105:5). On February 9, 1831, barely three months before this revelation was received, the Lord had given the Church his law, including the law of consecration (see D&C 42:30-39). Section 51 will teach Bishop Partridge and the saints how to apply the law of consecration to their circumstances in Ohio.

It should be noted that the law of consecration has been applied to saints differently in different times and circumstances, and that while the principles of consecration will always remain the same, we should not assume this law will be applied to a future Zion in the exact form described in this section.

3 Wherefore, let my servant Edward Partridge, and those whom he has chosen, in whom I am well pleased, appoint unto this people their portions, every man equal according to his family, according to his circumstances and his wants and needs.

verse 3 “those whom he has chosen” In D&C 42:31, Bishop Partridge was commanded to “appoint” and “set apart” two counselors, either elders or high priests to assist him in his work.

“this people” This phrase, of course, refers to the newly arrived Colesville saints in Thompson, Ohio.

“every man equal according to his family, according to his circumstances and his wants and needs” The bishop is directed to give to each man his stewardship—those material possessions which he requires to live and work. This stewardship is based on the size of his family and other specific circumstances to be determined by the bishop. Under this system, every man is to be “equal” not in the specific amount of goods given, but rather equal in that each man receives according to the same principles, according to the same process—a fair process administered by the bishop. One man may have a large family; another a small one. One man may farm. Another may teach. Yet another may run a mercantile store. All will receive according to their needs. Note particularly also the generous consideration given to personal preferences, or “wants,” in establishing these stewardships (see also D&C 82:17).

4 And let my servant Edward Partridge, when he shall appoint a man his portion, give unto him a writing that shall secure unto him his portion, that he shall hold it, even this right and this inheritance in the church, until he transgresses and is not accounted worthy by the voice of the church, according to the laws and covenants of the church to belong to the church.

verse 4 “a writing” This is a deed. A man’s “portion” is his stewardship. With this stewardship, he receives a deed of ownership for all of the contents of the stewardship. We will learn in the following verse, that if the man transgresses and leaves the Church, he maintains legal ownership of his stewardship, but he has no claim on the other materials which he originally consecrated to the Church.

5 And if he shall transgress and is not accounted worthy to belong to the church, he shall not have power to claim that portion which he has consecrated unto the bishop for the poor and needy of my church; therefore, he shall not retain the gift, but shall only have claim on that portion that is deeded unto him.

verse 5 “he shall not retain the gift, but shall only have claim on that portion that is deeded unto him” The individual who leaves the Church has no claim on those materials which he originally consecrated to the Church—“the gift”—but he maintains legal ownership of his stewardship—“that portion that is deeded unto him.”

6 And thus all things shall be made sure, according to the laws of the land.

verses 6 It should be noted that the system was based upon private and not communal or common ownership. Also it was the Lord’s intent that the system comply with the laws of the land.

7 And let that which belongs to this people be appointed unto this people.

verse 7 The assets consecrated to the bishop were to be used only for the welfare of church members who were themselves living the law of consecration.

8 And the money which is left unto this people—let there be an agent appointed unto this people, to take the money to provide food and raiment, according to the wants of this people.

verse 8 “And the money which is left unto this people” Bishop Partridge managed such church temporal matters as paying bills, buying and selling lands and goods, helping with construction projects, printing, and assisting the poor. Thus, he had accessible to him in the bishop’s storehouse some funds, and not just material goods.

“let there be an agent appointed unto this people” An “agent” is to be appointed to assist the bishop. This agent was to handle the actual transfer of properties in and out of the bishop’s storehouse. A. Sidney Gilbert was called the following month as the agent to assist Bishop Partridge (see D&C 53:4).

9 And let every man deal honestly, and be alike among this people, and receive alike, that ye may be one, even as I have commanded you.

verse 9 “let every man . . . be alike among this people” In the united order everyone was “alike” in that they each had what they needed for the support of themselves and their families. There were no rich or poor among them. To truly become one, the saints must be willing to share their temporal blessings freely with other saints. The personal need to be rich, to have more than one’s brothers and sisters, is incompatible with the establishment of Zion.

In absolute terms, however, the saints in the order were not alike in goods possessed or income received. A man with seven children had needs that were different from those of couples just beginning married life. The order was united in love, purpose, and commitment, but unity does not mean absolute sameness.

10 And let that which belongeth to this people not be taken and given unto that of another church.

11 Wherefore, if another church would receive money of this church, let them pay unto this church again according as they shall agree; verses 10-11 The word “church” in these verses means branch of the Church such as the Church in Missouri as opposed to the Church in Thompson, Ohio. At this time, apparently, the Lord wished the different areas of the Church to remain financially separate from each other, and the consecration of properties within the different units was to be handled separately.

12 And this shall be done through the bishop or the agent, which shall be appointed by the voice of the church.

13 And again, let the bishop appoint a storehouse unto this church; and let all things both in money and in meat, which are more than is needful for the wants of this people, be kept in the hands of the bishop.

verse 13 The bishop is assigned to be responsible for distributing those things in the “bishop’s storehouse” wherein are kept all those things consecrated to the Church that have not yet been distributed as stewardships and those goods produced by the order in excess of their needs (the “residue”).

Though bishops’ storehouses may have changed somewhat conceptually since the early 1830s, they continue to operate in the Church today on the same general principles as stated in sections 42 and 51.

14 And let him also reserve unto himself for his own wants, and for the wants of his family, as he shall be employed in doing this business.

verse 14 “he shall be employed in doing this business” In most cases, those who are asked to serve the Church full time also have a right to temporal support through the resources of the Church. In Kirtland, Bishop Partridge was to be employed full time in managing the consecrations of the saints and administering those resources to the poor and the needy. These duties made it difficult for him to pursue his trade as a hatmaker at his home in Painesville, Ohio. In consideration of his circumstances, the bishop was allowed appropriate compensation from the storehouse.

15 And thus I grant unto this people a privilege of organizing themselves according to my laws.

verse 15 This is the Lord’s go ahead to the Colesville saints to start living the law of consecration and stewardship. The Lord also emphasizes that it is a privilege for them to participate in this celestial plan.

16 And I consecrate unto them this land for a little season, until I, the Lord, shall provide for them otherwise, and command them to go hence;

verse 16 “this land” For the saints generally, “this land” refers to the area around Kirtland, Ohio, but for the Colesville saints, to whom section 51 was specifically given, it refers to the Lemman Copley farm in Thompson, Ohio.

“for a little season” The Lord informs the Colesville saints that for them Kirtland is just a stopover. In fact, the “little season” for these saints will last only about six weeks. Lemman Copley, who had offered to share his farm with the incoming saints, will withdraw his offer when Bishop Partridge begins organizing things according to the law of consecration as directed in this revelation. On July 3, 1831, at the Lord’s direction, the Colesville saints will leave Thompson, Ohio, for Jackson County, Missouri.

17 And the hour and the day is not given unto them, wherefore let them act upon this land as for years, and this shall turn unto them for their good.

verse 17 “as for years” The Lord wanted the saints, even the Colesville saints, to live the gospel—including the law of consecration—and share it in Ohio as though they were to be there for a long time. Though Kirtland was home to the Ohio branch of the Church for years (see D&C 64:21-22), it was only a brief stop for the Colesville saints. Yet no place is so “temporary” that it allows us a time-out from living the principles of the gospel. Wherever we find ourselves, we must be saints. The same labors of love, diligence, industry, and service, and the same spiritual obligations to build Zion as best we can, are required of us in short-term habitations as in permanent ones. Thus, students and others who are just “passing through” some unit of the Church are expected to make the same investments of time, money, service, and emotional support to their “temporary” wards and stakes as to those in which they expect to live permanently.

18 Behold, this shall be an example unto my servant Edward Partridge, in other places, in all churches.

verse 18 “this shall be an example” Bishop Partridge is put on notice by the Lord that the Lord will be implementing the law of consecration in other places besides the Kirtland area. When the Lord eventually does so, the new organizational structure will be as has been outlined in section 51. Bishop Edward Partridge will be called to Missouri in less than one month (see D&C 52:3, 24).

19 And whoso is found a faithful, a just, and a wise steward shall enter into the joy of his Lord, and shall inherit eternal life.

verse 19 “a wise steward shall enter the joy of his Lord” This joy is likely a gift of the Spirit in the form of a subjective feeling and a permanent reward in the celestial kingdom.

20 Verily, I say unto you, I am Jesus Christ, who cometh quickly, in an hour you think not. Even so. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

1831 June

By June 1831, most of the eastern saints had arrived in the Kirtland area, and many had, for the moment at least, been settled on land belonging to Lemam Copley in Thompson, Ohio. June 3, 1831, was the day appointed for a special conference of elders (see D&C 44:1). The conference was to last for three days, through June 5. This was the first conference to be held in Ohio, and forty-four elders attended. At this conference several were ordained to the office of high priest. On the day following the conference, which was June 6, the Lord favored the elders there gathered with a revelation [D&C 52 - Location of Zion] in which he named Missouri as the specific location where Zion would be built, and he called twenty-eight missionaries to leave their homes in Kirtland and travel to Missouri to proclaim the gospel.

Recall that the Colesville branch of the Church, directed by branch president Newel Knight, were uprooted when Lemam Copley asked them to leave his land. They had experienced further troubles in trying to live the law of consecration, apparently in large part due to selfishness of several of their number, especially one Ezra Thayer (or Thayre). Brother Thayer had been one of the missionaries called to Missouri, but he was having serious misgivings about this missionary call and even about his church membership. Thus, the missionary assignments recorded in section 52 were altered later in June 1831 to exclude Ezra Thayer [D&C 56 - Change in Missionary Assignments].

Also in June 1831 the Lord commanded the Colesville saints to travel as a group to Missouri to establish themselves there [D&C 54 - Colesville Saints Sent to Zion].

About the middle of June 1831, Joseph was planning his trip to Missouri, having been commanded to go there as a missionary with Sidney Rigdon as his companion. Bishop Edward Partridge was called to go also. Once there, Bishop Partridge would remain in Missouri as bishop over the Church in Zion. A. Sidney Gilbert, the partner of Newell K. Whitney in the Gilbert and Whitney store, was commanded to go along with Joseph in the presidential party [D&C 53 - Algernon Sidney Gilbert]. He too would remain in Missouri to function as keeper of the bishop's storehouse and the Church's land agent in Missouri.

A new arrival in Kirtland, a former journalist and newspaper editor, William W. Phelps also received a revelation [D&C 55 - William Wines Phelps]. He was commanded to join the Church and then travel to Missouri with Joseph and the others. Phelps would also remain in Missouri to run the Church's printing press and to edit the Church's monthly magazine, the Evening and Morning Star.

Joseph and those assigned in the revelations to travel with him departed Kirtland for Missouri on June 19.

Section 52 Location of Zion

From all parts of the land came the saints to attend the fourth conference of the Church which had been announced in a revelation in February 1831 (D&C 44). The prior three conferences had all been held in Fayette on June 9, 1830, September 26, 1830, and January 2, 1831. This conference opened on the morning of the 3rd of June 1831 (a Friday) in Kirtland, Ohio, and closed on the 5th of June. Joseph Smith presided. Fourteen months had elapsed since the organization of the Church with six members. Forty-four elders attended the conferences. The membership of the Church by this time numbered about two thousand.

There was a great outpouring of the Spirit upon the assemblage. Several men were ordained to the office of high priest. Joseph Smith ordained five brethren to that office. Then Lyman Wight, one of the high priests ordained by Joseph, was instructed to ordain Joseph Smith and seventeen other men to the same office. This was the first time anyone in this dispensation had been ordained a high priest. In 1829 Peter, James, and John had bestowed apostolic authority upon Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery, including the authority to ordain high priests. It was by this apostolic authority and by his office as first elder in the Church that Joseph ordained Lyman Wight and the others. It should be noted that Lyman Wight did not bestow upon Joseph Smith any priesthood authority Joseph did not already hold. This same pattern of “I-ordain-you-you-ordain-me” ordination had also been followed on April 6, 1830, when the Church was organized. On that date Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery ordained each other as elders in the Church, even though they already held apostolic authority from Peter, James, and John. As particular priesthood offices were created in the Church, it was necessary even for Joseph Smith to be ordained thereto according to the revealed pattern. Though Joseph had been an apostle of the Lord Jesus Christ since May of 1829, he became first an elder and then a high priest in the Church only as those offices came into existence, and he did so in the revealed manner.

During the conference, Joseph prophesied that John the Revelator was then among the ten tribes to help prepare them for their return from their long dispersion. After Lyman Wight was ordained an high priest, the Spirit fell upon Brother Wight, and he prophesied concerning the coming of Christ. He said there were some in the congregation that would live until the Savior comes in glory. He prophesied that some of the saints would suffer martyrdom and seal their testimonies of Jesus Christ with their blood.

Satan even revealed himself during this conference. Parley P. Pratt recorded in his autobiography, “There also were some strange manifestations of false spirits which were immediately rebuked” (Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt, 72). Satan bound two brethren, Harvey Whitlock and John Murdock, so that they could not speak. Joseph commanded the devil in the name of Christ, and he departed, much to the joy and comfort of the saints (John Whitmer's History of the Church, chapter 7).

There had been rumors for months among the saints concerning the location of Zion. Until this section was received, no one knew that location. Section 52 was received on either the last day of the conference or on the day following. In verses 2 and 42 the Lord reveals that the next conference of the Church will be held in Missouri, which is Zion—"The land which I will consecrate unto my people, which are a remnant of Jacob, and those who are heirs according to the covenant" and "Missouri, which is the land of your inheritance."

The Lord then called twenty-eight missionaries to leave their homes and travel the one thousand or so miles from Kirtland to Independence to preach the gospel. They were commanded to go forth two by two and proclaim the word, on the way, to every congregation where they could get a hearing. Although the western frontier of Missouri was their destination, they were commanded to take different routes on their way so they might broaden their exposure (verse 33). This was an exciting and dramatic revelation! The saints now knew where the gathering would take place.

The saints will live in Independence from June 1831 through 1833 when they will be forced to leave and move farther north. They will then leave Missouri altogether after the "extermination order" is issued by Governor Lilburn W. Boggs on October 27, 1838.

We have never lost the theology that Zion, the New Jerusalem, will be founded in Missouri and will be a gathering place of the saints before the Lord's second coming. We have dedicated a temple site there, and in the Lord's due time Zion will yet be established in Independence. Some saints will be called to go there but not all saints, certainly. The stake there will be the center stake of the Church. When the Lord returns to his temple, Jackson County will be the headquarters of the political kingdom of God—the center of the earth's government. A passage in Isaiah suggests that during the Millennium the secular leadership will center in the New Jerusalem and the spiritual leadership in Old Jerusalem: "And many people shall go and say, Come ye, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for out of Zion shall go forth the law, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem" (Isaiah 2:3).

Some have suggested that Joseph's use of the word "enemies" in verse 42 of this section may not have been exactly the word the Lord intended. In the verse the Missourians are referred to as the "enemies" of the saints. This kind of pre-conditioning may have resulted in a bias in the minds of the saints against the Missourians with whom they had to deal daily. As the saints moved into Missouri, they had to buy land, building materials, and provisions from the Missourians. As the saints were forced to do business with their "enemies" the relationship between the saints and the Missourians soon became an adversarial one resulting in the eventual persecution and expulsion of the saints. Perhaps in verse 42 the Lord wanted to simply express the idea that the Missourians did not know the gospel and would likely be unsympathetic toward the interests and intentions of the saints. Perhaps he would have wanted to warn them to deal with the Missourians in a kindly and diplomatic way.

As we have mentioned above, the date recorded for this revelation in the heading of the Doctrine and Covenants, June 7, 1831, is incorrect. Joseph indicated in the History of the Church (HC, 1:175-77) that this revelation was given the day after the conference closed. Since it was a three-day conference, beginning on Friday, June 3, and ending on Sunday June 5, the revelation had to have been received on Monday June 6. This date is corroborated by contemporary accounts (see Cook, Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 71).

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto the elders whom he hath called and chosen in these last days, by the voice of his Spirit—

2 Saying: I, the Lord, will make known unto you what I will that ye shall do from this time until the next conference, which shall be held in Missouri, upon the land which I will consecrate unto my people, which are a remnant of Jacob, and those who are heirs according to the covenant.

verse 2 “the next conference, which shall be held in Missouri” The Lord had commanded that conferences of the Church be held every three months or as often as the elders, assembled in conference, decided (see D&C 20:61). Usually the leaders of the Church decided, in one conference, the date and place of the next. The next one was obviously to be held in Missouri, “the land which I will consecrate unto my people.” This verse amounts to a revelation as to the general location of Zion. The exact location of Zion, however, has not yet been revealed.

3 Wherefore, verily I say unto you, let my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon take their journey as soon as preparations can be made to leave their homes, and journey to the land of Missouri.

verse 3 “let my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon . . . leave their homes” The sacrifices required by the Lord in these early days were no less difficult for Joseph and Emma than they were for the other saints. Four months prior to Joseph’s receiving this revelation, Joseph and Emma had arrived in Kirtland. At that time Emma had been six months pregnant. The Smiths had first boarded with the Whitneys, and had been in their own quarters on the Morley farm less than three months. Barely a month before this call was received, Emma had given birth to twins who both died within a few hours—her second and third babies to die at birth. Soon afterward the Smiths had adopted the Murdock twins, and now Joseph was called to leave Emma in Kirtland to the care of friends and travel to Missouri for the sake of Zion.

4 And inasmuch as they are faithful unto me, it shall be made known unto them what they shall do;

5 And it shall also, inasmuch as they are faithful, be made known unto them the land of your inheritance.

6 And inasmuch as they are not faithful, they shall be cut off, even as I will, as seemeth me good.

verses 4-6 Those of us who study scripture are always more comfortable when the Lord is expressing his love and tender mercy for each of us, and less comfortable when he is explaining the consequences of his justice. Our natural reaction to these three verses is to fly to the defense of Joseph and Sidney and think, “Is it really necessary that the Lord speak to them so plainly?” These verses do remind us that God is a God of Justice as well as mercy, and that he is no respecter of persons (Acts 10:34).

verses 7-33 Twenty-eight elders, in addition to Joseph and Sidney, are called to travel as missionaries to Missouri by different routes, preaching the gospel as they go. While this work does contain some biographical information, many of these missionaries will remain unknown to the reader. Excellent biographical summaries for these and all other individuals mentioned in the Doctrine and Covenants may be found in Dean Jessee’s Papers of Joseph Smith (see also Black, Who’s Who in the Doctrine and Covenants).

7 And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant Lyman Wight and my servant John Corrill take their journey speedily;

8 And also my servant John Murdock, and my servant Hyrum Smith, take their journey unto the same place by the way of Detroit.

9 And let them journey from thence preaching the word by the way, saying none other things than that which the prophets and apostles have written, and that which is taught them by the Comforter through the prayer of faith.

verse 9 The missionaries are to teach only what they find in scripture when moved upon by the Holy Ghost; they are reminded not teach their own ideas.

10 Let them go two by two, and thus let them preach by the way in every congregation, baptizing by water, and the laying on of the hands by the water’s side.

verse 10 “Let them go two by two” Here is one modern scriptural basis for the practice in the Church of sending out missionaries in pairs.

11 For thus saith the Lord, I will cut my work short in righteousness, for the days come that I will send forth judgment unto victory.

verse 11 “I will cut my work short in righteousness” The Lord will make “short work” of the world when he moves suddenly and in total righteousness to end it and to establish his millennial kingdom. Missionaries, like these called to Missouri, are sent out to warn and prepare the world for the sudden and righteous judgments of God that are soon to come.

12 And let my servant Lyman Wight beware, for Satan desireth to sift him as chaff.

verse 12 The reader will recall that Lyman Wight, before his conversion to the gospel, had been a Campbellite and leader of a small group of families who had established themselves on the Isaac Morley farm near Kirtland. They were living a type of united order on a small scale—the so-called “common stock family.” They had become involved in petty controversies and major conflicts. Some members of the family had decided that what belonged to one belonged to all, hence they would take each other’s clothes and property and use them without permission. Joseph will advise them to abandon their common stock program.

verses 14-19 In these next six verses, the Lord teaches the secret or key (“a pattern in all things”) for discerning those individuals who are of God and those who are not. This teaching is made necessary because “Satan is abroad in the land” and will try to deceive by imitating the godly individual. The Lord is teaching this grand secret so that it might be used to discern those who lead and teach in the Church. In verses 15 and 16, “he that prayeth” and “he that speaketh” refers to those who lead and teach in the Church. These may also include the missionaries of the Church.

The grand secret is threefold: (1) He who is “of God” is obedient to the commandments of God, and he evidences, in his very character, the fruits (gifts of the Spirit—those increments of spiritual growth that are increments of the attributes of Christ) consequent to that obedience. (2) He “trembleth” under God’s power—he evidences a contrite spirit, and he is submissive to God. (3) He brings forth positive fruits. He who obeys the Lord’s commands and grows spiritually brings forth positive fruits in himself. Also, he naturally desires to influence others to do the same—he also brings forth good fruits in all those to whom he ministers and teaches.

He that fails to obey the Lord’s commandments, is not contrite and submissive, and who does not naturally focus on the spiritual betterment of others is not of God. He is the deceiver.

14 And again, I will give unto you a pattern in all things, that ye may not be deceived; for Satan is abroad in the land, and he goeth forth deceiving the nations—

15 Wherefore he that prayeth, whose spirit is contrite, the same is accepted of me if he obey mine ordinances.

verse 15 The unspoken implication of this verse is that there will be some who pray and appear to be contrite, yet their prayers are insincere and they only feign contrition. They are also hypocritical in their appearance of obedience—they do not obey or they obey for the wrong reasons. These may be found in and out of the Church. Again, they are the deceivers.

“obey mine ordinances” The expression ordinances here likely refers to all laws, statutes, and covenants—the commandments—associated with the restored gospel.

16 He that speaketh, whose spirit is contrite, whose language is meek and edifieth, the same is of God if he obey mine ordinances.

verse 16 Again, just as in the previous verse, we find here an implication that the deceiver will feign contrition and meekness in his speaking and teaching, yet he is disobedient to the Lord’s commands and he lacks the spiritual character of an obedient servant.

17 And again, he that trembleth under my power shall be made strong, and shall bring forth fruits of praise and wisdom, according to the revelations and truths which I have given you.

verse 17 “he that trembleth under my power” This expression refers to the genuine contrition and submissiveness of man. He who feels his frailties, inadequacies, and weaknesses compared to God is likely to obey—though it be difficult—and consequently grow spiritually (“bring forth fruits of praise and wisdom”). It requires little effort to disobey. One need only follow the promptings of his natural-man self. He who obeys must exert real effort in overcoming his natural tendencies, even to the point of trembling in the Lord’s presence.

18 And again, he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits, even according to this pattern, is not of me.

verse 18 “he that is overcome and bringeth not forth fruits” This phrase refers to those individuals who show outward evidence of being overcome by worldly influences and therefore lack evidence of spiritual growth.

19 Wherefore, by this pattern ye shall know the spirits in all cases under the whole heavens.

verse 19 The Lord has given this pattern so that each of us may be able to discern those of God from those of Satan.

20 And the days have come; according to men's faith it shall be done unto them.

verse 20 “And the days have come” This expression refers to the last days prophesied of in the scriptures, when the fulness of the gospel would be preached and when it would be “done unto them” according to their faith—those leaders, teachers, and missionaries who are of God will receive their just eternal reward.

21 Behold, this commandment is given unto all the elders whom I have chosen.

verse 21 “this commandment” This likely refers to section 52 in its entirety, though the Lord could be referring more specifically to the important pattern that he has described in verses 14 through 19.

22 And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant Thomas B. Marsh and my servant Ezra Thayre take their journey also, preaching the word by the way unto this same land.

verse 22 “and my servant Ezra Thayre” This command for Ezra Thayre to travel to Missouri as a companion to Thomas B. Marsh will be revoked less than two weeks following Joseph's receiving this revelation (see D&C 56:5) due to Thayre's lack of preparation. He will, however, be called again about seven months from the date of this revelation (see D&C 75:31).

“unto this same land” That is, to Missouri.

23 And again, let my servant Isaac Morley and my servant Ezra Booth take their journey, also preaching the word by the way unto this same land.

24 And again, let my servants Edward Partridge and Martin Harris take their journey with my servants Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, Jun.

25 Let my servants David Whitmer and Harvey Whitlock also take their journey, and preach by the way unto this same land.

26 And let my servants Parley P. Pratt and Orson Pratt take their journey, and preach by the way, even unto this same land.

27 And let my servants Solomon Hancock and Simeon Carter also take their journey unto this same land, and preach by the way.

28 Let my servants Edson Fuller and Jacob Scott also take their journey.

29 Let my servants Levi W. Hancock and Zebedee Coltrin also take their journey.

30 Let my servants Reynolds Cahoon and Samuel H. Smith also take their journey.

31 Let my servants Wheeler Baldwin and William Carter also take their journey.

32 And let my servants Newel Knight and Selah J. Griffin both be ordained, and also take their journey.

verse 32 The commandment given these two brethren was also changed through no fault of their own (see D&C 56:6-7).

Though twenty-eight missionaries were called in this revelation to go the Missouri, thirty actually went. One of the original twenty-eight did not go (Ezra Thayer), and three additional brethren were called later (see sections 53, 55, and 56).

33 Yea, verily I say, let all these take their journey unto one place, in their several courses, and one man shall not build upon another's foundation, neither journey in another's track.

verse 33 “one man shall not build upon another's foundation, neither journey in another's track” As the missionaries traveled to Missouri, they were commanded to take different routes so that they might preach to as many people as possible.

34 He that is faithful, the same shall be kept and blessed with much fruit.

35 And again, I say unto you, let my servants Joseph Wakefield and Solomon Humphrey take their journey into the eastern lands;

36 Let them labor with their families, declaring none other things than the prophets and apostles, that which they have seen and heard and most assuredly believe, that the prophecies may be fulfilled.

37 In consequence of transgression, let that which was bestowed upon Heman Basset be taken from him, and placed upon the head of Simonds Ryder.

verse 37 “let that which was bestowed upon Heman Basset be taken from him” One of the Kirtland saints involved in “the family” before the arrival of Joseph Smith, Heman Basset was one of those most caught up in the false spiritual manifestations discussed in sections 46, 49-50. He had left the Church by May 1831, a month before this revelation was received. “That which was bestowed upon” him was the office of an elder in the Church and a call to preach the gospel in the Kirtland area.

“and placed upon the head of Simonds Ryder” Symonds Ryder is called on a mission. The story of his conversion and apostasy are interesting. He was a Campbellite preacher who was converted after reading an account in the newspaper of a great earthquake in China which destroyed Peking. Six weeks prior he had heard a young Mormon girl predict the destruction of that city. The superficiality of his conversion was soon evident. In the letter, signed by Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon, in which Brother Ryder was called on a mission and in the license-to-preach he received from the Church, his name was spelled R-i-d-e-r instead of R-y-d-e-r. He was greatly offended and claimed that his call could not have come from God because the “Spirit” would never err and misspell his name! He left the Church in the fall of 1831, and he later assisted others in tarring and feathering Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon in March 1832 (see the background material for section 81). It is ironic that his name is still not spelled correctly in the Doctrine and Covenants. His tombstone and his signature give the spelling as Symonds Ryder, not Symonds Rider or Simonds Ryder.

38 And again, verily I say unto you, let Jared Carter be ordained a priest, and also George James be ordained a priest.

39 Let the residue of the elders watch over the churches, and declare the word in the regions round about them; and let them labor with their own hands that there be no idolatry nor wickedness practised.

verse 39 “Let the residue of the elders watch over the churches” The Lord commands those elders not assigned to go as missionaries to Missouri to stay home and be the priesthood leaders for the saints in the branches (“churches”) in and around Kirtland.

“let them labor with their own hands that there be no idolatry nor wickedness practised” The Lord reminds the saints that the law of consecration which is to be practiced in Kirtland is not going to mean a free ride for anyone but is an opportunity and an obligation to work as faithful stewards for the benefit of all. Those who are more interested in what they might obtain from the labor of others than they are in what they might contribute (these value their own material possessions above their covenant obligations) may be accused of “idolatry” as well as “wickedness.”

40 And remember in all things the poor and the needy, the sick and the afflicted, for he that doeth not these things, the same is not my disciple.

verse 40 “remember in all things the poor and the needy” The Lord seldom speaks of the law of consecration and stewardship without commenting on the importance of looking after the poor and the needy. The care of the poor and the needy is obviously a most important and nonnegotiable requirement for the saints if they are to be celestial people.

41 And again, let my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon and Edward Partridge take with them a recommend from the church. And let there be one obtained for my servant Oliver Cowdery also.

verse 41 “a recommend” The Lord has previously commanded that those moving from branch to branch carry a recommend (see D&C 20:64, 84), a written document certifying the holder’s worthiness and good standing in the Church. Even the leaders of the Church were required to observe the policy (see also D&C 72:17-19). In our day this requirement is observed by forwarding individual membership records from one church unit to another. Also, with modern means of communication, a bishop can contact a new member's previous bishop for confirmation of good standing even before receiving printed membership records.

42 And thus, even as I have said, if ye are faithful ye shall assemble yourselves together to rejoice upon the land of Missouri, which is the land of your inheritance, which is now the land of your enemies.

verse 42 “the land of your inheritance, which is now the land of your enemies” As mentioned in the introduction of this section, this phrase was a clear foreshadowing of, and possibly even a contributing factor to, the difficulties to come. When the saints began to gather in Jackson County, Missouri, the local non-LDS inhabitants quickly became antagonistic.

43 But, behold, I, the Lord, will hasten the city in its time, and will crown the faithful with joy and with rejoicing.

verse 43 “I, the Lord, will hasten the city in its time” This phrase refers to the city of New Jerusalem, the latter-day Zion.

44 Behold, I am Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and I will lift them up at the last day. Even so. Amen.

verse 44 “I will lift them up at the last day” The Lord avows that he will exalt them (“the faithful” in the previous verse) at his coming (see also the commentary for D&C 17:8).

Character Vignette

Ezra Booth

He was a Methodist minister in Mantua, Ohio—a small town near Hiram, Ohio—and was a man of “more than ordinary culture and with strong natural abilities.” He was a friend of John and Elsa Johnson of Hiram, Ohio. One day in 1831, Ezra Booth, along with the Johnsons, visited Joseph in his home in Kirtland. Elsa Johnson at the time had been afflicted with a chronically “lame arm” and was not, at the time of their visit to Joseph, able to lift her hand to her head. Ezra Booth and the Johnsons visited Joseph partly out of curiosity and partly to see for themselves what there might be in the “New Doctrine.” During the interview, the conversation turned to the ancient Apostles. Someone said, “Here is Mrs. Johnson with a lame arm. Has God given any power to men on earth to cure her?” A few moments later, when the conversation had turned to another subject, Joseph rose, walked across the room, took Elsa Johnson by the hand, and said in the most solemn and impressive manner: “Woman, in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ I command thee to be whole.” He then immediately left the room. The group was awe-struck at the presumption of the man and the calm assurance with which he spoke. Mrs. Johnson at once lifted her arm with ease, and on her return home the next day was able to do her washing without difficulty or pain.

Ezra Booth came into the Church shortly after witnessing this miraculous healing. He was ordained an elder and called, in section 52, to go to Missouri as a companion of Isaac Morley. While in Missouri, he was disillusioned to find that he was not granted that which he had requested of the Lord: the power to “smite men and make them believe.” It appears that he required a continuous flow of miraculous manifestations to maintain his spiritual vitality. When he learned that faith, humility, and patience were required, he was disappointed and turned away from the Church.

He announced his apostasy in September 1831, about the time Joseph was moving from Kirtland to Hiram, Ohio (see the commentary for section 64), and he was excommunicated from the Church. He was later to write a series of nine anti-Mormon letters that were initially published in the Ohio Star in Ravenna, Ohio. They were eventually also published in Eber D. Howe’s book, Mormonism Unveiled (sic). Booth’s letters did not deal with any fundamental truths but rather decried “lightness and levity” in the Prophet and a “proneness to jesting and joking”—also a “temper easily irritated.” He also brought up other points that did not bear on the doctrine, rather on what he perceived as inconsistencies in the restored Church. His letters played a direct role in inflaming mob violence against the saints in Hiram.

Section 53 Algernon Sidney Gilbert

What excitement there was in the Church! The saints now knew the general location of the New Jerusalem, and missionaries had been dispatched to Missouri to begin to build up the City of Zion. As soon as the city is built, the Lord will come! What can I do to help? In this spirit of intense excitement, Sidney Gilbert came to the Prophet to ask what he could do. He had not received a calling from the Lord in the conference of June 1831, and shortly after the conference he approached Joseph Smith. Joseph received section 53 in response to Brother Gilbert's inquiry. According to the Far West Record, Sidney Gilbert was ordained an elder by Joseph Smith on June 6, 1831, along with W. W. Phelps (see section 55) and others. It is therefore likely that sections 53 and 55 were given on the same day, on or before June 6, 1831.

Sidney Gilbert, a man of great practical sense and sound judgment, had been a successful businessman merchant in nearby Painsville, Ohio. Subsequently, with Newell K. Whitney he founded the successful mercantile firm of Gilbert and Whitney in Kirtland, Ohio. He was converted and joined the Church in the fall of 1830 when the missionaries dispatched to the Lamanites stopped in the Kirtland area. He was also shy, and he shrank from speaking publicly. He preferred to work behind the scenes. Because of this natural diffidence, he was reluctant to accept a mission call and was once overheard to say that he "would rather die than be a missionary."

Through Joseph, the Lord called Sidney Gilbert to "forsake the world" and give his services to the Church as an "agent" or assistant to Bishop Edward Partridge (see D&C 51:8). He was also called to join the presidential party and travel to Missouri with the Prophet and Sidney Rigdon.

B. H. Roberts said of Sidney Gilbert that the Lord had "few more devoted servants in this dispensation." In Missouri he was appointed keeper of the Lord's storehouse and also had responsibility for purchasing lands for the saints. He assisted Edward Partridge in managing the temporal affairs of the Church in Missouri. He opened another small store (see D&C 57:6-8), which was also named Gilbert and Whitney. This store also served as a bishop's storehouse. In the persecution that came upon the saints in Jackson County, he sacrificed all his worldly goods to the cause. On July 23, 1833 he offered himself as a ransom for the saints. Shortly after the saints were forced out of Independence, he contracted cholera and died April 29, 1834, at the age of 45.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 53:2 I give unto you a commandment that you shall forsake the world.

1 Behold, I say unto you, my servant Sidney Gilbert, that I have heard your prayers; and you have called upon me that it should be made known unto you, of the Lord your God, concerning your calling and election in the church, which I, the Lord, have raised up in these last days.

verse 1 “concerning your calling and election in the church” This is the only use of this phrase in the Doctrine and Covenants. Here this phrase refers only to Brother Gilbert’s calling in the Church.

2 Behold, I, the Lord, who was crucified for the sins of the world, give unto you a commandment that you shall forsake the world.

verse 2 “forsake the world” To forsake the world means to abandon worldly motivations and values. For Brother Gilbert it meant leaving his business in Kirtland to attend to the Lord’s business in Missouri. Elder George Q. Cannon taught:

We need to be born again, and have new hearts put in us. There is too much of the old leaven about us. We are not born again as we should be. Do you not believe that we ought to be born again? Do you not believe that we should become new creatures in Christ Jesus, under the influence of the gospel? All will say, yes, who understand the gospel. You must be born again. You must have new desires, new hearts. But what do we see? We see men following the ways of the world just as much as though they made no pretensions to being Latter-day Saints. Hundreds of people who are called Latter-day Saints you could not distinguish from the world. They have the same desires, the same feelings, the same aspirations, the same passions as the rest of the world. Is this how God wants us to be? No. He wants us to have new hearts, new desires. He wants us to be a changed people when we embrace his gospel (CR, October 1899, 50).

3 Take upon you mine ordination, even that of an elder, to preach faith and repentance and remission of sins, according to my word, and the reception of the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands;

verse 3 “Take upon you mine ordination” Since we know that Brother Gilbert was ordained an elder on June 6, 1831, this verse provides strong evidence that section 53 was received on or before June 6.

“remission of sins” This phrase seems to be used here as a synonym for baptism.

4 And also to be an agent unto this church in the place which shall be appointed by the bishop, according to commandments which shall be given hereafter.

verse 4 “also to be an agent unto this church” Sidney Gilbert’s responsibilities as an agent include his becoming a real estate buyer in Missouri to acquire land for stewardships and for church buildings.

“appointed by the bishop” Though worded somewhat ambiguously, this verse, and particularly this phrase, seem to indicate that Brother Gilbert would be assisting Bishop Partridge. Since Edward Partridge has just been called to go to Missouri (see D&C 52:24), it is clear that if Sidney Gilbert is to assist the bishop and work under his direction he must go to Missouri with him.

5 And again, verily I say unto you, you shall take your journey with my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon.

6 Behold, these are the first ordinances which you shall receive; and the residue shall be made known in a time to come, according to your labor in my vineyard.

verse 6 “these are the first ordinances which you shall receive” If the word ordinances is understood here to mean commandments, as seems likely, then this reference is to further instructions that Sidney Gilbert will receive pertaining to his duties as agent for the Church.

7 And again, I would that ye should learn that he only is saved who endureth unto the end. Even so. Amen.

verse 7 It would seem that few in the early Church were better examples of enduring to the end than was A. Sidney Gilbert. The reader should recall that enduring to the end is not to stop one’s spiritual progress and just hang on by one’s fingernails hoping to die before you begin to begin to slip spiritually; hoping to continue to be judged worthy by the Lord until mortal death. Rather, to endure to the end is to continue proactively to grow spiritually until the end. One cannot retire from gospel commandments.

Section 54 Colesville Saints Sent to Zion

You will recall that in section 51, those saints from Colesville, New York, on their arrival in Ohio, were settled in Thompson, Ohio. They were commanded to live the law of consecration under the leadership of Newel Knight, their branch president. They moved onto the 759 acre farm of Lemman Copley, a new convert and former Shaker. The agreement entered into with Lemman Copley was that he would consecrate half of his farm to the Church and sell the other half to the Church at a fair price.

Serious problems arose soon after their arrival. When Lemman Copley returned from the Shaker mission, which he had enthusiastically proposed, he appeared to have been somewhat “shaken.” He had begun to wonder if perhaps his former church was not right, after all, and the restored Church was wrong. To make matters worse, when Lemman returned to Thompson, many of the members there, people who were living on his land through his generosity, blamed him for deceiving them with the hope of converting the Shakers.

When Bishop Edward Partridge began to divide up Lemman Copley’s farm according to the principle of stewardships, according to the earlier agreement, Lemman, who had not yet legally conveyed his property to the Church, withdrew his offer. In the bitter exchanges that followed, Lemman ordered the Colesville saints off his land. He also charged them rent for the time they had lived there, despite the fact that they had planted his fields, built fences, and made other major improvements to the property.

Problems had also arisen among the Colesville branch members as they tried to live the law of consecration. One of their number, Ezra Thayer, apparently was a major part of the problem.

In section 52 both Newel Knight and Ezra Thayer had been called on missions to Missouri. Newel was to serve with Selah J. Griffin, and Ezra with Thomas B. Marsh. In this section, however, the Lord changes Newel Knight’s assignment. He is asked to “stand fast” in his present assignment as branch president of the Colesville saints. Ezra Thayer was having serious misgivings about his missionary call and his church membership. Thus, in section 56 the Lord will reassign Thomas Marsh and Selah J. Griffin to travel together as missionaries to Zion.

All of these events put the Colesville Branch in a difficult spot. Newel Knight was appointed by the Colesville Branch to petition Joseph Smith to inquire of the Lord concerning the course of action they should pursue, and Joseph did so inquire in June 1831. It seems likely that sections 52, 53, and 55 were all received on, or just before, June 6, 1831, and that section 54 was received somewhat later. Thus, section 54 is out of chronological sequence.

In section 54, the Colesville saints are commanded, as a group, to move to Missouri to begin to build up Zion. They thus became the first body of saints commanded to move to Missouri. At this early date, it was not intended that any of the other branches in Ohio should go to Missouri.

Newel Knight is remembered from his early days in the Church in Colesville, New York, and by his involvement in the first miracle of the Church. Prior to his baptism, he was once asked by the Prophet to pray in public, but being timid, he refused. The result was that an evil spirit seized him and distorted his face, twisted his limbs, and tossed him about fearfully. Joseph cast out the evil spirit in the name of the Lord. Thus, was the first official miracle in this dispensation accomplished.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord, even Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, even he who was crucified for the sins of the world—

verse 1 “even Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

2 Behold, verily, verily, I say unto you, my servant Newel Knight, you shall stand fast in the office whereunto I have appointed you.

verse 2 “you shall stand fast in the office whereunto I have appointed you” See the introductory commentary for this section.

3 And if your brethren desire to escape their enemies, let them repent of all their sins, and become truly humble before me and contrite.

verse 3 “if your brethren desire to escape their enemies” Newel Knight's brethren were the members of the Colesville Branch. Joseph Smith taught that salvation was victory over one's enemies, which enemies are death, hell, and the devil (see the commentary for 2 Nephi 28:23). Here, however, the Lord may have reference to the Church's enemies in Ohio.

“let them repent of all their sins” The members of the branch at Thompson had been rude and unkind to Lemman Copley in reaction to the failure of the Shaker mission. Some had also shown selfishness rather than humility or gratitude over the prospects of receiving stewardships from the Copley farm in Thompson. Their attitudes and behavior had contributed in some degree to the loss of the Thompson properties and rendered them homeless, and thus more vulnerable to their enemies.

4 And as the covenant which they made unto me has been broken, even so it has become void and of none effect.

verse 4 “the covenant which they made unto me has been broken” These words are addressed not just to Lemman Copley but to the entire Thompson branch, some of whom shared blame with Lemman for the failure of this attempt at consecration.

5 And wo to him by whom this offense cometh, for it had been better for him that he had been drowned in the depth of the sea.

verse 5 We are left to wonder to whom the Lord applied this verse. Perhaps in the final analysis, it was Leman Copley who took back his consecration.

“drowned in the depth of the sea” Robert J. Matthews has pointed out that the Lord, in dealing with mortal man, has always been inclined to use colorful and attention-getting figures of speech. He wrote:

We find these in conversation with his disciples, in teaching the multitudes, and in censuring the Jewish rulers. Some examples are as follows: When he called fishermen into his service he said, “I will make you fishers of men” (Matthew 4:19). If one knowingly gives offense (which means to lead someone away from the faith), said Jesus, “it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea” (Matthew 18:6). That is, it would have been better for the person to have died, rather than to have committed that sin. Of Judas who betrayed him, Jesus said, “it had been good for that man if he had not been born” (Matthew 26:24). John the Baptist was praised by Jesus as a “burning and a shining light” and of being “much more than a prophet” (John 5:35; Luke 7:26). James and John he surnamed the “sons of thunder” (Mark 3:17), while the Jewish rulers he called “hypocrites,” “blind guides . . . children of hell,” “like unto whited sepulchers, full of dead men’s bones,” “a generation of vipers” (Matthew 23:15-16; 23:27, 33). To a man who had been cured of a physical ailment, Jesus said, “sin no more, lest a worse thing come unto thee” (John 5:14), not meaning that every physical ailment is the direct result of sin, but rather that sin would lead to a loss of salvation, which is worse than having a physical affliction. Of those Pharisees and scribes who had such great inconsistency in their beliefs, he said they “strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel” (Matthew 23:24). To others he declared, “if thy hand offend thee, cut it off . . . if thy foot offend thee cut it off . . . and if thine eye . . . offend thee, pluck it out” (Matthew 18:8-9) (Behold the Messiah, 227).

Can one imagine a more frightening way to die than to have a millstone hung about one’s neck and then be thrown into the sea?!

6 But blessed are they who have kept the covenant and observed the commandment, for they shall obtain mercy.

7 Wherefore, go to now and flee the land, lest your enemies come upon you; and take your journey, and appoint whom you will to be your leader, and to pay moneys for you.

verse 7 As is pointed out in the commentary for verses 7-8 below, the Lord commands the Colesville saints to go to Missouri.

“appoint whom you will to be your leader” Not surprisingly, Newel Knight was chosen to lead the members of the Thompson branch to Missouri.

“and to pay moneys for you” Perhaps this phrase refers to settling the monetary obligations Leman Copley imposed on the saints who had lived on his land after he fell away from the Church.

8 And thus you shall take your journey into the regions westward, unto the land of Missouri, unto the borders of the Lamanites.

verses 7-8 “take your journey” Following their failure to obtain permanent land in Kirtland, the Colesville saints are commanded, with very little notice, to leave Ohio and go to Missouri. About sixty faithful members obeyed this commandment, leaving Ohio on July 3 and arriving in Independence, Missouri, on July 25. The Colesville saints stuck together in Ohio and throughout their lives in the Church, partially through family ties and other natural bonds of affection.

9 And after you have done journeying, behold, I say unto you, seek ye a living like unto men, until I prepare a place for you.

verse 9 “seek ye a living like unto men” Though the Colesville saints had already entered into the covenant of consecration in Ohio, because of their circumstances the Lord instructs them to earn their living in Missouri as best they can by normal secular means until the law of consecration and stewardship can be organized for them there. This will turn out to be an exception to the rule, as normally only those saints who agree to live by the law of consecration in Missouri will be asked to emigrate there from the East.

10 And again, be patient in tribulation until I come; and, behold, I come quickly, and my reward is with me, and they who have sought me early shall find rest to their souls. Even so. Amen.

verse 10 “they who have sought me early shall find rest to their souls”
See the commentary for D&C 15:6.

Section 55 William Wines Phelps

Apparently, some time during the conference of elders in June 3-5, 1831, a man arrived among them from Canandaigua, New York with his family. He told Joseph in essence, "I'd be an easy man to convert. Teach me your gospel and tell me what to do." He had first heard of the Book of Mormon in March 1830 when he read an announcement that the book was about to come off the press. He later met Parley P. Pratt, who sold him a copy. He read the book and was moved by it.

This was William Wines Phelps—one of the most colorful and competent men in our church history. He was born in New Jersey and was almost fourteen years older than the Prophet. He was thirty-nine years of age when he joined the Church. In his professional life in New York, he had edited and published a newspaper and had been active in politics.

According to the Far West Record, W. W. Phelps (see verse 2) and A. Sidney Gilbert (see D&C 53:3) were ordained elders by Joseph Smith on June 6, 1831, together with several others. It follows that sections 53 and 55, which accompanied those ordinations, ought to be dated together sometime on or before June 6. Since section 54 deals with events that probably took place after June 6, it is likely that section 55 is out of its correct chronological order, belonging properly with section 53 and prior to section 54.

In this section the Lord commands Brother Phelps to be baptized, to be ordained an elder, and to go to Missouri in the presidential party with Joseph Smith and others. In section 55 he is also commanded to assist Oliver Cowdery in running the church's first printing press and to write textbooks for the education of the children of the saints. In 1831 public schools were scarce on the frontier, and Joseph felt the need to provide schools for their children. The Church would also need scriptures for the members, tracts for their missionaries, and newspapers to communicate the news of the Church and the teachings of its leaders.

After arriving in Missouri, he founded and published the Evening and Morning Star, the first monthly magazine devoted to the interests of the Church and published by the Church. The first edition was published at Independence in June 1832. He was in the process of publishing the Book of Commandments when interrupted by a mob that destroyed the press in July of 1833, but the following December another printing office was established in Kirtland, and the publication of the Star resumed there.

In his lifetime, Phelps composed several hymns popular among the saints, including "Gently Raise the Sacred Strain," "O God, the Eternal Father," "Now Let us Rejoice," "Redeemer of Israel," and "Earth with Her Ten Thousand Flowers." He also wrote "The Spirit of God Like a Fire Is Burning" and "The Earth Was Once a Garden Place” for the dedication of the Kirtland Temple. Following the martyrdom of the Prophet, Brother Phelps wrote “Praise to the Man” as a tribute to Joseph.

W.W. Phelps’s career in the Church was a bit tempestuous. He is the only man to be excommunicated on three different occasions, and each time he came back to the Church. He died faithful in the Church at the age of 80 in Salt Lake City.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto you, my servant William, yea, even the Lord of the whole earth, thou art called and chosen; and after thou hast been baptized by water, which if you do with an eye single to my glory, you shall have a remission of your sins and a reception of the Holy Spirit by the laying on of hands;

verse 1 “with an eye single to my glory” Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote:

Through the natural eyes men see the light which guides them in their physical existence, through their spiritual eyes, [they see] the spiritual light which leads to eternal life. As long as the natural eyes are unimpaired, men can see and be guided by the light of day; and as long as the spiritual eyes are single to the glory of God—that is, as long as they are undimmed by sin and are focused solely on righteousness—men can view and understand the things of the Spirit. But if apostasy enters and the spiritual light turns to darkness, “how great is that darkness!” (Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 1:240).

For a discussion of the concept of light see The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1 chapter 15.

Here on earth, we are constantly torn between things of the world and things of the Spirit. Though it might seem ideal and desirable, we do not have the luxury of giving ourselves wholly to things of the Spirit, since things of the world are good and necessary for our existence here. The secret is to keep them in proper perspective—to be “in” the world but not “of” the world. Our ultimate and primary loyalty must be to the things of the Spirit—we must keep our eye single to the glory of God. Man cannot worship both God and mammon (Matthew 6:24).

2 And then thou shalt be ordained by the hand of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., to be an elder unto this church, to preach repentance and remission of sins by way of baptism in the name of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God.

verse 2 As mentioned above, Brother Phelps ordination to the office of elder took place on June 6, 1831.

3 And on whomsoever you shall lay your hands, if they are contrite before me, you shall have power to give the Holy Spirit.

4 And again, you shall be ordained to assist my servant Oliver Cowdery to do the work of printing, and of selecting and writing books for schools in this church, that little children also may receive instruction before me as is pleasing unto me.

verse 4 “you shall be ordained to assist my servant Oliver Cowdery to do the work of printing” Oliver Cowdery, the second elder of the Church, had remained in Missouri since arriving there six months earlier as head of the Lamanite mission. As the second elder, Oliver was also the effective head of the Church in Missouri, and W.W. Phelps was called to assist Oliver there by doing the work of writing, editing, and publishing. Brother Phelps’s calling was so important to the Church, however, that a short time later the Lord will instruct Oliver to assist W. W. Phelps to make certain that he has the resources necessary to complete his calling (see D&C 57:13).

See also the introductory commentary for this section.

“selecting and writing books for schools” Brother Phelps was largely unsuccessful in completing this part of his calling. A year later, in June 1832, Phelps wrote in the first edition of The Evening and Morning Star: “Those appointed to select and prepare books for the use of schools, will attend to that subject, as soon as more weighty matters are finished.”

5 And again, verily I say unto you, for this cause you shall take your journey with my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon, that you may be planted in the land of your inheritance to do this work.

verse 5 “take your journey” Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, William W. Phelps, A. S. Gilbert, and others left Kirtland about two weeks later, on June 19, 1831 to travel to Missouri.

6 And again, let my servant Joseph Coe also take his journey with them. The residue shall be made known hereafter, even as I will. Amen.

verse 6 “let my servant Joseph Coe also take his journey with them” Joseph Coe had recently been baptized and ordained. He made the trip to Missouri as commanded and returned to Kirtland. He served in various callings there, worked to build the Kirtland Temple, and participated in the laying of its cornerstone. He helped in the securing of the Egyptian mummies and their papyri in 1835. He became dissatisfied with the Church in 1837, however, and was excommunicated in December 1838. When the Church moved on to Missouri and Illinois, Joseph Coe remained behind in Kirtland.

“the residue shall be made known hereafter” The rest of the Lord’s instructions will be made known later (compare D&C 57:16).

Section 56 Change in Missionary Assignments

In November 1830, seven months before section 56 was received, Frederick G. Williams joined the Church and traveled with the missionaries to Missouri (to preach to the Lamanites). Williams left both his family and his 144-acre farm behind in Kirtland. The following spring, sometime before May 1831, the Williams family, the Prophet's father, Joseph Smith Sr., and Ezra Thayre, one of the incoming New York saints (see D&C 33:1), had reached some kind of agreement concerning the use of the Williams farm. By the time Ezra Thayre received his mission call to Missouri in June (see D&C 52:22), at least three families (Williams, Smith, and Thayre), and maybe more, had been sharing the Williams farm and its facilities for some weeks.

In May 1831 Joseph Smith Jr. received a revelation concerning the Williams farm and the families living there (see Smith, Kirtland Revelation Book, 91-92). This revelation was not included in the Doctrine and Covenants, but it does give some background to sections 54 and 56. According to this revelation, Joseph Smith Sr. was to manage the Williams farm and all three families were to live there together until the Church could build another house for the Thayres on the same property. Also, a share of the property was to be deeded in stewardship to Frederick G. Williams—who still legally owned it all but had left it at the disposal of the Church when he went to Missouri.

Ezra Thayre was one of the New York Saints who went to Kirtland with a fair amount of cash, presumably from selling his New York property. It appears that he had agreed to consecrate his holdings to the Lord and had received in return a promised interest in the Williams farm. But when Ezra was called to Missouri, he wanted to secure his financial interest in Kirtland by receiving some kind of consideration: either by getting his money back or by receiving legal title to a portion of the Williams farm (see verses 9-10). Essentially, Thayre wanted to own his stewardship at a time when this was not the practice of the Church. Though called as a missionary to Missouri, Ezra would not go until his personal interests were secured. His stubbornness in the matter made it necessary for another companion to be provided for Thomas B. Marsh, who was ready to go as commanded. Four months later, on October 10, 1831, a conference of elders in Kirtland rebuked Ezra for his pride and stubbornness, but no other action was taken against him at that time (see Cannon and Cook, Far West Record, 15-16).

It is possible to assign Ezra Thayre too much blame for the failure of the saints in Ohio to live the law of consecration. He was clearly reluctant to go to Missouri with his financial interests unsecured, but he did not put the saints off his land, as did Lemam Copley, nor did he cease to associate with the Church. There is no evidence that Ezra Thayre, who lived in Kirtland, was in any way involved in the troubles at Thompson, Ohio, between Lemam Copley and the Colesville saints. Further, Ezra Thayre must have repented of his errors, whatever they were, for another call as a missionary to Missouri was made to him seven month later on January 25, 1832. Ezra accepted that mission call and fulfilled two other missions for the Church after that. Later in Kirtland, he participated in the School of the Prophets and served as a land buyer for the Church. He was a member of Zion's Camp in 1834, and though briefly disfellowshipped in 1835, he moved to Missouri with the saints in 1838 and fled with them to Illinois late that year. He was a prominent church member in Nauvoo and a member of the council of fifty there. After the death of Joseph Smith, however, Ezra Thayer did not support the leadership of Brigham Young, but stayed in the East, eventually joining the Reorganized Church.

Among the missionary calls issued in section 52, Thomas B. Marsh and Ezra Thayer were called to serve together as were Newel Knight and Selah J. Griffin. The Lord had changed Newel Knight's assignment, commanding him to continue in his calling as branch president of the Colesville saints and to go to Missouri with them. For the reasons detailed above, Ezra Thayer was dragging his feet. Hence, Thomas B. Marsh was ready and anxious to get on with his mission. Brother Marsh went to Joseph, and in response to Joseph's inquiry of the Lord on the matter, section 56 was received.

D&C 56 Change in Missionary Assignments

D&C 56:4 I, the Lord, command and revoke, as it seemeth me good.

1 Hearken, O ye people who profess my name, saith the Lord your God; for behold, mine anger is kindled against the rebellious, and they shall know mine arm and mine indignation, in the day of visitation and of wrath upon the nations.

verse 1 "Hearken, O ye people who profess my name" The Lord addresses all those who profess his name, that is, all those who claim to revere and worship him. But among these there are the rebellious who have incurred the Lord's anger.

Talk is cheap. Anyone can claim to worship Jesus Christ. But real commitment and real obedience are more difficult. "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven" (Matthew 7:21, italics mine). Those who merely profess Jesus's name while rejecting the obligations of a disciple will incur the wrath and adverse judgment of God.

"in the day of visitation and of wrath upon the nations" In the day of the Lord's second coming.

2 And he that will not take up his cross and follow me, and keep my commandments, the same shall not be saved.

verse 2 “he that will not take up his cross and follow me” For an explanation of the concept of “taking up one’s cross,” see the commentary for D&C 23:6.

“shall not be saved” Here, as in many cases in scripture, the word saved means saved in the celestial heaven. Technically to be saved is to be assigned any degree of Glory.

3 Behold, I, the Lord, command; and he that will not obey shall be cut off in mine own due time, after I have commanded and the commandment is broken.

verse 3 “he that will not obey shall be cut off in mine own due time” Temporally, to be “cut off” is to be excommunicated. Spiritually, it means to be cut off from the Lord’s presence.

4 Wherefore I, the Lord, command and revoke, as it seemeth me good; and all this to be answered upon the heads of the rebellious, saith the Lord.

verse 4 “I, the Lord command and revoke, as it seemeth me good” The Lord emphasizes that he may command and revoke. Even though he is an unchanging and omniscient being, rebelliousness and unrighteousness among his saints may at times necessitate the rescission of commandments already issued. Commandments, even commandments dealing with the future, are not prophecies. They are not even implied prophecies. Surely the Lord sometimes gives commandments he knows will not be obeyed.

At times, the disobedience of some individuals renders the obedience of others impossible. In these instances the Lord will either offer an alternate plan, or he will accept the offering of those who sincerely attempted to obey (D&C 124:49).

5 Wherefore, I revoke the commandment which was given unto my servants Thomas B. Marsh and Ezra Thayre, and give a new commandment unto my servant Thomas, that he shall take up his journey speedily to the land of Missouri, and my servant Selah J. Griffin shall also go with him.

verse 5 Ezra Thayer is released from his missionary calling.

6 For behold, I revoke the commandment which was given unto my servants Selah J. Griffin and Newel Knight, in consequence of the stiffneckedness of my people which are in Thompson, and their rebellions.

verse 6 The stiffneckedness of both Leman Copley and the Colesville saints made it necessary that Newel Knight remain with the Thompson, Ohio Branch, as they travel to Missouri. He is therefore released from his missionary calling as a companion to Selah J Griffin.

7 Wherefore, let my servant Newel Knight remain with them; and as many as will go may go, that are contrite before me, and be led by him to the land which I have appointed.

8 And again, verily I say unto you, that my servant Ezra Thayre must repent of his pride, and of his selfishness, and obey the former commandment which I have given him concerning the place upon which he lives.

verse 8 “Ezra Thayre must repent of his pride, and of his selfishness”

Brother Thayre’s putting his concern for his own financial future above the success of the Missouri mission, above his obligation under the covenant of consecration, and above obedience to the direct command of God, is accounted by the Lord as selfishness which is, of course, a form of pride.

“obey the former commandment” This could refer to the Lord’s command to live the law of consecration and stewardship (D&C 51:3-15), especially since it concerns “the place upon which he lives.” Another possibility is that it refers to the Lord’s call to serve a mission in Missouri (D&C 52:22).

9 And if he will do this, as there shall be no divisions made upon the land, he shall be appointed still to go to the land of Missouri;

verse 9 Ezra Thayre had proposed that the Frederick G. Williams farm be divided up among the three families now occupying the farm. He further proposed that he be deeded that part of the farm designated to be his. It is clear that Thayre’s proposals violated the spirit of the law of consecration and stewardship. In this verse the Lord says that if Ezra Thayre will repent and obey spirit of the law of consecration and stewardship, then it will not be necessary to divide the farm and deed part of it to Ezra Thayre. Further, the Lord avers that then Ezra Thayre would be worthy to have the privilege of serving a mission in Missouri.

10 Otherwise he shall receive the money which he has paid, and shall leave the place, and shall be cut off out of my church, saith the Lord God of hosts; verse 10 In this verse, the Lord outlines for Ezra Thayre the alternatives should he not repent. If Thayre continues to insist on dividing the land and having a part of it deeded to him, then the Church would return the money that he had consecrated, he would have to move off of the land, and he would lose his membership in the Church—he would be excommunicated!

Apparently, Ezra Thayre did repent, because the land was not divided, he was not paid back, and he was not excommunicated. He was again called to fill a mission in Missouri seven months later, on January 25, 1832.

11 And though the heaven and the earth pass away, these words shall not pass away, but shall be fulfilled.

verse 11 The Lord solemnly avows that the alternatives he has offered to Ezra Thayre will apply—they will not be rescinded.

12 And if my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., must needs pay the money, behold, I, the Lord, will pay it unto him again in the land of Missouri, that those of whom he shall receive may be rewarded again according to that which they do;

verse 12 The Lord has not finished speaking of the Ezra Thayre problem. The Lord states that if Thayre insists on being paid back his consecrated money, and that money is returned to him from church funds, then the Lord will make it up to Joseph and the Church through the productivity of the church activities in Missouri. Monies will be consecrated by church members in Missouri to make up the short fall, and those who contribute that money will be blessed.

13 For according to that which they do they shall receive, even in lands for their inheritance.

verse 13 The Lord reiterates that the industrious Missouri members will be compensated spiritually and materially according to the law of the harvest (D&C 6:33).

14 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto my people—you have many things to do and to repent of; for behold, your sins have come up unto me, and are not pardoned, because you seek to counsel in your own ways.

verse 14 “thus saith the Lord unto my people” While this revelation is directed to the entire Church, it likely particularly applies to those saints in Ohio who are struggling with pride and with obeying the revealed principles of consecration.

“you seek to counsel in your own ways” The prideful Ohio saints were seeking to explain to God why he must do things the way they think he should. Seeking to counsel the Lord (Jacob 4:10) continues to be a major stumbling block of some people in the Church even today. These tend to disagree with the commandments, and they seek to explain to the Lord why the commandments are wrong.

15 And your hearts are not satisfied. And ye obey not the truth, but have pleasure in unrighteousness.

verse 15 “your hearts are not satisfied” The Lord’s commands are not fulfilling to the prideful members. They need more in the way of tangible material and temporal rewards. They do not obey the commandments (“the truth”), but rather seek after things of the world. Note here that “the truth” is more than something to be believed. It is something to be done.

16 Wo unto you rich men, that will not give your substance to the poor, for your riches will canker your souls; and this shall be your lamentation in the day of visitation, and of judgment, and of indignation: The harvest is past, the summer is ended, and my soul is not saved!

verse 16 “Wo unto you rich men” This phrase refers to those who receive less back temporally from living the law of consecration than they contribute. In other words their consecration is larger than their stewardship. There is no sin in being rich; rather the sin is in being unwilling to live the law of consecration and to give up the pleasure of having more than your fellow saints. It doesn't matter what other redeeming characteristics a rich man may possess. If he is unwilling to stop being rich so that his brothers and sisters can stop being poor, then he can neither establish Zion nor inherit the celestial kingdom. Is there clear and present spiritual danger in being rich? Indeed there is (Luke 18:18-30).

17 Wo unto you poor men, whose hearts are not broken, whose spirits are not contrite, and whose bellies are not satisfied, and whose hands are not stayed from laying hold upon other men's goods, whose eyes are full of greediness, and who will not labor with your own hands!

verse 17 This verse refers to those who receive back more temporally from living the law of consecration than they contribute. Those poor who receive increased assets through the law of consecration must do it with a spirit of humility and gratitude rather than with a “welfare rights” or an “entitlement” mentality, demanding the assets of working people. Greed is a sin that plagues both the rich and the poor. Just as the unredeemed and greedy rich often despise the poor and withhold from them what is necessary to live, so the unredeemed and greedy poor often hate the rich and lust after their wealth. Those poor who seek to live the law of consecration out of greed or out of the desire to avoid working for a living can neither establish Zion nor inherit the celestial kingdom.

18 But blessed are the poor who are pure in heart, whose hearts are broken, and whose spirits are contrite, for they shall see the kingdom of God coming in power and great glory unto their deliverance; for the fatness of the earth shall be theirs.

verse 18 “blessed are the poor who are pure in heart” It is possible to be poor, enter the law of consecration and stewardship, and thrive both spiritually and temporarily in it. An attitude of humility and gratitude and a good work ethic are vital requirements.

The Lord's counsel in verses 16-18 is directed specifically to those going to Missouri to lay the foundations for Zion. Living the law of consecration and stewardship is a significant challenge for every individual, be he rich or poor.

“for the fatness of the earth shall be theirs” Fatness in this context means material abundance, having more than is needed. When the law of consecration is implemented to its fullest extent by a Zion people, all those who live under it will have enough and to spare—not just of their needs, but of their wants as well.

19 For behold, the Lord shall come, and his recompense shall be with him, and he shall reward every man, and the poor shall rejoice;

verse 19 “the Lord shall come” The Lord will come in power and glory to right every wrong, to remove both iniquities and inequities from the Church and from the earth, and to justly adjudicate the proper rewards and inheritances of all people.

“his recompense shall be with him” This phrase refers to the fact that the Lord will fairly and appropriately reward or pay all of the people on earth at the moment of his second coming.

20 And their generations shall inherit the earth from generation to generation, forever and ever. And now I make an end of speaking unto you. Even so. Amen.

verse 20 “forever and ever” This earth will become the celestial kingdom for all those who have lived upon it and are worthy of that degree of glory. Thus, an inheritance upon the earth “forever and ever” is an inheritance in the celestial kingdom of God.

The next four sections of the Doctrine and Covenants, sections 57 through 60, were given in Missouri and are referred to as the Zion revelations.

Brief Historical Setting

In Missouri Joseph received instructions from the Lord concerning Zion, including the location of the temple site, the “center place” of Zion [D&C 57 - Independence Is Center Place of Zion] and a warning that Zion would be established only after much tribulation [D&C 58 - Instructions Concerning Zion].

1831 August

The Lord also gave counsel to Joseph on Sabbath day observance. This was received shortly after Joseph attended the funeral of Sister Polly Knight, the wife of Joseph Knight [D&C 59 - Law of the Sabbath].

Section 57 Independence Is Center Place of Zion

The elders who had been called to Missouri began leaving Kirtland in pairs in the middle of June, 1831. At the time the Church was only fourteen months old. Joseph Smith, accompanied by seven others (Martin Harris, W.W. Phelps, Edward Partridge, Sidney Rigdon, Sidney Gilbert, Brother Gilbert's wife Elizabeth, and Joseph Coe), started west on June 19 and went as far as Cincinnati by wagon, canal boat, and stage coach. From Cincinnati they proceeded by river boat to Saint Louis, Missouri, and from there Joseph and four others walked the 240 miles across the state to Jackson County. The rest came up the Missouri River by boat. In Jackson County, they met up with Oliver Cowdery, Ziba Peterson, Peter Whitmer, Jr., and Frederick G. Williams who had previously traveled to Missouri on their mission to the Lamanites. Joseph and his traveling company had traveled about one thousand miles in less than a month, and they arrived in Independence July 17, 1831. Together in Missouri, then, were the presidential party, the Lamanite missionaries (minus Parley P. Pratt), and some elders who had already arrived from Kirtland. The saints from the Colesville Branch arrived a few days later.

When Joseph Smith left Kirtland for Missouri according to the commandment received in section 52, he had been living in Kirtland for a little less than five months. He and his wife, Emma, had been living in their own quarters for less than three months. In such a short time, organization of the Church in Kirtland was not anywhere near completed, but already the Lord had made it clear that establishing the Church in Kirtland was not the long-term goal of the Church. Kirtland was merely a staging area or preliminary gathering point for the establishment of Zion in far-off Missouri. Therefore, Joseph Smith and other saints, including the Colesville saints from New York, were commanded to continue on to Missouri to prepare for Zion in that place.

In July 1831 in Jackson County, the Prophet Joseph surveyed the degenerate condition of the place and was discouraged. He wrote:

The meeting of our brethren [Oliver Cowdery, Peter Whitmer, Jr., Ziba Peterson, and Frederick G. Williams], who had long awaited our arrival, was a glorious one, and moistened with many tears. It seemed good and pleasant for brethren to meet together in unity. But our reflections were many, coming as we had from a highly cultivated state of society in the east, and standing now upon the confines or western limits of the United States, and looking into the vast wilderness of those that sat in darkness; how natural it was to observe the degradation, leanness of intellect, ferocity, and jealousy of a people that were nearly a century behind the times, and to feel for those who roamed about without the benefit of civilization, refinement, or religion (HC, 1:189).

Joseph wondered, how and when could anything as magnificent as Zion be created out of this? In this mood he had probably been reading the book of Isaiah, and on July 20 he asked three poignant questions of the Lord—all three taken from Isaiah. These three questions were: When will the wilderness blossom as the rose (Isaiah 35:1)? When will Zion be built up in her glory (Isaiah 60:1-2)? And, where will thy temple stand unto which all nations shall come in these last days (Isaiah 2:2)?

In response to this yearning prayer, Joseph received section 57 on July 20, three days after his arrival in Independence, which answered only one of the questions—the one regarding the location of the temple. Additional answers to the Prophet’s questions were promised in the future, however.

The saints already knew from section 52 that Missouri was the location of Zion, but where specifically in Missouri? Previous revelations had suggested that it would be “on the borders by the Lamanites” (see D&C 28:9), “into the western countries” (see D&C 45:64), and “into the regions westward, unto the land of Missouri” (see D&C 54:8). Oliver Cowdery and the missionaries to the Lamanites, still faithful to their call (see D&C 28:8), were laboring in the vicinity of Independence in Jackson County, Missouri, so it was there that the Prophet and his company first headed.

The saints from Colesville, New York, about sixty in number, who had settled temporarily at Thompson, Ohio, arrived in Independence on July 25, under the leadership of Newel Knight—five days after section 57 was received.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 57:1-3 The place which is now called Independence is the center place of Zion.

1 Harken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, who have assembled yourselves together, according to my commandments, in this land, which is the land of Missouri, which is the land which I have appointed and consecrated for the gathering of the saints.

2 Wherefore, this is the land of promise, and the place for the city of Zion.

verse 2 “this is the land of promise” A land of promise is, of course, a land obtained according to a promise of the Lord. In D&C 42:35-36 the Lord had promised the saints that the location of the New Jerusalem (see Ether 13:1-12) would be revealed to them in the future. In D&C 52:1-5 Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were commanded to go to Missouri to hold a conference and were promised that if they were faithful the Lord would reveal to them the land of their inheritance. Verse 3 will fulfill these two promises.

“city of Zion” This is the New Jerusalem which will one day be founded based on celestial principles (D&C 105:5) including the law of consecration and stewardship. The reader is reminded that Zion may be defined on two levels—see the commentary for D&C 42:9.

3 And thus saith the Lord your God, if you will receive wisdom here is wisdom. Behold, the place which is now called Independence is the center place; and a spot for the temple is lying westward, upon a lot which is not far from the courthouse.

verse 3 This verse gives the location of the “center place” of Zion or the site of the temple. The site is just west of the courthouse in Independence and consists of 63 1/4 acres. It was dedicated as a site for the temple on August 3, 1831 by Joseph Smith. Actually, Joseph eventually laid out plans for a complex of twenty-four temples that would some day be built on the site.

Today this plot of land is owned by three separate churches. Our Church owns about 20 acres. The Hedrickites—the Church of Christ, Temple Lot—owns the small plot where Joseph placed corner stones to mark the site of the center temple. This group was organized by Granville Hedrick as a splinter group from the Utah church. They quietly purchased the center part of the temple lot after the saints departed Independence, and they located their headquarters there. Today this is a small group of friendly people who still live and worship in Independence. The Reorganized LDS Church owns the remainder, which is the largest part of the property.

4 Wherefore, it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints, and also every tract lying westward, even unto the line running directly between Jew and Gentile; verse 4 “it is wisdom that the land should be purchased by the saints” A parcel of land containing the temple site—the 63 1/4 acres—was purchased by the Church on December 19, 1831 from Jones H. Flournoy for $130.

“also every tract lying westward, even the line running directly between Jew and Gentile” The saints were instructed to buy all the land between Independence and the Indian frontier. This line is the Missouri River. In those days the United States government had given to the Indians the lands west of the Missouri. The “Jew” refers to the Indians. While none of the families of Lehi and Ishmael were actually descended from the tribe of Judah, the book occasionally refers to them as “Jews” since they came out from the land of Judah. The only actual Jews among the Book of Mormon peoples were those descended from Mulek, the son of King Zedekiah and any others in his party who may have been of the tribe of Judah. The “Gentile” refers to the people living east of the river, many of whom were a lawless element.

5 And also every tract bordering by the prairies, inasmuch as my disciples are enabled to buy lands. Behold, this is wisdom, that they may obtain it for an everlasting inheritance.

verse 5 “every tract bordering by the prairies” The Lord repeats his instruction to the saints to buy the land between Independence and the Indian frontier.

“everlasting inheritance” The scattered ten tribes of Israel will be gathered to the “New Jerusalem”—the United States of America with its center in Jackson County. Thus Jackson County is the center place of the promised land of the ten tribes of Israel. And for how long? This verse clearly states that this land is promised as an “everlasting inheritance.” Does this mean that it will cease to be a promised land at the beginning of the Millennium? At the end of the Millennium when the earth is celestialized? No, the verse suggests that it will be a promised land to that part of the house of Israel forever—even after the earth is changed into a celestial globe.

6 And let my servant Sidney Gilbert stand in the office to which I have appointed him, to receive moneys, to be an agent unto the church, to buy land in all the regions round about, inasmuch as can be done in righteousness, and as wisdom shall direct.

verse 6 For an introduction to A. Sidney Gilbert, see the introductory commentary for section 53. Sidney Gilbert is commanded to function as the land agent in buying up lands for the incoming saints under Bishop Partridge (see D&C 53:4). Also he will be instructed to establish a mercantile store in Independence for the purpose of raising money to buy lands for stewardships (see verse 8) and to meet other church financial needs. It is interesting to note that in two years in Independence, the saints bought only the sixty-three acres that comprise the temple lot.

7 And let my servant Edward Partridge stand in the office to which I have appointed him, and divide unto the saints their inheritance, even as I have commanded; and also those whom he has appointed to assist him.

verse 7 Bishop Edward Partridge is to continue in his calling in receiving consecrations and assigning and distributing those goods which make up their “inheritance” or “stewardship.” The term inheritance applies to the land or real estate that is part of the saints’ stewardship.

8 And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant Sidney Gilbert plant himself in this place, and establish a store, that he may sell goods without fraud, that he may obtain money to buy lands for the good of the saints, and that he may obtain whatsoever things the disciples may need to plant them in their inheritance.

verse 8 See the commentary for verse 6. Sidney Gilbert’s retail store would also provide goods needed by the saints in the area and eventually also serve as a bishop’s storehouse. Managing this store was Sidney Gilbert’s personal stewardship in Missouri.

9 And also let my servant Sidney Gilbert obtain a license—behold here is wisdom, and whoso readeth let him understand—that he may send goods also unto the people, even by whom he will as clerks employed in his service;

verse 9 “let my servant Sidney Gilbert obtain a license” The saints were settling right on the line between the United States and Indian territory (today approximately the Missouri-Kansas border) and apparently intended to operate on both sides of this border. On the first Sunday in Zion, W.W. Phelps preached to a mixed audience of Native Americans and settlers on the western side of the border, and as an agent for the Church in Independence, Sidney Gilbert would undoubtedly need to send goods across the border, which was only a few miles away (see verse 10). Any trade across the state line into Indian territory, was closely controlled by the federal government. Therefore, it was necessary for Sidney to get a permit or license to send goods across the border to the Lamanites, to the missionaries, and to other saints operating there.

“that he may send goods also unto the people, even by whom he will as clerks employed in his service” Brother Gilbert, once he had a proper license, could then send goods across the border to the Indians. The last part of this phrase, “even by whom he will as clerks employed in his service,” refers to the fact that once Brother Gilbert was properly authorized by the license, he could have these goods sent by anyone he wished as long as they were clerks whom he employed.

10 And thus provide for my saints, that my gospel may be preached unto those who sit in darkness and in the region and shadow of death.

verse 10 “those who sit in darkness” This phrase is used here particularly in reference to the Indians who live in Indian territory. The missionaries to the Lamanites had already preached to the Shawnees and Delawares west of the border, and the saints at this time still intended to further evangelize the Indians there. Oliver had already notified the Prophet of the great tribe known as Navajos “three hundred miles west of Santa Fe,” and it was initially envisioned that the Latter-day Saints and the Lamanites would one day mingle together. However, the missionaries were soon denied access to the Indian lands when antagonistic Protestant missionaries persuaded the Indian agent to evict the Mormon missionaries from off the Indian lands.

verses 8-10 The full meaning of these verses, once they were received from the Lord, was then later partly and purposefully disguised by the Prophet to keep the enemies of the Church from knowing specifically what the Church was planning to do to convert the Lamanites. Since the saints were not allowed to go across the border into the Indian nations, the plan was to get the Indians to come to them. It was a common practice at trading posts to cheat the less sophisticated Indians out of their barterable items. Sidney Gilbert’s store was to be a place where the Indians would get a fair exchange for their goods—“without fraud”. This would hopefully accomplish two things:

(1) First, it would bring the Indians to the saints, and, (2) once the Indians saw that the saints dealt honestly with them, they would be converted to the gospel.

The two earliest manuscript copies of section 57 read in the latter part of verse 9 and all of verse 10: “That he may send goods also unto the Lamanites, even by whom he will as clerks employed in his service and then the gospel may be proclaimed unto them” (Smith, Kirtland Revelation Book, 90; see also Woodford, Historical Development, 1:728-31).

11 And again, verily I say unto you, let my servant William W. Phelps be planted in this place, and be established as a printer unto the church.

12 And lo, if the world receive his writings—behold here is wisdom—let him obtain whatsoever he can obtain in righteousness, for the good of the saints.

verses 11-12 “William W. Phelps” See the introductory commentary for section 55. Consistent with the commandments given to him earlier, Brother Phelps is instructed to carry on his assignment of printing and writing (see D&C 55:4) in Independence, Missouri. His stewardship was to be a printer and writer and to make whatever money he could at these trades “in righteousness” so that any moneys he made in excess of his own needs might be used “for the good of the saints.”

13 And let my servant Oliver Cowdery assist him, even as I have commanded, in whatsoever place I shall appoint unto him, to copy, and to correct, and select, that all things may be right before me, as it shall be proved by the Spirit through him.

verse 13 In this verse Oliver Cowdery is called to assist W. W. Phelps in the work of printing. In D&C 55:4, received in Kirtland, W.W. Phelps had been called to assist Oliver Cowdery in the work of printing and creating school books for children. Is there a discrepancy here? Has Oliver been demoted? Perhaps we learn that in the work of the Lord we are to assist each other, and it matters little who is called to lead or who is called to assist.

As a result of this commandment, W. W. Phelps and Oliver Cowdery began the process of buying and moving a printing press all the way from Cincinnati, opening a printing office, and publishing a monthly newspaper, The Evening and the Morning Star, as well as printing other tracts for the Church. Eventually, they were instructed to publish the Book of Commandments (see D&C 70:1-3; 72:20-21), which task was underway when a mob destroyed the printing office and the press on July 20, 1833.

“as it shall be proved by the Spirit through him” That is “approved” or “confirmed” by the Spirit through Brother Phelps.

14 And thus let those of whom I have spoken be planted in the land of Zion, as speedily as can be, with their families, to do those things even as I have spoken.

verse 14 “with their families” Originally, the calls issued to the Missouri missionaries were extended to the brethren themselves (see D&C 52:3-8, 22-44), and presumably the calls were for a limited period of time after which they would return to their homes. By now there are several who are instructed to remain in Missouri, including the Colesville saints, A. Sidney Gilbert, Oliver Cowdery, Edward Partridge, W. W. Phelps, and others. If their families are not already with them, they are instructed to move their families to Independence as well.

15 And now concerning the gathering—Let the bishop and the agent make preparations for those families which have been commanded to come to this land, as soon as possible, and plant them in their inheritance.

verse 15 Bishop Partridge and Brother Gilbert are admonished to go to work to provide land and homes as stewardships or “inheritances” for all those called to live in Missouri.

16 And unto the residue of both elders and members further directions shall be given hereafter. Even so. Amen.

By the end of 1831, Bishop Partridge had established a storehouse for the reception and distribution of consecrated goods, and one year after the gathering had commenced in Missouri most of the three to four hundred converts living there had consecrated their property to the bishop and were living on inheritances. But the implementation of this law was impeded by problems. Wherever the law of consecration and stewardship was attempted, there was a tendency for poor people to be attracted to the movement and for the wealthy to shun such an undertaking. Some members did not comply or did not learn of the recommendations of the leaders in Kirtland, who instructed the saints not to gather in Missouri unless they took with them money, seeds, cattle, or other contributions to the system. Evidently, there was not sufficient property to give every family an adequate inheritance. A number of families crowded into homes that were meant to support a single family. Some became lazy while they were waiting for an inheritance or the anticipated second coming of the Lord. Others left the Church taking with them their inheritances. As early as the fall of 1832, Bishop Edward Partridge began leasing land (rather than conveying deeds) to the saints. Under the provision of these contracts, stewards were not permitted to transfer their inheritances to their wives, children, or heirs, or to sell their property.

On several occasions, the Prophet wrote to church leaders in Missouri informing them that their adaptation of the law of consecration was not correct. In a letter to W. W. Phelps, dated November 27, 1832, Joseph Smith stated that he was displeased because the saints who had gathered in Zion had not received “their inheritance by consecrations, by order of deed from the Bishop” (Robert J. Woodford, “The Historical Development of the Doctrine and Covenants,” unpublished Ph.D. dissertation, BYU, 1974). The Prophet eventually resolved this problem.

Meanwhile only a smattering of members in Kirtland attempted to live the law of consecration, although their practice was not precisely the same as the basic principles of the order that had been revealed.

It is one thing to receive a revelation and quite another to implement the instructions received therein. Since the Lord has stated that we must be united under the principles of consecration and stewardship or we cannot inherit the celestial kingdom, one day we must live these principles (D&C 88:22; 105:5).

After experiencing frustrations and failures for almost a decade, in 1838 members throughout the Church were given a less comprehensive law, the law of tithing (see D&C 119-120).

Section 58 Instructions Concerning Zion

Please review the introductory background material for section 57. Joseph recorded the events of his first week in Zion as follows:

The first Sabbath after our arrival in Jackson County [ironically, the 24th of July], Brother W. W. Phelps preached to a western audience over the boundary of the United States, wherein were present specimens of all the families of the earth; Shem, Ham, and Japheth; several of the Lamanites or Indians—representative of Shem; quite a respectable number of Negroes—descendants of Ham; and the balance was made up of citizens of the surrounding country, and fully represented themselves as pioneers of the West. At this meeting two were baptized, who had previously believed in the fulness of the Gospel.

During this week the Colesville branch, referred to in the latter part of the last revelation [57:15], and Sidney Rigdon, Sidney Gilbert, and wife [Elizabeth], and Elders Morley and Booth, arrived. I received the following—section 58 (HC, 1:191).

In the background materials for section 57, we learned that Joseph had asked three questions of the Lord: When will the wilderness blossom as the rose (Isaiah 35:1)? When will Zion be built up in her glory (Isaiah 60:1-2)? And, where will thy temple stand unto which all nations shall come in these last days (Isaiah 2:2)? In section 57 the Lord answered the third question: Where will thy temple stand? The Lord concluded section 57 by promising: “Further directions shall be given hereafter” (D&C 57:16).

In section 58, received August 1, 1831, the Lord answers the first two questions. The second question—When will Zion be built up in her glory?—was answered first.

On August 2, 1831, the day following the reception of section 58, Joseph and Sidney helped members of the Colesville Branch “lay the first log, for a house, as a foundation of Zion,” a combination church and school in Kaw Township, twelve miles west of Independence (HC, 1:196). Following the Lord’s instructions (see verse 57), Sidney Rigdon also consecrated and dedicated Jackson County, Missouri, specifically as the land of Zion and for the gathering of the saints. According to Oliver Cowdery: “Brother Sidney Rigdon stood up and asked saying: Do you receive this land for the land of your inheritance with thankful hearts from the Lord? answer from all: ‘We do.’ Do you pledge yourselves to keep the laws of God on this land, which you never have kept in your own lands? ‘We do.’ Do you pledge yourselves to see that others of your brethren who shall come hither do keep the laws of God? ‘We do.’ After prayer he arose and said, I now pronounce this land consecrated and dedicated to the Lord for a possession and inheritance for the saints (in the name of Jesus Christ having authority from him). And for all the faithful servants of the Lord to the remotest ages of time. Amen” (cited in John Whitmer’s Early Latter Day Saint History, 79).

On the next day, August 3, 1831, two days after section 58 had been received, Joseph Smith laid the cornerstone of the temple in Independence a mile and a half west of the new brick courthouse. According to the commandment in verse 57, Sidney Rigdon consecrated the ground and pronounced the land dedicated to the Lord. On the following day, the Prophet Joseph dedicated the temple site.

D&C 58 Instructions Concerning Zion

D&C 58:26-29 It is not meet that I should command in all things; for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant. Men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause.

D&C 58:42-43 If a man repenteth of his sins . . . he will confess them and forsake them.

D&C 58:64-65 The gospel must be preached unto every creature, and behold the Son of Man cometh.

1 Hearken, O ye elders of my church, and give ear to my word, and learn of me what I will concerning you, and also concerning this land unto which I have sent you.

verse 1 “learn of me what I will concerning you” The Lord commands his saints, and particularly his elders or the leaders of his Church to pay attention to this revelation and learn well what the Lord would have them do.

“also concerning this land unto which I have sent you” The Lord will also make his will known regarding the land of Zion. At this point the saints know the basic principles for establishing Zion (sections 42, 51). They also know where Zion is to be established (section 57), and they know who among the saints will begin to establish it (sections 52-57). What they do not know is the details of how they should proceed, the time table for these events, and exactly what to expect in the future. It is natural that they should want the Lord to provide them with detailed instructions for every step of the process. They will learn, however, that true saints should not be expected to be commanded in everything but should employ their own initiative in accomplishing worthwhile projects (see verses 26-29).

2 For verily I say unto you, blessed is he that keepeth my commandments, whether in life or in death; and he that is faithful in tribulation, the reward of the same is greater in the kingdom of heaven.

verse 2 “whether in life or in death” The Lord here begins to prepare the saints for the truth that while the rewards of obedience are sure and certain, for some those rewards will come only after further tribulation and perhaps even following death. Zion will not be established easily or all at once, and the saints might not enjoy its blessings in their lifetime.

3 Ye cannot behold with your natural eyes, for the present time, the design of your God concerning those things which shall come hereafter, and the glory which shall follow after much tribulation.

verse 3 “Ye cannot behold with your natural eyes” In spite of the revelations the saints have received concerning Zion, they do not, nor can they as yet, understand what is to befall them and the city of Zion. The faithful saints will receive their promised inheritance, but only after more trials and sacrifices. They will learn in the next verse that “the hour is not yet.” It is likely that this verse and the next caught the saints by surprise. They were not expecting a delay.

4 For after much tribulation come the blessings. Wherefore the day cometh that ye shall be crowned with much glory; the hour is not yet, but is nigh at hand.

verse 4 “after much tribulation come the blessings” When this verse is coupled with D&C 101:4-5 and D&C 136:31, we learn that the Lord will try us and test us until the dross is removed from our souls and we are worthy for an inheritance in Zion.

It would seem that there are separate categories of tribulations that may be experienced by us during our mortal sojourn.

First, there are adversities that we may simply term “accidents of mortality.” This telestial world is characterized by diseases, personal challenges, and the potential for accidents. These are simply characteristic of this mortal phase. The Lord does not necessarily dictate that they happen, rather he simply allows us to deal with this mortal phase and its inherent trials (“type 1” sufferings). In this latter category are found the problems we may encounter as a consequence of the poor choices or unrighteousness of other people. This mortal phase is hazardous. We humans are all in it together and must watch out for each other and care for each other while we are here.

Second, tribulations may come as a natural consequence of disregarding the Lord’s counsel. These occur as the result of unwise choices (“type 2” sufferings).

Third, trials may come as tutorials from the Lord given to righteous people whom he wishes to teach patience, character, long-suffering, and courage (“type 3” sufferings). For a more complete discussion of adversities and suffering, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 1, Adversity and Suffering.

5 Remember this, which I tell you before, that you may lay it to heart, and receive that which is to follow.

verse 5 The Lord continues his warnings and foreshadowings that trials and tragedies are in the offing. He is warning the saints of trials yet to come, even though no one can, at this time, see a troubling cloud on the horizon. How, for example, are the saints, in August of 1831, to know that Jackson County, like Kirtland, will not be a permanent place for them, even though it has been dedicated and consecrated for that purpose?

6 Behold, verily I say unto you, for this cause I have sent you—that you might be obedient, and that your hearts might be prepared to bear testimony of the things which are to come;

verse 6 “for this cause I have sent you—that you might be obedient” Here the Lord implies that an important purpose for the commandment to establish Zion is not so much to establish Zion physically but to establish a spiritual Zion—a faithful, obedient, and consecrated people.

The saints are today still establishing spiritual Zion in all the stakes of Zion throughout the world. The physical Zion will yet be built in this dispensation, and on the very ground dedicated for that purpose in 1831. But in the meantime, each of us can and should establish spiritual Zion in our own homes and in our own hearts by obedience and faithfulness to the Lord. When the Lord’s people have at last become a righteous people, the Lord will direct them in the details of establishing the complete physical and spiritual Zion.

“the things which are to come” This phrase refers to the events associated with the end of the world and the second coming of Christ, including the inevitable establishment of a physical Zion in Jackson County, Missouri. The Church’s investments in Zion, the beginnings made by these pioneers, testify that Zion will be built as the prophets have spoken.

7 And also that you might be honored in laying the foundation, and in bearing record of the land upon which the Zion of God shall stand;

verse 7 It would seem, as we study today the Lord’s answer to Joseph Smith, that the Lord was trying to tell the saints that Zion was not to be established in 1831 but rather in the future, after the saints had experienced much tribulation. It is also apparent, however, that the saints did not take this meaning from the revelation, as they seemed to continue to anticipate that they would build Zion immediately. Joseph Fielding Smith said:

That Zion was to be established and the city built at once was evidently the idea possessed by some of the saints. . . . That the city was not to be built at that time is indicated in this word: [Section 58:3-7, quoted]. From this we see that the glory and greatness of the city of Zion was reserved for the future; although in the scriptural sense the time is “nigh at hand” (Essentials in Church History, 1950, 131).

If Zion was not to be built up immediately, why were the saints sent to Missouri? In verses 3-7 above, the Lord outlines the purposes for which he had sent the saints to Zion. The first was a test of obedience for the saints (verse 6). They had already been obedient in coming to Missouri and would yet have the opportunity to be obedient to instructions still to come from the Lord. Second, they were to prepare their hearts so they could bear a personal conviction of what was to come (also verse 6)—the building of Zion. By living in Zion they would acquire the personal knowledge and experience upon which to base that testimony. Third, they were to lay the foundations for the city of Zion (verse 7). An apparent fourth reason is found in the two following verses.

“that you might be honored” Here we learn that by sending these saints to Zion, the Lord is honoring them. He judges them worthy of being honored by him.

“in laying the foundation . . . of Zion” These saints were sent to Jackson County to establish the location and lay the foundation (largely a figurative foundation) of Zion. They did not yet understand that a later generation would actually build the holy city.

8 And also that a feast of fat things might be prepared for the poor; yea, a feast of fat things, of wine on the lees well refined, that the earth may know that the mouths of the prophets shall not fail;

verse 8 “a feast of fat things” The “feast of fat things” refers to a fatty, sumptuous, full-flavored meal fit for royalty.

“wine on the lees” This expression refers to wine which remains on its settlings or dregs until it is well matured. It is then poured off and strained to provide the best wine possible. The word lees here is a translation of the Hebrew shmarim, which literally means “dregs.” The expression “wine on the lees” apparently refers to only a part of the total fermented wine, the part nearest the dregs. That is the strongest, sweetest, and most concentrated portion of the fermented product—the “fat part” (see Isaiah 25:6). These concentrated dregs, which contained the most flavor, were similar to a jelly or preserve and were considered a great delicacy.

It should also be noted, parenthetically, that when drinking is given a negative connotation—for example, if the cup were bitter like gall or vinegar—then the dregs are the bitterest and most difficult portion to drink (as in Psalm 75:8; Alma 40:26). The lees or the dregs represent the most concentrated part of a substance or, metaphorically, of an experience. If a drink is sweet like wine, then the dregs are the sweetest part, but if the drink is bitter like vinegar, then the dregs are the most bitter part.

Only the best will be served at the Lord’s feast. These two expressions figuratively, then, express the idea that the fulness of the gospel brings both spiritual and temporal plenty to all, but particularly to the poor.

9 Yea, a supper of the house of the Lord, well prepared, unto which all nations shall be invited.

verse 9 Not only were the saints to begin to prepare a “feast of fat things . . . for the poor” (see Isaiah 25:6—Joseph may well have been studying the book of Isaiah at the time), they were also to prepare “a supper of the house of the Lord.” Both of these expressions, the “feast of fat things” and the “supper of the house of the Lord,” figuratively represent the law of consecration and stewardship. The object of the law of consecration and stewardship is to bring to the world an entirely new social order, to establish a community in which even the poor will share the “fat things” with the “rich and the learned, the wise and the noble” (Smith and Sjodahl, Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 336).

The “feast of fat things . . . prepared for the poor” and “supper of the house of the Lord” seem, on another level, to refer to the latter-day Zion and the restored gospel. This is the same meal referred to in other places as the marriage feast of the Lamb, when Jesus as the bridegroom comes to the earth to receive his bride—the Church—unto himself with joy and rejoicing (see Revelation 19:7-9, 17). The implication is that in Zion the celestial law, the law of consecration and stewardship, will eventually be fully observed.

10 First, the rich and the learned, the wise and the noble;

11 And after that cometh the day of my power; then shall the poor, the lame, and the blind, and the deaf, come in unto the marriage of the Lamb, and partake of the supper of the Lord, prepared for the great day to come.

verses 10-11 “First, the rich . . . and then . . . the poor” Before the celestial order is established in Zion, the world lieth in sin (D&C 49:20), and it is only the rich who have a material abundance. It is inevitable that the wealthy and the educated will also have some advantage in learning the gospel. But when the law of consecration and stewardship is instituted, then all injustices (ignorance and poverty) and all worldly advantages will be done away, and the righteous poor will receive full measure of the blessings of the gospel.

12 Behold, I, the Lord, have spoken it.

13 And that the testimony might go forth from Zion, yea, from the mouth of the city of the heritage of God—

verse 13 “that the testimony might go forth from Zion” This testimony is to that of future events associated with the end of the world, the second coming of Christ, and the establishment of the law of consecration and stewardship.

verses 14-20 In these following verses, the Lord gives counsel to Bishop Edward Partridge some of which applies to bishops in general—especially verse 17 which calls a bishop to be a “judge in Israel.”

14 Yea, for this cause I have sent you hither, and have selected my servant Edward Partridge, and have appointed unto him his mission in the land.

verse 14 “Edward Partridge . . . his mission in the land” Edward Partridge had previously been called as bishop of the Church (see D&C 41:9). As such, his proper functions included assigning stewardships and judging the hearts and behaviors of the saints relative to the law of the Lord. This will continue to be his particular function when called to stay in Missouri (see verse 24). There can be no doubt that Bishop Edward Partridge was the individual called of God and appointed to “divide unto the saints their inheritance” in Zion (D&C 57:7).

15 But if he repent not of his sins, which are unbelief and blindness of heart, let him take heed lest he fall.

verse 15 “if he repent not of his sins” During their weeks in Missouri together, “Bishop Partridge several times strenuously opposed the measures of the Prophet, and was sharply reprovved by the latter for his unbelief and hardness of heart” (Clark, Messages of the First Presidency, 113). Despite his high calling as the bishop in Zion, if Partridge had not repented of this attitude he would have fallen. Bishop Partridge was a good man with a firm testimony of the gospel, and he eventually sacrificed all he had for the kingdom. But he also had some very firm opinions about how Zion was to be built—opinions which were at odds with the instructions he received from Joseph Smith. These differences with the Prophet continued for some time and will eventually contribute to the loss of Zion in Jackson County, Missouri. Edward Partridge will not be the last saint to doubt the words or plans of the prophets.

16 Behold his mission is given unto him, and it shall not be given again.

verses 15-16 During the administration of Joseph F. Smith, the First Presidency of the Church issued a statement to clarify the role played by Edward Partridge in Missouri. The following is an excerpt from that statement:

On occasion of the Prophet’s first visit to Independence, Missouri—Edward Partridge accompanied him—in the meetings and conferences held upon the land of Zion, bishop Partridge several times strenuously opposed the measures of the Prophet, and was sharply reprovved by the latter for his unbelief and hardness of heart. Indeed, the apostate, Ezra Booth, who was present, made the scene between the bishop and the Prophet one of the items that justified to him his apostasy. He refers to the circumstance in a letter, addressed to Bishop Partridge, which has been several times published in anti-Mormon literature. The bishop, moreover, was reprovved for his “blindness of heart and unbelief,” and warned of the danger of falling from his high station, in a revelation given in August 1831, while both he and the Prophet were still in Missouri (Messages of the First Presidency, 4:113).

Your author has frequently had feelings of empathy for the Prophet Joseph as I have studied the Doctrine and Covenants and the events of the early history of the Church. How often must he have felt discouraged and lonely! He repeatedly encountered apostasy and recalcitrance in those whose support he so desperately needed. I have become fond of a story related by Daniel Tyler, an associate of the prophet in Kirtland:

At the time William Smith and others rebelled against the Prophet at Kirtland, I attended a meeting . . . where Joseph presided. Entering the school house a little before the meeting opened and gazing upon the man of God, I perceived sadness in his countenance and tears trickling down his cheeks. A few moments later a hymn was sung, and he opened the meeting by prayer. Instead of facing the audience, however, he turned his back and bowed upon his knees, facing the wall. This, I suppose, was done to hide his sorrow and tears.

I had heard men and women pray . . . from the most ignorant, both as to letters and intellect, to the most learned and eloquent. But never until then had I heard a man address his Maker as though he was present listening as a kind father would listen to the sorrows of a dutiful child. Joseph was at that time unlearned, but that prayer, which was to a considerable extent in behalf of those who accused him of having gone astray and fallen into sin, was that the Lord would forgive them and open their eyes that they might see aright. . . . There was no ostentation, no raising of the voice as by enthusiasm, but a plain conversational tone, as a man would address a present friend. It appeared to me as though the veil were taken away. I could see the Lord standing facing his humblest of all servants I had ever seen (in Hyrum and Helen Mae Andrus's, They Knew the Prophet, 51-52).

17 And whoso standeth in this mission is appointed to be a judge in Israel, like as it was in ancient days, to divide the lands of the heritage of God unto his children;

verse 17 “a judge in Israel” Bishops are authorized to judge in the area of a man's standing or stewardship in the Church. Their jurisdiction is limited to matters spiritual and pertaining to the Church. They are not, of course, empowered to judge infractions of civil law or to impose punishments for crimes (see D&C 42:79-86).

18 And to judge his people by the testimony of the just, and by the assistance of his counselors, according to the laws of the kingdom which are given by the prophets of God.

verses 16-18 Edward Partridge, at the time, was not a ward bishop, for there were none in the Church. He was rather the bishop of the whole Church (see D&C 41:9). Soon Newell K. Whitney will be called as bishop in Kirtland, and Edward Partridge will remain as bishop in Missouri (see D&C 72). Neither will preside over the other. Neither was the Presiding Bishop in the modern sense, which office will not be created until later (see D&C 124:41). Bishop Partridge was also the acknowledged leader of the Church in Missouri until 1834, when a presidency of local high priests was appointed.

19 For verily I say unto you, my law shall be kept on this land.

verse 19 “my law shall be kept on this land” In context, the Lord seems to be saying that those who intend to enjoy the full fellowship of the Church in Zion will have to obey his commandments. Some have interpreted this phrase as referring to the law of consecration and stewardship. Those in Zion must adhere to this celestial law.

20 Let no man think he is ruler; but let God rule him that judgeth, according to the counsel of his own will, or, in other words, him that counseleth or sitteth upon the judgment seat.

verse 20 The bishop, the judge in Israel, must seek the mind and will of the Lord as he works in his calling. This is, of course, true for all of the Lord’s servants who labor with him in his kingdom.

21 Let no man break the laws of the land, for he that keepeth the laws of God hath no need to break the laws of the land.

verse 21 “Let no man break the laws of the land” It is tempting for religious groups to think that since they obey a higher law, they are not obligated to observe the secular laws of the land. The Lord here prohibits such thinking among the saints. Unless specifically commanded otherwise, the saints are to observe the constitutionally valid law of the land. This includes observing legalities in business, obeying speed limits, paying taxes, etc.

22 Wherefore, be subject to the powers that be, until he reigns whose right it is to reign, and subdues all enemies under his feet.

verse 22 “until he reigns” The saints are reminded that as Zion is built up, the laws of the land must be obeyed—at least until “he reigns”—until Christ returns to stand at the head of the political kingdom of God. After his coming there will be no laws but his laws, and the saints will be subject to no other power but his (see D&C 38:22).

23 Behold, the laws which ye have received from my hand are the laws of the church, and in this light ye shall hold them forth. Behold, here is wisdom.

verse 23 “the laws of the church” The Lord wishes the saints to distinguish between the laws of the Church, by which fellowship and the right to an inheritance are decided within the Church, and the laws of the land, by which the saints are to be governed in civil matters. There is an implied caution here against attempting to turn the law of the Church into the law of the land.

24 And now, as I spake concerning my servant Edward Partridge, this land is the land of his residence, and those whom he has appointed for his counselors; and also the land of the residence of him whom I have appointed to keep my storehouse; verse 24 “also the land of the residence of him whom I have appointed to keep my storehouse” This refers to A. Sidney Gilbert. See the introductory commentary for section 53.

25 Wherefore, let them bring their families to this land, as they shall counsel between themselves and me.

26 For behold, it is not meet that I should command in all things; for he that is compelled in all things, the same is a slothful and not a wise servant; wherefore he receiveth no reward.

27 Verily I say, men should be anxiously engaged in a good cause, and do many things of their own free will, and bring to pass much righteousness;

28 For the power is in them, wherein they are agents unto themselves. And inasmuch as men do good they shall in nowise lose their reward.

29 But he that doeth not anything until he is commanded, and receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart, and keepeth it with slothfulness, the same is damned.

verse 29 “receiveth a commandment with doubtful heart” The word commandment in the Doctrine and Covenants is often used as a synonym for “revelation.” Thus, the condemnation spoken of here cannot be limited to violations of specific “thou shalt” or “thou shalt not” but also applies to resisting the general information and programs revealed to the saints by the Lord.

“the same is damned” The verb to damn comes from a Latin root meaning “to condemn,” or “to pronounce guilty.” It is unrelated to the similar verb to dam, meaning to stop or to block one’s progress. Despite common confusion of these two verbs, and though the effect of being damned might also be to be dammed (as several writers have pointed out), “to be damned” does not merely mean having one’s progress stopped. It means to be condemned, to be judged guilty or worthy of punishment. In a spiritual sense it means being declared guilty of sin, the exact opposite of being “justified” or declared innocent of sin.

Thus, according to this verse, refusing to do what good we can when we have the opportunity simply because “we don’t have to” is an attitude with serious spiritual consequences. To resist the revelations, or to accept them only grudgingly, or to do good only when specifically commanded, is to find ourselves condemned, “damned,” and consigned, if we don’t repent, into the power of Satan to suffer for our sloth and hard-heartedness.

verses 26-29 Herein is a profound and vital principle. Ezra Taft Benson explained:

Usually the Lord gives us the overall objectives to be accomplished and some guidelines to follow, but he expects us to work out most of the details and methods. The methods and procedures are usually developed through study and prayer and by living so that we can obtain and follow the promptings of the Spirit. Less spiritually advanced people, such as those in the days of Moses, had to be commanded in many things. Today those spiritually alert look at the objectives, check the guidelines laid down by the Lord and his prophets, and then prayerfully act—without having to be commanded “in all things.” This attitude prepares men for godhood. . . .

Sometimes the Lord hopefully waits on his children to act on their own, and when they do not, they lose the greater prize, and the Lord will either drop the entire matter and let them suffer the consequences or else he will have to spell it out in greater detail. Usually, I fear, the more he has to spell it out, the smaller is our reward (CR, April 1965, 121-22).

While this principle is as applicable today as it was then, in 1831 there was a particular reason why it was essential. In that day, the fastest means of communication between Kirtland and Independence was a three week ride on horseback each way. The church headquarters was not in Zion but in Kirtland. Therefore it was vital that the saints and leaders in Missouri exercise their agency and not wait to be commanded “in all things.”

These verses were particularly directed to Bishop Edward Partridge. In section 57, Bishop Partridge learned that he was now to live in Zion. Keep in mind that he had a business, home, and family in Ohio, and thus he was being called to sacrifice much. He had many questions, as most of us would have. How will he provide for his family? Who will pay the expenses of moving everything to Missouri? Perhaps even: Is this a temporary or a permanent assignment? These verses were given in response to his question. What is the Lord’s answer? Solve these problems yourself!

It should be the nature of the Lord’s children—to make things better wherever we go—even without being specifically commanded in every detail. God’s true sons and daughters set about to do good in this world, without selfish intent and without necessarily being commanded to do so.

30 Who am I that made man, saith the Lord, that will hold him guiltless that obeys not my commandments?

31 Who am I, saith the Lord, that have promised and have not fulfilled?

verses 30-31 “Who am I . . .” These are rhetorical questions equivalent to “Do you think I’ll declare the guilty innocent?” or “Do you think I won’t keep my promises?” It anticipates a negative response.

32 I command and men obey not; I revoke and they receive not the blessing.

33 Then they say in their hearts: This is not the work of the Lord, for his promises are not fulfilled. But wo unto such, for their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above.

verses 32-33 Many of God's blessings are promised contingent upon living certain principles or keeping certain commandments. When we obey the commandments or live the principles, we receive the promised blessings. But some people expect God to give them these conditional blessings anyway, even without their obedience. When this does not happen, they unjustly condemn God, his prophets, or his programs as false and his promises as unkept.

“their reward lurketh beneath, and not from above” The doubters, skeptics, and disobedient will still receive rewards and accolades, but they will come from “beneath”—they will be the rewards of men and not the rewards of God.

34 And now I give unto you further directions concerning this land.

verse 34 “directions concerning this land” The land referred to is Jackson County, Missouri, or Zion.

verses 35-39 Martin Harris, a relatively wealthy man, is called to consecrate all his money to the bishop's storehouse. Martin had previously been commanded to offer up his possessions to publish the Book of Mormon (see D&C 19:26, 34-35). He then moved with the saints to Ohio and traveled with the Prophet to Missouri. Orson Pratt observed that “Martin Harris was the first man that the Lord called by name to consecrate his money, and lay the same at the feet of the Bishop in Jackson County, Mo., according to the order of consecration. He willingly did it; he knew the work to be true; he knew that the word of the Lord through the Prophet Joseph was just as sacred as any word that ever came from the mouth of any Prophet from the foundation of the world. He consecrated his money and his substance, according to the word of the Lord. What for? As the revelation states, as an example to the rest of the Church” (JD, 18:160-61).

35 It is wisdom in me that my servant Martin Harris should be an example unto the church, in laying his moneys before the bishop of the church.

36 And also, this is a law unto every man that cometh unto this land to receive an inheritance; and he shall do with his moneys according as the law directs.

verse 36 “this is a law unto every man” Kirtland was to be a collection point and a staging area to organize the saints in the East and prepare them for Zion. The Lord here commands that only those saints who have agreed to consecrate all their possessions, as Martin Harris had (see verse 35), were to emigrate to Zion (compare verses 44, 46). Unfortunately, many of the Ohio saints disregarded this commandment and moved to Jackson County, Missouri, before being called to do so and without having entered into the covenant of consecration. Spiritually unprepared, disobedient to counsel, and unwilling to live the law of consecration, they eventually caused economic, social, and spiritual problems in Missouri that contributed to the loss of Zion there.

37 And it is wisdom also that there should be lands purchased in Independence, for the place of the storehouse, and also for the house of the printing.

38 And other directions concerning my servant Martin Harris shall be given him of the Spirit, that he may receive his inheritance as seemeth him good;

39 And let him repent of his sins, for he seeketh the praise of the world.

40 And also let my servant William W. Phelps stand in the office to which I have appointed him, and receive his inheritance in the land; verse 40 William W. Phelps had been called to serve the Lord as a printer, publisher, and educator (see the introductory commentary for section 55).

41 And also he hath need to repent, for I, the Lord, am not well pleased with him, for he seeketh to excel, and he is not sufficiently meek before me.

verse 41 “he seeketh to excel” W. W. Phelps’s attitude toward other saints was competitive rather than cooperative. He wanted to get ahead of them rather than push them ahead of him. It is not evil to pursue excellence. Indeed, Jesus was the most excellent of all men. But Jesus also sought to share his merits with us to make us as he is, rather than simply wanting to outperform us. The pursuit of personal excellence for the glory of God and the benefit of our fellows is a positive virtue, but the competitive urge that simply compels us to win for our ego’s sake is not. Evidently, it is in this latter sense that Brother Phelps “[sought] to excel” and is here cautioned about it. The compulsive need always to beat our brothers and sisters, to establish our superiority over them by always winning, is as incompatible with establishing Zion as is the need to have more money, a newer car, or a larger house than they do.

42 Behold, he who has repented of his sins, the same is forgiven, and I, the Lord, remember them no more.

verse 42 “I, the Lord, remember them no more” Note that this scripture does not promise that repentant sinners will forget their sins. Neither does any other scripture. Alma 36:17-21, for example, says only that Alma remembered his pains no more, and that the memory of his sins didn’t harrow him up (vex, torment, distress, afflict, or torture) him anymore. Rather, we are promised that it is the Lord who “will remember them no more.”

43 By this ye may know if a man repenteth of his sins—behold, he will confess them and forsake them.

verse 43 “he will confess them” Certain serious sins require confession to a bishop. However, all transgressions require honest confession or admission to oneself and often to the injured party, if there is one. Elder Spencer W. Kimball taught:

No one can ever be forgiven of any transgression until there is repentance, and one has not repented until he has bared his soul and admitted his intentions and weaknesses without excuses or rationalizations. He must admit to himself that he has grievously sinned. When he has confessed to himself without the slightest minimizing of offense, or rationalizing its seriousness, or soft-pedaling its gravity, and admits it is as big as it really is, then he is ready to begin his repentance (“Love Versus Lust,” Brigham Young University Speeches of the Year [Provo, 5 January 1965] 10).

Unwillingness to admit our sins to the injured parties by confession indicates that true repentance has not yet taken place, for our desire to be cleansed of sin is weaker than our desire to hide our faults and protect our egos.

“and forsake them” To forsake means to abandon.

44 And now, verily, I say concerning the residue of the elders of my church, the time has not yet come, for many years, for them to receive their inheritance in this land, except they desire it through the prayer of faith, only as it shall be appointed unto them of the Lord.

verse 44 “I say concerning the residue of the elders of my church” The Lord addresses here those Missouri missionaries who have not been specifically called to remain in Independence, and he instructs them on his will for them (see verses 44-65).

“the time has not yet come, for many years” The Lord is not willing for most members of the Church to go to Zion yet. It would be many years to come (compare D&C 51:17: “as for years” and D&C 64:21: “a space of five years”). It would actually not be until seven years later, in 1838, that most of the Ohio Saints will be called to Missouri. The Lord desires that several things occur in preparation: (1) that Zion be built up slowly (see verse 56), (2) that the land be purchased by contributions from the Ohio saints (see verse 49), (3) that missionary work be done in Missouri (see verse 48) and in all the world (see verse 64), (4) that the Prophet has time to complete his work in Kirtland (see verse 58), (5) and that other preparations be made over a period of years.

Unfortunately, overeager and disobedient saints refused to follow the Lord’s plan for gradual, economically sensible, and spiritually consecrated settlement in Missouri but went there on their own, unbidden and unprepared, and expecting the bishop in Zion to provide them with an inheritance. The financial and logistical strain on the resources of the saints in Independence eventually proved too great. Too many of these incoming saints were too greedy, too inexperienced, too self-willed, and too disobedient to help in establishing Zion. Since they did not live according to the covenant that was made when the land was dedicated (see the introductory commentary for this section), in barely more than two years the Lord allowed the saints to be driven off the land (additional reasons are given in D&C 101:7-8; 103:3-4; 105:11, 17).

45 For, behold, they shall push the people together from the ends of the earth.

verse 45 Having sufficiently answered the question concerning the time of the building of Zion, the Lord turned to the first question asked by the Prophet: When will the wilderness blossom as a rose? In this verse the Lord tells the elders of the Church what they must do in the years before the fulfillment of Zion. They must “push the people together from the ends of the earth.” This phrase specifically refers to the gathering of the scattered ten tribes of Israel under gospel tent in America (see Deuteronomy 33:13-17, 3 Nephi 14:12-13).

The Lord obviously knew that that these early saints would not succeed in establishing Zion in their day. This verse and others suggest that there is much to be done, before Zion is established.

46 Wherefore, assemble yourselves together; and they who are not appointed to stay in this land, let them preach the gospel in the regions round about; and after that let them return to their homes.

verse 46 “let them return to their homes” Those saints not commanded to remain in Independence are commanded to return to their homes in Kirtland.

47 Let them preach by the way, and bear testimony of the truth in all places, and call upon the rich, the high and the low, and the poor to repent.

48 And let them build up churches, inasmuch as the inhabitants of the earth will repent.

49 And let there be an agent appointed by the voice of the church, unto the church in Ohio, to receive moneys to purchase lands in Zion.

verse 49 This verse was necessary because the bishop (Edward Partridge) and his agent (A. Sidney Gilbert) were now to make their home in Zion. This left the Kirtland area with no one to preside over the United Order there. In this verse, the Lord commands that a second agent be called to assist in Ohio. In section 63:42-45, Newell K. Whitney will be called to fill this position (see also D&C 72:8).

verses 50-51 Money was going to be required to buy lands in Zion. Sidney Rigdon is commanded in these verses to write a description of Zion—a sort of “brochure”—to be distributed among the branches of the Church for the purpose of encouraging contributions.

Later the Lord will indicate that what Sidney Rigdon had written was unacceptable (see D&C 63:55-56, a probable reference to this assignment). The glowing description of Jackson County found in the History of the Church (1:197-98) is a revised version of Sidney's second, more acceptable attempt to describe Zion (see Van Wagoner, Sidney Rigdon, 101-05).

50 And I give unto my servant Sidney Rigdon a commandment, that he shall write a description of the land of Zion, and a statement of the will of God, as it shall be made known by the Spirit unto him;

51 And an epistle and subscription, to be presented unto all the churches to obtain moneys, to be put into the hands of the bishop, of himself or the agent, as seemeth him good or as he shall direct, to purchase lands for an inheritance for the children of God.

verse 51 “an epistle and subscription” The description of Zion—the “brochure”—commanded in verse 50 was to be accompanied by a cover letter to local leaders that included a sign-up sheet for the members to indicate their interest in contributing. Funds would then be received by local authorities, to be forwarded to Bishop Partridge or his agents in Missouri. The subscription, or sign-up sheet, would provide church leaders with a list of those willing to contribute or invest in the land described in the brochure.

52 For, behold, verily I say unto you, the Lord willeth that the disciples and the children of men should open their hearts, even to purchase this whole region of country, as soon as time will permit.

verse 52 If the saints had been perfectly obedient to the Lord's commands concerning Zion, he would have prepared the way for the legal purchase of most all of the land in Independence. He would have done this by opening the hearts, or influencing his “disciples” to raise the money and purchase the lands from “the children of men.”

53 Behold, here is wisdom. Let them do this lest they receive none inheritance, save it be by the shedding of blood.

verse 53 The Lord emphasizes the need for the saints to obtain clear and legal title to the lands they purchase. In this way any disputes over ownership could be settled by law, and violence can be avoided.

Some people have incorrectly concluded that this verse implies that the saints were authorized by the Lord to take land in Missouri by force if necessary. While it is true that property can sometimes be obtained in this manner, theft and murder could never be acceptable means of establishing Zion (see Whitmer, Early Latter Day Saint History, 79). Essentially the Lord is saying, “If you don't buy the land, you'll have to kill for it, and that is unacceptable” (compare D&C 57:4-5; 63:29-31). Ironically, when blood later was shed over this land, it was mostly the blood of the saints who held legal title to it but were driven out anyway.

54 And again, inasmuch as there is land obtained, let there be workmen sent forth of all kinds unto this land, to labor for the saints of God.

verse 54 “let there be workmen sent forth of all kinds” Those saints in the east with necessary skills for building Zion were to be called and sent there as needed.

55 Let all these things be done in order; and let the privileges of the lands be made known from time to time, by the bishop or the agent of the church.

verse 55 “Let all these things be done in order” This is a further commandment by the Lord that Zion should be built up slowly, sensibly, and according to the principles of consecration and the law of the Lord (see verse 56). Only those who were prepared and appointed to go to Missouri were to go, according to the procedures revealed to the Church. As mentioned previously, however, sometimes self-willed saints want to get ahead of the Lord and do things according to their own timetable. The violation of these instructions and procedures by the saints who would not wait to be called to Missouri contributed to the eventual downfall of the saints there.

“privileges of the lands” This phrase refers to a report on the availability of the lands and the opportunities for the saints to obtain lands.

56 And let the work of the gathering be not in haste, nor by flight; but let it be done as it shall be counseled by the elders of the church at the conferences, according to the knowledge which they receive from time to time.

verse 56 The gathering to Zion was to be an orderly process, and only those called to Zion should go there.

57 And let my servant Sidney Rigdon consecrate and dedicate this land, and the spot for the temple, unto the Lord.

verse 57 On August 2, 1831, the day following this revelation, Sidney Rigdon dedicated the land of Zion to the Lord as directed in this verse.

58 And let a conference meeting be called; and after that let my servants Sidney Rigdon and Joseph Smith, Jun., return, and also Oliver Cowdery with them, to accomplish the residue of the work which I have appointed unto them in their own land, and the residue as shall be ruled by the conferences.

verse 58 “let a conference meeting be called” The Lord had also previously indicated that a conference was to be held in Missouri (see D&C 52:2). Thirty-one members attended this conference, which was held on August 4, 1831, in Kaw Township at the home of Joshua Lewis, a local convert of the missionaries to the Lamanites.

“their own land” Kirtland, Ohio. Joseph, Oliver, and Sidney had much to do back in Kirtland as directed by the Lord and as decided by the conferences of the elders of the Church.

59 And let no man return from this land except he bear record by the way, of that which he knows and most assuredly believes.

verse 59 What contemporary mission president has not emphasized the necessity of his missionaries’ talking to people and bearing testimony to them in all circumstances—as they are traveling on a bus, shopping, or walking on the street.

60 Let that which has been bestowed upon Ziba Peterson be taken from him; and let him stand as a member in the church, and labor with his own hands, with the brethren, until he is sufficiently chastened for all his sins; for he confesseth them not, and he thinketh to hide them.

verse 60 “Let that which has been bestowed upon Ziba Peterson be taken from him” Ziba Peterson was one of the missionaries called to preach to the Lamanites (see D&C 32:3). He had departed Fayette, New York, with Oliver Cowdery ten months earlier, in October 1830. In April 1831 he and Oliver Cowdery traveled to Lafayette County, Missouri, and preached to the people of Lexington, baptizing forty to fifty persons.

Following this pointed rebuke by the Lord given August 1, 1831, Ziba confessed his sins at the conference held August 4, and he received forgiveness. One week later, on August 11, he married Rebecca Hooper, one of the Lafayette County converts. Ziba Peterson later became disaffected, and when the saints fled Jackson County in 1833, he and his family remained behind.

61 Let the residue of the elders of this church, who are coming to this land, some of whom are exceedingly blessed even above measure, also hold a conference upon this land.

verse 61 “Let the residue of the elders of this church . . . also hold a conference upon this land” This conference was held August 24, 1831, in Kaw Township. Several elders who had not reached Jackson County by the previous conference on August 4 attended on August 24, with Bishop Partridge presiding (see verses 62-63). After this second conference in Missouri, the late-arriving elders were also to return to Ohio.

62 And let my servant Edward Partridge direct the conference which shall be held by them.

63 And let them also return, preaching the gospel by the way, bearing record of the things which are revealed unto them.

64 For, verily, the sound must go forth from this place into all the world, and unto the uttermost parts of the earth—the gospel must be preached unto every creature, with signs following them that believe.

verse 64 "the sound must go forth from this place" Even though most of the Church still lived in Ohio, and would for some years to come, the perspective of the Church was changed. Independence was the "center place" from which the gospel was to go forth (D&C 57:1-3).

"the gospel must be preached unto every creature" How literally did the Lord intend this command to be? President Spencer W. Kimball, referring to this verse and others, said:

It seems to me that the Lord chose his words when he said "every nation," "every land," "uttermost bounds of the earth," "every tongue," "every people," "every soul," "all the world," "many lands."

. . . I feel that when we have done all in our power that the Lord will find a way to open doors. That is my faith ("When the World Will Be Converted," Ensign, October 1974, 5, 10-11).

Truly the words of the prophet Joseph Smith will be fulfilled:

No unhallowed hand can stop the work from progressing; persecutions may rage, mobs may combine, armies may assemble, calumny may defame, but the truth of God will go forth boldly, nobly, and independent, till it has penetrated every continent, visited every clime, swept every country, and sounded in every ear, till the purposes of God shall be accomplished, and the Great Jehovah shall say the work is done (HC, 4:540).

65 And behold the Son of Man cometh. Amen.

Joseph Smith and the others were involved in many other activities in Missouri. On August 2, 1831, the Prophet assisted the Colesville saints in laying the first log for a house of worship in Kaw township, twelve miles west of Independence. The log was carried by twelve men in honor of the twelve tribes of Israel. That same day Sidney Rigdon was in Independence consecrating and dedicating the area for the gathering of the saints. On August 3, in the company of eight other men, Joseph stood on the plot where the temples were to be erected and dedicated the land for the building of a House of the Lord.

Section 59 Law of the Sabbath

On Sunday August 7, 1831, Joseph attended the funeral of the first church member to die in Zion, sister Polly Knight, the wife of Joseph Knight, Sr. and the mother of Newel Knight. Her health had been failing for some time, and she was very ill during her journey from Thompson, Ohio, to Missouri. “Yet,” said her son Newel, “she would not consent to stop traveling. Her greatest desire was to set her feet upon the land of Zion and to have her body interred in that land.” She was so ill, as the Colesville saints traveled to Missouri, that her son Newel Knight bought lumber, during the journey, to make a coffin in case she would die before they arrived at their destination. The Lord, however, gave her the desire of her heart, and she lived to stand on that land (HC, 1:99, footnote). Sister Knight died on Saturday August 6. The Knights, along with the other Colesville saints had arrived in Jackson County about two weeks earlier on July 25, having been evicted from Lemman Copley’s farm in Thompson, Ohio, the preceding month.

After the funeral, Joseph received this revelation. The revelation starts out as a funeral sermon (verses 1-3), but the remainder of the revelation deals with the principles of Sabbath-day keeping. It is the most important scripture we have which deals with the spirit of the Sabbath.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 59 The Law of the Sabbath

D&C 59:8 Thou shalt offer a sacrifice . . . of a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

D&C 59:9-12 On this, the Lord’s day, thou shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High.

D&C 59:21 And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things.

D&C 59:23 But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world and eternal life in the world to come.

verses 1-3 These verses likely refer to Polly Knight. She is the first of “those that die” (verse 2), “whose feet stand upon the land of Zion” (verse 3), and who had “obeyed my gospel” (verse 3). These blessings and promises also belong to all faithful saints in Zion.

1 Behold, blessed, saith the Lord, are they who have come up unto this land with an eye single to my glory, according to my commandments.

2 For those that live shall inherit the earth, and those that die shall rest from all their labors, and their works shall follow them; and they shall receive a crown in the mansions of my Father, which I have prepared for them.

3 Yea, blessed are they whose feet stand upon the land of Zion, who have obeyed my gospel; for they shall receive for their reward the good things of the earth, and it shall bring forth in its strength.

verse 3 “they shall receive for their reward the good things of the earth”

Both those who live and those who die in righteousness shall inherit the earth, since the earth will become the celestial kingdom and become their eternal abode.

4 And they shall also be crowned with blessings from above, yea, and with commandments not a few, and with revelations in their time—they that are faithful and diligent before me.

verse 4 “they shall also be crowned with blessings from above, yea, and with commandments not a few” Note that the Lord considers his commandments to be blessings from him and not merely limitations or burdens.

verses 5-14 These verses contain commandments that are either New Testament commandments or parts of the Mosaic law now given a new gospel context.

5 Wherefore, I give unto them a commandment, saying thus: Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, with all thy might, mind, and strength; and in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him.

verse 5 “in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him” Deuteronomy 11:1 reads: “Therefore thou shalt love the LORD thy God, and keep his charge, and his statutes, and his judgments, and his commandments, alway.” The phrase “in the name of Jesus Christ thou shalt serve him” adds to this previously known command.

6 Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself. Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it.

verse 6 “nor do anything like unto it” This phrase expands the scope of the Mosaic prohibitions in Exodus and Leviticus to include the spirit of the law.

The following statement by the First Presidency (President Harold B. Lee, N. Eldon Tanner, and Marion G. Romney) on abortion seems appropriate to mention here. The statement teaches us that abortion is a sin “like unto” killing:

In view of a recent decision of the United States Supreme Court, we feel it necessary to restate the position of the Church on abortion in order that there be no misunderstanding of our attitude.

The Church opposes abortion and counsels its members not to submit to or perform an abortion except in the rare case where, in the opinion of competent medical counsel, the life or good health of the mother is seriously endangered or where the pregnancy was caused by rape and produces serious emotional trauma in the mother. Even then it should be done only after counseling with the local presiding priesthood authority and after receiving divine confirmation through prayer.

Abortion must be considered one of the most revolting and sinful practices in this day, when we are witnessing the frightening evidence of permissiveness leading to sexual immortality.

Members of the Church guilty of being parties to the sin of abortion must be subjected to the disciplinary action of the councils of the Church as circumstances warrant. In dealing with this serious matter, it would be well to keep in mind the word of the Lord stated in the 59th section of the Doctrine and Covenants, verse 6, "Thou shalt not steal; neither commit adultery, nor kill, nor do anything like unto it" (Church News, January 27, 1973, 7).

President Spencer W. Kimball also applied this passage to abortion (CR, April, 1975, 8).

As to the amenability of the sin of abortion to the law of repentance and forgiveness, we quote the following statement made by President David O. McKay and his counselors, Stephen L Richards and J. Reuben Clark, Jr., which continues to represent the attitude and position of the Church:

As the matter stands today, no definite statement has been made by the Lord one way or another regarding the crime of abortion. So far is known, he has not listed it alongside the crime of the unpardonable sin and shedding of innocent human blood. That he has not done so would suggest that it is not in that class of crime and therefore that it will be amenable to the laws of repentance and forgiveness (Church News, January 27, 1973, 7).

This quoted statement, however, should not in any sense, be constituted to minimize the seriousness of this revolting sin.

President Ezra Taft Benson also applied this "spirit-of-the-law" principle—"or anything like unto it" to the law of chastity: "This means fornication, homosexual behavior, self-abuse, child molestation, or any other sexual perversion" (Ensign, November 1986, 46).

7 Thou shalt thank the Lord thy God in all things.

verse 7 A specific commandment intended only for Levites in the Old Testament is contained in 1 Chronicles 23:30: "And to stand every morning to thank and praise the LORD, and likewise at even." This verse applies this commandment to all of the saints in this dispensation.

The absence of gratitude is looked upon by the Lord as an offense unto God. President Joseph F. Smith described the absence of thankfulness as sin: "And I believe that one of the greatest sins of which the inhabitants of the earth are guilty today is the sin of ingratitude. . . .” (Gospel Doctrine, 270-271).

verses 8-23 Section 59 gives principles for keeping the Sabbath rather than a Pharisaical list of specific do’s and don’ts. Note the counsel contained in these verses: Offer a sacrifice unto the Lord—that of a broken heart and contrite spirit. Keep yourself unspotted from the world. Rest. Pay your devotions to the Most High. Don’t worship only on Sunday. Set your interpersonal relationships straight if they have gone awry. Maintain a thankful heart and a cheerful countenance. Is laughter a sin? Certainly not wholesome laughter. We should avoid the scurrilous type of irreverent laughter, however.

8 Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God in righteousness, even that of a broken heart and a contrite spirit.

verse 8 “Thou shalt offer a sacrifice unto the Lord thy God” The Lord requires sacrifice of those of us in this final dispensation just as he required it of those in the Mosaic dispensation. But instead of sacrificing sheep and cattle, we must sacrifice our will to his.

“a broken heart and a contrite spirit” To understand this phrase it is necessary to understand the scriptural concept of pride. Please review “Pride” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 5, The “Natural Self” and “Spiritual Self.” Those with a broken heart and a contrite spirit are those who are humble and responsive to the promptings of the Spirit and actively seeking ways in which to repent—to become more like the Savior.

A “broken heart and a contrite spirit” is also a gift of the Spirit that must be earned through our obedience. It is the gift of divine motivation. See “The Solution to Pride—A Broken Heart and Contrite Spirit” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 5, The “Natural Self” and “Spiritual Self.”

9 And that thou mayest more fully keep thyself unspotted from the world, thou shalt go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day;

verse 9 “go to the house of prayer and offer up thy sacraments upon my holy day” The Lord specifically commands us, as we strive to keep the Sabbath day holy, that we worship him by praying and by attending our sacrament meeting and partaking of the sacrament. The renewal of our baptismal covenant by partaking of the sacrament is one of the most sacred acts we perform as Latter-day Saints (see also verse 12).

The word sacraments is plural here because it refers not only to the sacrament of the Lord’s Supper but to all our sacred Sabbath performances—prayers, blessings, confirmations, testimonies, lessons, or anything else we may do in Jesus's name. A "sacrament" is anything said or done in the sacred name of Jesus Christ.

10 For verily this is a day appointed unto you to rest from your labors, and to pay thy devotions unto the Most High;

11 Nevertheless thy vows shall be offered up in righteousness on all days and at all times;

verse 11 A reminder that no one should get the idea that just because there is a designated Sabbath, all religious exercises, devotions, keeping the commandments, or being concerned with the things of God should be limited to Sunday only. Every member of the Church has covenant obligations to the Lord that are valid and must be observed seven days a week.

12 But remember that on this, the Lord's day, thou shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins unto thy brethren, and before the Lord.

verse 12 "on this, the Lord's day" In the world, controversy exists regarding which day of the week should appropriately be set aside as the Sabbath. We care nothing for all these arguments since this section of the Doctrine and Covenants was given on Sunday, and in this verse the Lord identifies Sunday as the appropriate day of worship: "this, the Lord's day."

"thou shalt offer thine oblations and thy sacraments unto the Most High, confessing thy sins" An "oblation" is an offering to God. It might be an offering of money, time, talent, or anything else consecrated to God as an act of obedience or worship. Elder Bruce R. McConkie defined an oblation in its highest sense as "giving full devotion to the Lord, of offering him a broken heart and a contrite spirit" (Mormon Doctrine, 541-42).

Does the ordinance of the sacrament involve confession? As we seek to grow spiritually, we must, with the willing cooperation of the Spirit of God, discern and identify those of our characteristics that need to be changed. We must then acknowledge or confess, at least to ourselves, those sins, and then we can set about to change them (see D&C 58:42-43). It may be useful to the reader to review the commentary on the three parts of the ordinance of baptism at this point, particularly the third part of the ordinance, the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost (see the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31).

verses 13-14 Note the words "perfect" and "rejoicing" used in referring to the fast. John W. Welch has reported on the doctrine of the fast in the early Christian church. He has examined an early Christian text from one of the so-called "apostolic fathers"—the Shepherd of Hermas. Apostolic fathers are early Christian church leaders and writers whose lives actually interfaced with the apostles. The writings of these apostolic fathers are considered credible and authentic owing to the early date of their writings and because of their association with the apostles. The Shepherd of Hermas was a Bishop of Rome who is believed to be the one referred to by Paul (Romans 16:14). He wrote about AD 150. Brother Welch reports the writings of the Shepherd of Hermas on the law of the fast:

1. You are first to “guard against every evil word and every evil desire, and cleanse your heart of all the vanities of this world.”

2. Then you must “estimate the cost of the food you would have eaten on that day on which you intend to fast, and give it to a widow or an orphan or someone in need.”

3. Moreover, “You must observe these things with your children and your whole household, and in observing them you will be blessed.”

4. Furthermore, those who receive fast offerings are to pray “on behalf of” those who have extended their generosity in this way.

“This fast,” the Christian is told, “is very good in keeping the Lord’s commandments,” and if you will do these things, “this fast of yours will be perfect” and “your sacrifice will be acceptable in God’s sight, and this fast will be recorded, and service performed in this way is beautiful and joyous.”

Note the words in verses 13 and 14 of section 59 “perfect” and “rejoicing” which are similar to the “perfect” and “joyous” found in this early Christian text.

If these directives may be described as the true order of fasting, it is evident that few Christian churches today follow this essential instruction. Is it possible that this was one of the “plain and precious things” taken away from the original gospel as it went forth from the mouth of the Son of God as foreseen by Nephi of old (1 Nephi 13:28)? But Nephi also beheld that some of those truths would be restored by “other books” that would come forth “from the Gentiles” (1 Nephi 13:38).

Because little was known about the ancient manuscripts of the Shepherd of Hermas until after the middle of the 19th century, it is interesting that only The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, as far as we know, teaches and actually operates a regular program of fasting along these earliest Christian lines.

We may therefore conclude that fasting in the religious sense cannot be equated with just missing a few meals. True fasting is the attitude in which we miss those meals, an attitude of conscious sacrifice for the sake of others and for the sake of drawing away from our carnal natures while drawing closer to God. And as we draw closer to God through proper fasting, should we not rejoice? Even the food we prepare to end our religious fasts can be prepared in the spirit of fasting, the spirit of rejoicing—rejoicing not that our fast is over but that through our fast we have blessed our fellow saints and more effectively communed with God.

In a figurative sense, the Sabbath day itself, when properly observed, may be understood as a fast; not a fast from food and water, but from the worldly concerns of the rest of the week. If we truly fast from our weekday concerns on the Sabbath, we can enter into the full joy of the Lord's day.

13 And on this day thou shalt do none other thing, only let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart that thy fasting may be perfect, or, in other words, that thy joy may be full.

verse 13 “let thy food be prepared with singleness of heart” Food should be prepared in simplicity. A simple meal should suffice rather than an elaborate feast. On one occasion Jesus was a guest in the house of Mary and Martha. Martha was overly busy trying to host the Savior in grand style, while Mary just sat listening to the Savior. To Martha's rebuke of her younger sister, the Lord replied, “But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her” (Luke 10:42). The Lord's implication was that there are more important things than a fancy and perfect meal.

“that thy fasting may be perfect” Just what constitutes a “perfect fast”? President Joseph F. Smith has counseled us:

Now, while the law requires the saints in all the world to fast from “even to even” and to abstain both from food and drink, it can easily be seen from the scriptures, and especially from the words of Jesus, that it is more important to obtain the true spirit of love for God and man, “purity of heart and simplicity of intention,” than it is to carry out the cold letter of the law. The Lord has instituted the fast on a reasonable and intelligent basis, and none of his works are vain or unwise. His law is perfect in this as in other things. Hence, those who can are required to comply thereto; it is a duty from which they cannot escape; but let it be remembered that the observance of the fast day by abstaining twenty-four hours from food and drink is not an absolute rule, it is no iron-clad law to us, but it is left with the people as a matter of conscience, to exercise wisdom and discretion. Many are subject to weakness, others are delicate in health, and others have nursing babies; of such it should not be required to fast. Neither should parents compel their little children to fast. I have known children to cry for something to eat on fast day. In such cases, going without food will do them no good. Instead, they dread the day to come, and in place of hailing it, dislike it; while the compulsion engenders a spirit of rebellion in them, rather than a love for the Lord and their fellows. . .

But those should fast who can, and all classes among us should be taught to save the meals which they would eat, or their equivalent, for the poor. None are exempt from this; it is required of the saints, old and young, in every part of the Church (Gospel Doctrine, 243-44).

14 Verily, this is fasting and prayer, or in other words, rejoicing and prayer.

verse 14 While we generally define “fasting” as going without food, it should be noted that here the Lord defines “fasting and prayer” as “rejoicing and prayer.”

15 And inasmuch as ye do these things with thanksgiving, with cheerful hearts and countenances, not with much laughter, for this is sin, but with a glad heart and a cheerful countenance—

verse 15 The Lord doesn’t have anything against happiness, gladness, or cheerfulness, as demonstrated by the last half of this verse. The prohibition against “much laughter” here should be understood as meaning prohibition against that state of silliness, giddiness, loss of dignity, and loss of control in which people are more prone to cross the line of propriety, to make light of sacred things, to mock that which is good, or to make fun of others. This prohibition should not be understood as a total ban on all humor or on any degree of laughter, since a large number of General Authorities use an appropriate degree of humor—and the saints respond with appropriate laughter—when they address the Church in conference or on other important occasions.

In the Doctrine and Covenants the Lord commands the saints three times concerning laughter. We are commanded to cast away “excess of laughter” (D&C 88:69), avoid “much laughter” (this verse), and cease from “all laughter” (D&C 88:121). The context of each passage is crucial and explains the variation in the three commandments. Doctrine and Covenants 88:69 is apparently describing our everyday activity as we attempt to live lives that are more and more Christlike. Thus, laughter is permitted, but not to excess. In this verse, D&C 59:15, the setting is fasting, prayer, and Sabbath observance, in which there should not be “much” laughter; and in D&C 88:121 the setting is the Lord’s house, the temple (compare D&C 88:117, 119-20), where there should be no laughter at all.

verses 16-20 In these verses the Lord promises that as we are obedient in keeping the Sabbath day holy, our temporal needs will be met. Here is evidence that the immediate blessings for obedience are temporal as well as spiritual.

16 Verily I say, that inasmuch as ye do this, the fulness of the earth is yours, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the air, and that which climbth upon the trees and walketh upon the earth;

verse 16 “the fulness of the earth is yours” The earth and all it produces, both animal life (see verse 16) and plant life (see verse 17), are allowed for the use of the saints. There are no kosher laws for the modern Church as there were for ancient Israel. Modern Israel, the Church of Jesus Christ, may drink milk with their meat or wear linen with wool. We can eat shellfish, escargot, rabbit, or pork. The Mosaic law’s prohibitions against using certain of nature’s resources do not apply to the saints. Even the Word of Wisdom, which was not given to the Church until 1833, a year and a half following this revelation, is not so much a prohibition against use as it is a prohibition against misuse (see D&C 89). The Lord expected the saints to use all the bounty the earth produces intelligently and appropriately (see verse 20).

17 Yea, and the herb, and the good things which come of the earth, whether for food or for raiment, or for houses, or for barns, or for orchards, or for gardens, or for vineyards;

18 Yea, all things which come of the earth, in the season thereof, are made for the benefit and the use of man, both to please the eye and to gladden the heart;

19 Yea, for food and for raiment, for taste and for smell, to strengthen the body and to enliven the soul.

verse 19 “enliven the soul” The soul is defined in D&C 88:15-16 as the combination of the spirit and the body. The things of this earth are given not just for the nourishment of the body but for the joy of the spirit as well. “To enliven” means to stimulate or to rejuvenate. Thus, the products of nature are meant to rejuvenate or renew our spirits with their aesthetic qualities as well as our bodies with their physical properties.

20 And it pleaseth God that he hath given all these things unto man; for unto this end were they made to be used, with judgment, not to excess, neither by extortion.

verse 20 “neither by extortion” There is a difference between use and exploitation. Humans did not “use” the passenger pigeon very wisely. They are now extinct. The resources of nature are given to man to manage, not to pillage. Wholesale destruction of natural resources violates God’s command that they be used “with judgment, not to excess, neither by extortion.” Perhaps extortion, which literally means to “twist out,” here refers to forcing more from a resource than it can bear.

verses 16-20 President Spencer W. Kimball was once asked whether or not a serious drought that was ravaging the western United States might be due to the disobedience of the people. He said:

Today numerous of the people of this land spend the Sabbath working, devoting the day to the beaches, to entertainment, to shows, to their weekly purchases. The Lord makes definite promises. He says: “Then I will give you rain in due season, and the land shall yield her increase, and the trees of the field shall yield their fruit” (Leviticus 26:4). God does what he promises, and many of us continue to defile the Sabbath day (CR, April 1977, 4-5).

21 And in nothing doth man offend God, or against none is his wrath kindled, save those who confess not his hand in all things, and obey not his commandments.

verse 21 In using the products of nature for our own wants and needs, we need not fear that we might somehow offend God, for they are all given to us. God will, however, be offended by foolish persons who use what he has provided for them but will not acknowledge his hand in providing it—who “remove” God from their conceptual world and will not thank him (see verse 7) or keep his commandments.

22 Behold, this is according to the law and the prophets; wherefore, trouble me no more concerning this matter.

verse 22 “according to the law and the prophets” The Lord points out that his word on these matters is already found in the scriptures. The Lord does not seem to appreciate being petitioned for answers he has already given. Many of the saints would benefit from searching the scriptures and the revelations to modern prophets before asking God to solve their problems through personal revelation or divine intervention. God may already have answered their questions or solved their problems—if only they would consult the scriptures and other resources the Lord has provided.

23 But learn that he who doeth the works of righteousness shall receive his reward, even peace in this world, and eternal life in the world to come.

verse 23 Are we self-aggrandizing as we strive to keep the commandments? Do we seek after rewards? This verse reveals the reward for living in accord with the gospel principles. We are not promised riches, freedom from problems, or good health. Rather, the rewards are ones we should strive for: peace of mind in this world and the opportunity for eternal progression in the next world—the celestial heaven.

24 I, the Lord, have spoken it, and the Spirit beareth record. Amen.

Perhaps a fitting summary to section 59 is a statement by the First Presidency (President David O. McKay, J. Reuben Clark, Jr., and Henry D. Moyle) as to what constitutes appropriate observance of the Sabbath day:

The Sabbath day is not just another day on which we merely rest from work, free to spend it as our lightmindedness may suggest. It is a holy day, the Lord's day, to be spent as a day of worship and reverence. All matters extraneous thereto should be shunned (Deseret News, June 20, 1959).

Joseph Smith had section 59 printed as a handbill and distributed to the saints in Kirtland shortly after his return from Missouri. This fact provides evidence of how important Joseph considered this revelation to be in that day.

Brief Historical Setting

As the time drew near for the missionaries to return to Kirtland, some of them inquired of Joseph, who in turn inquired of the Lord. The Lord gave counsel concerning their journey home [D&C 60 - Journey Back to Kirtland]. The Lord specifically warned them of the dangers of traveling by water [D&C 61 - Danger Upon the Waters]. On the way home they met up with some missionaries who were on their way to Independence. After joyful salutations the Lord gave instructions and encouragement to the missionaries [D&C 62 - Testimony].

Section 60 Journey Back to Kirtland

Having fulfilled their mission in Missouri, those missionaries not called to remain in Independence turned their attention to the return trip home to Kirtland as instructed in D&C 58:46. The Prophet and his party had accomplished much. During their time in Missouri, they had located and dedicated the land of Zion and the site of its temple. They had established a bishopric, a mercantile store, and a bishops' storehouse. They had made plans for a publishing house. They had begun to buy land and build upon it, and they had familiarized more than two dozen Kirtland saints with the land of Zion and how to get there.

On Monday, August 8, 1831, the day after Polly Knight's funeral and the reception of section 59, the returning elders asked the prophet Joseph Smith just how they should return to Ohio and by what routes; whether they should do missionary work along the way; and if Joseph had any other special instructions for them. In response to their inquiries, Joseph received section 60 on August 8. It consists of the Lord's instructions pertaining to the journey home. Sections 60-62 constitute a unit dealing with the return from Zion, and they should be studied together.

Joseph and ten companions departed the following day, Tuesday August 9, rowing down the Missouri River in a flotilla of sixteen canoes.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 60:2 With some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, because of the fear of man.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto the elders of his church, who are to return speedily to the land from whence they came: Behold, it pleaseth me, that you have come up hither;

2 But with some I am not well pleased, for they will not open their mouths, but they hide the talent which I have given unto them, because of the fear of man. Wo unto such, for mine anger is kindled against them.

verse 2 “they will not open their mouths” Some of the elders called as missionaries to Missouri refused to preach or bear testimony of the restored gospel while on this mission. A few seemed to have expected the Lord to give them greater powers of public speaking as a reward for their even attempting to preach. This is obviously a stern warning to those elders.

Young missionaries today are often surprised to learn that the Lord commands that they open their mouths in most all circumstances in which they find themselves. Since most new missionaries find this a stressful and anxiety-producing activity, and they face the real “fear of man” for the first time, they are sobered to learn that the Lord is angry if they do not do so.

“they hide the talent which I have given unto them” The frightened young missionary may attempt to justify himself by claiming that he never had a talent in public speaking or preaching, so he shouldn’t be required to open his mouth. Here the missionaries’ talents lie in their knowledge and testimony of the restored gospel. This great blessing brings with it the obligation that one’s knowledge and testimony be shared with others who lack that witness (see the parable of the talents in Matthew 25:14-30).

The first missionaries to arrive in Zion were those who had done little or no missionary work on their way to Missouri, and that is why they arrived before the others. When Joseph was ready to leave Independence, there were still several pairs of missionaries yet to arrive from Kirtland, having been delayed by preaching the gospel on the way to Zion. It is ironic that some of the less faithful missionaries were the ones rewarded with being on the scene when the land was dedicated and the conference held. Perhaps in these verses there is something of a rebuke to those who had not fulfilled the mandate given them, and the Lord is giving them a chance to redeem themselves on the journey back to Kirtland.

Brigham Young explained one of the benefits of sharing our “testimony talent”: “A man who wishes to receive light and knowledge, to increase in the faith of the holy gospel, and to grow in knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus Christ, will find that when he imparts knowledge to others he will also grow and increase” (JD, 2: 267).

3 And it shall come to pass, if they are not more faithful unto me, it shall be taken away, even that which they have.

verse 3 The principle of “use it or lose it” applies in all our spiritual growth, including our testimonies of the restored gospel. As we grow spiritually, the increments of the attributes of God the Father or Jesus Christ that we acquired through our obedience must be utilized and applied during our mortal lives. If they are not, we will surely lose them (see D&C 1:31-33; 82:7). It is because of this concept that “there are no plateaus in spiritual growth.” If we are not actively growing spiritually, we are surely deteriorating.

4 For I, the Lord, rule in the heavens above, and among the armies of the earth; and in the day when I shall make up my jewels, all men shall know what it is that bespeaketh the power of God.

verse 4 “in the day when I shall make up my jewels” When the Lord comes in glory, he will claim his “jewels”—those who have been obedient to his commandments. The metaphorical imagery here suggests God as the emperor of the universe taking the finest treasures from all his vast domains to make up his “crown jewels.” When this earth has fulfilled its present purpose, God will take the most precious and valuable things upon it, his obedient sons and daughters—his “jewels”—and place them in their proper settings among his treasures (compare Isaiah 62:3; Zechariah 9:16).

“what . . . bespeaketh the power of God” Bespeaketh means to give evidence, to testify, or to signify. On that day when the Lord makes up his “jewels,” everyone will see the shining glory and favored status of those obedient saints who did not fear men. Their glorious exaltation before all the world, even though they may have personally been the meek, lowly, or uneducated during their mortal lives, will be God’s final witness of his own infinite power.

5 But, verily, I will speak unto you concerning your journey unto the land from whence you came. Let there be a craft made, or bought, as seemeth you good, it mattereth not unto me, and take your journey speedily for the place which is called St. Louis.

verse 5 The Lord instructs the returning missionaries to either make or purchase boats and head down the Missouri River to St. Louis. The elders ended up buying large canoes, capable of holding several men.

“it mattereth not unto me” Even though the Lord has given rather specific counsel to the returning elders in this verse, he makes it clear in this brief but profoundly meaningful phrase that it really doesn’t matter to him how they return home, so long as they “fill their mission” (D&C 61:22) on their way. Some details of our life are simply unimportant to the Lord. It is apparent here that it didn’t really matter to him whether the elders “made, or bought” a craft, whether they traveled “by water or by land” (D&C 61:22), or whether they rode on horses, mules, or in wagons (see D&C 62:7-8).

Some saints today agonize over whether God wants them to drive a Ford or a Chevy, to buy a house or rent an apartment, to study sociology in college or dental hygiene in a vocational school. But God might not care one way or the other. However, sometimes God does care about such details, and it is important for us to be prayerful and to follow the promptings of the Spirit. If we get no promptings, in response to our prayers, concerning the details of our lives or the many choices we face, it may be because any of the available options is equally acceptable to the Lord, or because there may be no spiritual advantage or disadvantage of any one option over any other (compare D&C 80:3). If the Lord does not prompt us one way or the other, we should not become paralyzed and unable to proceed. We should just make the best choice we can and get on with our lives. After all, our goal is not for God to make every decision for us. But rather, our objective is to become like God, with the power of independent decision and action within ourselves (see D&C 58:26-29).

“take your journey speedily” What is the Lord commanding here? Is he telling the elders to “hurry and go”—to leave promptly—or to “go in a hurry”—to travel swiftly once they were underway? D&C 61:3 suggests that the Lord is instructing them to “hurry and go”—to leave Missouri quickly. They left the following morning. Compare this with verse 14, where the elders are to “speedily return” but “not in haste,” that is, they were to start as soon as possible, but they were not to travel in great haste once they left. The Lord wanted them to proselyte along the way.

6 And from thence let my servants, Sidney Rigdon, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Oliver Cowdery, take their journey for Cincinnati; verse 6 Keep in mind that Oliver Cowdery had been away from Joseph and the main body of the Church for some ten months. When he left on his mission to the Lamanites, the center of the Church was located in New York, but he will eventually return to it in Kirtland, a branch he had helped to found.

“take their journey for Cincinnati” It is not entirely clear why the Lord commanded the “presidential party” to travel to Cincinnati. Oliver and the other missionaries to the Lamanites had already preached in Cincinnati without success while on their way west from Fayette to Missouri. They will, however, be commanded to preach the gospel while they are there (see verse 7).

A short time later, the printing press for W. W. Phelps in Zion will be purchased in Cincinnati. Perhaps their business there had partly also to do with this printing press.

7 And in this place let them lift up their voice and declare my word with loud voices, without wrath or doubting, lifting up holy hands upon them. For I am able to make you holy, and your sins are forgiven you.

verse 7 “I am able to make you holy, and your sins are forgiven you” One sense of the word holy is whole, entire, complete, sound, unimpaired. In this setting we would expect the word to mean whole in a moral sense. Hence, free from sin and actively receiving the incremental attributes of God as they grow spiritually. Though all human beings are imperfect, Jesus Christ has, through his atonement, the power to justify and sanctify, or to “make holy,” those who enter with him into the covenant of baptism and subsequently work to keep that covenant through constant striving to obey him. Through the instrumentality of the Holy Ghost, those human beings who earnestly strive to keep his commandments are regularly justified and sanctified. See Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification.

8 And let the residue take their journey from St. Louis, two by two, and preach the word, not in haste, among the congregations of the wicked, until they return to the churches from whence they came.

verse 8 “not in haste” As emphasized in the commentary for verse 5, the Lord cautions that the elders were not to go in haste. Rather, they were to take their time and preach the gospel en route.

“congregations of the wicked” Congregations are gatherings. In 1831 this word did not necessarily mean only church congregations but wherever people congregated.

The word “wicked” in that day meant “someone who is of slight or little blame.” The Lord often, according to Joseph Fielding Smith, “refers to the people scattered abroad as ‘congregations of the wicked’” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:223). The Lord is telling these missionaries to preach to the “congregations of the wicked” who are not really wicked (sinful and immoral) but simply those who do not have or understand the truth (see also verses 13, 14).

“until they return to the churches from whence they came” The word churches here refers to branches of the restored Church verse 9 “all this for the good of the churches” The Lord has commanded the returning elders to preach the gospel which will build up the branches of the restored Church.

9 And all this for the good of the churches; for this intent have I sent them.

10 And let my servant Edward Partridge impart of the money which I have given him, a portion unto mine elders who are commanded to return;

verse 10 “impart of the money which I have given him” This phrase refers to the assets Bishop Partridge has received as bishop and agent for the Church. He is to use some of these church funds to help the elders get home to Kirtland. Those elders who are able are then expected to pay the money back when they arrive in Kirtland, but those who are financially unable to pay it back are not required to do so (see verse 11).

11 And he that is able, let him return it by the way of the agent; and he that is not, of him it is not required.

12 And now I speak of the residue who are to come unto this land.

verse 12 “the residue who are to come unto this land” This phrase refers to those missionaries who were called to travel to Zion on a mission who are delayed in arriving in Jackson County until after the receiving of this revelation on August 8. They had missed the conference of elders held on August 4 and will thus attend a second conference to be held for the late arrivers on August 24. Among these are Hyrum Smith and John Murdock, who are coming by way of Detroit (see D&C 52:8), also David Whitmer, Harvey Whitlock, Levi Hancock and Zebedee Coltrin (see verse 14). The Lord is about to give specific instructions to this group.

13 Behold, they have been sent to preach my gospel among the congregations of the wicked; wherefore, I give unto them a commandment, thus: Thou shalt not idle away thy time, neither shalt thou bury thy talent that it may not be known.

verse 13 “they have been sent to preach my gospel among the congregations of the wicked” We have made the point previously that the late arrivers to Zion may well have arrived later because they did a better job in preaching the gospel to the people whom they encountered on the way to Missouri.

“Thou shalt not idle away thy time” They are given counsel that the Lord would give to all his missionaries: Don’t spend time in alternative activities. Spend your time in directly preaching the gospel. Every mission president in the Church knows that missionaries can be creative in finding ways to spend their time in activities that have little to do with missionary work. Teaching potential investigators about the restored gospel is stressful because of the risk of rejection. Nevertheless, that is how the Lord would have his missionaries spend their time.

“neither shalt thou bury thy talent” Here the “talent” of the missionaries is a knowledge of the restored gospel. It should not be kept hid under a bushel.

14 And after thou hast come up unto the land of Zion, and hast proclaimed my word, thou shalt speedily return, proclaiming my word among the congregations of the wicked, not in haste, neither in wrath nor with strife.

verse 14 “thou shalt speedily return . . . not in haste” See the commentary for verse 5. The late arrivers are also counseled to depart Independence soon after their arrival there.

15 And shake off the dust of thy feet against those who receive thee not, not in their presence, lest thou provoke them, but in secret; and wash thy feet, as a testimony against them in the day of judgment.

verse 15 The missionaries are told to perform the ordinance of shaking the dust off their feet as a witness against those who reject them. This was to be done “in secret,” however, so as to avoid the kind of unpleasantness as happened during the mission to the Shakers (see section 49). See also the commentary for D&C 24:15.

16 Behold, this is sufficient for you, and the will of him who hath sent you.

17 And by the mouth of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., it shall be made known concerning Sidney Rigdon and Oliver Cowdery. The residue hereafter. Even so. Amen.

verse 17 “it shall be made known concerning Sidney Rigdon and Oliver Cowdery” The Lord will give further specific travel instructions to Sidney and Oliver in the following section (see especially verses 23-24, and 30 of section 61).

“The residue hereafter.” This sentence likely refers to additional travel instructions—the rest of his instructions to the returning missionaries—that will yet be given prior to their arriving back in Kirtland.

Section 61 Danger Upon the Waters

On the 9th day of August 1831, Joseph and ten elders left Independence for Kirtland in a flotilla sixteen canoes, carrying themselves and their provisions. The first day they went as far as Fort Osage where they had “excellent wild turkey” for supper. Some disagreements and ill feelings arose among the traveling brethren. A couple of the elders had expected great miracles to occur in Missouri and, despite the clear statement of D&C 58:3-7 that these things would take place only over time and after much trial, they were unhappy that they had not seen a more immediate and dramatic fulfillment of God’s promises. As a result of their false expectations being disappointed, there was some murmuring and arguing among the party (see verse 20).

On August 11, the third day of the journey, the canoe in which Joseph and Sidney were riding actually hit a “sawyer,” or partially submerged tree, and was nearly overturned. The accident could easily have been fatal, for at that time the Missouri was a truly wild river without dams, locks, or levies. According to Joseph Smith, there had been other mishaps earlier that same day (HC, 1:203). That afternoon they quit the river earlier than usual and camped at McIlwaine’s bend, presently known as Miami Bend, about forty miles above Chariton, Missouri (see map of “the Missouri-Illinois area” at the back of the Doctrine and Covenants).

The discord among some of the brethren, which began during this journey back to Kirtland, was aggravated by that day’s difficulties on the river. The only account we have of the happenings at McIlwaine’s Bend is from the pen of Ezra Booth in a letter he wrote to Edward Partridge September 20, 1831. Keep in mind that those in charge of this canoe voyage, Joseph and Oliver, were respectively twenty-five and twenty-four years old. They were not experienced river guides but were placed in the position of having to direct men considerably older and more experienced than themselves.

The morning after they left Independence, the conduct of some of the elders displeased Oliver who uttered a malediction something like, “As the Lord God liveth, if you do not behave better, some accident will befall you.” In the afternoon of the third day while negotiating some treacherous waters, Joseph took command and issued some orders that were resented by the brethren in one of the canoes who refused to obey, and in so doing became tangled in some brush and almost capsized. This frightened Joseph who ordered them all ashore, while some of the brethren felt they should continue. Once on shore, at McIlwaine’s bend, tempers flared and words were exchanged. Joseph and Oliver were accused of being “highly imperious and quite dictatorial.” Joseph was also called a coward. After much emotional discussion, apologies were made, and a reconciliation of sorts was reached.

Before nightfall W. W. Phelps saw in open vision the Destroyer in his most horrible power ride upon the face of the waters. Others heard some peculiar noises but did not see the vision. The rest of that evening was spent in camp sorting out hard feelings and attempting a reconciliation between angry or offended parties. By late that evening, most of those involved had repented, apologized, and been reconciled to one another.

The next morning August 12, after prayer, Joseph received section 61, which explained in part the previous day's events and the related vision given to Elder Phelps.

The first known text of section 61 appeared in The Evening and the Morning Star for December 1832, about sixteen months after the revelation had first been received. This was published in Missouri by W. W. Phelps, editor of the Star, who had himself received the vision that preceded section 61.

1 Behold, and hearken unto the voice of him who has all power, who is from everlasting to everlasting, even Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end.

verse 1 “even Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

2 Behold, verily thus saith the Lord unto you, O ye elders of my church, who are assembled upon this spot, whose sins are now forgiven you, for I, the Lord, forgive sins, and am merciful unto those who confess their sins with humble hearts;

verse 2 “whose sins are now forgiven you” It is likely that there had been genuine humility, remorse, and confession during the session of reconciliation the previous evening. Whether the Lord is referring to ongoing sins in the lives of these missionaries or the sins of murmuring the previous day, it is the Lord's wont to forgive sins when there is true repentance and a determination to obey. The forgiveness of sins that occurs in our life does not occur once or even a few times. Rather, forgiveness is received hundreds or even thousands of times as we sojourn through life. See the commentary on the three parts of the ordinance of baptism, particularly the commentary on the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost in the introductory commentary for 2 Nephi 31. See also “Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth,” in volume 1, chapter 18 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine.

3 But verily I say unto you, that it is not needful for this whole company of mine elders to be moving swiftly upon the waters, whilst the inhabitants on either side are perishing in unbelief.

verse 3 The Lord suggests that opportunities to preach the gospel to people on both sides of the river may be lost as this large group of missionaries travels swiftly toward home. The Lord prefers that they take the time to proselyte as they go (see D&C 58:59; 60:14). This may seem contradictory to D&C 60:1, 5, but in these latter two verses the Lord explained that they were to hurry up and do missionary work rather than to hurry up and go home (see verse 4).

4 Nevertheless, I suffered it that ye might bear record; behold, there are many dangers upon the waters, and more especially hereafter; verse 4 “I suffered it that ye might bear record” This phrase and this verse are somewhat enigmatic. The Lord seems to be saying, “I allowed you as a group to travel by boat, though that is not a good way to get any proselyting done as you travel, as I wanted you to experience the dangers that lie upon the waters (and Satan’s control of the waters) and warn others of those dangers (“bear record” of them).

“and more especially hereafter” The reference time frame of this phrase is uncertain here. Whatever dangers the company had already encountered would be worse at some future time. This phrase could mean that the dangers would be worse farther downstream, or they might be worse on that river in the future than they were in August 1831. It is likely that the destructive power of the waters described here will be part of the woes and destructions prophesied for the very last days (compare Moses 7:66, wherein Enoch describes the sea in the last days as becoming “troubled”).

5 For I, the Lord, have decreed in mine anger many destructions upon the waters; yea, and especially upon these waters.

verse 5 Perhaps today we tend to be a generation that is a bit more spiritually pragmatic than others have been, and the idea that Satan controls some of the elements, particularly the waters, may seem peculiar to us. There has long been in the Church a tradition that water, especially when used for recreation, may be uniquely dangerous to church missionaries, for example. Joseph Fielding Smith in referring to section 61 has taught us something about the relationship of Satan to the elements:

It may be strange to us, but it is a fact that Satan exercises dominion and has some control over the elements. . . . Paul speaks of Satan as the “prince of the power of the air” (Ephesians 2:2). The Lord revealed to these brethren [at McIlwaine’s bend] some of the power of the adversary and how he may ride upon the storm. They were commanded to use judgment as they traveled upon these waters. . . . Moreover, notwithstanding the great power of Satan upon the waters, the Lord still held command, and he could protect his people whether on land or by water as they journeyed (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:224-25).

In addition to Satan’s influence over the elements, Joseph Fielding Smith also suggests that the Lord’s cursing the waters may have a role in their becoming more dangerous:

In the beginning the Lord blessed the waters [Genesis 1:20] and cursed the land [Moses 4:23], but in these last days this was reversed—the land was to be blessed [D&C 57:11] and the waters cursed [Revelation 15:3-5]. A little reflection will bear witness to the truth of this declaration. In the early millennia of this earth’s history, men did not understand the composition of the soils, and how they needed building up when the crops were taken from them. The facilities at the command of the people were primitive and limited, acreage under cultivation was limited, famines were prevalent . . . Someone may rise up and say that the soil in those days was just as productive as now and this may be the case . . . It matters not what the causes were. In those early days of world history, there was neither the production nor the varieties of fruits coming from the earth, and the Lord can very properly speak of this as a curse or the lack of blessing upon the land. In those early periods we have reason to believe that torrents, floods, and the dangers upon the waters were not as great as they are today, and by no means as great as what the Lord has promised us. The early mariners among the ancients traversed seas as they knew them in that day in comparative safety. . . . Today this manner of travel in such boats would be of the most dangerous and risky nature. . . .

In regard to the Missouri-Mississippi waters, we have seen year by year great destruction upon them and coming from them. Millions upon millions of dollars, almost annually, are lost by this great stream overflowing its banks. . . . Verily the word of the Lord has been fulfilled in relation to those waters (Ibid., 1:206-7).

In section 61 the Lord does not forbid missionaries to use water as transportation, but he simply advises them to be extra careful—especially with the waters of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers.

The Lord indicates that the waters of the world, particularly the waters of the Missouri and Mississippi Rivers—“these waters”—will be in this final dispensation an instrument of great destruction. Presumably the Lord is referring to floods, storms, and warfare fought on the high seas.

6 Nevertheless, all flesh is in mine hand, and he that is faithful among you shall not perish by the waters.

verse 6 Despite some popular belief to the contrary, section 61 does not prohibit travel by water, or even swimming, for missionaries (see commentary on verses 24-26). Even in those future times when the curse upon the waters will become more evident than it is now, the “upright in heart” will still be able to travel to Zion safely by water (verses 16, 22). It is the unfaithful and the rebellious, like the rebellious elders on the previous day, who need to fear the power of Satan over the waters, for by their unfaithfulness, they render themselves susceptible to that power. Notice that when the elders at McIlwaine’s Bend repented, they were allowed to continue their journey even upon the waters of the Missouri river (see verse 22).

7 Wherefore, it is expedient that my servant Sidney Gilbert and my servant William W. Phelps be in haste upon their errand and mission.

verse 7 “my servant Sidney Gilbert and my servant William W. Phelps” These men had been commanded to return to Kirtland to get their families and then travel to Cincinnati to purchase a printing press. They would then bring their families and the printing press to Independence. William W. Phelps was to be the printer for the Church, and Sidney Gilbert had been appointed purchasing agent.

8 Nevertheless, I would not suffer that ye should part until you were chastened for all your sins, that you might be one, that you might not perish in wickedness;

verse 8 The Lord wanted the traveling group of returning missionaries to remain together in one group so that they might benefit from the experiences they had on the river and at McIlwaine's Bend. Unpleasant as the experience must have seemed initially, it is notable that the Lord knew that the entire experience, including the humble confessions and reconciliations, would produce needed repentance and growth in the elders in the group.

9 But now, verily I say, it behooveth me that ye should part. Wherefore let my servants Sidney Gilbert and William W. Phelps take their former company, and let them take their journey in haste that they may fill their mission, and through faith they shall overcome; verse 9 Now that they had benefited from their experience at McIlwaine's Bend, the Lord commanded Sidney Gilbert and William W. Phelps to go on ahead of the rest of the group that they might complete their unique assignment (see verse 7).

10 And inasmuch as they are faithful they shall be preserved, and I, the Lord, will be with them.

11 And let the residue take that which is needful for clothing.

12 Let my servant Sidney Gilbert take that which is not needful with him, as you shall agree.

verses 11-12 The group is commanded to simplify their luggage so that they carry with them only that clothing which is needful and thus travel "lighter." The rest of the group's belongings will be carried back to Kirtland by Sidney Gilbert (and William W. Phelps).

13 And now, behold, for your good I gave unto you a commandment concerning these things; and I, the Lord, will reason with you as with men in days of old.

verse 13 "for your good I gave unto you a commandment" The Lord did command these elders to depart promptly from Independence by boat (see D&C 60:5).

"and I the Lord, will reason with you as with men in days of old" Now, let me explain why I gave you the commandment to travel by water.

14 Behold, I, the Lord, in the beginning blessed the waters; but in the last days, by the mouth of my servant John, I cursed the waters.

verse 14 “I, the Lord, in the beginning blessed the waters” When God first created the world, both the land and the waters were blessed (Genesis 1:10-12, 20-22). Then when Adam and Eve transgressed in the Garden of Eden, the land was cursed for their sakes, but the waters were not: “In the beginning God cursed the earth; but did he curse all things pertaining to it? No, he did not curse the water, but he blessed it” (Brigham Young in JD, 7:162).

From the beginning, water was ordained to be a cleansing and a purifying element. When the earth became corrupted in the days of Noah, God purified it by bringing the waters upon it. Likewise, today sinful men and women may also be purified through baptism by immersion in water. One of Christ’s most important symbolic names is the Living Water or the Water of Life.

“in the last days” This phrase is probably meant to tell us when the curse would take effect rather than when John pronounced it. In other words, John, either in the meridian of time or sometime since, pronounced a curse that would come upon the waters sometimes in the last days. The full realization of that curse was still future in Joseph’s day (compare verse 15).

“by the mouth of my servant John, I cursed the waters” The reference here may be to passages in the book of Revelation written by the apostle John. There are a couple of passages in Revelation that might be interpreted as the waters’ being cursed in the latter days (see Revelation 8:8-11; 16:2-6). Perhaps also this phrase refers to an event in the ministry of John not otherwise recorded in scripture.

15 Wherefore, the days will come that no flesh shall be safe upon the waters.

16 And it shall be said in days to come that none is able to go up to the land of Zion upon the waters, but he that is upright in heart.

verses 15-16 “the days will come” “in days to come” The phrase “the last days” can be ambiguous, referring to events anytime between the restoration of the gospel in 1830 and the moment of the second coming of Christ. This language in verses 15-16 makes it clear that “the last days” as used in verse 14 refers to a time still in the future.

17 And, as I, the Lord, in the beginning cursed the land, even so in the last days have I blessed it, in its time, for the use of my saints, that they may partake the fatness thereof.

verse 17 “I, the Lord, in the beginning cursed the land” “in the last days have I blessed it” When Adam fell, the ground or the earth was cursed for his sake (see Genesis 3:17). This curse will be removed from the whole earth only when the Savior comes to establish his millennial reign upon it and renew it to “paradisiacal glory” (Articles of Faith 1:10). According to this verse, however, God has already removed the curse upon the land and blessed it in order that the saints might establish Zion and enjoy its fruits. The land is no longer cursed and there is no more impediment for those saints who will establish Zion, whether in their own hearts, in their own homes, wards, stakes, or eventually in Jackson County, Missouri.

18 And now I give unto you a commandment that what I say unto one I say unto all, that you shall forewarn your brethren concerning these waters, that they come not in journeying upon them, lest their faith fail and they are caught in snares;

verse 18 “you shall forewarn your brethren concerning these waters . . . lest their faith fail and they are caught in snares” Apparently, the power of Satan over those traveling upon the waters is proportionate to their lack of faith. Since some of the Missouri elders had murmured and been rebellious the day before, the power of Satan over them had increased, and they had experienced increased difficulties on their journey. W. W. Phelps was allowed to see the source of their troubles and the power Satan had been given to destroy the wicked or faithless who travel upon the waters. Future saints traveling to Zion needed to know that should they prove unfaithful, particularly as they traveled upon untamed waters, they would find themselves vulnerable to the power of the destroyer.

19 I, the Lord, have decreed, and the destroyer rideth upon the face thereof, and I revoke not the decree.

verse 19 “I, the Lord, have decreed . . . and I revoke not the decree” The curse pronounced by the mouth of John is still in effect and will be more fully realized at a future time. Satan has been given power over the waters, and that curse will not be revoked until the Savior comes.

20 I, the Lord, was angry with you yesterday, but today mine anger is turned away.

verse 20 During the three days upon the river some disagreements and ill feelings had developed among the brethren and explanations and reconciliations had become necessary. The greater part of the night at McIlwaine’s Bend was devoted to these matters. The brethren had become reconciled to each other. Those whose special callings dictated more urgency (see verse 21) started overland the next morning with all of the group’s non-essential luggage. The rest of the company continued the journey via the river. With the repentance of the elders and their reconciliation to one another, the danger for them in traveling upon the waters was greatly lessened, so that they might, with continued faithfulness, resume their travels, even by water (see verse 6).

21 Wherefore, let those concerning whom I have spoken, that should take their journey in haste—again I say unto you, let them take their journey in haste.

verse 21 “let them take their journey in haste” By the time they arrived at McIlwaine’s bend, the brethren had discovered that progress by canoe was slow. Hence it became necessary for those who had been appointed with a special responsibility to purchase a printing press, Sidney Gilbert and W. W. Phelps, to find a more expeditious means of travel than by canoe. Also the group consisting of Joseph, Oliver Cowdery, and Sidney Rigdon were given special travel instructions by revelation. On the morning of August 12, those with special instructions started overland for St. Louis and Kirtland, and the rest of the company (Samuel Smith, Reynolds Cahoon, Ezra Booth, Frederick G. Williams, Peter Whitmer Jr., and Joseph Coe) continued the journey via the river preaching the restored gospel as they went.

22 And it mattereth not unto me, after a little, if it so be that they fill their mission, whether they go by water or by land; let this be as it is made known unto them according to their judgments hereafter.

verse 22 This verse seems to apply to those elders who continued on by canoe toward St. Louis. They were to find their own way, either by water or by land, so long as their means of travel allowed them the opportunity to preach the gospel and fulfill their mission as they went. The Lord did not care whether they traveled by land or by water.

23 And now, concerning my servants, Sidney Rigdon, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Oliver Cowdery, let them come not again upon the waters, save it be upon the canal, while journeying unto their homes; or in other words they shall not come upon the waters to journey, save upon the canal.

verse 23 The Lord wishes the group of Sidney Rigdon, Joseph Smith, and Oliver Cowdery to hurry back to Kirtland. They were not to travel again by water except when they reached “the canal” which is the Ohio Canal which ran from Lake Erie to Columbus, Ohio. This apparently was an expeditious way to travel in those days.

24 Behold, I, the Lord, have appointed a way for the journeying of my saints; and behold, this is the way—that after they leave the canal they shall journey by land, inasmuch as they are commanded to journey and go up unto the land of Zion;

25 And they shall do like unto the children of Israel, pitching their tents by the way.

26 And, behold, this commandment you shall give unto all your brethren.

verses 24-26 There is little indication in the historical record that the saints understood section 61 as a blanket prohibition against water travel, though they were clearly advised to travel up to Zion by land (see Phelps, “Way of Journeying for the Saints,” The Evening and the Morning Star, December 1832, 5). For example, Parley

P. Pratt and his wife traveled to Missouri by water in the summer of 1832 (see Pratt, Autobiography of Parley P. Pratt, 64-65). Rather, section 61 was seen as an expression of the Lord's preference that those called to settle permanently in Zion travel by land, perhaps because of the physical dangers of going by boat, but also because of the missionary opportunities that would otherwise be lost.

27 Nevertheless, unto whom is given power to command the waters, unto him it is given by the Spirit to know all his ways; verse 27 This verse likely refers specifically to Joseph Smith, who holds all the keys and powers of the priesthood (compare Moses 1:25). See also the following verse.

28 Wherefore, let him do as the Spirit of the living God commandeth him, whether upon the land or upon the waters, as it remaineth with me to do hereafter.

29 And unto you is given the course for the saints, or the way for the saints of the camp of the Lord, to journey.

30 And again, verily I say unto you, my servants, Sidney Rigdon, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Oliver Cowdery, shall not open their mouths in the congregations of the wicked until they arrive at Cincinnati;

verse 30 There was sufficient urgency in the mind of the Lord for Joseph Smith and his party to hasten back to Kirtland, that the group is reminded not to stop to preach the gospel to nonmembers in their congregations on the way home, at least until they arrived in Cincinnati.

31 And in that place they shall lift up their voices unto God against that people, yea, unto him whose anger is kindled against their wickedness, a people who are well-nigh ripened for destruction.

verse 31 At that time Cincinnati was only a frontier village like Independence and, like other western towns, it was the gathering place of many who had been forced to flee from the larger cities because of violations of the law. In all the border towns in that day wickedness and lawlessness prevailed.

32 And from thence let them journey for the congregations of their brethren, for their labors even now are wanted more abundantly among them than among the congregations of the wicked.

verse 32 “from thence let them journey for the congregations of their brethren” After preaching in Cincinnati, Joseph, Oliver, and Sidney were to head directly back to Kirtland—back to the congregations of the saints—where their labors were more urgently required than they were on route. The leadership of Joseph and Sidney had indeed been sorely missed and was urgently needed. John Whitmer recorded that while Joseph and the other leaders were in Missouri, a number of the saints had apostatized in Kirtland, though of these many were reclaimed when their leaders returned (Early Latter Day Saint History, 80).

33 And now, concerning the residue, let them journey and declare the word among the congregations of the wicked, inasmuch as it is given;

verse 33 The Lord again commands those who continued on down the river toward St. Louis after Joseph Smith and others separated from them (Samuel Smith, Reynolds Cahoon, Ezra Booth, Frederick G. Williams, Peter Whitmer Jr., and Joseph Coe). They are commanded to take every opportunity to preach to nonmembers on their way back to Kirtland.

34 And inasmuch as they do this they shall rid their garments, and they shall be spotless before me.

verse 34 “they shall rid their garments” This phrase means to rid them of blame for the sins of people they could have warned and converted, but did not. Notice that whenever someone would have been converted if only some missionary had been obedient, the responsibility for their subsequent sins and ignorance is not charged to themselves alone but is shared with the disobedient missionary!

35 And let them journey together, or two by two, as seemeth them good, only let my servant Reynolds Cahoon, and my servant Samuel H. Smith, with whom I am well pleased, be not separated until they return to their homes, and this for a wise purpose in me.

36 And now, verily I say unto you, and what I say unto one I say unto all, be of good cheer, little children; for I am in your midst, and I have not forsaken you;

37 And inasmuch as you have humbled yourselves before me, the blessings of the kingdom are yours.

38 Gird up your loins and be watchful and be sober, looking forth for the coming of the Son of Man, for he cometh in an hour you think not.

verse 38 “he cometh in an hour you think not” While we are not told the time of the Lord’s second coming, we do know that it will be at a moment when he is not expected. This phrase has the same meaning as the phrase “I come quickly,” found in several places in scripture.

39 Pray always that you enter not into temptation, that you may abide the day of his coming, whether in life or in death. Even so. Amen.

verse 39 “whether in life or in death” Whether we are alive at the Savior’s coming or have died prior to that event, we will still want to be able to “abide the day of his coming.” For the living this means being allowed to stay upon the earth after his coming and to participate in his millennial kingdom. For the dead it means being resurrected with the other righteous dead on that day, in the morning of the first resurrection, also to participate in his millennial kingdom.

The arrangement whereby Joseph, Oliver, and Sidney were to leave the river and travel home by stage was regarded by some of the brethren as overly expensive, and the suggestion was even made that the revelation may have come about because of Joseph's fear of the river. "Why do we have to beg our passage on foot while they get to travel by stage?" They even took notice when Joseph and the others failed to obey the commandment given in verse 30 to stop and preach in Cincinnati.

Section 62 Testimony

After three days of rowing down the Missouri River, Sidney Gilbert, W. W. Phelps, Joseph, Oliver, and Sidney Rigdon all left the river on August 12 to journey by land speedily to Kirtland while the others continued on in their canoes downriver toward St. Louis (see commentary for section 61 for the reasons they left the river). On the day following this separation, the 13th of August 1831, Joseph and his party crossed the Missouri River at Chariton, Missouri, and encountered there a party of missionaries still traveling toward Independence—Hyrum Smith, John Murdock, Harvey Whitlock, and David Whitmer. After joyful salutations, Joseph received section 62 which was directed to the missionaries on their way to Zion and included encouragement and instructions for them.

Keep in mind that Hyrum Smith and John Murdock had been instructed to travel to Missouri by way of Detroit, so they naturally would be expected to arrive later than Joseph and his party. Brother Murdock later, in his journal, provided an additional reason why this group may have been late:

August 1st, traveled 28 miles and crossed the Illinois River. 2nd, 30 miles to Mississippi River Louise—Ana [Louisiana] Ferry and got my feet wet by which I took a violent cold by which I suffered near unto death. 3rd, crossed the river into Missouri. Traveled 25 miles to New London, found it a very wicked place. As we slept in a tavern, in the night Brother Hyrum lay on the far side of the bed with his hand out on our clothes, which hung on a chair by the bedside, and a person seized his wrist. Brother H. [Hyrum] cried out, "Who is there," and at the same time broke his hold, which awoke me. We heard the bedstead in the other room creak which notified us that he had gone to bed. Thursday 4th, arrived at Salt River where we preached next day, but I was sick and went to bed, and we continued there near one week and then I gave my watch in pay to Wm. [William] Ivy to carry me in a wagon to Charidon [Chariton] 70 miles. We stayed there 2 days. Met Brother J. [Joseph] Smith, Jr., S. [Sidney] Rigdon and others, and received the revelation recorded in the Book of Covenants [Doctrine and Covenants] on page 202 or 308 [section 62]. We also fell in company with Brother Harvey Whitlock and David Whitmore [Whitmer], and we four put our money together and bought a pony. I rode him to Lexington, 60 miles, and on the way we four slept one night in a chamber where one half of the floor was laid, and the other not and a window being open, on the opposite side of the chamber from me, and I had a raging fever and had occasion to go to the window; it being dark, I stepped off the floor and fell across the joints.

John Murdock's illness probably turned out to be malaria (see the commentary for verse 7).

D&C 62 Testimony

D&C 62:3 The testimony which ye have borne is recorded in heaven for the angels to look upon.

1 Behold, and hearken, O ye elders of my church, saith the Lord your God, even Jesus Christ, your advocate, who knoweth the weakness of man and how to succor them who are tempted.

verse 1 “who knoweth the weakness of man and how to succor them who are tempted” To succor means to give aid or help. Because the Savior has personally experienced mortality and all of man’s weaknesses, sufferings, and temptations, he knows perfectly how to help those of us in mortality who suffer problems and temptations (Hebrews 2:18; 2 Nephi 9:21; Alma 7:11-12). He completed the process of his acquiring perfect empathy for all humankind during the agony of his atonement and death. He also is thus able to judge us with perfect exactness and perfect fairness.

2 And verily mine eyes are upon those who have not as yet gone up unto the land of Zion; wherefore your mission is not yet full.

verse 2 “those who have not as yet gone up unto the land of Zion” Section 62 is directed to those Missouri missionaries who arrived in Zion after the Prophet Joseph had left there, though it was given specifically to Hyrum Smith, John Murdock, Harvey Whitlock, and David Whitmer. We have mentioned previously that generally it is to the missionaries’ credit that they were late arrivers in Missouri, as it likely meant that they tarried in their journey from Kirtland to Missouri preaching the gospel to those whom they encountered along the way. Of the thirty-one men who had been called to go to Missouri (see D&C 52:3-7, 22-32; 55:1, 4, 6), only nine were in the Prophet’s returning party (Frederick G. Williams and Peter Whitmer Jr. were returning Lamanite missionaries), and Edward Partridge, Isaac Morley, and John Corrill had remained in Missouri. This leaves nineteen missionaries who were still on their way to Missouri.

3 Nevertheless, ye are blessed, for the testimony which ye have borne is recorded in heaven for the angels to look upon; and they rejoice over you, and your sins are forgiven you.

verse 3 These nineteen missionaries, still on their way to Zion (see verse 2), were, by and large, successful in preaching the gospel along the way to Independence. Levi Hancock, Zebedee Coltrin, Solomon Hancock, and Simeon Carter, for example baptized over 120 persons between them on the way to Zion, and Parley P. Pratt recorded having established branches of the Church in Ohio, Illinois, and Indiana.

“the testimony which ye have borne is recorded in heaven for the angels to look upon, and they rejoice over you” This phrase verbalizes the theme of section

62. How thrilling these words must have been for the missionaries to hear! Undoubtedly this verse applies to each of us as we bear a sincere testimony to others—the act is recorded in heaven and the angels rejoice.

There is also a more sobering implication of all of this. It seems likely that a heavenly record is kept in heaven of all that we say and do. Even our most private deeds are available to an audience who rejoices at our righteousness but also grieves at our sins.

“your sins are forgiven you” Again, we are made aware of the idea that it is our constant striving to be obedient that is all important. As we do strive to obey, the Lord, by virtue of his atoning sacrifice, regularly—hundreds or even thousands of times—extends to us the blessings of his atonement and justifies us (forgives us of our sins) and sanctifies us (grants to us those increments of the attributes of God which we merit through our obedience and burns from our soul a small modicum of our natural self). See Justification and Sanctification in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17.

4 And now continue your journey. Assemble yourselves upon the land of Zion; and hold a meeting and rejoice together, and offer a sacrament unto the Most High.

verse 4 In D&C 58:61-63, the brethren in Independence were commanded to convene a conference presided over by Bishop Edward Partridge. Here the Lord tells these missionaries bound for Zion that they will be a part of that meeting which will be held on August 24, 1831, in Kaw Township.

5 And then you may return to bear record, yea, even altogether, or two by two, as seemeth you good, it mattereth not unto me; only be faithful, and declare glad tidings unto the inhabitants of the earth, or among the congregations of the wicked.

verses 4-5 These missionaries are told not to turn around and return to Kirtland, but to continue on to Independence, get a testimony that it is the site of Zion, and then return bearing their testimonies along the way.

6 Behold, I, the Lord, have brought you together that the promise might be fulfilled, that the faithful among you should be preserved and rejoice together in the land of Missouri. I, the Lord, promise the faithful and cannot lie.

verse 6 “that the promise might be fulfilled, that the faithful among you should be preserved and rejoice together in the land of Missouri” The “promise” here referred to by the Lord is that if all will be obedient and diligent, then Zion will flourish and prosper (see D&C 35:24; 39:13; 49:25; and 52:42). Unfortunately, not all of the elders present on this occasion did remain faithful. Ezra Booth lost his testimony on this very journey and later went public with complaints against Joseph Smith (see D&C 64:15-16). Joseph Coe was excommunicated in 1838.

One reason some of the men in Joseph's party had become critical of the Prophet was that they had expected to make many converts, whereas—mostly because of their own unwillingness to preach—they actually had little missionary success.

7 I, the Lord, am willing, if any among you desire to ride upon horses, or upon mules, or in chariots, he shall receive this blessing, if he receive it from the hand of the Lord, with a thankful heart in all things.

verse 7 As described in the introductory commentary for this section, one reason these brethren had been so slow in traveling to Zion was that John Murdock was very ill with an illness that was thought to have been malaria. In his journal he reported that he was so sick that he didn't even have the strength to close his mouth to keep the flies from buzzing around inside. The question was raised with Joseph as to whether or not the missionary group should use their meager funds to provide transportation for Elder Murdock. Once they had Joseph's permission, they bought a horse, and he rode the rest of the way to Zion. Even so, he periodically fell off his horse and was so weak that he had to lie on the ground until the other missionaries caught up with him and placed him back in the saddle.

The Lord makes it clear in this verse that he has no objection to the expenditure of money to buy a horse, so long as it moved the work forward.

The word "chariots" in verse 7 refers to "light four-wheeled carriages with backed seats" in other words, a wagon.

"he shall receive this blessing . . . with a thankful heart in all things" This phrase refers to the blessing of riding a horse or riding in a wagon instead of walking.

8 These things remain with you to do according to judgment and the directions of the Spirit.

verse 8 "These things remain with you" It was up to the missionaries to decide how to administer their resources to best magnify their callings. Some people might have objected to the purchase of a horse for John Murdock as an unnecessary extravagance. After all, the elders probably would have made it to Independence eventually even without such a purchase. But it is up to individual stewards to manage their stewardships wisely for the long-term good of the kingdom. As long as our primary goal is to build the kingdom of God, we are justified in our expenditure of the Lord's resources to that end, even though we may also benefit indirectly from such a decision. Should church leaders today spend sacred tithing funds for airplane tickets, renting vehicles, staying in hotels, and eating in restaurants when they travel on the Lord's errand? If these measures make them more effective in building up the kingdom of God, then yes, of course they should.

9 Behold, the kingdom is yours. And behold, and lo, I am with the faithful always. Even so. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

When Joseph arrived back in Kirtland, he found the saints there ripe for a rebuke from the Lord for some folly and wickedness that had crept in among them. The Lord revealed the appropriate rebuke [D&C 63 - Sign Seeking and Immortality]. The Lord also counseled the saints on another area of weakness [D&C 64 - Forgiveness].

Section 63 Sign Seeking and Immorality

Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, and Sidney Rigdon returned to Kirtland from their mission to Missouri on August 27, 1831. The rest of their party of eleven made their way back during the next few days or weeks.

Once Joseph was back in Kirtland, the word spread among the members of the Church there that the center place of Zion had been revealed by the Lord (D&C 57), that a temple site had been designated there, and that the land of Zion had been dedicated for their future inheritance. This news generated considerable excitement and rejoicing. Many expressed a desire to know what they were to do in order to obtain stewardships there. In general the saints were hungry for any word from the Lord regarding the gathering of the saints in Zion.

The Lord had repeatedly instructed that all who go to Zion must obey his law—the celestial law on which Zion was to be built—the law of consecration and stewardship.

Section 63 is the first revelation given to Joseph after his arrival back in Kirtland. It was received on August 30, 1831, three days after his return to Kirtland. It is essentially a rebuke to the saints in Kirtland for the folly and unrighteousness that had crept in among them while Joseph and the others were in Missouri. Joseph's leadership had been sorely missed in Ohio during the two and a half months he and the other leading brethren had been gone from Kirtland. Some of the saints had wandered. Following Joseph's return, an increased number of disciplinary councils were held in Kirtland, and Simeon Carter is recorded to have mourned over what he called the "falling away" that had taken place in Kirtland while they were absent (compare verses 22, 53). For example, Ezra Booth and a few others who shared his disillusionment with the work had begun to criticize church leaders and to question the whole idea of establishing Zion. It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that section 63 warns the saints in Kirtland of their need to repent and to eliminate evil from among themselves. It explains that they could not be God's people and could not establish Zion unless they did so (see verses 13, 19, 63).

While there is a clear negative warning side to section 63, it also provides new information concerning Zion.

D&C 63 Sign Seeking and Immorality

D&C 63:7-12 I . . . am not pleased with those . . . who have sought after signs.

D&C 63:59 I am from above, and my power lieth beneath.

verses 1-19 The rebuke contained in these verses is for the saints collectively. There is a strong reproof here for those saints who were drawing away from the Church because they had expected to witness miracles or experience supernatural blessings, but they did not do so.

verses 1-6 In the first six verses of section 63, the awesome power of the Lord is made explicit. The facts of his role as righteous judge are made clear. He judges without selfishness or whim.

1 Hearken, O ye people, and open your hearts and give ear from afar; and listen, you that call yourselves the people of the Lord, and hear the word of the Lord and his will concerning you.

verse 1 “you that call yourselves the people of the Lord” Just about anyone can join the Church and become nominally a Latter-day Saint, but among the members there are those who merely take on the name or the calling and not the covenant obligations assumed by the elect. Section 63 is for all who are called saints, both the obedient and the rebellious, though verses 1-19 apply more particularly to the latter group.

2 Yea, verily, I say, hear the word of him whose anger is kindled against the wicked and rebellious;

3 Who willeth to take even them whom he will take, and preserveth in life them whom he will preserve;

verse 3 This verse suggests that all those mortals who die are those “whom he will take,” and all those who live are those “whom he will preserve.” Does God really orchestrate every instance of the death of mortal men? Does he decide in each instance if and when someone lives or dies? Does he directly reach out and cause death of all mortals who die?

There are two overriding principles that have a bearing on these questions. First, it is God’s specific and overarching wish for each of us that we eventually return to our celestial home, there to live with him forever (Moses 1:39) Second, we are currently living in a telestial realm, outside of the direct presence of God. In this realm he does not micromanage every detail of our course throughout mortality. If we are faithful, we can certainly expect to benefit from the ministrations of a loving Heavenly Father while we are here on earth. But, in some measure he leaves us to the natural forces and influences here on earth. This is the nature of mortality. This mortal experience is designed to allow us to make independent decisions and then learn and live with the consequences of those decisions. When he does intervene directly in our lives, we can be confident that his influences inevitably maximize eternal prospects.

Then what can we say about the meaning of this verse? It may have its most important application to eternal life and spiritual death (see verses 4-6). Certainly it is given to God (the Son) to judge us all (John 5:22)—to condemn (“take”) those whom he will and exalt (“preserve”) those whom he judges worthy.

4 Who buildeth up at his own will and pleasure; and destroyeth when he pleases, and is able to cast the soul down to hell.

5 Behold, I, the Lord, utter my voice, and it shall be obeyed.

6 Wherefore, verily I say, let the wicked take heed, and let the rebellious fear and tremble; and let the unbelieving hold their lips, for the day of wrath shall come upon them as a whirlwind, and all flesh shall know that I am God.

verses 1-6 The reader is almost taken aback by the spirit of these six verses. The Lord is a God of incomprehensible love and mercy, yet in these verses he almost seems angry. There was disobedience in the Church at the time, and it is vital for us all to remember that he is a God of justice as well as a God of mercy. His justice side is more visible in these verses. He likely is indeed angry, and the cause of his anger is apparent in the following verses.

7 And he that seeketh signs shall see signs, but not unto salvation.

verse 7 Signs are miracles—events that indicate supernatural intervention into the natural world. A sign, as the term is used here, means temporal evidence or proof—something sensory, tangible, or empirical (derived from experience or observation)—for spiritual realities. Those persons whose interest in such proofs, the lust for signs, exceeds their faith in and faithfulness to Christ, will get what they seek. In other words, they will see signs. But what they see will not bring about their salvation, for salvation comes only through faith in Christ. Those signs will become an end in themselves—they will not build a faith in the kingdom of God. It is a great sin to seek more diligently or to value more highly the by-products of faith, such as signs or miracles, than we value the saving faith itself. Joseph F. Smith wrote: “Show me Latter-day Saints who have to feed upon miracles, signs, and visions in order to keep them steadfast in the Church, and I will show you members of the Church who are not in good standing before God, and who are walking in slippery paths” (Gospel Doctrine, 7).

Usually those seeking signs are those who have lost their faith, or never had any faith in the first place.

8 Verily, I say unto you, there are those among you who seek signs, and there have been such even from the beginning;

verse 8 “there are those among you who seek signs” Ezra Booth and a few others like him turned away from the Church at this time because they could not maintain their faith without frequent miracles to sustain it. Ezra Booth, a former Methodist minister, had joined the Church because he had witnessed the miraculous healing of Elsa Johnson's arm by the Prophet Joseph. About a month later, at a conference in June 1831, Ezra himself was overcome by an evil influence, which the Prophet quickly rebuked. Ezra expected to experience even greater miracles than these in Missouri, but when Joseph didn't meet his expectations, the sign seeker lost his faith. Actually, he had no real faith to lose, for what little inclination he did have to submit to the Lord's will was dependent upon physical rather than spiritual evidence. The basis for his temporary and shallow commitment was the miracles or signs he had experienced rather than the confirming witness of the Holy Spirit.

9 But, behold, faith cometh not by signs, but signs follow those that believe.

verse 9 "faith cometh not by signs" Signs cannot create the most basic type of faith—deliberate faith. This type of faith is by definition the willingness to act on things that cannot be proven physically or empirically (by direct observation or experimentation). When someone says, "Well, if you can just prove this or give me a little more evidence for it, then I'll believe it," this is the opposite of faith, for it is a demand that spiritual realities be proven empirically before accepting that they are so. Deliberate faith, on the other hand, is the willingness to venture forth and obey the Lord's commands even though one cannot prove they are valid and from God, or even that God actually exists.

For a discussion of faith, including the important types of faith, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapters 9, Revealed Faith, 10, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith, and 11, Other Notes on Faith.

"signs follow those that believe" While signs cannot create the most basic faith, they can strengthen the revealed faith of a faithful individual who is striving to live the Lord's commands. Ironically, it is only when we have committed ourselves to live by faith without needing or seeking signs, that signs will occur. Only after we have exercised faith are we entitled to the confirmation of signs and miracles.

The gift of faith, revealed faith, does not come to an individual until after a trial of that faith. The prophet Moroni wrote: "Dispute not because ye see not, for ye receive no witness until after the trial of your faith" (Ether 12:6). A person receives no "witness" or confirmation of his faith until after a trial of that faith. The trial comes in the "experimenting upon [the] words" of God—the deliberate acting upon his words hoping to obtain the gifts of faith. The trial of the faith is in the "experimenting." When the Spirit judges that sufficient effort has been made—including diligently pondering and praying then working and persisting—then the gifts of faith will be granted.

A person might say, "Before I pay my tithing, I must know for sure that it is a true principle." The Lord's way is just the opposite. His way is to first act in faith and pay your tithing. Then over time your faith in the law of tithing will be granted (revealed to you) as a spiritual gift. An individual who demands outward evidence of the power of God as a condition for his believing is seeking to circumvent the process by which faith is developed. He wants proof without paying the price. As with an adulterer, he wants the benefits, superficial and transient though they may be, without accepting any responsibility—pleasure without obligation. This is exactly the opposite of the Lord’s way. Thus, it is “a wicked and adulterous generation [that] seeketh after a sign” (Matthew 16:4).

10 Yea, signs come by faith, not by the will of men, nor as they please, but by the will of God.

11 Yea, signs come by faith, unto mighty works, for without faith no man pleaseth God; and with whom God is angry he is not well pleased; wherefore, unto such he showeth no signs, only in wrath unto their condemnation.

verse 11 “only in wrath unto their condemnation” God sometimes does show signs to the wicked, as he did to the prophets of Baal when Elijah called down fire from heaven (see 1 Kings 18). But these signs only serve as testimonies against them. Even when evil sign seekers are shown the will of God by empirical evidence, they still resist it. Those who sin against what has been revealed to them—against spiritual gifts and knowledge—are more guilty than those who, without the gifts (revealed faith), simply cannot muster the strength (deliberate faith) to obey.

12 Wherefore, I, the Lord, am not pleased with those among you who have sought after signs and wonders for faith, and not for the good of men unto my glory.

verse 12 “I . . . am not pleased with those . . . who have sought after signs and wonders for faith” The Lord condemns those who seek after signs and wonders as a substitute for faith or to build or strengthen faith. It is logically contradictory to seek miracles or signs for the purpose of creating or strengthening faith, since faith is believing and then obeying even when there is no physical evidence. Moreover, asking God to prove himself with signs before we will believe him constitutes the sin of “tempting God” (see Deuteronomy 6:16; Jacob 7:14). Tempting God is demanding that he meet our tests, that he submit himself to be judged and evaluated by our human reasoning.

13 Nevertheless, I give commandments, and many have turned away from my commandments and have not kept them.

verses 14-16 Adultery is warned against. Though certainly adultery is intended in a sexual sense here, in scripture, adultery is referred to at times in quite another context. In scripture the Lord often characterized himself as the bridegroom or husband while his people or the Church are symbolized as the bride or wife. When the symbol of the adulterous wife is used, it may refer to the unfaithful breaker of covenants, one who chases after other gods leaving behind the true Lord and Master. Hence, a “wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign” (Matthew 16:4).

14 There were among you adulterers and adulteresses; some of whom have turned away from you, and others remain with you that hereafter shall be revealed.

verse 14 The Prophet Joseph established a certain link between sign seeking and adultery with the following story:

When I was preaching in Philadelphia, a Quaker called out for a sign. I told him to be still. After the sermon, he again asked for a sign. I told the congregation the man was an adulterer; that a wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and that the Lord had said to me in a revelation, than any man who wanted a sign was an adulterous person. “It is true,” cried one, “for I caught him in the very act,” which the man afterwards confessed, when he was baptized (HC, 5:268; compare HC, 3:385).

It should also be noted that those who seek a spiritual witness of truth, rather than physical proof, are not sign seekers. God does not expect us to believe for no reason at all, but he does expect us to believe for spiritual reasons rather than because of temporal proofs.

15 Let such beware and repent speedily, lest judgment shall come upon them as a snare, and their folly shall be made manifest, and their works shall follow them in the eyes of the people.

verse 15 Those who are guilty of adultery in the Church and who yet remain unrepentant and undiscovered are faced with three possible alternatives: (1) they will confess and repent, (2) they will eventually be discovered and their sin will be revealed, or (3) they will lose the Spirit of God and will apostatize, denying what they once knew to be true.

16 And verily I say unto you, as I have said before, he that looketh on a woman to lust after her, or if any shall commit adultery in their hearts, they shall not have the Spirit, but shall deny the faith and shall fear.

verse 16 This verse provides the sequence that is often followed when a person lusts in his or her heart. First, they lose the Spirit. Then they deny the faith. Finally, they fear.

“shall deny the faith” Those who have committed adultery and have not repented cannot have the companionship of the Holy Ghost. It is impossible to grow in a testimony of the gospel without the Spirit (1 Corinthians 2:14). Further, it is also impossible to keep from losing one’s testimony without the Holy Ghost’s ministrations. The unrepentant then usually adopt the values and perspectives of the world to fill the void left in their minds and hearts by the loss of the Spirit. Such individuals will generally then kick against the Church, with its restrictions and its reminders, until they are entirely free of it.

“and shall fear” Probably the essence of fear in mortal man is his losing of the influence of the Spirit of the Lord (for a more complete discussion of fear, see also the commentary for D&C 67:3). Fear before the Lord is the result of sin. As we each approach our inevitable death, the faithful saints, through the atonement of Christ and the assurance of the Comforter, will not fear what comes. Faith in Christ and a testimony of his gospel turn natural fear into peace, love, joy, and confidence (Romans 8:15; Moroni 8:16). In contrast, the unrepentant sinner will be overcome with paralyzing fear. It would seem that few in this world are able to sin without some degree of ambivalence. One is reminded of “that awful fear of death which fills the breast of the wicked” described by the prophet Mormon in Mormon 6:7. The Spirit of Christ within almost every man will produce a nagging sense of fear and dread if he has not “come clean” before the Lord. This is especially so for those who have heard the gospel of Jesus Christ and have, at one time, accepted Christ and his gospel.

Even before the events of the end-time begin to play out, however, those who commit sexual sin and refuse to repent live in fear of discovery. They fear the loss of all things that awaits them if they do not repent, and yet they also fear repentance. They fear light, for light reveals their sins. They fear truth, for the truth about themselves is ugly.

Having explained the fruitlessness of sign-seeking and the dangers of adultery, the Lord then turns to other specific sins.

17 Wherefore, I, the Lord, have said that the fearful, and the unbelieving, and all liars, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie, and the whoremonger, and the sorcerer, shall have their part in that lake which burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death.

verse 17 “I, the Lord, have said . . .” The Lord condemns several categories of sinners. It is interesting—and perhaps important—that the Lord begins this list of those to be condemned with “the fearful, and unbelieving.” Certainly, it would seem that to have fear and lack belief are not as serious as the sins that follow in the list. Yet it is often the fearful—the cowardly—and unbelieving who yield to the enticings of Satan. They fail to stand firm and true in the face of persecutions and temptations. Perhaps fear and unbelief lead to the other sins the Lord lists (D&C 76:36, 103-06).

“whosoever loveth and maketh a lie” This phrase likely refers to those who do not merely lie to achieve their ends but who actually love the process of invention and deception, and who lie for the love of lying.

“the whoremonger, and the sorcerer” The English word whoremonger means “one who deals or trades in sex.” In the King James Version of the New Testament, however, whoremonger always translates to the Greek pornos, which has the broader meaning of “a sexually immoral person.” Thus, any sexual relationship outside of heterosexual marriage renders one a “whoremonger.”

The English word sorcerer refers to anyone who pretends to have or to control supernatural powers—for example, palm readers, psychics, mediums, astrologers, and channelers. A magician who claims to actually possess magical powers would therefore be a “sorcerer” in the scriptural sense, while a magician who claims only to be an entertainer would not be so labeled. In addition, the Greek word used for sorcerer in Revelation 21:8 and 22:15 (pharmakos) also includes those who practice quack medicine, that is, any so-called healer who claims special powers and victimizes the sick by selling phony “cures.”

“shall have their part in that lake which burneth with fire and brimstone”

Here is a bit of hyperbole, since we certainly do not believe that any literal “lake which burneth with fire and brimstone” exists in the plan of salvation. While the imagery is figurative, it is also effective. Brimstone is sulphur, a hard, brittle, and flammable substance. It is called brimstone because in antiquity it was found mainly around the rims of volcanoes. It is possible that the lake of fire and brimstone is meant to evoke an image of molten lava bubbling in the crater of an active volcano.

“second death” What exactly is this “second death”? To understand clearly the answer to this question, let us review part of the concept of the fall: Because Adam transgressed in the garden, all mankind will temporarily suffer two penalties:

1. Each person will be cut off from the presence of God temporarily while here in mortality. This separation from God or spiritual death may be referred to as the “first death.”

2. Every man will also suffer physical death, the separation of his spirit from his body. These penalties are temporary because, as we will learn, their effects will automatically be some day reversed. No man will be eternally punished for Adam’s transgression (Article of Faith 2). Remember, that the law of justice includes the concept that it is unjust to punish one man for another’s sins. Thus, all men will be resurrected, and also no man will be excluded from the presence of God because of Adam’s sin. Actually, every man will be returned to the presence of God at least long enough to be judged. It does not matter how wicked and unrepentant, every person will, after the resurrection, be brought back into the presence of God for judgment. This returning to God’s presence of every man is proof that no one suffers a permanent spiritual death because of Adam’s transgression.

Once in God’s presence each person is judged. They will either be exalted in the kingdom of God and thus remain in his presence or they will be sent out of his presence a second time and suffer the so-called “second death.” They will be cut off from the presence of God, and from his happiness and joy, forever. While the first death is due to Adam’s transgression, the second death is due the individual’s own sins. These sufferers of the second death will be consigned to one of the lower two kingdoms. A few will remain “filthy still” (D&C 88:35, 102; Revelation 22:11; Mormon 9:13-14), and live with Satan forever as sons of perdition.

The use of the term “second death” in scripture can be confusing, as it is sometimes used in scripture to refer to outer darkness (see Jacob 3:11).

18 Verily I say, that they shall not have part in the first resurrection.

verse 18 “the first resurrection” For a discussion of the first and second resurrections and the sequence of resurrection, see the commentary for 2 Nephi 9:15.

19 And now behold, I, the Lord, say unto you that ye are not justified, because these things are among you.

verse 19 “ye are not justified” Remember that the pronoun ye is always plural and refers here to the Church collectively. The Lord says that as long as the sins described in verses 12-17 are among the saints, they are not justified—they are not righteous, not free of sin. This weakness on the part of some people presents a problem for even the most righteous individual saints, because only a collectively “justified” (forgiven) people can establish Zion.

20 Nevertheless, he that endureth in faith and doeth my will, the same shall overcome, and shall receive an inheritance upon the earth when the day of transfiguration shall come;

verse 20 “the same shall overcome” See the previous verse. Even when the Church collectively fails to achieve its goals, the promises of God to the individual remain. Individual members who keep their covenants shall overcome and receive all their promised blessings—no matter what else may or may not occur. The saints are obligated by covenant to work together to establish Zion, but no other person’s disobedience can rob a faithful saint of his or her full, individual blessings.

“the day of transfiguration” This earth is a living being—the “inanimate” parts of the earth actually consisting of myriad intelligences clothed with bodies of mortal matter (see “Creation” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 3, The Creation). The cosmic history of the earth parallels that of the humans who live upon it. Before the fall of Adam, this earth, or at least the part of the earth designated to be the Garden of Eden, existed as a terrestrial paradise. After the fall, the earth, like Adam and Eve, also lost its paradisiacal glory and began its present telestial existence. The leading intelligence of the earth mourned the wickedness and filthiness that came out of itself and pleaded with God for cleansing (see Moses 7:48). Consequently, the earth was baptized by immersion and cleansed of all wickedness at the time of Noah, and it will be baptized again with fire at the second coming of the Lord. Just as baptism by water, receiving the gift of the Holy Ghost, and the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost leads to the justification and sanctification of human beings, so the fallen or telestial earth will be sanctified and transfigured when it is baptized with fire at the second coming, and it will receive again the terrestrial or paradisiacal glory that it enjoyed before the fall (see Articles of Faith 1:10). The actual day of the earth's transfiguration to a paradisiacal state will be the last day of its telestial existence, the day of the Savior's second coming to the earth.

21 When the earth shall be transfigured, even according to the pattern which was shown unto mine apostles upon the mount; of which account the fulness ye have not yet received.

verse 21 We have determined, then, that the "earth shall be transfigured" when it is changed from a telestial state to a terrestrial state.

"even according to the pattern which was shown unto mine apostles upon the mount" The reference is probably to the Mount of Transfiguration and the events that occurred there, as described in Matthew 17:1-9 and its parallels in Mark 9:2-13 and Luke 9:28-36 (see also John 1:14; 2 Peter 1:16-19). Apparently more took place upon the mountain, however, than is recorded in the four Gospels. Like Moses on the mount in Moses 1, the apostles received a view of the heavenly patterns governing earthly events. Perhaps the use of the verb transfigure for both Jesus on the mount (see Matthew 17:2) and for the earth in the Millennium hints at the nature of the change Jesus experienced upon the mount. God has not yet revealed to the Church all of what happened upon the Mount of Transfiguration nor even the full significance of those events that are recorded.

22 And now, verily I say unto you, that as I said that I would make known my will unto you, behold I will make it known unto you, not by the way of commandment, for there are many who observe not to keep my commandments.

verse 22 "not by the way of commandment" The Lord often expresses his will to the Church in a form other than as a commandment in order to extend mercy and long-suffering to the spiritually weak, while at the same time offering an opportunity for individual discernment and progress to the state of spiritual strength. Those who know the will of God but disregard it unless specifically commanded to obey fail to grasp the disturbing implications of their attitude.

23 But unto him that keepeth my commandments I will give the mysteries of my kingdom, and the same shall be in him a well of living water, springing up unto everlasting life.

verse 23 "the mysteries of my kingdom" Those who keep the commandments of God will learn things that can only be known through personal revelation (see John 4:10).

24 And now, behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning his saints, that they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste, lest there should be confusion, which bringeth pestilence.

verse 24 “they should assemble themselves together unto the land of Zion, not in haste” It is the will of God that the saints should gather to Zion but that they should gather slowly and in a controlled fashion. The transfer from Kirtland to Independence had to be gradual. Perhaps one reason was that the Lord knew that a rapid influx of saints into Jackson County could not be sustained by the resources then available. If too many people were to go to Zion at once, some would be left unprovided for. A rapid influx of saints to Zion would also cause concern among the earlier non-Mormon settlers and would eventually create opposition and conflict. When the saints collectively ignored the will of God that Zion be settled slowly, they were soon impoverished and persecuted just as the Lord had warned.

25 Behold, the land of Zion—I, the Lord, hold it in mine own hands; verses 25-26 The earth, including all the property needed for Zion, already belongs to God. Nevertheless, God recognizes the stewardship of civil government, here referred to symbolically as Caesar, and generally works within the systems established by “Caesar.” As long as secular government contents itself with its proper stewardship—the things that are Caesar’s—then God is willing to operate by Caesar’s rules and pay with Caesar’s coin.

26 Nevertheless, I, the Lord, render unto Caesar the things which are Caesar’s.

27 Wherefore, I the Lord will that you should purchase the lands, that you may have advantage of the world, that you may have claim on the world, that they may not be stirred up unto anger.

verse 27 “I the Lord will that you should purchase the lands, that you may have advantage of the world” In Independence, Missouri, this meant that the land, which was to be a Zion for the saints, had to be legally and lawfully purchased. Purchasing the land would theoretically put government and the law on the side of the saints. The Lord by this time had repeatedly instructed the Church that any lands to be acquired in Zion must be purchased. No other means of acquisition would be acceptable (see D&C 42:35; 45:65; 48:4, 6; 57:4; 58:37, 49, 52).

Still, some of the saints would not listen to the repeated word of the Lord but entertained the view that they might take the land of Zion by force of arms just like the children of Israel had taken their promised land from the Canaanites. According to the Doctrine and Covenants, this was never the plan, but the perception among non-Latter-day Saint settlers that this was the aim of the saints, a perception given credibility by foolish talk among some Mormons, played into Satan's hands in arousing the fear and anger of the mobs.

28 For Satan putteth it into their hearts to anger against you, and to the shedding of blood.

29 Wherefore, the land of Zion shall not be obtained but by purchase or by blood, otherwise there is none inheritance for you.

verse 29 The wording of this verse caused much controversy. Some of the settlers of Jackson County, Missouri, pretended to see in it a threat to take possession of western Missouri by conquest—by the “shedding of blood.” Actually the Lord will forbid the saints in verses 30 and 31 to obtain land by the shedding of blood, and the verses may even imply a warning that if land is not purchased promptly, then blood may be shed. But it will be the blood of the saints and not that of their enemies.

30 And if by purchase, behold you are blessed; verse 31 “And if by blood” The only two ways to get the land were to buy it or to take it. Because the saints were forbidden to take the land by the shedding of blood, if they didn't purchase the property, they could not obtain it, and Zion would be lost. Neither this verse nor the similar passage in D&C 58:53 should be understood as allowing the saints to consider force as a means of obtaining property in Zion. Though acquisition by force was a theoretical possibility, that course of action had been clearly and repeatedly forbidden.

31 And if by blood, as you are forbidden to shed blood, lo, your enemies are upon you, and ye shall be scourged from city to city, and from synagogue to synagogue, and but few shall stand to receive an inheritance.

“your enemies are upon you” If events came to the shedding of blood, then the saints would lose Zion, for they were forbidden to acquire the land by bloodshed.

“synagogue” The use of the term synagogue instead of church or congregation creates a parallel between the experiences of the early saints in this dispensation and those of the disciples in New Testament times. Both groups were called upon to go to the meetinghouses of those who had much of the truth, but not all of it and who were hostile to the disciples' claims to possess the fulness.

32 I, the Lord, am angry with the wicked; I am holding my Spirit from the inhabitants of the earth.

verse 32 “I am holding my Spirit” At some times in history, the wickedness of humanity has made it necessary for the Spirit of God to cease its striving with the stubbornly wicked and to withdraw from them (see Genesis 6:3; D&C 1:33). Whenever this happens, destruction follows, either individually or collectively (see 2 Nephi 26:11). Though one might be tempted to wonder whether the Lord is angry with the wicked among the saints, the following verses suggest that instead the Lord is withholding his Spirit from the wicked of the earth without, or outside, the Church.

33 I have sworn in my wrath, and decreed wars upon the face of the earth, and the wicked shall slay the wicked, and fear shall come upon every man;

verse 33 “I have . . . decreed wars upon the face of the earth” This revelation will be followed soon by the American Civil War (see D&C 87).

34 And the saints also shall hardly escape; nevertheless, I, the Lord, am with them, and will come down in heaven from the presence of my Father and consume the wicked with unquenchable fire.

verse 34 “the saints also shall hardly escape” It is a firm principle that when the Lord sends travails upon the people of earth because of their wickedness, the righteous will not entirely escape. Though the Lord will generally acknowledge the righteous and protect them, it is the nature of this mortal earth that some of the innocent will suffer. There is always some “collateral damage.” The Prophet Joseph wrote:

It is a false idea that the saints will escape all the judgments, whilst the wicked suffer; for all flesh is subject to suffer, and “the righteous shall hardly escape.” Still, many of the saints will escape, for the just shall live by faith; yet many of the righteous shall fall prey to disease, to pestilence, etc., by reason of the weakness of the flesh, and yet be saved in the kingdom of God. So that it is an unhallowed principle to say that such and such have transgressed because they have been preyed upon by disease or death, for all flesh is subject to death; and the Savior has said “Judge not, lest ye be judged” (HC, 4:11).

35 And behold, this is not yet, but by and by.

verse 35 This great destruction which the Lord has decreed upon the wicked and a few of the righteous (collateral damage) has not come yet, but it will come soon—“by and by.”

36 Wherefore, seeing that I, the Lord, have decreed all these things upon the face of the earth, I will that my saints should be assembled upon the land of Zion;

verse 36 “all these things” This phrase refers to the trials and destructions prior to the Lord’s second coming.

“I will that my saints should be assembled upon the land of Zion” The fundamental reason for the Lord’s gathering his people together into one place is so that he can watch over and nurture and protect them—keep them safe while chaos rages around them.

37 And that every man should take righteousness in his hands and faithfulness upon his loins, and lift a warning voice unto the inhabitants of the earth; and declare both by word and by flight that desolation shall come upon the wicked.

verse 37 “every man should take righteousness in his hands and faithfulness upon his loins” To “take righteousness in his hand” means to do righteous deeds, while taking “faithfulness upon his loins” may indicate sexual morality.

“lift a warning voice unto the inhabitants of the earth” Preach the restored gospel and repentance in preparation for the Lord’s second coming—warning that desolation shall surely come upon the wicked.

“by word and by flight” The saints are to preach and set the example of gospel living by preaching aloud and by fleeing to Zion to avoid the coming destructions.

38 Wherefore, let my disciples in Kirtland arrange their temporal concerns, who dwell upon this farm.

verse 38 “this farm” This probably refers to the Isaac Morley farm in Kirtland (compare D&C 64:20). Before 1832, most of the saints gathering to Kirtland settled on the Morley farm, including, at the time of this revelation, Joseph and Emma Smith. Brother Morley had consecrated his farm to the Lord and was then called to Missouri (see D&C 52:23). While he was gone, the farm was managed by Titus Billings, and at the time of this revelation Brother Morley was still in Missouri serving as a counselor to Bishop Partridge.

39 Let my servant Titus Billings, who has the care thereof, dispose of the land, that he may be prepared in the coming spring to take his journey up unto the land of Zion, with those that dwell upon the face thereof, excepting those whom I shall reserve unto myself, that shall not go until I shall command them.

verse 39 “my servant Titus Billings” Titus Billings was, like Isaac Morley, a native of Kirtland, and the Morley farm had been left in his hands when Morley went to Missouri. Titus was instructed to sell the land so that the proceeds could be used to purchase land in Independence (see verse 40) and so that the members who were then living on the Morley farm would have to prepare for their move to Zion. By September 12, less than two weeks after section 63 was received, the Prophet and his family moved out of their little house on the Morley farm and moved in with the John Johnson family in Hiram, Ohio, about thirty miles southeast of Kirtland.

40 And let all the moneys which can be spared, it mattereth not unto me whether it be little or much, be sent up unto the land of Zion, unto them whom I have appointed to receive.

verse 40 “them whom I have appointed to receive” This phrase refers to Bishop Edward Partridge, his counselors, and his agents.

41 Behold, I, the Lord, will give unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., power that he shall be enabled to discern by the Spirit those who shall go up unto the land of Zion, and those of my disciples who shall tarry.

verse 41 “those who shall go up unto the land of Zion” Emigration to Zion was not supposed to be self-appointed. The saints were to stay in Kirtland and use it as a base of operations for gathering converts from the East and for generating revenue for Zion. Many of the Ohio saints, however, disobeyed the Lord’s will and went to Zion uninvited, unprepared, and unconsecrated, thus straining the spiritual and financial resources of the Church there.

42 Let my servant Newel K. Whitney retain his store, or in other words, the store, yet for a little season.

verse 42 Newell K. Whitney owned a mercantile store in Kirtland, and it was one of the largest stores in northeastern Ohio. Because the store produced revenue for the Church, Brother Whitney was instructed to continue operating it upon the principles of consecration for the good of the saints.

43 Nevertheless, let him impart all the money which he can impart, to be sent up unto the land of Zion.

44 Behold, these things are in his own hands, let him do according to wisdom.

verse 44 “these things are in his own hands” The Lord trusted Brother Whitney to manage the store and consecrate the proceeds without more detailed instructions or commandments.

45 Verily I say, let him be ordained as an agent unto the disciples that shall tarry, and let him be ordained unto this power;

verse 45 Newell K. Whitney is called to be Bishop Edward Partridge’s agent to handle the affairs of those living the law of consecration and stewardship in the Kirtland area (see D&C 58:49). He is not to be ordained bishop as yet (see D&C 72:8), but rather to act as an agent under the direction of Bishop Partridge.

46 And now speedily visit the churches, expounding these things unto them, with my servant Oliver Cowdery. Behold, this is my will, obtaining moneys even as I have directed.

verse 46 “And now speedily visit the churches” Joseph had been commanded while still in Missouri to raise money among the Ohio saints for the purchase of more land in Zion. This fund-raising effort was to employ Sidney Rigdon’s written description of the property in Jackson County together with a letter and subscription to be sent out to the branches of the church in the Ohio (see D&C 58:50-51). In this verse Joseph and Oliver are commanded to visit the branches of the Church personally in order to further aid in the fund-raising effort.

47 He that is faithful and endureth shall overcome the world.

verse 47 “He that is faithful” In the context of the Kirtland Church in 1831, being faithful meant at the very least been willing to consecrate one’s possessions to establish and build up Zion. Faithful acts of consecration not only bring the blessings of God upon us in this life but will “follow” us into the next life (see verse 48). In other words, a record of faithfulness in this life will be accepted in the next life as sufficient indication of our character and worthiness (see Revelation 21:7).

48 He that sendeth up treasures unto the land of Zion shall receive an inheritance in this world, and his works shall follow him, and also a reward in the world to come.

verses 49 Beginning in this verse, the Lord does something that may seem out of place—he begins a discussion of the Millennium and resurrection. Actually, it is not at all out of place here since Zion and the Millennium go together. Zion realizes its fulfillment and glory at the advent of the Lord’s coming to usher in the Millennium.

49 Yea, and blessed are the dead that die in the Lord, from henceforth, when the Lord shall come, and old things shall pass away, and all things become new, they shall rise from the dead and shall not die after, and shall receive an inheritance before the Lord, in his holy city.

verse 49 “blessed are the dead that die in the Lord” When one is enduring faithfully in the new and everlasting covenant at the time of one’s death, then one is said to die “unto the Lord,” “unto Christ,” or “in Christ.”

“all things become new” See 2 Corinthians 5:17; Revelation 21:5. When the Savior comes a second time to establish his millennial kingdom, the earth will be raised from a fallen, telestial state to a paradisiacal, terrestrial state. This change will transform the earth and everything on it. All evil and wickedness will be removed. Nothing telestial will remain.

50 And he that liveth when the Lord shall come, and hath kept the faith, blessed is he; nevertheless, it is appointed to him to die at the age of man.

verse 50 “he that liveth when the Lord shall come” When Christ comes the second time, there will be righteous mortals, both children and adults, then living upon the earth who will be lifted up while the earth is changed and who will then continue to live out their mortal lives in the paradisiacal environment of the millennial kingdom. Adult mortals will continue to marry and bear mortal children during the Millennium, so that mortals will continue to be upon the earth during the entire thousand-year period.

When these persons have lived their allotted mortal time, provided they are worthy of celestial glory, they will pass through the changes of death and resurrection in the “twinkling” of an eye. Old and frail mortals will be changed into glorified, resurrected beings quickly (see verse 51).

“the age of man” The prophet Isaiah declared that during the Millennium a child will live to be a hundred years of age (see Isaiah 65:20-24). Psalm 90:10, in speaking of conditions before the Millennium, gives “the days of our years” as “threescore years and ten,” or seventy years. So a natural, mortal life span might be shorter before the Millennium than it will be during the Millennium. The important point here is that there will be no premature deaths during the Millennium, neither through disease, nor accident, nor war, nor any other telestial element. None of the mortal population of the millennial earth will die or be changed in a twinkling before their full human life span has been lived. No graves will be dug for the righteous, as all, when they reach the age of one hundred years, will be changed to immortality in the twinkling of an eye. For those destined to inherit a lower degree of glory, death for them may be much as it is now.

51 Wherefore, children shall grow up until they become old; old men shall die; but they shall not sleep in the dust, but they shall be changed in the twinkling of an eye.

52 Wherefore, for this cause preached the apostles unto the world the resurrection of the dead.

53 These things are the things that ye must look for; and, speaking after the manner of the Lord, they are now nigh at hand, and in a time to come, even in the day of the coming of the Son of Man.

verse 53 “speaking after the manner of the Lord” It has now been more than a century and a half since the Lord described these events as being “nigh at hand.” Because “nigh at hand” means “nearly here,” why haven’t these things happened as yet? Because, as the Lord points out, he is speaking from his own perspective of time, from a perspective that takes in all eternity. And compared with the entire telestial history of this earth, the time remaining is, indeed, relatively short.

54 And until that hour there will be foolish virgins among the wise; and at that hour cometh an entire separation of the righteous and the wicked; and in that day will I send mine angels to pluck out the wicked and cast them into unquenchable fire.

verse 54 “foolish virgins among the wise” The Lord’s allusion here is to his parable of the wise and foolish virgins (Matthew 25:1-13). Here he refers to those virgins who did not have sufficient oil in their lamps.

“an entire separation of the righteous and the wicked” Nothing telestial will continue into the Millennium. Section 86 teaches that the wicked will be separated from the righteous because God allows his children to demonstrate by their mortal, moral choices what they truly are in their heart of hearts. Then he will segregate them according to their own free choices, so they will spend eternity with people pretty much like themselves. This segregation into wheat and tares, chaff and grain, righteous and wicked cannot take place yet, but at the last day and for all eternity thereafter, the wicked will have no influence or impact upon the righteous and will go away into their own place.

“in that day will I send mine angels to pluck out the wicked and cast them into unquenchable fire” Here the Lord refers to the parable of the wheat and the tares (Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43; D&C 86).

55 And now behold, verily I say unto you, I, the Lord, am not pleased with my servant Sidney Rigdon; he exalted himself in his heart, and received not counsel, but grieved the Spirit;

56 Wherefore his writing is not acceptable unto the Lord, and he shall make another; and if the Lord receive it not, behold he standeth no longer in the office to which I have appointed him.

verses 55-56 In section 58 (verses 50-51) the Lord commanded Sidney Rigdon to create a description of Zion in a brochure for distribution to the saints to encourage financial contributions to the cause of building up Zion. These verses likely have reference at least in part to that assignment and reflect the Lord’s dissatisfaction as to the manner in which Sidney fulfilled this assignment.

Sidney had been too proud to receive counsel. He would not be advised by Joseph Smith, but insisted on writing the brochure his own way. We may surmise from the text that Sidney was trying to write theology or scripture rather than an inducement for the saints to purchase land. In his first attempt, he clearly did not address the intended purpose of the letter in describing the land of Zion in the most attractive terms possible. Here the Lord gives him a second chance, and his second effort proved a success and was accepted. The glowing description of Jackson County found in the History of the Church (HC, 1:197-98) is a revised version of Sidney’s second, more acceptable attempt to write a description of Zion (Smith and Sjodahl, Commentary, 384).

“he standeth no longer in the office to which I have appointed him” Sidney is threatened here with a rather severe penalty—not because of his literary failure, but because of his pride and his stubborn refusal to accept counsel or to follow the promptings of the Spirit in completing the Lord’s assignment.

57 And again, verily I say unto you, those who desire in their hearts, in meekness, to warn sinners to repentance, let them be ordained unto this power.

verse 57 Any male saint wishing to preach the gospel to those without the Church are to be ordained to the proper priesthood and set apart to be missionaries.

58 For this is a day of warning, and not a day of many words. For I, the Lord, am not to be mocked in the last days.

59 Behold, I am from above, and my power lieth beneath. I am over all, and in all, and through all, and search all things, and the day cometh that all things shall be subject unto me.

verse 59 “I am from above, and my power lieth beneath” For a discussion of this vitally important concept see The Power of God in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 14.

“the day cometh that all things shall be subject unto me” When the Savior comes to establish his kingdom upon the earth, nothing that will not obey him will be allowed to remain upon the earth. Beyond this, at the last judgment all those who receive any degree of glory and have any place in the mansions of the Father will be subject to Jesus Christ as their Creator and Redeemer and, like the elements themselves, they will obey him in their respective spheres.

60 Behold, I am Alpha and Omega, even Jesus Christ.

verse 60 “I am Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

61 Wherefore, let all men beware how they take my name in their lips—

62 For behold, verily I say, that many there be who are under this condemnation, who use the name of the Lord, and use it in vain, having not authority.

verses 61-62 If only we could comprehend the full majesty of Jesus Christ, we would realize what a wonderful and sacred thing it is even to speak his name. It is an even more glorious privilege aspire to be like him.

“many there be . . . who use the name of the Lord, and use it in vain” The word vain means “empty,” “useless,” “pointless” or “without purpose.” One meaning of taking Christ’s name in vain is, therefore, to use it in a manner that is empty and without purpose, as do those who claim to speak or act in his name when they do not. This is not merely a question of priesthood authority, nor is this sin limited to the unordained, for even priesthood holders may invoke the name of Jesus Christ in attempting to present their own words or desires as his. Whenever we speak or act in the sacred name of Jesus Christ, we had better be sure that he really approves of what we are doing, lest we invoke his name in vain, or for nothing. It might even be possible to take his name in vain when we pray publicly, if the phrase “in the name of Jesus Christ, amen” is merely a formula signaling that we are finished praying and the congregation may open their eyes.

Another way of taking Christ's name in vain is to speak it thoughtlessly, carelessly, casually, or merely for rhetorical effect, as does the casual blasphemer—he who is guilty of profanity or “swearing.” In speaking profanity, we introduce the name of the Father or the Son into unholy and base situations; and thus we show a careless disregard and disrespect for the Father or the Son.

Perhaps the worst form of using Christ's name in vain is to invoke it when making promises, oaths, or covenants, and then to break them. Members of the Church may take his name in vain when they take his name upon themselves in baptism and then fail to remember him and keep his commandments as they have promised to do (see D&C 20:77, 79).

James E. Talmage taught:

To take the name of God in vain, is to use the name lightly, to use it empty, to use it without effect, so far as the intent is concerned. By way of summary: (1) We may take the name of God in vain by profane speech. (2) We take it in vain when we swear falsely, not being true to our oaths and promises. (3) We take it in vain in a blasphemous sense when we presume to speak in that name without authority. (4) And, we take his name in vain whenever we willfully do aught that is in defiance of his commandments, since we have taken his name upon ourselves (CR, October 1931, 50-53).

63 Wherefore, let the church repent of their sins, and I, the Lord, will own them; otherwise they shall be cut off.

verse 63 “I, the Lord, will own them” To own means both to “possess” and to “acknowledge.” If we repent, Jesus will acknowledge us before the Father as his very own possessions (see D&C 29:27; Matthew 10:32; 1 Corinthians 6:20).

64 Remember that that which cometh from above is sacred, and must be spoken with care, and by constraint of the Spirit; and in this there is no condemnation, and ye receive the Spirit through prayer; wherefore, without this there remaineth condemnation.

verse 64 “that which cometh from above is sacred” What things “cometh from above”? All eternal things pertaining to the Father, the Son, and the Father's universe including all things witnessed of and testified of by the Spirit of God. Christ cometh from above (see verse 59) as does all eternal truths about him, including his atonement, his love and mercy. All eternal truths are sacred and can only be understood and appreciated through the influence of the Spirit of God (1 Corinthians 2:14). When these truths are spoken or taught, it should also only be by the Spirit. By the constraint of the Spirit, we are taught what to teach, how to teach, and when to teach it.

“ye receive the Spirit through prayer” Frequent, and even constant, prayer is vital to keep the influence of the Spirit of God with you. Even though a church member possesses the gift of the Holy Ghost, if he desires inspiration through that gift he must draw close to the Lord, and stay in tune with him, through prayer. For further discussion of prayer, see Prayer in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 8.

65 Let my servants, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon, seek them a home, as they are taught through prayer by the Spirit.

verse 65 “Let . . . Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon seek them a home” Sidney Rigdon had lost his home in Mentor, Ohio, when he joined the Church the year before. At the time of this revelation both the Sidney Rigdon family and the Smith family were living on the Morley farm, which the Lord had just commanded be sold (see verse 39). Thus, both Sidney and Joseph needed to find new lodgings for themselves and their families. Through this revelation the Lord could have told Joseph and Sidney where to look for a home, but, in the spirit of not having to be commanded in all things, he allowed them to work the matter out for themselves. Within two weeks of receiving this commandment, Joseph and his family moved in with the John Johnson family, and Sidney Rigdon and his family moved into a cabin on the Johnson property.

66 These things remain to overcome through patience, that such may receive a more exceeding and eternal weight of glory, otherwise, a greater condemnation. Amen.

verse 66 “These things remain to overcome” This phrase refers to the common, human problems of how to live, where to live, how to support one’s family, and so on. These everyday challenges were a continual burden on the shoulders of the prophet Joseph Smith and his family. The Lord did not magically resolve for them these common problems of life and mortality. They struggled to find their way and make ends meet as much as any of us, and more than most. That the Smiths accomplished what they did for the Lord, while at the same time dealing with trying domestic difficulties, bestows upon them the greater glory, as it does also for other faithful saints in similar circumstances.

Character Vignette

John Johnson

“Father Johnson” was the patriarch of the Johnson family of Hiram, Ohio. He was 26 years older than the Prophet, and thus he was 52 years old in the fall of 1831. The men in his family were large, strong, sensible, brave, and honest. He was a prosperous farmer of large tracts of lands, and he was noted for paying his debts and living independently. He was associated with the Methodist Church for about five years prior to accepting the gospel. After the miraculous healing of his wife by Joseph Smith

(see Character Vignette on Ezra Booth near the end of section 52), he became satisfied as to the truth of Mormonism, and he was baptized by Joseph.

Two of John Johnson's sons were Luke and Lyman Johnson. Luke was the older of the two brothers by seven years, and was two years younger than the Prophet. Both were appointed as Apostles in February 1835. Both fell away from the Church in 1838. Luke repented and came back into the Church in 1846. He came west in 1846 and served as a bishop in a ward in Tooele County. He died in Salt Lake City at the age of 54. Lyman remained friendly with the Church leaders but apparently did not come back into the Church. He lost his life by drowning in the Mississippi River in 1856.

Section 64 Forgiveness

September 1831 in Kirtland was almost chaotically busy. Joseph Smith and the Kirtland saints were deeply involved in raising funds for the land purchases in Zion through the subscription of members and through the consecration and sale of some Kirtland properties. Because of the imminent sale of the Isaac Morley farm, the large number of saints living there, including the Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon families, had to find new housing. Many of these members had been directed to emigrate to Zion before winter, and preparations for their long journey on such short notice consumed both time and resources.

Joseph needed a home for his family and also he needed a quieter place in which to work, especially to work on his inspired revision of the Bible. See the supplemental article, Joseph Smith's Inspired Revision of the Bible. Thus, on September 12, 1831, the Prophet with his wife Emma and their four-month old adopted twins moved to the home of John and Elsa Johnson in the township of Hiram, Portage County, Ohio, about thirty miles southeast of Kirtland. The Smiths occupied a single room in the two-story Johnson farmhouse. The Johnsons were friends of Sidney Rigdon and had been converted to the Church when the Prophet healed Elsa of a chronic and painful joint disease. Sidney and Phoebe Rigdon with their six children moved with him, and they lived in a log cabin near the Johnson home on the 304 acre farm.

For six and a half months—September 12, 1831 through March 1832—Hiram would serve as temporary headquarters of the Church. While Joseph was in Hiram, many saints traveled there to meet with him and seek his counsel. While there, he did much work on his inspired revision of the King James Bible. Also in Hiram several important conferences were held, and sixteen revelations were received (sections 1, 65, 67, 68, 69, 71, 73, 74, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 99, and 133) including the memorable vision recorded in section 76.

One reason the Prophet moved so far from Kirtland in September 1831 was to avoid the persecution beginning there. The work of producing the JST had begun by commandment in 1830, shortly after the Church was organized, and had been interrupted by the move from New York to Ohio in early 1831 and by the mission to Missouri in the summer of that year. Joseph was determined to continue the work of translation as he had been commanded. But to do so he would have to move far from the atmosphere of growing persecution in Kirtland.

We will learn that there in Hiram a mob, excited by the agitation of Ezra Booth, will try to take the lives of Joseph and Sidney. The Prophet and Sidney will flee from Hiram in March 1832 to return to Kirtland. This six-month period in Hiram was a most significant era in the history of the Church.

The day before Joseph moved to Hiram, September 11, 1831, he received section 64. Among other things, section 64 contains an important commandment upon which many of us may stumble—the commandment to forgive one another.

In section 57 a few brethren had been called to settle their affairs in Kirtland and move to Missouri. These included Edward Partridge, Sidney Gilbert, and W. W. Phelps. Evidently the problems that had arisen on the Missouri River (see background materials for section 61) had involved these brethren. Some unpleasant feelings and ill will still existed among them. There needed to be a full reconciliation if they were to successfully lay the foundations for Zion. Thus, section 64 was given primarily for their benefit. They needed to forgive one another and to forgive Joseph.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 64 Forgiveness

D&C 64:9-11 I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men.

D&C 64:23 He that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming.

D&C 64:32-34 Be not weary in well-doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord your God unto you, O ye elders of my church, hearken ye and hear, and receive my will concerning you.

2 For verily I say unto you, I will that ye should overcome the world; wherefore I will have compassion upon you.

verse 2 “I will that ye should overcome the world” The ultimate challenge for each of us mortals here on earth is to make strides in overcoming our natural or natural man tendencies and, instead of succumbing to those natural inclinations, choosing to obey the Lord’s commands. Our natural self is inclined to respond only to earthly influences. Each of the Lord’s commandments can be obeyed only if we are successful in denying (or “overcoming”) part of our natural self. This deliberate overcoming of our natural self is the essence of the characteristic of deliberate faith. For a discussion of this vital topic see Our “Natural Self” and “Spiritual Self” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 5 and The Gospel and the Two Natures of Man in the same volume, chapter 6. See also chapters 9, 10, and 11 in the same volume, Revealed Faith, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith, and Other Notes on Faith.

3 There are those among you who have sinned; but verily I say, for this once, for mine own glory, and for the salvation of souls, I have forgiven you your sins.

verse 3 “for mine own glory” For reasons that are not entirely clear, the spiritual progress—and particularly the exaltation of man—adds to the glory of both the Father and the Son (Moses 1:39; D&C 45:4).

“I have forgiven you your sins” This is a rather remarkable pronouncement by the Lord. When an individual is diligently striving to overcome himself and obey the commandments, it is the Lord’s wont to frequently forgive, or justify, that individual as he also grants him the incremental gifts of the Spirit or increments of the attributes of Christ that he gives partially as a reward for the individual’s obedience. But in this instance, the Lord preemptively forgives those elders who are guilty of the sin of failing to forgive others even before they have begun to repent and before the Lord reiterates the commandment to forgive (see verses 9-11). This is indeed a compassionate and merciful gesture which the Lord makes, apparently in order to “get on with” the building of the nascent kingdom of God on earth and to set an example of unconditional forgiveness which he expects of each of us.

4 I will be merciful unto you, for I have given unto you the kingdom.

verse 4 “I have given unto you the kingdom” Note that this is not the promise of a future gift but the assurance of a present possession. When we come to Christ and enter into the covenant of the gospel through the covenant of baptism, we then receive the gift of the Holy Ghost and so become, conditionally, members of the kingdom of God. The one condition is that we endure. To endure does not mean to cling desperately to the progress already made, but rather to continue always to progress. In this life, as long as we actively keep our gospel covenants, repent of our sins, and continuously strive to improve the quality and completeness of our obedience, we continue to possess the kingdom of God.

5 And the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom shall not be taken from my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., through the means I have appointed, while he liveth, inasmuch as he obeyeth mine ordinances.

verse 5 “the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom” See D&C 28:7; 35:18. These keys include the right to receive revelation concerning things of the kingdom previously unknown in this dispensation. The Lord informed the Church that while Joseph lived, he, and he alone—not Oliver, not Sidney—would hold these keys on the single condition that he obey the Lord’s ordinances. In March 1833, the Lord will further declare that Joseph Smith will hold these keys of the kingdom not only during his mortal life, but in eternity as well (D&C 90:3).

“through the means I have appointed, while he liveth” In D&C 28:7 the Lord had told Oliver Cowdery that Joseph would hold the keys of the mysteries “until I shall appoint unto them another in his stead.” In D&C 35:18 the Lord told Sidney Rigdon that if Joseph did not “abide in me . . . another will I plant in his stead.” D&C 43:4 also admits the possibility that Joseph could lose his place to another appointed in his stead. By September 1831, some of the saints in Kirtland had become antagonistic toward the Prophet (see D&C 64:6), and they could have used the above passages to suggest it was time for another to take Joseph's place. The Lord here makes it very clear, however, that while Joseph was obedient he would continue to hold the keys as long as he lived, and this was made explicit eighteen months later in D&C 90:3. In this latter verse the Lord will inform the Church that Joseph Smith will hold the keys in this world and in the world to come. The same principle holds true today. Barring unfaithfulness, those who hold the keys of the kingdom—the president of the Church individually and members of the Quorum of the Twelve Apostles collectively—hold them for this life and for the life to come.

6 There are those who have sought occasion against him without cause;
7 Nevertheless, he has sinned; but verily I say unto you, I, the Lord, forgive sins unto those who confess their sins before me and ask forgiveness, who have not sinned unto death.

verse 7 “he has sinned” The Lord acknowledges that Joseph was not guiltless in the dispute that had occurred. Nor were the other brethren without blame, and they all needed to humble themselves and be forgiving.

“I, the Lord, forgive sins unto those who confess their sins before me and ask forgiveness” This statement may be at first misleading. The Lord delights in forgiving the sins of those mortals who realize they have done wrong and feel appropriate remorse; admit to themselves that they have sinned (D&C 58:42-43); make recompense to those whom they may have injured; commit themselves to change and obey the commandments; and then strive with their might to overcome their natural man tendencies and if fact obey. Perhaps the most essential step, the sine qua non (Latin for “without which there is none”), of having one's sins forgiven by the Lord is striving diligently to obey the commandments. This essential step is not mentioned in this phrase but should be understood to be implied.

“who have not sinned unto death” The premeditated shedding of innocent blood is the “sin unto death” (1 John 5:16- 17) meaning a sin for which there is “no forgiveness” (D&C 42:79). Is this true? Is the shedding of innocent blood the same as “the unpardonable sin”? Can a man not repent and be cleansed of this sin?

The ultimate and “unpardonable sin” is to shed the only completely innocent blood, the blood of Jesus Christ. Once an individual has been converted to the divinity of Jesus Christ by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost and has come to know God and have an absolute witness, then that individual has a most serious and binding obligation. If he should ever turn altogether against the Church and come out in open rebellion against it, then he is guilty of the unpardonable sin. It as though he “crucifies [Christ]” afresh or “assent[s] unto [his] death” (D&C 76:35; 132:27). Such an individual will be resurrected but will not inherit a kingdom of glory. Rather he will spend eternity with Satan and his angels.

The unjustified shedding of human life is not the “unpardonable” sin. Rather, it is the “unforgivable sin,” second only to the unpardonable sin in its gravity. A murderer may repent and be cleansed in the post-mortal life, and he may be admitted to a kingdom of glory, the telestial kingdom. He cannot, however be forgiven to the point of being worthy for the celestial kingdom. He may become a “servant of the Most High; but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come” (D&C 76:112). See additional discussion of the most egregious sins in Three Most Abominable Sins in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 18.

8 My disciples, in days of old, sought occasion against one another and forgave not one another in their hearts; and for this evil they were afflicted and sorely chastened.

verse 8 “My disciples, in days of old” This phrase likely refers to Jesus’s disciples in New Testament times. We will learn that the Lord is not hesitant to let us know that the disciples of that dispensation had trouble getting along with each other, just as the disciples of this dispensation sometimes do (see, for example, Mark 9:33-34; 10:41-42; Acts 15:24, 39; 2 Corinthians 11:12-13; Galatians 2:11; 3 John 1:9-10).

“sought occasion against one another” As used here, an occasion means an opportunity for taking action (see Daniel 6:4; 2 Corinthians 11:12). Thus, the ancient disciples, like those in Joseph’s day and in ours, sometimes sinned by looking for opportunities to accuse, confront, oppose, or antagonize one another.

“forgave not one another in their hearts” That is, they still held grudges, even though outwardly they may have appeared to have forgiven one another.

President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:

The Lord declared that when he was in his ministry his disciples sought occasion against one another and failed at times to forgive in their hearts. It was this condition which prompted Peter to ask the Lord how many times he should forgive his brother, “till seven times?” The Lord answered him, “I say not unto thee, until seven times, but until seventy times seven” (Matthew 18:21-22). As the disciples of old brought upon themselves affliction and chastening, so we, when we do not have in our hearts the spirit of forgiveness, bring upon ourselves affliction and chastening from the Lord (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:235).

9 Wherefore, I say unto you, that ye ought to forgive one another; for he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses standeth condemned before the Lord; for there remaineth in him the greater sin.

verse 9 “he that forgiveth not his brother his trespasses standeth condemned before the Lord” Excellent background and commentary for this phrase is found in the parable of the unmerciful servant (see Matthew 18:21-35).

“there remaineth in him the greater sin” The Lord extends forgiveness to each and everyone of us our trespasses against him and his commandments when we repent of our sins. He therefore expects each of us to forgive those who have offended us. If we persist in holding a grudge against another individual who offends us, but who has confessed and repented of any wrong doing in the affair, our continuing to hold a grudge will not keep the other from receiving God’s forgiveness, but it will render us unfit for that forgiveness (Matthew 6:14-15). Hence, failure to forgive an offense against us is a greater sin than that of the offender who offended us.

10 I, the Lord, will forgive whom I will forgive, but of you it is required to forgive all men.

verse 10 We may refuse to forgive, but only at the peril of our own souls, for we are forgiven as we forgive. Matthew 6:12 reads, “And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.” Matthew 6:14-15 reads, “For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.” It is reported that Brigham Young once said that he who takes offense when no offense was intended is a fool, and he who takes offense when offense was intended is usually a fool. He then described two courses of action to follow when one is bitten by a rattlesnake. One may, in anger, fear, or vengefulness, pursue the creature and kill it. Or he may make full haste to get the venom out of his system. If we pursue the latter course, we will likely survive, but if we attempt to follow the former, we may not be around long enough to finish it.

Is the forgiveness required of us here totally unconditional? Are we allowed to resist injustice in this world? Does the Lord’s command to forgive, for example, require you drop criminal or civil charges against an employee who has embezzled from you? Does it require you to rehire him or her? Should the priesthood leader of an errant church member, in the spirit of unconditional forgiveness, refuse to hold a disciplinary council? Our requirement to forgive is not totally unconditional. There are three qualifying principles:

1. The obligation for the trespasser to repent. The Lord taught: “If thy brother trespass against thee, rebuke him; and if he repent, forgive him. And if he trespass against thee seven times in a day, and seven times in a day turn again to thee, saying, I repent; thou shalt forgive him” (Luke 17:3-4). The trespassing individual must repent of his wrong doing. Otherwise, you are entitled to protect yourself against his further trespassing. But what about the individual who does not repent? How many times must we forgive him? The answer “seventy times seven” (a hyperbolic quantity, meaning indefinitely) is for those who sin against us but repent. For those who sin against us and refuse to repent, the first three times we are still obligated to forgive, but the fourth time the testimonies against the sinner are to be brought before the Lord. If sincere repentance and restitution ensue, forgiveness is required; but if there is not repentance, the sinner is given over to the judgments of God (see D&C 98:39-48—the law of forgiveness).

2. The right of self defense. The principle of forgiveness does not deprive us of the right to act in our own defense. We are not allowed to hate the aggressor or to hold a grudge against him, but we are not required to suffer preventable injury at his hands either, even on a first offense. The right of self-defense also justifies severing any contact with someone who constitutes a physical, moral, mental, emotional, financial, or spiritual hazard for us.

3. The right to seek for justice. To forgive an individual who has embezzled or stolen money from you requires that you rid yourself of all bitterness, hatred, or desire for revenge. But forgiveness does not require that all relations and feelings be restored to what they once were between the forgiver and the forgiven. One need not drop criminal or civil charges against someone who has stolen from you. A priesthood leader should not refuse to hold an appropriate disciplinary council (see verses 12-14). It is possible to forgive those who have offended you while at the same time preferring not to deal with the individual again. Forgiveness is about the elimination of negative feelings but not always about the restoration of former relationships and privileges.

11 And ye ought to say in your hearts—let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds.

verse 11 “let God judge between me and thee, and reward thee according to thy deeds” In saying this we decline to judge or to condemn others (see Matthew 7:1). We decline to take things personally but leave it to God to reward or condemn our adversaries. In adopting this attitude in our disagreements with others, we avoid anger, bitterness, hatred, malice, and all the other emotional poisons so dangerous to our own hearts. Suspending judgment about the motives or guilt of those with whom we disagree, however, is not the same as letting them have their way. Once again, this principle does not require us to put ourselves or our stewardship at risk but only to deal with our opposition non-judgmentally.

The reader may be surprised to learn what it really means to forgive another individual. The mechanics of this process are not exactly intuitive. It is not sufficient to say to the supposed offender, “I forgive you.” Please see an important discussion of the process of forgiveness in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 6, Forgiveness.

12 And him that repenteth not of his sins, and confesseth them not, ye shall bring before the church, and do with him as the scripture saith unto you, either by commandment or by revelation.

13 And this ye shall do that God may be glorified—not because ye forgive not, having not compassion, but that ye may be justified in the eyes of the law, that ye may not offend him who is your lawgiver—verses 12-13 “do with him as the scripture saith . . . that God may be glorified” It is easy to confuse the issues of forgiveness and justice and wrongly conclude that one excludes the other. Yet the same God who commanded the saints to forgive one another and all men (verses 9-10) also commanded church leaders to discipline unrepentant sinners (verse 12). Church leaders are to forgive first in their own hearts, and then where appropriate to discipline, and finally, when discipline is complete, to forgive in the name of the Church. There can be no grudge, no desire for revenge, no hatred, no bitterness, and no malice in church disciplinary proceedings, and, as individuals, church leaders are required to forgive those who are disciplined.

Nevertheless, reverence for God, the lawgiver, demands that his law be obeyed. Church leaders are expected, as individuals, to forgive sinners. But no local church leader can, as an individual, extend to an unrepentant sinner the forgiveness of the Church or of God. By commandment, the forgiveness of the Church is obtained through the procedures of the Church—through repentance, through confession, and, for serious sins, through its disciplinary councils.

14 Verily I say, for this cause ye shall do these things.

verse 14 “for this cause ye shall do these things” The Lord commands that his counsel in verse 13 be followed, and for what cause? That “God may be glorified” (see verse 13).

15 Behold, I, the Lord, was angry with him who was my servant Ezra Booth, and also my servant Isaac Morley, for they kept not the law, neither the commandment; verse 15 “Ezra Booth, and also my servant Isaac Morley” Ezra Booth and Isaac Morley had been missionary companions on the trip to Missouri (see D&C 52:23). Ezra in particular did not do well on that trip, and after returning to Kirtland on September 1, he began criticizing the Missouri mission and the leadership of the Church, especially Joseph Smith. He was disfellowshipped on September 6, which is probably why the Lord refers to him in this verse in the past tense as “him who was my servant.” Ezra formally rejected the Church on September 12, the day after this revelation was received.

Isaac Morley had at first refused to consecrate his Kirtland farm to the Lord when commanded to do so, but he soon repented and turned his property over to the Church before going to Missouri as Ezra Booth’s companion. Isaac may have been affected somewhat by his companion’s attitudes or temporarily shared some of his views (see verse 16), but he stayed in Missouri to assist Bishop Partridge, and the Lord notes here that whatever his sins may once have been, he has at this time already been forgiven (see verse 16).

16 They sought evil in their hearts, and I, the Lord, withheld my Spirit. They condemned for evil that thing in which there was no evil; nevertheless I have forgiven my servant Isaac Morley.

17 And also my servant Edward Partridge, behold, he hath sinned, and Satan seeketh to destroy his soul; but when these things are made known unto them, and they repent of the evil, they shall be forgiven.

verse 17 Edward Partridge and Isaac Morley were still in Missouri when section 64 was received (see D&C 58:24), and they probably did not learn of its contents for weeks. Thus the Lord said of them, “When these things are made known unto them, and they repent of the evil, they shall be forgiven.” The specific sins referred to here are not known, but the Lord had warned Edward scarcely a month before to repent of his “unbelief and blindness of heart” or he would fall (D&C 58:15).

18 And now, verily I say that it is expedient in me that my servant Sidney Gilbert, after a few weeks, shall return upon his business, and to his agency in the land of Zion;

verse 18 Sidney Gilbert is commanded to return to Missouri and resume his calling as a church agent. He had established a mercantile store there which served also as the bishop’s storehouse. He will take sections 63 and 64 with him to Zion, along with other news, information, and instructions (see verse 19).

19 And that which he hath seen and heard may be made known unto my disciples, that they perish not. And for this cause have I spoken these things.

20 And again, I say unto you, that my servant Isaac Morley may not be tempted above that which he is able to bear, and counsel wrongfully to your hurt, I gave commandment that his farm should be sold.

verse 20 “I gave commandment that his farm should be sold” This commandment was given in D&C 63:38-39. The Morley farm was already in the hands of the Church when Isaac left for Missouri, and it was being managed by Titus Billings, who received the commandment to sell it. This was partially for the good of Brother Morley, who had some difficulty parting with it, as well as to finance the purchase of more land in Zion (see D&C 63:40). The Morley farm will formally be sold a month later on October 12.

This was the same farm on which “the Morley family” had been living with its system of “common stock” before the missionaries to the Lamanites arrived in Kirtland. Most of the “family” joined the Church and continued living on the farm after their conversion.

21 I will not that my servant Frederick G. Williams should sell his farm, for I, the Lord, will to retain a strong hold in the land of Kirtland, for the space of five years, in the which I will not overthrow the wicked, that thereby I may save some.

verse 21 “I will not that my servant Frederick G. Williams should sell his farm” Brother Williams earlier had informally consecrated his farm to the Church, and several members were then living on it, but he still held legal title to it. In May 1834 he deeded this farm to the Church without remuneration. Apparently the Lord wanted the Church to retain a foothold in Kirtland for five more years in part because of his desire to see the saints have the blessings of the temple. This revelation was received September 11, 1831. Five years later, the Kirtland Temple had been dedicated, and the Church was beginning to experience a devastating apostasy.

“in the which I will not overthrow the wicked” The Lord reassures the saints that the prophesied destructions of the end of the world and the destruction of all the wicked elements of the earth will not occur during the next five years. He thus calmed the fears of some of the Kirtland saints who wanted to flee to Zion for safety but were told to remain in Ohio.

22 And after that day, I, the Lord, will not hold any guilty that shall go with an open heart up to the land of Zion; for I, the Lord, require the hearts of the children of men.

verse 22 “after that day, I, the Lord, will not hold any guilty that shall go” The Ohio saints had been commanded to remain in Ohio until called by the Prophet to emigrate to Zion (see D&C 58:56; 63:24, 41). Many disobeyed this commandment and thereby contributed to the failure to establish Zion at that time. Here the Lord declares that after the five years are up, all the Ohio saints can then move to Zion without violating his will, provided they are worthy of Zion.

“with an open heart . . . for I, the Lord, require the hearts of the children of men” This probably refers to the willingness of the saints to share one another’s burdens by living the law of consecration.

23 Behold, now it is called today until the coming of the Son of Man, and verily it is a day of sacrifice, and a day for the tithing of my people; for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming.

verse 23 “now it is called today until the coming of the Son of Man” See the commentary for D&C 45:6. The “day of the Lord” is the moment of his second coming.

“for he that is tithed shall not be burned at his coming” We are commanded to pay tithing. This is the first mention of tithing in the Doctrine and Covenants. Note why some have, with tongue in cheek, referred to tithing as “the best fire insurance around.” The burning of the last day, at the time of the Savior’s second coming, will consume only the wicked—those who abide a telestial law (see D&C 76:98, 104-5). Those who are faithful tithe payers are living at least a terrestrial law, and if term “tithing” is understood to mean freely giving of one’s financial resources to the Lord, as it was understood in 1831, then full tithe payers are living the celestial law as well. And those living a terrestrial or celestial law will not be burned at the last day.

24 For after today cometh the burning—this is speaking after the manner of the Lord—for verily I say, tomorrow all the proud and they that do wickedly shall be as stubble; and I will burn them up, for I am the Lord of Hosts; and I will not spare any that remain in Babylon.

verse 24 “I will not spare any that remain in Babylon” Babylon is everywhere that is not Zion. This verse implies that at the Lord’s second coming all who are not in Zion will be destroyed by fire. We have commented previously on the incompleteness of this concept since the terrestrial folks will also be spared, and they will not be gathered to Zion.

25 Wherefore, if ye believe me, ye will labor while it is called today.

verse 25 “while it is called today” Again, see the commentary for D&C 45:6. This phrase refers to this dispensation from the restoration of the gospel to the second coming of the Lord (see D&C 65:23). For each of us who live in this dispensation, this phrase also refers to the period between our mortal birth and our resurrection; thus it includes the time we spend in the world of spirits.

26 And it is not meet that my servants, Newel K. Whitney and Sidney Gilbert, should sell their store and their possessions here; for this is not wisdom until the residue of the church, which remaineth in this place, shall go up unto the land of Zion.

verse 26 “it is not meet that my servants, Newel K. Whitney and Sidney Gilbert, should sell their store” The Whitney store in Kirtland was generating revenue for the Church and will be needed as a bishop’s storehouse for five or six more years. It is wise, therefore, to keep it.

27 Behold, it is said in my laws, or forbidden, to get in debt to thine enemies;

verse 27 “it is . . . forbidden, to get in debt” One of the issues being raised at this time by Ezra Booth and other critics of Joseph Smith was that the Lord had forbidden the saints to incur debts as individuals, while at the same time the Church was collectively going into debt to acquire property in Kirtland and Zion. Here the Lord explains that while individual members are forbidden to contract debts to their enemies, the Lord will do as he pleases (see verses 28-29). If the Lord uses credit as a means of building his Church, or if he instructs his leaders to do so, this is not in conflict with his instructions for individuals in their own personal financial conduct. The Lord issues and revokes commandments according to our needs, but he is not himself bound by his commandments to us, nor can his agents go wrong when they obey his instructions.

28 But behold, it is not said at any time that the Lord should not take when he please, and pay as seemeth him good.

29 Wherefore, as ye are agents, ye are on the Lord's errand; and whatever ye do according to the will of the Lord is the Lord's business.

30 And he hath set you to provide for his saints in these last days, that they may obtain an inheritance in the land of Zion.

31 And behold, I, the Lord, declare unto you, and my words are sure and shall not fail, that they shall obtain it.

verse 31 “my words are sure and shall not fail, that they shall obtain it” Abraham 3:17 assures us, “there is nothing that the Lord thy God shall take in his heart to do but what he will do it.” In Joseph’s day, the Church did acquire a foothold in Zion, and it still belongs to the Church today. Faithful saints will both possess it and enjoy its fruits throughout eternity.

32 But all things must come to pass in their time.

verse 32 “all things must come to pass in their time” Once again, the Lord reminds the saints in 1831 (and us in our day) that they (and we) should not expect to see the fulfillment of all things any time soon.

33 Wherefore, be not weary in well-doing, for ye are laying the foundation of a great work. And out of small things proceedeth that which is great.

verse 33 “ye are laying the foundation of a great work” The Lord recognized, as some of the saints did not, that they were merely planting seeds that would not produce for a long time to come. Ezra Booth was offended at the small things that were accomplished in Missouri. Imagine his thoughts were he able to see the present day Church! Some saints may feel that their services in the Church are “small things,” but as the Lord states here, it is out of such small things that great things proceed—out of small things proceedeth that which is great.”

34 Behold, the Lord requireth the heart and a willing mind; and the willing and obedient shall eat the good of the land of Zion in these last days.

35 And the rebellious shall be cut off out of the land of Zion, and shall be sent away, and shall not inherit the land.

verses 34-35 The reader should keep in mind that the land of Zion, with its center in Independence, Missouri, is the inheritance a part of the Lord’s people (the tribe of Joseph—Ephraim—and the others of the ten tribes of Israel) for all eternity—even after the earth has been celestialized to serve as an eternal celestial abode.

36 For, verily I say that the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim, wherefore they shall be plucked out.

verses 34-36 “the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim” Ephraim was the second son of Joseph, the son of Jacob, or Israel. After Reuben, the oldest son of Jacob, lost his birthright through transgression (see 1 Chronicles 5:1-2), Ephraim was declared to be the birthright son through the lineage of his father Joseph (see Jeremiah 31:9) and the “head” of all Israel (Psalm 60:7; 108:8), with the right to preside over his elder brother Manasseh, and also over his uncles. The ancient blessings given the tribe of Ephraim by Jacob and by Moses were, respectively, that Ephraim would “become a multitude of nations” (Genesis 48:19) and that Ephraim, as the son who has responsibility for the family, would “push the people together” in their tens of thousands (Deuteronomy 33:17).

The tribe of Ephraim, however, was also cursed at a later time to become “wanderers among the nations” for their apostasy in making alliances with the gentile nations and for worshiping the gentile gods (Hosea 9:17). Between 732 and 722 BC, the Lord scattered Ephraim among the nations, where they eventually intermarried and lost their identity, thus in time becoming Gentiles themselves.

In the latter-day restoration of the family of Israel, Ephraim still holds the right to preside. Thus, the descendants of Ephraim, recognized as Gentiles in the scriptures or “a multitude of nations,” were the first to be converted in order that they might then “push the people together” from all nations. This fulfills the blessing of both Jacob and Moses upon the head of Ephraim. This is also why the scriptures sometimes refer to the latter-day church members as Gentiles (see D&C 109:60; 1 Nephi 15:13, 22; 2 Nephi 30:3) and sometimes as “Ephraim” (as here and in D&C 113:4). Most converts are Gentiles in terms of ethnicity and national origin, but they are also descended from the house of Israel in at least one ancestral line, or else they are adopted into the house of Israel through the gospel covenant.

“they shall be plucked out” By transgression a man, though he be descended from Joseph through Ephraim, is excluded or expelled from the house of Israel. Paul taught this principle to the early saints. The Jews took great pride in the fact that they were “of the circumcision,” that is that they were the covenant people, circumcision being the token of that covenant. But Paul pointed out that if one “of the circumcision” violated the law, his “circumcision is made uncircumcision” (Romans 2:25.) Nephi also understood this principle and taught: “For behold, I say unto you that as many of the Gentiles as will repent are the covenant people of the Lord; and as many of the Jews as will not repent shall be cast off; for the Lord covenanteth with none save it be with them that repent and believe in his son, who is the Holy One of Israel” (2 Nephi 30:2).

In this generation, Ephraim holds the birthright in the house of Israel. Hence, Ephraim must be gathered first to prepare the way and establish the Church and the priesthood. The large majority of those coming into the Church today are of the tribe of Ephraim. Today Ephraim holds the keys of the priesthood. It is with Ephraim that the Lord has made covenant, and through Ephraim has he restored his gospel in its fulness. Ephraim is building temples and performing the ordinances in them for the living and the dead. An understanding of the role of Ephraim in this dispensation helps one to understand why the Lord would say that “the rebellious are not of the blood of Ephraim.”

37 Behold, I, the Lord, have made my church in these last days like unto a judge sitting on a hill, or in a high place, to judge the nations.

38 For it shall come to pass that the inhabitants of Zion shall judge all things pertaining to Zion.

verses 37-38 In these important verses, the Lord points out that his Church, the kingdom of God on the earth, functions figuratively as a judge. Those who gather to Zion become the Lord’s people, regardless of their actual ancestral lineage. In the latter-day Zion, resides the priesthood authority to seal up or condemn mortals for all eternity.

39 And liars and hypocrites shall be proved by them, and they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known.

verse 39 “they who are not apostles and prophets shall be known” The power of revelation and righteousness is such in Zion that false prophets and apostles will be detected.

40 And even the bishop, who is a judge, and his counselors, if they are not faithful in their stewardships shall be condemned, and others shall be planted in their stead.

verse 40 “the bishop . . . and his counselors” This phrase refers to Bishop Edward Partridge. His counselors in Independence at this time are Isaac Morley and John Corril.

“who is a judge” This is the first mention in the Doctrine and Covenants of the bishop’s role as a judge in Israel. There is an intentional irony evident here. The Lord has just pointed out that his latter-day Church and its authorized ministers function as a judge of all nations (see verses 37 and 38). He then warns that even though Bishop Partridge is a judge of all nations, if he is not faithful, he will be judged by the Lord and “condemned, and others shall be planted in [his] stead.”

41 For, behold, I say unto you that Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her;

verse 41 “Zion shall flourish, and the glory of the Lord shall be upon her”

In spite of the sinfulness of the individual members of Zion, the Lord will grant that his light or glory shall shine forth to the world from Zion. Zion will be visible to the world (see verse 42).

42 And she shall be an ensign unto the people, and there shall come unto her out of every nation under heaven.

verse 42 “[Zion] shall be an ensign” An ensign is a standard, banner, or flag by which the identity or location of a people may be known. In the last days, Zion will be seen as the standard that identifies and points out the location of the people of God.

“unto the people” To the scattered descendants of Israel (see Deuteronomy 33:17).

43 And the day shall come when the nations of the earth shall tremble because of her, and shall fear because of her terrible ones. The Lord hath spoken it. Amen.

verse 43 “and shall fear because of her terrible ones” There will come a day when those on earth who exist outside of Zion will look at Zion with fear and trembling. The leaders of Zion, “her terrible ones,” will also be regarded with awe and respect. The word terrible here refers to someone who instills dread, terror, solemn awe, and reverence. Examples of the similar use of this meaning in the scriptures include: “The Lord thy God is among you, a mighty God and terrible” (Deuteronomy 7:21); “Let them praise thy great and terrible name, for it is holy” (Psalm 99:3); and “He hath done for thee these great and terrible things, which thine eyes have seen” (Deuteronomy 10:21).

Brief Historical Setting

1831 October

In October Joseph received an important revelation in the form of a prayer which gave important information about the concept of the kingdom of God [D&C 65 - Joseph Smith’s Prayer].

Section 65 Joseph Smith's Prayer

Little is known of the particular circumstances surrounding the reception of section 65 some time in October 1831. Joseph and Emma Smith had been living with John and Elsa Johnson in Hiram, Ohio, for about a month when this revelation was received. Joseph recorded in the forepart of October, "I received the following prayer through revelation" (HC, 1:218). Although Joseph recalled this revelation's being received in early October, the Kirtland Revelation Book (see Smith, Kirtland Revelation Book, 87), The Evening and the Morning Star (Phelps, "Revelation on Prayer," Sept. 1832, 2), and William McLellin's journals (see Shipp and Welch, Journals of William E. McLellin, 243) all list the date as October 30, 1831. McLellin's journals also adds that this revelation was received in connection with Joseph's study of Matthew 6:10, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven" (Ibid.).

In essence, Section 65 is a modern version of the Lord's Prayer as revealed to Joseph in October 1831 in Hiram, Ohio. It is one of two sections in the Doctrine and Covenants which are prayers—the other being section 109, the dedicatory prayer of the Kirtland Temple.

For a better understanding of the important concept of the kingdom of God, we must go back to the ancient Prophet Daniel's interpretation of the remarkable dream of King Nebuchadnezzar in the sixth century BC (Daniel 2). From the days of the prophet Joseph Smith to the present this dream has been understood to be a prophecy that foretells the establishment, growth, and destiny of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints.

Let us consider the dream itself: Nebuchadnezzar, the king of Babylon, saw in a dream a large statue in the shape of a man constructed of various substances. The head was of fine gold, the breast and arms of silver, his belly and thighs of brass, the legs of iron, and his feet were part iron and part clay (Daniel 2:32-33). As the dream developed, a stone that was "cut out without hands" smote the image on its feet and broke the image into tiny pieces, and the wind carried them away. Meanwhile, the stone that smote the image became a great mountain and filled the whole earth (Daniel 2:34-35).

Daniel's interpretation of the dream was that the "statue" represented a succession of world monarchies. The "stone" was seen as representing the kingdom of God. In our dispensation some have speculated as to the more specific interpretation of the various parts of the statue. These speculations are as follows: The statue represents a historical time line and explains a succession of kingdoms beginning in Daniel's time. The head of gold represents Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom, the Babylonian Empire (610 BC to 539 BC). The breast and arms of silver represent the Persian Empire under Cyrus (539 BC to 330 BC). The belly and thighs of brass represent the Mesopotamian Empire established by Alexander the Great of Greece (330 BC to 63 BC). At the death of Alexander the Great at age 32, his kingdom was divided among his generals. It was ruled by their descendants and others until they in turn were overthrown by the Roman Empire which is represented by the legs of iron (63 BC to AD 636). After the fall of the Roman Empire came a world of many nations. This is represented in the dream as a kingdom “part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong and partly broken” (Daniel 2:42).

In this world setting then would a new kingdom be established, different from all the others. Whereas the other kingdoms described would each grow out of the ruins of previous kingdoms, this new kingdom would be “cut out without hands,” meaning that it would be of divine construction rather than human or manmade. This kingdom would begin on a small scale (a small stone) but would eventually fill the entire earth. Daniel concluded that this new kingdom “shall never be destroyed” and shall “break into pieces and consume” all other kingdoms, “and it shall stand forever” (Daniel 2:44).

Next, a couple of definitions: the term “kingdom of God” means specifically the Church of Christ upon the earth. The term “kingdom of heaven” refers to that system of government and administration which is operative in heaven and which we pray may some day prevail upon the earth during the Millennium (see Joseph Fielding Smith, CR, April 1917, 65-66).

The terms “kingdom of God” and “kingdom of heaven” are sometimes used erroneously as synonyms, even in our imperfect modern translations of the Bible—especially in the Book of Matthew. Actually the kingdom of God is the same Church as the millennial kingdom of God. Both are the Church of Jesus Christ. The terms refer to the same Church in each of two time periods or settings.

When the kingdom of heaven is established on the earth at Christ’s second coming, the Savior will reign personally as political leader as well as ecclesiastical head. This kingdom is sometimes referred to as the “political kingdom of God.”

A minor controversy seems to exist within the Church today as to whether the “stone that was cut out without hands” refers to the kingdom of God (the Church) or the political kingdom of God (the millennial kingdom of heaven). Certainly Daniel’s prophecy foresees a movement which begins as the kingdom of God is established on the earth and grows and prepares the way for the culminating establishment of the long-awaited kingdom of heaven, or political kingdom of God.

1 Hearken, and lo, a voice as of one sent down from on high, who is mighty and powerful, whose going forth is unto the ends of the earth, yea, whose voice is unto men—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

verse 1 “a voice” Perhaps this was an audible voice to Joseph, or perhaps the voice of the Lord came into his mind.

“as of one sent down from on high, who is mighty and powerful” This can only be Jesus Christ. Joseph heard the voice of Jesus Christ.

“make his paths straight” In their Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, Smith and Sjodahl explained this phrase:

Eastern potentates, when traveling from one part of the kingdom to another, would proclaim their coming and order their subjects to prepare the way for them, by building roads where there were none; if necessary by leveling hills and filling up depressions, and straightening out the winding paths. . . . To prepare the way of the Lord and make his paths straight is to acknowledge his sovereignty and to make all necessary preparations for his reception. He will not come to reign until all necessary preparations for his coming have been made. Joseph Smith said, “Hear this, O earth! The Lord will not come to reign over the righteous in this world . . . until everything for the Bridegroom is ready” (HC, 5:291) (174).

2 The keys of the kingdom of God are committed unto man on the earth, and from thence shall the gospel roll forth unto the ends of the earth, as the stone which is cut out of the mountain without hands shall roll forth, until it has filled the whole earth.

verse 2 “The keys of the kingdom of God” Keys imply authority, the right to preside. The use of the word keys for this right or authority is a figurative but apt usage. Keys imply the ability to unlock and open doors or to lock and shut them. In other words, they are the ability to seal, or close, and to loose, or open. In ancient courts the chamberlain, who held the keys of the palace and controlled access to the ruler and to his family and possessions, was frequently the most trusted and powerful official in the kingdom. For this reason, Saint Peter, who held the keys of the kingdom of God (see Matthew 16:19), is often depicted in Christian tradition as a chamberlain—one who stands at the door or gate of heaven controlling access to the king and kingdom inside. This great authority to seal or to separate, to open or shut the doors of God’s kingdom, to permit or forbid entry into the presence of the King, has been given to apostles and prophets of God upon this fallen, telestial earth.

There is a difference between holding the priesthood and holding the keys of the priesthood. Any priest or elder has the authority to baptize, for example, but only those who hold the keys of baptism in any church unit—a bishop or mission president—may give permission for the ordinance to take place. Priesthood holders have the authority to act for God, but may only do so when directed by those who hold the keys, or the administrative responsibility, for that particular work. Priesthood is authority. Keys are the right to direct, preside, control, authorize, or forbid the use of that authority.

The President of the Church holds all of the keys of the kingdom of God (see the commentary for D&C 81:2). There is a close relationship between these keys (the right to administer) and the sealing power (the right to make binding in heaven that which is done on earth). The mortal Christ said to his chief apostle Peter: “And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven” (Matthew 16:19).

“the kingdom of God” The prophet Joseph taught us further about the kingdom of God:

Some say that the kingdom of God was not set up upon the earth until the day of Pentecost, and that John did not preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins, but I say to you in the name of the Lord that the kingdom of God was set up upon the earth in the days of Adam to the present time. Whenever there has been a righteous man on the earth, unto whom God revealed his word and gave power and authority to administer in his name, and where there is a priest of God . . . to administer in the ordinances of the gospel, and officiate in the priesthood of God, there is the kingdom of God. . . . where there is a prophet, a priest, or a righteous man unto whom God give his oracles [revelations], there is the kingdom of God; and where the oracles of God are not, there the kingdom of God is not (Teachings of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 271-72).

Joseph also explained his own role, as he saw it, in the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth:

The ancient prophets declared that in the last days the God of heaven should set up a kingdom which should never be destroyed, nor left to other people . . .

I calculate to be one of the instruments of setting up the kingdom of Daniel by the word of the Lord, and I intend to lay a foundation that will revolutionize the whole world. . . . It will not be by sword or gun that this kingdom will roll on: the power of truth is such that all nations will be under the necessity of obeying the gospel (HC, 6:364-65).

3 Yea, a voice crying—Prepare ye the way of the Lord, prepare ye the supper of the Lamb, make ready for the Bridegroom.

verse 3 “supper of the Lamb” This phrase is another term for the Messianic feast when the righteous sit down to eat and drink with Christ in his kingdom (see D&C 58:11; Revelation 19:7-9).

“the Bridegroom” As a symbol of complete intimacy and oneness, marriage is frequently used in scripture to figuratively represent becoming one with Christ. The faithful Church (the saints) is the bride, and Christ is the Bridegroom (see D&C 88:92; 133:10, 19). They are joined together in the covenant of the gospel, for which the covenant of marriage is symbolic.

4 Pray unto the Lord, call upon his holy name, make known his wonderful works among the people.

verse 4 “wonderful works” It is natural to think of the many miracles and healings of the Savior during his mortal ministry as “his wonderful works,” but by far the most wonderful works of the mortal Messiah were his infinite atonement, his sacrificial death, and his victory over the grave in the resurrection.

5 Call upon the Lord, that his kingdom may go forth upon the earth, that the inhabitants thereof may receive it, and be prepared for the days to come, in the which the Son of Man shall come down in heaven, clothed in the brightness of his glory, to meet the kingdom of God which is set up on the earth.

verse 5 “clothed in the brightness of his glory” What dramatic power and energy will ignite the world on that last day and burn away anything that cannot abide at least a terrestrial glory! It will be the glory of the Son of Man himself as he descends openly and in full view upon the world.

6 Wherefore, may the kingdom of God go forth, that the kingdom of heaven may come, that thou, O God, mayest be glorified in heaven so on earth, that thine enemies may be subdued; for thine is the honor, power and glory, forever and ever. Amen.

verse 6 “kingdom of God” “kingdom of heaven” The reader should carefully distinguish between these two phrases. See the introductory commentary for this section.

“that the kingdom of heaven may come” When the Savior comes again to the earth, he will bring with him an entire heavenly kingdom together with its inhabitants—a heavenly New Jerusalem to be joined together with the earthly New Jerusalem built by the saints. This heavenly kingdom will include, but may not be limited to, the city of Enoch that was taken up anciently (see Moses 7:62-63; Ether 3:3, 10).

Section 65 is the scriptural confirmation of the role of the Church as the kingdom of God, established in the last days of world history, to prepare the way for the coming of the rightful king of the earth, the Lord Jesus Christ and his heavenly kingdom of heaven. The church President holds “the keys of the kingdom” today on the earth (D&C 65:2).

Brief Historical Setting

1831 November

During the first twelve days of November 1831, four short conferences of the elders of the Church were held at the home of John Johnson in Hiram, Ohio. It was resolved during these conferences that a collection of Joseph’s revelations should be printed and distributed to the membership of the Church. Joseph selected those revelations to be included. On the first day of the conference the Lord gave his endorsement to the planned publication and named the collection the Book of Commandments [D&C 1 - The Lord's Preface—The Voice of Warning]. When asked to sign a written testimony that would be attached to this book, a few of the brethren attending the conference evidenced their imperfect testimonies of the divine origin of the revelations. They wondered if perhaps Joseph hadn't written them, as they saw too much of his vocabulary and language in the revelations. After a prayer, in which he pleaded for wisdom, Joseph received a revelation wherein the Lord challenged anyone present to write a revelation equal to "even the least" of the revelations Joseph had received [D&C 67 - The Challenge]. If anyone succeeded, they would be entitled to their reluctance to bear testimony of the divine authenticity of the revelations. If they failed, however, they would then be under heavenly condemnation if they refused to bear witness of them. Only one elder accepted the challenge. He was William E. McLellin, a well-educated former school teacher who had just recently received his own revelation and blessing from the Lord [D&C 66 - William E. McLellin]. He accepted the challenge and retired to another room to make the attempt. He failed utterly, and all present, including McLellin, were blessed, as the Spirit bore witness to each of them that the revelations, even though written in Joseph's imperfect language, were indeed from God.

Four more revelations would yet be received during the first twelve days of November 1831. One contained information on the following subjects: the office of bishop, teaching our children the gospel, and a new definition of scripture [D&C 68 - Bishops. Teach. Scripture]. Another gave instructions on transporting the manuscripts of the revelations to Independence, Missouri, where they would be printed on William W. Phelps's printing press. Yet another created the so-called "Literary Firm" which was a mini-United Order composed of a group of brethren assigned to take care of the scriptures of the Church as their stewardship [D&C 69 and 70 - Book of Commandments]. The final section given during this conference was to serve as the appendix to the Book of Commandments [D&C 133 - The Appendix].

Section 66 William E. McLellin

On October 11, 1831, a conference of the Church was held in Hiram, Ohio. Following the session on October 11, the conference was adjourned, and it resumed on October 25 in Orange, Ohio. On the latter date, William E. McLellin (in church history his name has been variously spelled McLellan and M'Lellin) sought for a blessing by revelation from the Lord through Joseph. Section 66 is that revelation.

The exact date of McLellin's birth cannot be ascertained, but he was born in Tennessee about 1806—thus he was about a year younger than the Prophet. According to Joseph Smith, he had a “superficial education” and “more learning than sense” but a “good flow of language,” and he had worked as a teacher in several different schools. He first heard the gospel preached by Elders Samuel H. Smith and Reynolds Cahoon (see section 53:30) in Paris, Illinois, while they were en route from Kirtland to Independence in the summer of 1831. He closed up his affairs as soon as possible and followed these missionaries to Jackson County, hoping to meet the prophet Joseph, but he arrived there too late. In Independence he was baptized and ordained an elder. In the fall of 1831 he made his way to Kirtland where we find him in attendance at the special conference of October 25 in Orange, Ohio. It was there where he finally met the Prophet. During this conference, he was ordained a high priest, and when the conference was adjourned he accompanied the Prophet to Hiram, Ohio, staying with him there for three weeks. There he sought to learn the will of the Lord regarding himself. On October 29 Joseph Smith received section 66 in Hiram, Ohio, dictating it to William McLellin, who acted as scribe. McLellin's journal specified that section 66 was received on Saturday, October 29, after McLellin and the Prophet had returned to Hiram from Orange.

Writing of this experience on another occasion seventeen years later, William McLellin said: “From this conference I went home with the Prophet, and on Saturday, the 29th, I received through him, and wrote from his mouth a revelation concerning myself. I had expected and believed that when I saw Brother Joseph, I should receive one: and I went before the Lord in secret, and on my knees asked him to reveal the answer to five questions through his Prophet, and that too without his having any knowledge of my having made such request. I now testify in the fear of God, that every question which I had thus lodged in the ears of the Lord of Sabbaoth, were answered to my full and entire satisfaction. I desired it for a testimony of Joseph's inspiration. And I to this day consider it to be an evidence which I cannot refute” (Ensign of Liberty, of the Church of Christ, 61). The fact the McLellin wrote this account ten years after his excommunication from the Church lends credibility to its truth.

Somewhat later, he began to evidence a basic flaw in his spiritual fabric while attending another conference held in early November in Hiram, Ohio. At that conference, he voiced his doubts about the divine authenticity of section 1 of the Doctrine and Covenants (see the supplemental article A Brief History of the Evolution of Our Present-day Doctrine and Covenants).

He would later be chosen to be one of the twelve Apostles at the organization of that quorum, and he was ordained to that office on February 15, 1835. With the Quorum of the Twelve in the spring and summer of 1835, he went east on a mission and baptized five converts. While on this mission, he wrote a letter back to Kirtland censuring the church Presidency, and for this he was disfellowshipped. However, on returning to Kirtland in September, he confessed to the council of the First Presidency, was forgiven, and he was returned to full fellowship.

In May 1838, he came before a bishop's court in Far West where he stated that he had no confidence in the Presidency of the Church. Consequently, he had stopped praying and keeping the commandments, and he had indulged himself in his sinful lusts. He was excommunicated for unbelief and apostasy. After his excommunication, he tried to establish a church on his own that he might be its head, but he had no success. He took an active part with the mob in Missouri in robbing and driving the saints. While Joseph and others were being held prisoner in Richmond, Missouri, during their trial, McLellin, who was a "large and active man," went to the sheriff and asked for permission to flog the Prophet. Permission was granted on condition that Joseph would fight. The sheriff made this request known to Joseph, who consented to fight if his irons were removed. McLellin then refused to fight unless he could have a club—to which Joseph readily agreed. But the sheriff would not allow them to fight on such unequal terms. While Joseph was in Liberty Jail, McLellin and others robbed Joseph's house and stable of considerable property.

Heber C. Kimball's condemnation of McLellin, after the latter's excommunication, was chilling. McLellin asked Brother Kimball what he thought of Joseph Smith after all the turmoil that occurred in Missouri. Here is Brother Kimball's reply:

I am more satisfied with him a hundred fold than ever I was before, for I see you in the very position that he foretold you would be in: a Judas to betray your brethren, if you did not forsake your adultery, fornication, lying, and abominations. Where are you? What are you about? You and Hinkle, and scores of others? Have you not betrayed Joseph and his brethren into the hands of the mob, as Judas did Jesus? Yes, verily, you have. I tell you Mormonism is true, and Joseph is a true prophet of the living God, and you with all others that turn therefrom will be damned and go to hell, and Judas will rule over you (Heber C. Kimball Journal, Book 94C, 88).

McLellin later adopted the profession of medicine. He finally died in obscurity in Independence, Missouri, at about the age of 77.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto my servant William E. McLellin—Blessed are you, inasmuch as you have turned away from your iniquities, and have received my truths, saith the Lord your Redeemer, the Savior of the world, even of as many as believe on my name.

verse 1 “you have turned away from your iniquities” At this time the twenty-five-year-old McLellan is a childless widower. There is no reason to suspect that he is guilty of sins which are in any way out of the ordinary.

2 Verily I say unto you, blessed are you for receiving mine everlasting covenant, even the fulness of my gospel, sent forth unto the children of men, that they might have life and be made partakers of the glories which are to be revealed in the last days, as it was written by the prophets and apostles in days of old.

verse 2 “mine everlasting covenant” This phrase refers to all of the individual gospel doctrines (including all those in the Book of Mormon) and ordinances (covenants) then available to the saints—mainly repentance, baptism, and the gift of the Holy Ghost.

“even the fulness of my gospel” Though additional ordinances (covenants) will yet be revealed, William E. McLellan, had received sufficient for exaltation in the celestial heaven were he to remain faithful—the fulness of the gospel.

3 Verily I say unto you, my servant William, that you are clean, but not all; repent, therefore, of those things which are not pleasing in my sight, saith the Lord, for the Lord will show them unto you.

verse 3 “you are clean, but not all” William McLellan had been recently baptized. Was he not therefore entirely clean—entirely cleansed of his sins? There are a couple of important concepts to note here.

First, the Lord forgives our sins at baptism when we truly exercise our faith and when we are sincerely repentant prior to our baptism (Mosiah 18:8-10; D&C 20:37). Hence we might argue that Brother McLellan might not have been completely repentant. While many new converts may have a sincere attitude of repentance, is there any individual who is actually fully and perfectly repentant in absolute terms? The obvious answer is no. Any individual who is perfectly repentant would remain sinless after baptism, and that is, of course, essentially impossible. The most important requirement for the repentance that precedes baptism, and the best we can hope for in any individual, is that the baptismal candidate is determined to begin, at baptism, to continually diligently strive to be obedient. As long as the individual continues to truly strive to be obedient, even though he cannot be absolutely obedient, the Lord is willing to extend the blessings of the atonement to us and repeatedly cleanse us of our sins. We may then be classified, according to scripture, as being “perfect” (Moroni 10:32-33).

Second, it is true that the Lord wipes the slate clean at the moment of baptism, but how long does complete cleansing last? Likely only a few minutes pass before the individual has sinful thoughts and is guilty of sinful words or actions. But this should not be discouraging to anyone. As mortals we all share the universal tendency to have to keep constant watch on our thoughts, words, and actions. Again, the vital requirement is that we are constantly and diligently striving to change and obey. Then, in spite of our imperfections and frequent falterings, the Lord repeatedly forgives us of our sins.

In the specific case of William E. McLellin, it seems likely however that the Lord knew that he had spiritual flaws which will soon prove to be seriously problematic.

4 And now, verily, I, the Lord, will show unto you what I will concerning you, or what is my will concerning you.

5 Behold, verily I say unto you, that it is my will that you should proclaim my gospel from land to land, and from city to city, yea, in those regions round about where it has not been proclaimed.

verse 5 “you should proclaim my gospel” William McLellin was called on a mission to those areas around Kirtland that had not been covered by previous missionaries.

6 Tarry not many days in this place; go not up unto the land of Zion as yet; but inasmuch as you can send, send; otherwise, think not of thy property.

verse 6 “go not up unto the land of Zion” Like most of the Ohio members, McLellin was concerned about emigrating to Zion. Many of the saints in Kirtland were anxious to go there, and some needed to be restrained. McLellin was to send what money he could to Zion and was not to worry about his possessions—apparently he owned no land.

7 Go unto the eastern lands, bear testimony in every place, unto every people and in their synagogues, reasoning with the people.

verse 7 “Go unto the eastern lands” William McLellin and Samuel Smith traveled and preached in eastern Ohio for six weeks before William got sick and returned to Hiram and Kirtland without his companion. The commandment for McLellin to go into the eastern lands was revoked by the Lord on January 25, 1832, a month after his return to Hiram (see D&C 75:6).

“unto every people and in their synagogues” See the commentary for D&C 63:31.

8 Let my servant Samuel H. Smith go with you, and forsake him not, and give him thine instructions; and he that is faithful shall be made strong in every place; and I, the Lord, will go with you.

verse 8 “Let my servant Samuel H. Smith go with you” Samuel was the prophet’s younger brother, the third person baptized in this dispensation, one of the original six members of the Church, one of the Eight Witnesses of the Book of Mormon, and the first formal missionary of the modern Church.

“give him thine instructions” This verse teaches the responsibility of missionary companions to help each other and to stay together.

“he that is faithful” This phrase refers to the missionaries, not the investigators.

9 Lay your hands upon the sick, and they shall recover. Return not till I, the Lord, shall send you. Be patient in affliction. Ask, and ye shall receive; knock, and it shall be opened unto you.

verse 9 “Lay your hands upon the sick, and they shall recover.” William McLellin’s journal entries for this mission record some remarkable healings.

“Return not till I, the Lord, shall send you.” William McLellin was not given a specific term for his missionary service but was to remain in the field, being patient in his afflictions and not leaving his companion, until the Lord recalled him. McLellin seems to have disregarded all these instructions (see D&C 75:6-8).

10 Seek not to be cumbered. Forsake all unrighteousness. Commit not adultery—a temptation with which thou hast been troubled.

verse 10 “Seek not to be cumbered.” Cumbered means hindered or burdened. The command seems to refer to McLellin’s lingering unrighteousness and his temptation to sexual sin.

“Commit not adultery—a temptation with which thou hast been troubled.” The Lord gives a remarkably blunt piece of advice, but William McLellin seems to have accepted it with no attempt to refute the allegations, even in his private journals. Indeed, he seems even to have appreciated the warning, since he wrote that this revelation fully answered the specific questions he had asked the Lord and that he was entirely satisfied with the answers. At his excommunication trial on May 11, 1838, William McLellin stated that after he lost confidence in church leaders, he “quit praying and keeping the commandments of God, and indulged himself in his lustful desires” (HC, 3:31).

11 Keep these sayings, for they are true and faithful; and thou shalt magnify thine office, and push many people to Zion with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads.

verse 11 “push many people to Zion” Pushing the people to Zion was the calling of Ephraim (see Deuteronomy 33:17). In an addendum to section 66, as recorded in William McLellin’s journal and in the Kirtland Revelation Book, William was identified as a “true descendant” of Ephraim. His Ephraimite descent is reflected in the language used here to call him to the latter-day work. Moreover, his call is not merely to convert the people to the gospel but to help in Gathering them to Zion. According to his journal, he was particularly concerned with pushing the saints to Zion (see Shipp and Welch, Journals of William E. McLellin, 271-72).

“with songs of everlasting joy upon their heads” Singing always has been and always will be an important form of worship for the saints of God. Perhaps refusing to sing is a sin similar to refusing to pray.

12 Continue in these things even unto the end, and you shall have a crown of eternal life at the right hand of my Father, who is full of grace and truth.

verse 12 “you shall have a crown of eternal life” The crown is variously described as a crown of righteousness (see D&C 25:15), glory (see D&C 58:4), joy (see D&C 52:43), and eternal life (see D&C 20:14). It is the reward of one who overcomes through Christ and who rules in the kingdom of God (see Revelation 3:11, 21). Even with his weaknesses and temptations, if William McLellin would prove faithful to his covenants “unto the end,” he was promised the victor’s crown of eternal life.

13 Verily, thus saith the Lord your God, your Redeemer, even Jesus Christ. Amen.

Section 67 The Challenge

During the first twelve days in November 1831, four short conferences of the elders of the Church were held at the home of John Johnson in Hiram, Ohio, where Joseph was living. Please review the pertinent materials in the supplemental article entitled A Brief History of the Evolution of Our Present-day Doctrine and Covenants. Keep in mind that at this point in church history, the only General Authorities of the Church were the elders. There was no President, no First Presidency, and no Quorum of the Twelve. Thus, these conferences of the elders were conferences of the General Authorities or the governing body of the Church. The elders present were: Joseph Smith, Oliver Cowdery, David Whitmer, John Whitmer, Peter Whitmer, Jr., Sidney Rigdon, William E. McLellin, Orson Hyde, Luke Johnson, and Lyman Johnson.

For some months before the Prophet moved to Hiram, he was inspired by the Lord to prepare his important revelations for publication. As church membership grew, the need to instruct the members increased. During the morning of the first day of conference, the brethren were united in their desire to publish the revelations, and they set the number of copies to be printed at ten thousand. This expression of faith by these brethren brought a revelation now identified as section 1, the Lord's preface to the Book of Commandments.

It is an erroneous thought to believe that the Prophet selected all of the revelations he had received and placed them in the collection which was to become the Book of Commandments. Each of the revelations selected for that volume was placed there because the Prophet considered that it had some value to the Church in regard to its teachings. There are some revelations still in possession of the Church that were not included. Some of these we can readily believe were not included because the inspiration of the Prophet was that it was not necessary, or because some of them had an application that was not intended for publication to an unbelieving world.

The preparation for the printing was soon completed, but this took a great deal of the Prophet's time from the first of November to the twelfth, and in that time there had been held four special conferences. However, the revelations were ready for delivery to Oliver Cowdery and his companion [John Whitmer] by the fifteenth of that month (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:248-49).

During the second session of the conference in the afternoon of November 1st, the Prophet asked the elders what testimony they were willing to attach to these commandments which would shortly be sent to the world "inasmuch as the Lord had bestowed a great blessing upon us in giving commandments and revelations." A number of brethren arose and said they were willing to testify to the world that they knew that they (the commandments) "were of the Lord." However, there were a few of the brethren present who felt perhaps because of their "superior" education, that there should be some improvement in the language of the revelations. While it was true that there were grammatical errors in the revelations, it would seem that the spirit of the questions raised concerning the language represented a lack of faith in the divine origin of the revelations. Considerable time was spent in discussions concerning the language as it had been given, whereupon the Prophet, after prayer, received section 67 in the presence of the elders assembled.

In this section the Lord issued a challenge to the learned brethren. He invited them to attempt on their own to write a “revelation” equal to “even the least” of the revelations that Joseph had received. If they succeeded, then they were justified in being hesitant to bear testimony of them. If they failed, however, then they would fall under heavenly condemnation if they failed to bear witness of them.

Note that in verse 5 the Lord acknowledges that some of the elders had been critical of Joseph’s language. The Lord actually issues the challenge in verses 6 through 8.

It appears that this revelation silenced the critics, all except one, William E. McLellin, who was given to some boasting in his own strength and evidently lacked the spiritual preparation to know by the Spirit that the revelations were true. He thus accepted the challenge.

Brother McLellin retired to an adjacent room. There are no historical accounts to tell us how long he was gone, but it seems likely that no one slept in anticipation of his return. When he did return, he stood in the doorway and wept with nothing written on his note papers. A pentecostal-type outpouring of the Spirit followed, as all bore testimony of the truthfulness of the revelations.

This still did not solve the problem of some grammatical errors within the revelations. During the next session of the conference the elders voted that Joseph should review them again and make any corrections he felt were needed.

Joseph received by revelation the wording of a special testimony which was to be signed by the elders present and published in the Book of Commandments. It may have been signed by the elders, but it was later published with the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants and signed—not by the elders present at the conferences of November 1831—but rather by those brethren that comprised the original Quorum of the Twelve Apostles in this dispensation. This testimony has been included in every edition of the Doctrine and Covenants since 1835.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 67 The Challenge

D&C 67:11-12 No man has seen God at any time in the flesh, except quickened by the Spirit of God.

1 Behold and hearken, O ye elders of my church, who have assembled yourselves together, whose prayers I have heard, and whose hearts I know, and whose desires have come up before me.

verse 1 “Behold and hearken” The Lord almost seems a bit impatient. He says, “Look and listen.” In effect, he says, “Pay attention.”

2 Behold and lo, mine eyes are upon you, and the heavens and the earth are in mine hands, and the riches of eternity are mine to give.

3 Ye endeavored to believe that ye should receive the blessing which was offered unto you; but behold, verily I say unto you there were fears in your hearts, and verily this is the reason that ye did not receive.

verse 3 Apparently the Lord had promised a special experience to these elders in connection with the Book of Commandments that would be similar to the experiences granted the Three Witnesses and Eight Witnesses of the Book of Mormon (compare verse 10). Verse 14 suggests that they might have been promised this manifestation by the laying on of hands by the Prophet Joseph. It is also apparent that the elders were expecting it to be a very special manifestation, perhaps even a miraculous one.

From this verse, it is obvious that this special blessing of testimony was not received. The Lord states the reason they did not receive this blessing and informs them that it was because of the “fears in your hearts.” Wouldn’t these elders have been eager and enthusiastic about the possibility of witnessing a miraculous manifestation from the Lord? What would cause them to fear? Why would fear render them unable and perhaps unworthy to have this anticipated experience?

“fears in your hearts . . . the reason that ye did not receive” See the commentary for D&C 63:16. It would seem likely that the presence of fear in the hearts of these elders is the secondary consequence of a more primary cause.

As we sojourn through mortality, it is not possible to avoid all fear. After all, we are, by divine design, living in a telestial world outside the direct presence of our Father in Heaven. The Apostle Paul warned the Philippians that they must: “Work out [their] own salvation with fear and trembling” (Philippians 2:12). All of us who live here on earth and engage its inevitable challenges will be required to overcome our fears and learn to exercise courage and fortitude. Yet, the Lord has provided blessed relief from fear, and he yearns for us to take advantage of his support and succor. His solution to fear is the influence of the Spirit of God.

When a mortal is deprived of the influence of the Lord’s Spirit, this world is a frightening place, and indeed he or she will find much to fear. There is the fear of death (Mormon 6:7; D&C 101:36), the fear of the final judgment and the eternal future (Hebrews 10:27; Mosiah 2:38; Moroni 10:22; Moses 7:1), and even the fear of man (D&C 60:2). The cause of this loss of responsiveness to the Spirit’s influence is sin. It is the unrighteous and rebellious who will surely “fear and tremble” (D&C 63:6). The individual without the Spirit is inevitably fearful and does not feel God’s presence.

To a righteous, worthy individual, the Spirit communicates to the soul peace, hope, confidence, and the love of God. The individual who is in tune with the Spirit is confident in the presence of God (D&C 121:45). Feeling the reassurance of God’s love, communicated to a righteous man only by the Spirit of God, casts out from the man’s heart all fear (1 John 4:18-19; Moroni 8:16).

In summary, these elders did not have the promised spiritual experience because in their hearts there was uncertainty, doubt, and fear rather than the conviction and testimony that would bring the reassuring witness of the Spirit.

4 And now I, the Lord, give unto you a testimony of the truth of these commandments which are lying before you.

verse 4 Since the elders failed to qualify spiritually for the promised spiritual experience which would have left them with a powerful spiritual witness, the Lord is preparing to offer an alternative solution to their doubts.

“these commandments which are lying before you” The “commandments” are, of course, the revelations received by the Prophet Joseph. Apparently, the collected revelations were there at the conference in manuscript form for these elders to examine.

5 Your eyes have been upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and his language you have known, and his imperfections you have known; and you have sought in your hearts knowledge that you might express beyond his language; this you also know.

verse 5 “Your eyes have been upon my servant Joseph Smith, Jun.” The elders were aware and have been commenting on Joseph and his limitations. Joseph had less education than several of the elders present, and these others apparently were privately embarrassed at the unpolished, frontier quality of Joseph’s spelling, punctuation, diction, and such. Note that the Lord basically agrees with their estimate of Joseph’s writing skills, but that was not the issue. Some of the elders doubted, on the grounds of Joseph’s unsophisticated language, that all the revelations could truly be from God.

“you have sought in your hearts knowledge that you might express beyond his language” Some of the more educated elders wanted to rewrite or “improve” the revelations to make them sound more impressive to an educated audience. Forgetting that the Lord speaks to humans “in their weakness, after the manner of their language” (D&C 1:24), these elders thought the unlearned language of the Prophet argued against the divine origins of his revelations. They also wanted to say more than Joseph had said—to “express beyond his language.”

Latter-day Saints believe that God speaks through prophets. Prophets are not, however, merely scribes taking down divine dictation in a single, pure, perfect, and timeless form. Rather, the precise wording of a revelation can be influenced by the mind, education, and verbal or literary skills (or lack thereof) of the prophet himself (see D&C 1:24; 1 Corinthians 1:27). Therefore, there is actually no reason why a revelation could not, with a prophet's approval, be edited for spelling and punctuation, so long as such changes do not alter the meaning or intent of the original—that is, “express beyond his [Joseph's] language.” Such editorial changes have been frequently authorized in printed editions of the LDS scriptures.

6 Now, seek ye out of the Book of Commandments, even the least that is among them, and appoint him that is the most wise among you;

verse 6 “the least that is among them” This phrase refers to the least well-written of the revelations in the estimation of the elders present.

“appoint him that is the most wise among you” The Lord obviously inspired the prophet Joseph to write this phrase with a touch of irony, since the elder that was so designated would be obviously not “wise” at all, but rather would be presumptuously challenging and tempting the Lord. By allowing himself to be designated as the “wisest” among the group, William McLellin displayed his foolish lack of sensitivity and common sense.

7 Or, if there be any among you that shall make one like unto it, then ye are justified in saying that ye do not know that they are true;

verse 7 “if there be any among you that shall make one like unto it” Here is the essence of the Lord's challenge. Joseph was an uneducated man, and many of the elders were educated. So if Joseph's revelations were not from God, then it should be a simple matter for the elders to write one that sounded as good—to create a “revelation” with the same inspirational quality which they all acknowledged in Joseph's revelations. If they could indeed create such a revelation, then they were entitled to doubt. It should be noted that the challenge proposed here by the Lord was not an open ended one. That is, it was not a challenge offered to the world in all time and in all places. It was for those elders gathered at that place and at that particular time. The result of the challenge is already known to the reader.

8 But if ye cannot make one like unto it, ye are under condemnation if ye do not bear record that they are true.

verse 8 On the other hand, a failure to produce a satisfactory “revelation” would obligate the elders to bear testimony to the divinity of Joseph's revelations.

Immediately following the vain attempt of William McLellin, Joseph received by revelation the following document, which was then signed by the elders present:

The testimony of the witnesses to the book of the Lord's commandments, which He gave to His Church through Joseph Smith, Jun., who was appointed by the voice of the Church for this purpose; we therefore feel willing to bear testimony to all the world of mankind, to every creature upon the face of all the earth and upon the islands of the sea, that the Lord has borne record to our soul, through the Holy Ghost, shed forth upon us, that these commandments were given by inspiration of God, and are profitable for all men, and are verily true. We give this testimony unto the world, the Lord being our helper; and it is through the grace of God, the Father, and His Son, Jesus Christ, that we are permitted to have this privilege of bearing this testimony unto the world, that the children of men may be profited thereby.

A slightly revised version of this testimony, signed by the original Quorum of the Twelve Apostles, is included at the beginning of the present edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

9 For ye know that there is no unrighteousness in them, and that which is righteous cometh down from above, from the Father of lights.

verse 9 “Father of lights” This expression is also found in James 1:17. The Father and the Son are the source of divine “light” in the universe (see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15, The Concept Light).

10 And again, verily I say unto you that it is your privilege, and a promise I give unto you that have been ordained unto this ministry, that inasmuch as you strip yourselves from jealousies and fears, and humble yourselves before me, for ye are not sufficiently humble, the veil shall be rent and you shall see me and know that I am—not with the carnal neither natural mind, but with the spiritual.

verse 10 “you shall see me” This is the wonderful promise of the Second Comforter repeated again to disciples in this last dispensation (see John 14:12-17; D&C 93:1), though not every appearance of Christ necessarily bestows the Second Comforter. We thus learn that the astounding privilege of seeing the Savior in open vision is not reserved for prophets only, but is available to any man willing to pay the price required in personal righteousness (see D&C 50:45-46; 88:68-69; 93:1; 130:3). The Prophet Joseph wrote:

The other Comforter spoken of is a subject of great interest, and perhaps understood by few of this generation. After a person hath faith in Christ, repents of his sins, and is baptized for the remission of his sins and receives the Holy Ghost, (by the laying on of hands,) which is the first Comforter, then let him continue to humble himself before God, hungering and thirsting after righteousness, and living by every word of God, and the Lord will soon say unto him, Son, thou shalt be exalted, etc. When the Lord has thoroughly proved him, and finds that the man is determined to serve him at all hazards, then the man will find his calling and his election made sure, then it will be his privilege to receive the other Comforter, which the Lord hath promised the Saints, as is recorded in the testimony of St. John, in the 14th chapter, from the 12th to the 27th verses . . . [verses 16, 17, 18, 21, 23]

Now, what is this other Comforter? It is no more or less than the Lord Jesus Christ himself; and this is the sum and substance of the whole matter; that when any man obtains this last Comforter, he will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him; and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the kingdom of God; and this is the state and place the ancient Saints arrived at when they had such glorious visions—Isaiah, Ezekiel, John upon the Isle of Patmos, St. Paul in the three heavens, and all the Saints who held communion with the general assembly and Church of the First Born (TPJS, 150-51).

Such a privilege, of course, does not come easily. A high level of personal righteousness and spiritual commitment is required.

Joseph Fielding Smith commented upon the above quotation by the Prophet Joseph:

Joseph Smith speaks of two Comforters: the first is the Holy Ghost, the second is the Son of God himself. He uses the 14th chapter of John as the basis of his discourse. Verses 16, 17, and 26 definitely refer to the Holy Ghost. They speak of the Spirit of truth which “dwelleth with you, and shall be in you.” Verses 18, 21, and 23 clearly refer to the Lord himself and his coming to man.

The Holy Spirit of Promise is not the Second Comforter; the Holy Spirit of Promise is the Holy Ghost who places the stamp of approval upon every ordinance that is done righteously, and when covenants are broken, he removes the seal (Doctrines of Salvation, 1954, 1:55).

“and know that I am” When through faithfulness the veil has been parted and individuals receive the Second Comforter, then they no longer testify of Christ through faith, for their faith has become sure and certain knowledge. According to Joseph Smith, the Second Comforter is the resurrected Savior himself, and an individual who receives this blessing “will have the personage of Jesus Christ to attend him, or appear unto him from time to time, and even he will manifest the Father unto him, and they will take up their abode with him, and the visions of the heavens will be opened unto him, and the Lord will teach him face to face, and he may have a perfect knowledge of the mysteries of the Kingdom of God” (TPJS, 151). After a person receives the Second Comforter, faith in Christ becomes knowledge of Christ. Those who receive the Second Comforter no longer rely primarily upon the witness of others, or upon the witness of the scriptures, or even upon the witness of the Spirit, for they have come to know of themselves through their own experience (compare Ether 3:19).

“not with the carnal, neither natural mind but with the spiritual” At present, we are fallen beings and therefore naturally of the telestial order. It is not possible for what is telestial in nature to interact directly with things of a higher order. In order to interact with celestial beings, we must first be transfigured by the Holy Spirit. In other words, our present, fallen natures must be temporarily raised to a higher state of being by the indwelling of the Holy Spirit and partake momentarily of the nature that will be ours in the resurrection.

Ordinarily we associate the phenomenon of transfiguration, and the need for transfiguration, with a mortal being who is blessed to be in the physical presence of a divine celestial being. His or her telestial body must be transfigured or temporarily changed so that it has celestial properties which protect the body from damage resulting from celestial glory (see the commentary for Mosiah 13:5). But the same general principle applies for the communication of celestial or spiritual concepts. The telestial, or “natural” mortal mind, cannot grasp celestial concepts lest that mortal mind be “transfigured” temporarily by the Spirit of the Holy Ghost or lifted to a higher celestial state (1 Corinthians 2:14). Only then can the mind grasp (understand and learn) the celestial or eternal concept. We say that the celestial or eternal concepts are “revealed” to the individual. It is notable that over time, the mind that seeks and receives heavenly revelation becomes less and less telestial and more and more celestial. This is spiritual progress. This is the process of becoming more like God. For further discussion of the phenomenon of transfiguration, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 3, chapter 14, Transfiguration.

The distinction made here between “natural” and “spiritual” is not between our bodies and our spirits but rather between our present fallen minds and bodies and our future glorified minds and bodies. This can cause some confusion as we read the scriptures. See, for example, 1 Corinthians 15:44 in which the term natural body refers to the fallen telestial mortal body, and the term spiritual body refers to glorified physical bodies. It is a common error of the orthodox Christian world that “spiritual” must mean “nonphysical.”

11 For no man has seen God at any time in the flesh, except quickened by the Spirit of God.

verse 11 The phrase “in the flesh” means in an unprotected mortal or telestial condition. God possesses a celestial glory, and all humans from the fall of Adam and Eve to the present have been of the telestial order. In order for the two to interact, either God must veil his glory or humans must be temporarily raised to a more-than-human glory. This latter phenomenon may be referred to as being quickened or transfigured. This was the experience of all the prophets who have seen God (Moses 1:2, 11, 14).

12 Neither can any natural man abide the presence of God, neither after the carnal mind.

verses 11-12 What missionary hasn't encountered an investigator who has brought up John 1:18 or 1 John 4:12: "no man hath seen God at any time." These verses provide us with the modern-day scriptural explanation of these troublesome passages.

13 Ye are not able to abide the presence of God now, neither the ministering of angels; wherefore, continue in patience until ye are perfected.

verse 13 "Ye are not able to abide the presence of God now, neither the ministering of angels" Though the elders present on this occasion were good men devoted to the kingdom, they were not sufficiently stripped of jealousy, fear, and pride to be transfigured and receive the second Comforter. Indeed, some were not ready at that time for the appearance of an angel, though at least two of them had already enjoyed this blessing—Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer.

"continue in patience until ye are perfected" The term perfected here does not refer to philosophical perfection or absolute unimprovability. This would be an impossible interpretation, given the LDS belief in eternal progression or enlargement. Rather, the individual who has proved his spiritual mettle through continuous unflinching striving to overcome his natural self and obey the commandments, over time, is eventually considered by the Lord to be perfect (Moroni 10:32-33).

14 Let not your minds turn back; and when ye are worthy, in mine own due time, ye shall see and know that which was conferred upon you by the hands of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun. Amen.

verse 14 "Let not your minds turn back" That is, don't dwell on the opportunity that was lost here. Rather, look forward to the eventual reception of the promised blessing.

"ye shall see and know that which was conferred upon you by the hands of my servant Joseph Smith, Jun." The reference to the conferral of a blessing by the laying on of Joseph's hands may be figurative, or it may indicate that the elders had received a blessing or some other ministrations from the Prophet in preparation for the offered experience. It should not be assumed that all the elders present on this day had doubts. After all, as witnesses of the Book of Mormon, Oliver Cowdery and David Whitmer had conversed with angels, and John Whitmer and Peter Whitmer Jr. had seen and handled the gold plates.

Character Vignette

Orson Hyde

He was nearly a year older than the Prophet, having been born on January 8, 1805, in Connecticut. His father served in the United States Army in the War of 1812. He had eight brothers and sisters. His mother died when Orson was only seven years old, and the family was scattered. Orson came to live with a man named Nathan Wheeler. When Orson was fourteen years old, Wheeler moved with his family to the area of Kirtland, Ohio. After trying several different occupations, Orson finally went to work as a clerk in the Gilbert and Whitney store.

In 1827 Orson converted to the Methodist faith. About this same time he heard that a "golden Bible" had been dug out of a rock in New York, and he expressed a curiosity if not an interest in it. A short time later, he heard the Campbellite minister Sidney Rigdon preach, and he was baptized into the Campbellite faith. He became a student of theology with a view toward becoming a minister for the Campbellites. In 1830 he was made a pastor over two congregations of Campbellites in Ohio. In the fall of 1830 he heard the missionaries preach as they traveled toward Missouri to preach to the Lamanites. He initially opposed the message of the restored gospel, but eventually, being reproved by the Spirit in his private thoughts, he suspended his opposition and prayerfully inquired further. He was finally baptized the first Sunday in October 1831 by his friend Sidney Rigdon.

On February 15, 1835, at Kirtland he was ordained an Apostle. Subsequently he filled many missions in the states, and in 1837 he went to England with other church leaders. Being partly of Jewish extraction, Elder Hyde was sent to Palestine to dedicate that land for the return of the Jews. He actually departed for this mission in 1840. He crossed the Atlantic Ocean, traveled through England and Germany, visited Constantinople, Cairo, and Alexandria, and finally reached Jerusalem. On Sunday morning, October 24, 1841, he ascended the Mount of Olives, built an altar, and so dedicated the land.

He died at age 73 in Spring City, Utah, in Sanpete County, November 28, 1878.

Section 68 Bishops. Teach. Scripture.

On November 1, 1831, Joseph Smith had convened a special group of four short conferences in Hiram, Ohio, of ten leading elders to discuss publication of his collected revelations in a book to be called the Book of Commandments. At the end of the first two days of this conference, four brethren—Orson Hyde, Luke Johnson, Lyman Johnson, and William E. McLellin—came to Joseph and were desirous “to know the mind of the Lord concerning themselves.” Joseph inquired of the Lord and received what is now section 68. Though this revelation was given at the specific request of these brethren, it was not intended for them alone, but for the guidance of all officers and members of the Church.

There are three important themes in section 68, thus the explanation for the peculiar “title” assigned to it. These three major themes are:

1. Law of the office of the bishop (verses 14-24). If a man could be found who fulfilled all of the following requirements, then he would have the right to be a bishop. The requirements are: (1) He is a literal descendant of Aaron as attested to by revelation or patriarchal blessing. (2) He is a firstborn son. (3) He desires the office. (4) He is worthy of the office. (5) He is called to the office and ordained by the First Presidency. President Joseph Fielding Smith pointed out that these provisions applied only to the office of presiding bishop of the Church. “It [this set of provisions] has no reference whatever to bishops of wards” (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:92).

Not only would this man have the right to be bishop, but he could serve without counselors, and would not need to hold the Melchizedek priesthood. Aaron in his lifetime was given the keys of presiding over the Aaronic priesthood (Exodus 29:4-9). Since no one in the Church has yet been found who meets these qualifications, today a man must be a high priest in the Melchizedek priesthood to serve as bishop or presiding bishop (verse 15).

2. Teach the gospel to your children (verse 25-32). In section 68, the Lord placed directly upon the parents the responsibility of teaching their children faith in Christ, the doctrines of repentance and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost, prayer, and Sabbath day observance all before they reach the age of eight years. Parents are also to teach them to walk uprightly before the Lord (verse 28) and how to work (verse 30). It is a sin not to do so (verse 25).

At the time this revelation was given in November 1831, there was no First Presidency in the Church, and the concept of the “stakes of Zion” was not fully developed. Yet these concepts appear in section 68. Section 68 was not published until the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants. As more was revealed between 1831 and 1835, this revelation was edited and augmented to harmonize with the increased understanding gained during those years. Actually the same is true of those verses which apply to the office of bishop (verses 16-21). These verses were not in the original revelation but were added some time before 1835.

3. Scripture (verse 4). Section 68 provides a unique definition of the concept of “scripture.” When a person who is called by the Lord and is in the service of the Lord speaks, when moved upon by the Holy Ghost, what that person says is scripture. It is the will, mind, word, and voice of the Lord and the power of God unto salvation (verse 4). This type of scripture might be referred to as “oral scripture.” In the Church we have evolved three uses of the term “scripture”:

(1) canonized scripture—That material accepted by a group as a spiritual guide or standard of behavior or teaching.

(2) written scripture—When a prophet writes anything under the direction of the Holy Ghost, it may be considered scripture.

(3) oral scripture—Material spoken, preached, or taught by a servant of the Lord under the guidance of the Holy Ghost.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 68:3-4 And this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost. And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation.

D&C 68:25 Inasmuch as parents have children in Zion and teach them not . . . the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

1 My servant, Orson Hyde, was called by his ordination to proclaim the everlasting gospel, by the Spirit of the living God, from people to people, and from land to land, in the congregations of the wicked, in their synagogues, reasoning with and expounding all scriptures unto them.

verse 1 “Orson Hyde” See the character vignette for Orson Hyde at the end of section 67. At the time Joseph received section 68, Orson Hyde had been a member of the Church only one month; he had been a high priest for only one week. As a new member bearing the responsibilities of the high priesthood, Orson wanted to know the Lord’s will concerning him.

“called by his ordination to proclaim the everlasting gospel” The prophecy pronounced in Orson’s priesthood ordination was literally fulfilled. In 1832 Orson and Samuel H. Smith traveled in the states of New York, Massachusetts, Maine, and Rhode, island, a total distance of some 2,000 miles, on foot. In 1837 he was sent to England. His mission in Jerusalem in 1840-41 is mentioned above.

“congregations of the wicked” See the commentary for D&C 60:8.

2 And, behold, and lo, this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood, whose mission is appointed unto them to go forth—verse 2 “this is an ensample unto all those who were ordained unto this priesthood” The word ensample is an old spelling for example. This phrase indicates that the pattern or model of missionary work outlined in verse 1, is applicable to all who are called to serve a mission.

“unto this priesthood” This phrase refers to the office of high priest, to which Orson and several other elders had been ordained a week earlier. At this time the office of high priest was the highest office in the Church, because the offices of general authorities as we understand them were established later. Thus, verses 4-6 are not directed to all Melchizedek Priesthood holders but to the presiding high priesthood of the Church. Today the promises of verses 4-6 apply primarily to the general authorities of the Church, but they may also be extended to high priests who preside over wards, stakes, missions, and such when they are acting within the boundaries of their stewardships.

Thus, this verse explains that the call of Orson Hyde is the example for all of those who, like Brother Hyde, have been ordained as high priests. Just as he “was called by his ordination to proclaim the everlasting gospel, by the Spirit of the living God” (verse 1), so are other high priests called by their ordination to “speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost” (verse 3).

3 And this is the ensample unto them, that they shall speak as they are moved upon by the Holy Ghost.

verse 3 See the commentary for verse 2.

verses 4-6 The promises in these verses are give exclusively to the leaders of the Church at that time, the high priests.

4 And whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture, shall be the will of the Lord, shall be the mind of the Lord, shall be the word of the Lord, shall be the voice of the Lord, and the power of God unto salvation.

verse 4 See the introductory commentary for this section, specifically the section on “scripture.”

“whatsoever they shall speak when moved upon by the Holy Ghost shall be scripture” Elder J. Reuben Clark, Jr. asked and answered an important question concerning this phrase:

The question is, how shall we know then the things they [the brethren] have spoken were said as they were “moved upon by the Holy Ghost”? I have given some thought to this question, and the answer thereto so far as I can determine, is: We can tell when the speakers are “moved upon by the Holy Ghost” only when we, ourselves, are “moved upon by the Holy Ghost.” In a way this completely shifts the responsibility from them to us to determine when they so speak (“When Are the Writings or Sermons of Church Leaders Entitled to the Claim of Scripture?” 7).

5 Behold, this is the promise of the Lord unto you, O ye my servants.

6 Wherefore, be of good cheer, and do not fear, for I the Lord am with you, and will stand by you; and ye shall bear record of me, even Jesus Christ, that I am the Son of the living God, that I was, that I am, and that I am to come.

verse 6 “Wherefore, be of good cheer” Faithful and obedient members of the Church are entitled to, as an earned gift of the Spirit, feelings of peace, comfort, and joy. This may be referred to as the gift of hope and is the reassurance that all will be well in the eternities. When faithful members are not cheerful and confident of their standing before God, something is wrong. Something important has been misunderstood, neglected, ignored, disobeyed, or, perhaps, was just never learned. A correct understanding of the gospel by faithful members brings joy, peace, confidence, and hope.

verses 7-8 Unlike the promises of verses 4-6, which were given to high priests exclusively, the injunction of verses 7-8 is given to every faithful Melchizedek Priesthood holder.

7 This is the word of the Lord unto you, my servant Orson Hyde, and also unto my servant Luke Johnson, and unto my servant Lyman Johnson, and unto my servant William E. McLellin, and unto all the faithful elders of my church—verse 7 “Orson Hyde” See the Character Vignette on Orson Hyde at the end of section 67.

“William E. McLellin” See the introductory commentary for section 66.

8 Go ye into all the world, preach the gospel to every creature, acting in the authority which I have given you, baptizing in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.

verse 8 “Go ye into all the world” Every faithful Melchizedek Priesthood holder must preach the gospel somewhere, in some manner, to someone. President Spencer W. Kimball has stated: “The question is asked: Should every young man fill a mission? And the answer of the Church is yes, and the answer of the Lord is yes. Enlarging this answer we say: Certainly every male member of the Church should fill a mission, like he should pay his tithing, like he should attend his meetings, like he should keep his life clean and free from the ugliness of the world and plan a celestial marriage in the temple of the Lord. . . . Every LDS male who is worthy and able should fill a mission” (Ensign, May 1974, 87).

9 And he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, and he that believeth not shall be damned.

10 And he that believeth shall be blest with signs following, even as it is written.

verse 1 “even as it is written” Verses 8-10 refer back to the charge of the resurrected Christ to his apostles recorded in Mark 16:15-18 (see also Matthew 28:19-20).

11 And unto you it shall be given to know the signs of the times, and the signs of the coming of the Son of Man;

verse 11 The Lord seldom gives time references. On the other hand, the Lord has promised to keep his saints informed. Here he promises them, “Unto you it shall be given to know the signs of the times, and the signs of the coming of the Son of Man” (D&C 68:11), noting that, though the coming of the Lord will overtake the world as a thief in the night, “that day shall not over take you as a thief” (D&C 106:4-5). The caveat, however, is that the saints must pay attention. For a discussion of the “signs of the times” and the “signs of the coming of the Son of Man,” see three chapters in volume 3 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine: chapter 24, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Introduction, chapter 25, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Warn, and chapter 26, Signs of the Lord’s Second Coming—Those that Punish and Cleanse.

12 And of as many as the Father shall bear record, to you shall be given power to seal them up unto eternal life. Amen.

verse 12 “of as many as the Father shall bear record” There are several other scriptural phrases similar to this one. Let us consider a few: John 6:37—“All that the Father giveth me shall come to me.” John 6:44—“No man can come to me, except the Father which hath sent me draw him.” John 10:29—“My Father, which gave them me, is greater than all; and no man is able to pluck them out of my Father’s hand.” John 17:11—“Holy Father, keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are.” When taken literally, these phrases all suggest that in some way the Father has given to the Son all of those of his children who will eventually become the Son’s “people” or “children” and will be eventually exalted. These statements, rather than being intended to be literal, apparently are simply figurative statements, by the Son, of profound deference to his Father. He has taught on more than one occasion that he came to earth not to do his own will, but his Father’s (see, for example, John 6:38; compare John 5:19). He also taught that that the doctrine he preaches is not his, but his Father's (John 7:16; 3 Nephi 11:32-34).

“to you shall be given power to seal them up unto eternal life” To the priesthood holders of the Lord's earthly Church, the Lord will eventually give the power to seal up other mortals to eternal life, to render their calling and elections sure. Please review the discussion of the sealing power in the commentary for Helaman 10:7. The fulness of this power and its keys will not be given to Joseph by the ancient prophet Elijah, however, until April 3, 1836 in the temple at Kirtland (see section 110).

“Amen” With this closure, the Lord indicates that his specific responses to Orson Hyde and the three high priests inquiring of him was at an end. What follows in verses 13-35 are items of additional instruction for the entire Church.

13 And now, concerning the items in addition to the covenants and commandments, they are these—

14 There remain hereafter, in the due time of the Lord, other bishops to be set apart unto the church, to minister even according to the first;

verse 14 “There remain hereafter . . . other bishops to be set apart unto the church” At the time of this revelation, Edward Partridge, who was living in Missouri, was the only bishop in the Church. The growth of the Church made ordination of other bishops for specific areas a logistical necessity. One month after this revelation, Newell K. Whitney will be ordained the bishop for Kirtland (see D&C 72:2, 8). Neither of these brethren was the Presiding Bishop in the modern sense, since neither presided over the other. Rather, they were both general bishops each presiding over a specific geographical area of the Church—Bishop Partridge in the West and Bishop Whitney in the East.

15 Wherefore they shall be high priests who are worthy, and they shall be appointed by the First Presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood, except they be literal descendants of Aaron.

verse 15 “Wherefore they shall be high priests” The office of bishop is an office in the Aaronic Priesthood, together with those of deacon, teacher, and priest. When the Aaronic Priesthood was established anciently, however, the right to preside over that priesthood, as a bishop now does, was designated as a privilege of lineage (see Exodus 28:1; 29:9, 29). Because worthy Levites of the family of Aaron, whose right it was to preside over the Aaronic Priesthood, were not available to the early Church in this dispensation, the Lord directed that high priests should function in that office in their place. Today, a bishop actually presides over the Aaronic Priesthood in his ward and is also the presiding high priest in his ward.

“they shall be appointed by the First Presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood” In 1831, when this revelation was first given, there was no First Presidency, and the original text of the revelation read “appointed by a conference of high priests,” in other words, by the leadership of the Church as it was then loosely organized. After the First Presidency was organized in 1833, the reading of verse 15 was changed to use the correct terminology. This is also true of verses 22-23. D&C 107:59-100 gives additional information about the offices of bishop and Presiding Bishop.

verses 16-21 Under the direction of Joseph Smith, these verses were first added to the text of section 68 in The Evening and the Morning Star reprinted at Kirtland in June 1835, and also in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

16 And if they be literal descendants of Aaron they have a legal right to the bishopric, if they are the firstborn among the sons of Aaron;

verse 16 President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote:

The office of Presiding Bishop of the Church is the same as the office which was held by Aaron. It is the highest office, holding the presidency in the Aaronic Priesthood. It was this office which came to John the Baptist, and it was by virtue of the fact that he held the keys of this power and ministry that he was sent to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery to restore that priesthood, May 15, 1829. . . . Should it be shown by revelation that there is one who is the “firstborn among the sons of Aaron,” and thus entitled by the birthright to this presidency, he could “claim” his “anointing” and the right to that office in the Church (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:259).

17 For the firstborn holds the right of the presidency over this priesthood, and the keys or authority of the same.

18 No man has a legal right to this office, to hold the keys of this priesthood, except he be a literal descendant and the firstborn of Aaron.

19 But, as a high priest of the Melchizedek Priesthood has authority to officiate in all the lesser offices he may officiate in the office of bishop when no literal descendant of Aaron can be found, provided he is called and set apart and ordained unto this power, under the hands of the First Presidency of the Melchizedek Priesthood.

20 And a literal descendant of Aaron, also, must be designated by this Presidency, and found worthy, and anointed, and ordained under the hands of this Presidency, otherwise they are not legally authorized to officiate in their priesthood.

verse 20 “must be designated by this Presidency” Joseph Fielding Smith also wrote:

The person spoken of in the revelations as having the right by lineage to the bishopric is the one who is the firstborn. By virtue of his birth he is entitled to hold “the keys or authority of the same.” This has reference only to the one who presides over the Aaronic Priesthood. It has no reference whatever to bishops of wards. Further, such a one must be designated by the First Presidency of the Church and receive his anointing and ordination under their hands. The revelation comes from the Presidency, not from the patriarch, to establish a claim to the right to preside in this office. In the absence of knowledge concerning such a descendant, any high priest, chosen by the Presidency, may hold the office of Presiding Bishop and serve with counselors (Doctrines of Salvation, 3:92).

21 But, by virtue of the decree concerning their right of the priesthood descending from father to son, they may claim their anointing if at any time they can prove their lineage, or do ascertain it by revelation from the Lord under the hands of the above named Presidency.

22 And again, no bishop or high priest who shall be set apart for this ministry shall be tried or condemned for any crime, save it be before the First Presidency of the church;

23 And inasmuch as he is found guilty before this Presidency, by testimony that cannot be impeached, he shall be condemned; verses 22-24 The church discipline guidelines set forth in these two verses apply only to the general bishops Partridge and Whitney, and later to Presiding Bishops, because their stewardships did and do not fall under the control of local church authorities.

24 And if he repent he shall be forgiven, according to the covenants and commandments of the church.

If the Presiding Bishop of the Church is guilty of transgression, in which “court” or disciplinary council is he tried? In case of the transgression of the presiding bishop of the Church, he could not be tried by a high council in the stake in which he lives, but he would have to be tried by [the court of] the First Presidency of the Church. The reason for this is that he . . . is not under the jurisdiction of any ward or stake in this capacity. This order given for the trial of the presiding bishop does not apply to a local bishop in a ward. Local ward bishops may be disciplined by the local authorities under whose jurisdiction they operate—usually a stake president. Additional information on this subject is found in D&C 107:15-17, 68-69, which clearly illustrates that the office referred to is that of a general or Presiding Bishop and not that of a local ward bishop.

25 And again, inasmuch as parents have children in Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized, that teach them not to understand the doctrine of repentance, faith in Christ the Son of the living God, and of baptism and the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of the hands, when eight years old, the sin be upon the heads of the parents.

verse 25 Parents—not teachers, bishops, home teachers, or anyone else but parents—bear the primary obligation of teaching their children the basics of the gospel and seeing that they are baptized at the proper time, teaching them to pray, and teaching them to behave properly and to walk uprightly. The Church, through its auxiliaries and programs, will assist in many of these obligations, but the primary responsibility still rests with parents.

“the sin be upon the heads of the parents” The key word in this phrase is sin. It is not plural but singular, and it refers not to the sins children may subsequently commit but to the sin of the parents’ not teaching them better. Some parents, due to their misunderstanding of this verse, try to take responsibility upon themselves for the sins of their children, and shield their children from blame by doing so. But this is not possible. In order to sin at all one must have knowledge and understanding, and even poorly raised children know for the most part what they should and should not do. Parents will be held accountable for not teaching their children the gospel, but parents cannot take the blame for the sins of their children, nor can they protect them from suffering the consequences of those sins.

26 For this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion, or in any of her stakes which are organized.

verse 26 “this shall be a law unto the inhabitants of Zion” In verse 25, the Lord is not expressing a mere hope or suggestion; rather, he is giving a law or a commandment.

27 And their children shall be baptized for the remission of their sins when eight years old, and receive the laying on of the hands.

verse 27 “when eight years old” The significant doctrinal statement concerning the age of accountability of children (D&C 68:25, 27) was given by revelation in November of 1831. This, however, was not the first time in our dispensation where such information was made known. While translating Genesis 17 (sometime between February and April 1831), Joseph Smith recorded the following regarding the Abrahamic covenant and the token of circumcision:

And I will establish a covenant of circumcision with thee, and it shall be my covenant between me and thee, and thy seed after thee, in their generations; that thou mayest know for ever that children are not accountable before me until they are eight years old (JST, Genesis 17:11).

Thus we see that the concept of an age of accountability of children was known by the Prophet Joseph through his work of Bible translation some six to nine months before section 68 was received.

Elder Bruce R. McConkie wrote of the concept of accountability:

Accountability does not burst full-bloom upon a child at any given moment in his life. Children become accountable gradually, over a number of years. Becoming accountable is a process, not a goal to be attained when a specified number of years, days, and hours have elapsed. . . . There comes a time, however, when accountability is real and actual and sin is attributed in the lives of those who develop normally. It is eight years of age, the age of baptism (“Salvation of Little Children,” 6).

28 And they shall also teach their children to pray, and to walk uprightly before the Lord.

verse 28 “they shall also teach their children . . . to walk uprightly before the Lord” The obligation is not just to teach children to understand intellectually what proper behavior is. The full obligation is to teach them to behave properly. In other words, parents in Zion must discipline their children. They must teach them what proper behavior is, and then they must do all they appropriately can to see that their children do, indeed, behave.

29 And the inhabitants of Zion shall also observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy.

verse 29 “observe the Sabbath day to keep it holy” See D&C 59:9-12 and its commentary.

30 And the inhabitants of Zion also shall remember their labors, inasmuch as they are appointed to labor, in all faithfulness; for the idler shall be had in remembrance before the Lord.

verse 30 “the inhabitants of Zion also shall remember their labors” One great obstacle to establishing Zion is the human tendency to do less than our best in the belief that others will make up for our laziness. In D&C 42:42 the Lord stated the principle of Zion that the idler would “not eat the bread nor wear the garments of the laborer.”

This may be termed the “entitlement mentality.” It would seem that once the possibility of obtaining something for nothing has been experienced, there is a tendency to become addicted to and dependent on the system that so provides. Elder David B. Haight warned about the ability of the government welfare system to produce idleness:

What has this monstrous thing called government welfare done to the people? Today we have second- and third-generation welfare recipients. Millions have learned how to live off the government. Children are growing up without knowing the value and the dignity of work. The government has succeeded in doing what the church welfare program seeks to prevent. . . .

But church members are not immune to the perils of the government dole. There is evidence that some of our people are receiving something for nothing from the government. The fact that this condition exists in the Church highlights the need for our members to be knowledgeable about church welfare principles. President Kimball has stated: “No true Latter-day Saint, while physically or emotionally able, will voluntarily shift the burden of his own or his family’s well-being to someone else” (Ensign, May 1978, 86) (CR, October 1978, 86).

We thus learn that entitlement mentality is a sin.

31 Now, I, the Lord, am not well pleased with the inhabitants of Zion, for there are idlers among them; and their children are also growing up in wickedness; they also seek not earnestly the riches of eternity, but their eyes are full of greediness.

32 These things ought not to be, and must be done away from among them; wherefore, let my servant Oliver Cowdery carry these sayings unto the land of Zion.

verse 32 “These things ought not to be” Such sins are below the celestial standard, and “And Zion cannot be built up unless it is by the principles of the law of the celestial kingdom; otherwise I cannot receive her unto myself” (D&C 105:5).

33 And a commandment I give unto them—that he that observeth not his prayers before the Lord in the season thereof, let him be had in remembrance before the judge of my people.

verse 33 “in the season thereof” The Lord commands that we should pray at the appropriate times (“in the season thereof”) and if we neglect our prayers, the common judge, the ward bishop, should know. These appropriate times are not spelled out exactly for us, but they probably ought to include daily personal prayers, daily family prayers, and regular prayers of thanks for specific blessings. To neglect our prayers at their proper times, perhaps especially our prayers of thanks, is an offense to God (D&C 59:21).

34 These sayings are true and faithful; wherefore, transgress them not, neither take therefrom.

verse 34 “These sayings are true and faithful” One meaning of the adjective faithful is that which can be trusted or relied upon.

35 Behold, I am Alpha and Omega, and I come quickly. Amen.

verse 35 “I am Alpha and Omega” See the commentary on D&C 19:1.

Sections 69 and 70 Book of Commandments

The history written by the Prophet Joseph states that four special conferences were held from the first through the twelfth of November, 1831, in Hiram, Ohio. It was decided on November 1, the first day of the first conference, that Oliver Cowdery would carry a copy of the revelations to Jackson County, Missouri, to be printed. Between sessions on that day, Joseph Smith received section 1 of the Doctrine and Covenants, “The Lord’s Preface, a Voice of Warning.” Still later in the day, Joseph received section 67, and some time on that same day or early the next day, November 2, the testimony of the elders to be published with the Book of Commandments was also received by revelation. On November 2, Joseph received section 68 after inquiring of the Lord in behalf of Orson Hyde and three others. On November 3, Joseph received an important revelation that was to complement the “preface,” or section 1. This was section 133, the “appendix” to the Book of Commandments. The reader may wish to study section 133 at this point, or both sections 1 and 133 to appreciate them in proper chronological order.

Some time between November 3 and 12, during the series of special conferences held at the home of John Johnson in Hiram, Joseph also received section 69, which directed John Whitmer to be a traveling companion for Oliver Cowdery. Joseph Smith stated, “The Book of Commandments and Revelations was to be dedicated by prayer to the service of Almighty God by me; and after I had done this, I inquired of the Lord concerning these things, and received the following” (HC, 1:234)—section 69.

On the last day of the series of conferences held between November 1 and 12 in Hiram, the Prophet received the revelation now numbered as section 70. He recorded these events as follows: “My time was occupied closely in reviewing the commandments and setting in conference, for nearly two weeks; for from the first to the twelfth of November we held four special conferences. In the last, which was held at Brother Johnson’s, in Hiram, after deliberate consideration, in consequence of the book of revelations, now to be printed, being the foundation of the Church in these last days, and a benefit to the world, showing that the keys of the mysteries of the kingdom of our Savior are again entrusted to man; and the riches of eternity within the compass of those who are willing to live by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God—therefore the conference voted that they prize the revelations to be worth to the Church the riches of the whole earth, speaking temporally. The great benefits to the world which result from the Book of Mormon and the revelations which the Lord has seen fit in his infinite wisdom to grant unto us for our salvation, and for the salvation of all that will believe, were duly appreciated; and in answer to an inquiry, I received the following [section 70]” (HC, 1:235-36).

The business of the conference on November 12 had included a proposal to provide compensation to the Prophet Joseph and to his scribes Oliver Cowdery, Martin Harris, John Whitmer, and Sidney Rigdon for their labors and sacrifices in receiving, writing, copying, and preparing the revelations of God for the Church. This compensation would come out of any proceeds from the sale of the revelations. The conference voted to sustain this proposal, and Joseph's subsequent inquiry of the Lord appears to have been designed to secure divine approval for what the conference had done. That approval was received as section 70.

This revelation established what was essentially the first scripture committee of the Church. It created a joint stewardship over the modern scriptures, which included the Prophet, his scribes, and the church printer, W. W. Phelps. This joint stewardship or oversight committee was responsible for any plans or decisions involving the revelations. They were responsible for publishing them to the world, and they were to be compensated for their labors from whatever profits the sale of copies generated. This joint stewardship and financial partnership, organized upon the principles of the law of consecration, soon came to be known as the Literary Firm, a term reflecting its stewardship over the media concerns of the Church (see Cook, Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 112-17).

1 Hearken unto me, saith the Lord your God, for my servant Oliver Cowdery's sake. It is not wisdom in me that he should be entrusted with the commandments and the moneys which he shall carry unto the land of Zion, except one go with him who will be true and faithful.

verse 1 "the commandments and the moneys" Oliver was carrying the manuscript of the Book of Commandments that was to be published in Missouri and also the funds collected from the saints in Ohio and elsewhere for purchasing lands in Jackson County. The manuscript was to be delivered to W. W. Phelps, the church printer, and the money was to be delivered to Bishop Edward Partridge.

2 Wherefore, I, the Lord, will that my servant, John Whitmer, should go with my servant Oliver Cowdery; verses 1-2 It should not be taken from verse 1 that Oliver was untrustworthy. The fact was that much of the one-thousand mile journey between Hiram and Independence was through frontier country where lawless people and lawlessness prevailed. It was at considerable risk that a person traveled through such country, especially when alone and carrying money. It was wisdom, then, for the safety of Oliver, the money, and the sacred manuscripts, that someone go with him that could function as a "true and faithful" companion. Hence in verse 2 John Whitmer is appointed to accompany him (B.H. Roberts, Comprehensive History of the Church, 1:268n.)

“John Whitmer” John was one of the Eight Witnesses to the Book of Mormon. He had seen and handled the gold plates and had moved from New York to Ohio in obedience to the command of the Lord. In March 1831, John had been appointed church historian (see section 47). Now he is appointed to travel to Missouri as a companion to Oliver Cowdery. John was not released as church historian at this time, however, and he was to keep a record of the events and continue his history as best he could (see verse 3).

3 And also that he shall continue in writing and making a history of all the important things which he shall observe and know concerning my church;

4 And also that he receive counsel and assistance from my servant Oliver Cowdery and others.

5 And also, my servants who are abroad in the earth should send forth the accounts of their stewardships to the land of Zion;

6 For the land of Zion shall be a seat and a place to receive and do all these things.

verses 5-6 Even though the Prophet lived in Ohio, matters dealing with consecration and stewardship were to be administered from Zion in Jackson County, where Bishop Partridge was still the only bishop in the Church and the only one authorized to receive and disburse under the law of consecration.

7 Nevertheless, let my servant John Whitmer travel many times from place to place, and from church to church, that he may the more easily obtain knowledge—verse 7 As church historian in an age before electronic communication, John Whitmer was to travel from place to place in the Church learning and recording what he could for future generations.

8 Preaching and expounding, writing, copying, selecting, and obtaining all things which shall be for the good of the church, and for the rising generations that shall grow up on the land of Zion, to possess it from generation to generation, forever and ever. Amen.

verse 8 “Preaching and expounding, writing, copying, selecting, and obtaining” The church historian was not merely to be a clerk or a secretary. John Whitmer’s calling was to bless those whom he visited in his travels by preaching and expounding the gospel, and he was entrusted with selecting and preserving those materials that would bless the whole Church for generations to come.

In the spirit of keeping histories, each of us has the obligation to keep our own journal and personal history. Regarding the need for each church member to keep a journal, President Spencer Kimball counseled:

Your own private journal should record the way you face up to challenges that beset you. Do not suppose life changes so much that your experiences will not be interesting to your posterity. . . . Your own journal, like most others, will tell of problems as old as the world and how you dealt with them. Your journal should contain your true self rather than a picture of you when you are “made up” for a public performance. . . . The truth should be told, but we should not accentuate the negative. . . . Your journal is your autobiography, so it should be kept carefully. You are unique, and there may be incidents in your experience that are more noble and praiseworthy in their way than those recorded in any other life. . . . Your story should be written now while it is fresh and while the true details are available. . . . What could you do better for your children and your children’s children than to record the story of your life, your triumphs over adversity, your recovery after a fall, your progress when all seemed black, your rejoicing when you had finally achieved? Some of what you write may be humdrum dates and places, but there will also be rich passages that will be quoted by your posterity. Get a notebook, my young folks, a journal that will last through all time, and maybe the angels may quote from it for eternity. . . . Remember, the Savior chastised those who failed to record important events (“The Angels May Quote from It,” New Era, October 1975, 4-5).

In section 70 the Lord will announce that he has made Joseph, Oliver, Martin Harris, John Whitmer, Sidney Rigdon, and William W. Phelps stewards of the Book of Commandments and other printed revelations, and that an accounting of the stewardship of these brethren will be required of them in the day of judgment. Not only are these brethren held responsible for the care of the revelations but also for the printing, distribution, and sale of the book after it is printed. These brethren are also to receive compensation from the sale of the book to the extent of “their necessities and their wants.” The surplus will be given to the bishop’s storehouse. In effect the Lord organized these six brethren into a mini-United Order or the so-called Literary Firm. Their stewardship is the Book of Commandments, the Book of Mormon, and other revelations yet to be received, including Joseph’s inspired version of the Bible, if it should ever be published.

In the future this same group of elders will be appointed to be the board of directors of the United Order of the entire Church and they, and three other elders, will come to be called the “United Firm” or the “Order of Enoch”—that group of nine elders that directly supervised all activities related to the law of consecration.

Section 70

1 Behold, and hearken, O ye inhabitants of Zion, and all ye people of my church who are afar off, and hear the word of the Lord which I give unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and also unto my servant Martin Harris, and also unto my servant Oliver Cowdery, and also unto my servant John Whitmer, and also unto my servant Sidney Rigdon, and also unto my servant William W. Phelps, by the way of commandment unto them.

verse 1 “also unto my servant William W. Phelps” The Hiram conference had originally proposed that only the Prophet and his scribes be included in the joint stewardship over the scriptures. The Lord here adds the name of the church printer, W. W. Phelps, to this list.

2 For I give unto them a commandment; wherefore hearken and hear, for thus saith the Lord unto them—verse 2 “I give unto them a commandment” “Them” refers to the newly formed Literary Firm.

3 I, the Lord, have appointed them, and ordained them to be stewards over the revelations and commandments which I have given unto them, and which I shall hereafter give unto them;

verse 3 “stewards over the revelations and commandments” Where other stewards might be given farms or retail stores, the Literary Firm had been given management of the modern revelations and church publishing. If the stewards fulfilled this responsibility, they might at the same time generate revenues out of which they could support themselves and their families.

What is a “steward”? Stewardship is not ownership. Rather it is management with a responsibility to account to the owner or master. The basic principle was taught by the Lord when he said: “I, the Lord, stretched out the heavens, and built the earth, my very handiwork; and all things therein are mine. . . . Behold, all these properties are mine . . . and if the properties are mine, then ye are stewards; otherwise ye are no stewards” (D&C 104:14, 55-56).

4 And an account of this stewardship will I require of them in the day of judgment.

verse 4 Every person who receives a calling or has responsibility in the kingdom of God operates under this same condition. God will require an accounting at our hands of all that he has given us, whatever our stewardship may be.

5 Wherefore, I have appointed unto them, and this is their business in the church of God, to manage them and the concerns thereof, yea, the benefits thereof.

6 Wherefore, a commandment I give unto them, that they shall not give these things unto the church, neither unto the world;

verse 6 “they shall not give these things unto the church, neither unto the world” “These things” refer to “the benefits thereof” in the previous verse. These are the monetary proceeds from the sale of the scriptures. These moneys were to be kept by these brethren and used for their own needs.

7 Nevertheless, inasmuch as they receive more than is needful for their necessities and their wants, it shall be given into my storehouse;

verse 7 A fundamental principle of the law of consecration and stewardship is that any excess income generated by a steward, whether in the form of money or goods is referred to as a “residual” and is given to the bishop to be placed in the storehouse.

8 And the benefits shall be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion, and unto their generations, inasmuch as they become heirs according to the laws of the kingdom.

verse 8 “the benefits shall be consecrated unto the inhabitants of Zion, and unto their generations” The law of consecration and stewardship was not intended to be a one-generation-only project. All succeeding generations would be included, and each new family unit would be provided a stewardship. Hence any family in the present generation who generates a residue will benefit not only others of his own generation but those of succeeding generations.

“inasmuch as they become heirs according to the law of the kingdom” “They” refers to subsequent generations who participate in the law of consecration and stewardship begun by their ancestors. If the law of consecration and stewardship is successful, then these participants of the second and third generations are indeed heirs or beneficiaries of the prior generations.

9 Behold, this is what the Lord requires of every man in his stewardship, even as I, the Lord, have appointed or shall hereafter appoint unto any man.

10 And behold, none are exempt from this law who belong to the church of the living God;

verse 10 “none are exempt from this law” This expression refers to the law of consecration, which is but a part of the larger law of the Church. There is no member who is exempt from the principles of the law of consecration, including the leaders of the Church and those who administer the affairs of the law (see verse 11).

11 Yea, neither the bishop, neither the agent who keepeth the Lord’s storehouse, neither he who is appointed in a stewardship over temporal things.

verse 11 All must participate as equals in the law of consecration and stewardship, including even the bishop and his agent.

12 He who is appointed to administer spiritual things, the same is worthy of his hire, even as those who are appointed to a stewardship to administer in temporal things;

verse 12 It does not matter whether one's stewardship is to manage a farm or to manage publication of the revelations of God for the Church, the principles of consecration remain the same. All must participate on the same footing.

13 Yea, even more abundantly, which abundance is multiplied unto them through the manifestations of the Spirit.

verse 13 Those called upon to manage a stewardship over spiritual things do have some advantage over those whose stewardship is purely temporal. They may enjoy spiritual blessings directly as a result of their stewardship over spiritual things over and above those whose stewardship is purely temporal.

14 Nevertheless, in your temporal things you shall be equal, and this not grudgingly, otherwise the abundance of the manifestations of the Spirit shall be withheld.

verse 14 Even though a spiritual stewardship might produce more immediate spiritual benefits, this verse reminds those managing a spiritual stewardship that they are just like every other participant in the law of consecration relative to temporal things. They must participate as equals with all other participants. To be "equals" is for each to have according to his needs.

15 Now, this commandment I give unto my servants for their benefit while they remain, for a manifestation of my blessings upon their heads, and for a reward of their diligence and for their security; verses 12-15 These verses were probably intended by the Lord largely to remind all participants in the law of consecration and stewardship that those members of the Literary Firm required temporal support even though they are commanded to confine their efforts to spiritual matters. Those with spiritual stewardships may contribute little in the way of temporal goods to the storehouse.

verse 15 "this commandment" This expression refers to section 70. It is given specifically for the temporal benefit of those members of the Literary Firm. One can only imagine how the words of approval and blessing contained herein would have been received by the Prophet and his associates who had left all, given all, and suffered much to serve the Lord up to this point. These verses constitute a richly deserved divine commendation and approbation for the members of the Literary Firm, and they provide a fitting closure to the labors of the brethren in preparing the revelations for publication.

16 For food and for raiment; for an inheritance; for houses and for lands, in whatsoever circumstances I, the Lord, shall place them, and whithersoever I, the Lord, shall send them.

17 For they have been faithful over many things, and have done well inasmuch as they have not sinned.

18 Behold, I, the Lord, am merciful and will bless them, and they shall enter into the joy of these things. Even so. Amen.

Oliver Cowdery and John Whitmer left Ohio on November 20, 1831, with a copy of the revelations. They also took with them monies that had been contributed for the building up of the Church in Missouri. They traveled by way of Winchester, Indiana, where Levi Hancock and Zebedee Coltrin had established a branch of the Church the previous summer. Oliver and John held conference meetings in Winchester and stayed for about a week while they resolved some difficulties in the branch. They arrived in Independence on January 5, 1832.

Brief Historical Setting

1831 December

By December 1831, anti-Mormon feelings in Ohio were warming to a boil, and the Lord recommended a surprising solution. He counseled Joseph and Sidney to leave on a brief mission to the surrounding townships, and while there challenge the Church's detractors to open debate [D&C 71 and 73 - Debate the Enemy]. This seemed to temporarily sooth the feelings building against the Church.

Since Bishop Edward Partridge was now in Missouri, it became necessary to call a second bishop to preside over the United Order in Kirtland. This was done by revelation in December 1831 [D&C 72 - Newell K. Whitney Called as Second Bishop].

Sections 71 and 73 Debate the Enemy

The antagonism that had blossomed against the Church by December 1831 was partly the result of the inflammatory anti-Mormon letters written by the apostate Ezra Booth which were printed in a local newspaper, the Ohio Star in Ravenna, Ohio (see the character vignette on Ezra Booth at the end of section 52). Ezra Booth was the former Methodist minister and friend of John Johnson, on whose farm Joseph and Sidney were staying in Hiram. Booth joined the Church after seeing Joseph heal the lame arm of John Johnson's wife Elsa. A short time later, Joseph successfully rebuked an evil spirit that had overcome Ezra. Booth was ordained a high priest in June and was one of the missionaries sent to Missouri that month with Isaac Morley (see D&C 52:23). He became disillusioned after finding that his priesthood did not give him the power to "smite" men and make them believe. On his mission in Missouri he also expected to see more miracles, and he was disappointed that Zion was not founded immediately. The Prophet later wrote of these anti-Mormon letters authored by Booth. He said that they "by their coloring, falsity, and vain calculations to overthrow the work of the Lord, exposed his [Booth's] weakness, wickedness, and folly, and left him a monument of his own shame for the world to wonder at" (HC, 1:217).

Also, Simonds Ryder was an associate of Ezra Booth, and the two of them had begun to stir up anti-Mormon feelings in northeastern Ohio by speaking in public meetings. These two were not the first to leave the Church, but they were the most vicious to date, and they were the first to publicly campaign against their former friends.

Since moving to Hiram, Ohio, in September 1831, Joseph and Sidney had spent considerable time working on Joseph's inspired revision of the King James Bible. On December 1, 1831, however, the Lord gave a revelation to Joseph and Sidney (section 71) commanding them to pause in their "translation," and he sent them on a brief mission "for a season" into the surrounding communities to preach and expound the gospel according to the spirit of the Holy Ghost he promised them. The apparent purpose of this limited mission was to confront and confound their "enemies" and thereby calm and sooth the feelings building up against the Church. It would seem that it is sometimes wise to avoid criticisms leveled at the Church, and at other times it is wise to meet them head on. This was one of those latter times.

1 Behold, thus saith the Lord unto you my servants Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon, that the time has verily come that it is necessary and expedient in me that you should open your mouths in proclaiming my gospel, the things of the kingdom, expounding the mysteries thereof out of the scriptures, according to that portion of Spirit and power which shall be given unto you, even as I will.

verse 1 “the time has verily come” These were unusual circumstances, as Joseph and Sidney are called by the Lord to do something uncharacteristic of missionaries of the restored gospel in this final dispensation. They are called to confront and neutralize the influence of apostate anti-Mormons who were making it difficult to preach the gospel.

“expounding the mysteries thereof out of the scriptures” A “mystery” is an eternal truth that cannot be known except through personal revelation received through the Spirit of God. All of the eternal truths of the gospel are mysteries until an individual has developed a desire to learn them and has prayed to receive them.

2 Verily I say unto you, proclaim unto the world in the regions round about, and in the church also, for the space of a season, even until it shall be made known unto you.

verse 2 “in the regions round about” This applies to northeast Ohio.

“and in the church also” Unfortunately, some of the saints appear also to have been affected by the accusations of the apostates and needed to hear the truth from Joseph and Sidney.

3 Verily this is a mission for a season, which I give unto you.

verse 3 “a mission for a season” This was not a normal proselyting mission. It was a special call to improve public relations and build up the image of the Church in Ohio, which will last until the immediate problem is solved.

4 Wherefore, labor ye in my vineyard. Call upon the inhabitants of the earth, and bear record, and prepare the way for the commandments and revelations which are to come.

verse 4 “the commandments and revelations which are to come” One might assume, with the publication of the Book of Commandments, that all the revelations the Lord intends for our dispensation have been received. But this is not so. Articles of Faith 1:9 teaches, “We believe all that God has revealed, all that He does now reveal, and we believe that He will yet reveal many great and important things pertaining to the Kingdom of God.”

5 Now, behold this is wisdom; whoso readeth, let him understand and receive also; verses 7-10 In these verses the Lord specifically commands that Joseph and Sidney call upon their detractors and invite them to debate, either in public or in private. The Lord then promises them that if they are faithful, the “enemy” will be confounded.

This revelation was received December 1, 1831. Joseph recorded: “From this time until the 8th or 10th of January, 1832, myself and Elder Rigdon continued to preach in Shalersville, Ravenna, and other places, setting forth the truth, vindicating the cause of our Redeemer; showing that the day of vengeance was coming upon this generation like a thief in the night; that prejudice, blindness and darkness filled the minds of many, and caused them to persecute the true Church, and reject the true light; by which means we did much towards allaying the excited feelings which were growing out of the scandalous letters then being published in the Ohio Star, at Ravenna, by the before-mentioned apostate, Ezra Booth” (HC, 1:241).

The December 20, 1831, Painesville Telegraph stated that “Sidney Rigdon, the vice-regent [deputy] and champion of Jo. Smith, has thrown out a challenge, in the Ohio Star, to Mr. Booth and Deacon Ryder, who have renounced the Mormon faith, to meet him in mortal combat (of words) on the subject of the Gold Bible.” Ryder refused the invitation. Sidney Rigdon wrote a letter, published in the Ohio Star on January 12, 1832, in which he charged: “Symonds, like the worker of iniquity, has sought a hiding place. Let the public remember, when he goes forth again to proclaim his assertions against the Book of Mormon, that he has been invited upon honorable principles to investigate its merits, and dares not do it.”

7 Wherefore, confound your enemies; call upon them to meet you both in public and in private; and inasmuch as ye are faithful their shame shall be made manifest.

verse 7 “confound your enemies” To confound means to contradict or refute; to put to shame; or to defeat. It should be pointed out that this is not the usual policy of the Church, and this course of action was undertaken at this time only under the explicit command of the Lord and for a specific reason. Normally, there is no good reason to include or to invite the enemies of God to participate with us in the work of God. We are commanded to preach the gospel to the pure in heart—not to contend, argue, or debate with the impure in heart (see 3 Nephi 11:29-30).

8 Wherefore, let them bring forth their strong reasons against the Lord.

9 Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you—there is no weapon that is formed against you shall prosper; verses 8-9 Elder Heber J. Grant, in general conference, said:

Our enemies have never done anything that has injured this work of God, and they never will. I look around, I read, I reflect, and I ask the question, Where are the men of influence, of power and prestige, who have worked against the Latter-day Saints? Where is the reputation, for honor and courage, of the governors of Missouri and Illinois . . . ? Where are there people to do them honor? They cannot be found. . . . Where are the men who have assailed this work? Where is their influence? They have faded away like dew before the sun. . . . We need have no fears, we Latter-day Saints. God will continue to sustain this work; He will sustain the right. If we are loyal, if we are true, if we are worthy of this Gospel, of which God has given us a testimony, there is no danger that the world can ever injure us. We can never be injured, my brethren and sisters, by any mortals, except ourselves (CR, April 1909, 110).

President Harold B. Lee also taught: “No weapon formed against the work of the Lord will ever prosper, but all glory and majesty of this work, that the Lord gave, will long be remembered after those who have tried to befoul the name of the Church and those of its leaders will be forgotten, and their works will follow after them. We feel sorry for them when we see these things happen” (CR, October 1973, 167).

10 And if any man lift his voice against you he shall be confounded in mine own due time.

11 Wherefore, keep my commandments; they are true and faithful. Even so. Amen.

In obedience to this call, Joseph and Sidney left Hiram on December 3rd and went forth to Kirtland, Shalersville, Ravenna, and other places preaching boldly the truth and calling on their detractors to come out to meet them face to face. By this means it was intended that the scandalous accusations of the “enemy” might be exposed as false. With the help of the Spirit, they were able to confound their detractors, as the latter were unable to substantiate their falsehoods and were surprised by this sudden challenge so boldly given. Some of the anti-Mormon prejudice was allayed, at least for a time, and some friends and converts were made through this approach.

Section 71 probably helped set a pattern of missionary work that evolved in the early days of the Church—that of going into a town and challenging a prominent local minister to a public debate in a local hall. In those days a missionary wasn’t worth his salt if he couldn’t hold his own in public debate. Some of our early great church leaders were skillful debaters, and the skill of the likes of John Taylor and B. H. Roberts is legendary. Many converts were made as nonmembers watched these debates. Our current missionary approach is not to confront or debate or argue, as it is now considered generally a waste of time to do so.

By the time section 73 was received on January 10th, 1832, Joseph and Sidney had been on their mission for almost six weeks. They had publicly met their critics and had done much to improve the popular image and perceptions of the Church. In section 73, the Lord commanded Joseph and Sidney to terminate their mini-mission and return to Hiram and to their revision of the Bible. Concerning this moment in the history of the Church, the Prophet wrote: “On the 10th of January, I received the following revelation [section 73] making known the will of the Lord concerning the Elders of the Church until the convening of the next conference” (HC, 1:241). The earliest known manuscript of section 73 contains the following notation in the handwriting of Sidney Rigdon: “A Revelation to Joseph and Sidney. The word of the Lord unto them concerning the Elders of the church of the Living God established in the last days, making known the will of the Lord unto the Elders—what they shall do until conference” (cited in Woodford, Historical Development of the Doctrine and Covenants, 1:903). The conference referred to here will be held on January 25, 1832, in Amherst, Ohio, about fifty miles west of Kirtland.

1 For verily, thus saith the Lord, it is expedient in me that they should continue preaching the gospel, and in exhortation to the churches in the regions round about, until conference;

verse 1 “it is expedient in me that they should continue preaching the gospel” The second verse of this section refers to the conference of elders that was planned for January 25, 1832. Several of the elders anticipated new mission calls at that conference. These elders wondered what to do while waiting for the conference. In verse 1, the Lord tells them to make good use of their time and continue preaching in the “regions round about” until they are reassigned.

2 And then, behold, it shall be made known unto them, by the voice of the conference, their several missions.

verse 2 “by the voice of the conference” In the years before the organization of the priesthood quorums, church business was often conducted and church assignments made by a process of proposal and sustaining vote in special priesthood conferences like the one to take place at Amherst.

3 Now, verily I say unto you my servants, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon, saith the Lord, it is expedient to translate again; verse 3 “it is expedient to translate again” The Lord here, of course, refers to Joseph and Sidney’s work on the Joseph Smith translation (see the supplemental article, Joseph Smith’s Inspired Revision of the Bible—The JST). Although the word “translate” implies the use of ancient texts and ancient languages, Joseph’s work was to provide additional revelatory information—additional scripture—by the power of the Spirit and not by scholarly re-interpretation. Later the Prophet would study Hebrew and German, but any knowledge of languages that he would obtain was not involved in his inspired revision of the Bible.

4 And, inasmuch as it is practicable, to preach in the regions round about until conference; and after that it is expedient to continue the work of translation until it be finished.

verse 4 “to preach in the regions round about until conference” Joseph and Sidney are commanded both to translate and to continue their missionary preaching until conference. After the Amherst conference, however, they were to devote their full time specifically to their work on the JST.

“until it be finished” The Prophet continued to work vigorously on the JST from this time until July 2, 1833, when the first draft of his work was finished, and he ceased formal labor on the JST. He continued making revisions in the text, however, from time to time until his death in 1844. It would be difficult to overestimate the benefits and influence of the JST on the doctrinal education of the Prophet and of the Church. In particular, the eighteen months between January 1832—the Amherst conference—and June of 1833 were richly productive. Twenty-three sections of the Doctrine and Covenants were received during that time (sections 73 through 96).

5 And let this be a pattern unto the elders until further knowledge, even as it is written.

verse 5 “let this be a pattern” From this point on when the elders collectively wonder about the Lord’s will for them, let them continue doing their duty and wait to learn his will through the Prophet and other leaders at their scheduled conferences. This remains a pattern for the priesthood holders of the Church today.

6 Now I give no more unto you at this time. Gird up your loins and be sober. Even so. Amen.

Section 72 Newell K. Whitney Called as Second Bishop

On the fourth day of December 1831, while the Prophet and Sidney Rigdon were engaged in their assigned mission refuting their enemies, they took time out for a meeting of the elders which was called in Kirtland, Ohio. At this meeting, the Lord gave an important revelation—section 72. Remember that in December of 1831, Edward Partridge was fulfilling his office as bishop of the Church in Missouri.

In D&C 68:14, which had been received a month before this revelation, the Lord had indicated that “other bishops” besides Edward Partridge would be set apart in the future. In Section 72 the Lord declares that it is now expedient that a bishop be called to serve in the Kirtland area. Newell K. Whitney is called by the Lord as the second bishop of the Church. See his character vignette following the discussion of section 40. See also the commentary for section 41.

Another purpose of section 72 was to reveal the nature of the relationship of the two bishops of the Church. Will they be co-equal? Will one preside over the other? Note in verses 5 and 6 that the bishop in Kirtland is to report to the bishop in Zion. Thus, Bishop Whitney is to function under the direction of Bishop Partridge. This relationship perhaps forms the earliest beginnings of the concept of the presiding bishop.

The duties of the bishop are outlined in verses 9 through 14. It should be kept in mind that in December 1831 the only bishops in the Church were the two bishops in the United Order. There were no ward bishops or presiding bishops. Thus the Lord’s instructions here apply primarily to bishops in the United Order, though we commonly extrapolate and apply this counsel to all bishops in the Church today. Perhaps this is a justifiable application, but we need to be cautious as we make it.

Note also in verses 17 through 19 and in verse 25, a new concept. The Church is growing so rapidly that Edward Partridge cannot possibly know everyone in the Church. Thus, from now on when anyone goes from Ohio to Zion, they must carry a “certificate” from Bishop Whitney to Bishop Partridge introducing the member to Bishop Partridge as a member in good standing. Today in the Church our computerized membership record serves the same function. We also occasionally use, for this purpose, our temple recommend or the more specific “recommend to perform an ordinance.”

It is interesting that section 72 is really a compilation of two revelations received on the same day. The original manuscripts for them are separate, even though they are both in the handwriting of Sidney Rigdon. The first revelation comprised what is now verses 1 through 8 (note that verse 8 ends with “amen”). This revelation called Newell K. Whitney to be the bishop. Recall that at the time of this revelation he was already functioning as the bishop’s agent in Kirtland. The second revelation instructed Bishop

Whitney in his duties. In verse 8 the Lord told Joseph to call Brother Whitney. In verse 9 the Lord said that He would now explain the duties of the man who had already been chosen. The actual sequence, then, was as follows: The first eight verses were given, Newell K. Whitney was called, and then the remainder of the section was given.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 72:3-4 It is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and in eternity. For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for him of my Father.

1 Hearken, and listen to the voice of the Lord, O ye who have assembled yourselves together, who are the high priests of my church, to whom the kingdom and power have been given.

verse 1 “O ye . . . who are the high priests of my church” Although many elders and church members were present when this revelation was received, these instructions were directed specifically to the leadership of the Church, who alone could call and ordain a bishop in Kirtland.

2 For verily thus saith the Lord, it is expedient in me for a bishop to be appointed unto you, or of you, unto the church in this part of the Lord’s vineyard.

verse 2 The first bishop of the Church, Edward Partridge (see D&C 41:9), had moved to Jackson County, Missouri, the previous summer, but the majority of the saints still lived in Ohio and the East. Someone else needed to be called to serve the Church as bishop in the Kirtland area.

3 And verily in this thing ye have done wisely, for it is required of the Lord, at the hand of every steward, to render an account of his stewardship, both in time and in eternity.

4 For he who is faithful and wise in time is accounted worthy to inherit the mansions prepared for him of my Father.

verses 3-4 In 1831 the concept of stewardship had a specific meaning. A stewardship consisted of those materials taken from the bishop’s storehouse and given to a man and his family by the bishop. With this stewardship the man would work and provide for his family and contribute the excess of his production back to the storehouse. He had the obligation to regularly account for his stewardship and his use of it to the bishop.

Do you the reader, in this twenty-first century, have a stewardship for which you are accountable? Each individual brings into this world an array of abilities earned by diligent effort in the premortal world. As we cross into mortality, the veil blunts our memory of these abilities. Until we discern them and begin to re-define and re-develop them, they lie dormant as untapped “talents” or “gifts.” Each person is responsible to seek after and discover these latent proclivities. The Spirit of the Lord is willing and anxious and able to reveal them to you if you will but make it a matter of earnest seeking and prayer. You will be drawn to them. The areas in which your “talents” lie will become uniquely attractive and appealing to you. These dormant gifts will be of no use to you or to others lest you bring them out into the light and work assiduously to develop and improve and polish them. A secular philosopher, Ralph Waldo Emerson, knew of this important truth and provided us with insight concerning it:

Each man has his own vocation. The talent is the call. There is one direction in which all space is open to him. He has faculties silently inviting him thither to endless exertion. He is like a ship in a river; he runs against obstructions on every side but one; on that side all obstruction is taken away, and he sweeps serenely over a deepening channel into an infinite sea. . . . He inclines to do something which is easy to him and good when it is done, but which no other man can do. He has no rival. For the more truly he consults his own powers, the more difference will his work exhibit from the work of another (Essay on “spiritual laws.”)

Our obligation, then, is to discover and enlarge upon our “stewardships” and then put them to use in serving our fellow men and to contributing uniquely to the kingdom of God on earth.

5 Verily I say unto you, the elders of the church in this part of my vineyard shall render an account of their stewardship unto the bishop, who shall be appointed of me in this part of my vineyard.

6 These things shall be had on record, to be handed over unto the bishop in Zion.

verses 5-6 Note that the bishop in Ohio (“in this part of my vineyard”) was to report to the bishop in Missouri (“Zion”). Thus Edward Partridge in Missouri was, in a sense, the presiding bishop (see also verse 13). When Bishop Partridge died in Nauvoo in May 1840, Newell K. Whitney became the presiding bishop.

7 And the duty of the bishop shall be made known by the commandments which have been given, and the voice of the conference.

verse 7 Some portions of a bishop’s duties had already been revealed (see, for example, D&C 41:9-10; 42:31-36, 71-73, 80-83; 46:27-29; 51:3-20; 57:15-16; 58:55; 64:40; 68:15-24). Additional instructions will yet be received in this revelation (see verses 9-26).

8 And now, verily I say unto you, my servant Newel K. Whitney is the man who shall be appointed and ordained unto this power. This is the will of the Lord your God, your Redeemer. Even so. Amen.

verse 8 It is of interest that Orson F. Whitney described Newell Whitney's reaction to verse 8:

Newell K. Whitney, staggering under the weight of the responsibility that was about to be placed upon him, said to the Prophet: "Brother Joseph, I can't see a bishop in myself." No, but God could see it in him. He was a natural bishop—a first class man of affairs. Probably no other incumbent of that important office . . . has been better qualified for it than Newell K. Whitney. But he could not see it, and he shrank from the responsibility. The Prophet answered: "Go and ask the Lord about it." And Newell did ask the Lord, and he heard a voice from heaven say: "Thy strength is in me." That was enough. He accepted the office, and served in it faithfully to the end of his days—a period of eighteen years (CR, June 1919, 47-48).

9 The word of the Lord, in addition to the law which has been given, making known the duty of the bishop who has been ordained unto the church in this part of the vineyard, which is verily this—verses 10-17 Four major responsibilities of a bishop are discussed in these verses. Though these instructions are intended specifically for Bishop Newell K. Whitney functioning as a bishop in a united order, we can easily extrapolate them and apply them to bishops in the Church today. First, the bishop administers the Lord's storehouse, receiving and disbursing church funds and other resources for his area (verses 10-11). Second, he evaluates and keeps track of the financial performance of individual stewards in his area (verses 11, 13, 16). Third, the bishop is responsible for the temporal welfare of the members in his area, particularly the poor and the needy (verse 12). Fourth, the bishop serves as a judge in Israel. He has the responsibility of judging and certifying the worthiness of members in his jurisdiction (see also D&C 107:68-74).

10 To keep the Lord's storehouse; to receive the funds of the church in this part of the vineyard;

11 To take an account of the elders as before has been commanded; and to administer to their wants, who shall pay for that which they receive, inasmuch as they have wherewith to pay;

verse 11 "To take an account of the elders" The bishop interviews individual stewards and functions as an accountant or administrator in keeping track of their surpluses or their shortfalls. While the primary focus in this verse is financial, bishops properly monitor and note the progress, successes, and failures of their ward members in matters both temporal and spiritual.

"and to administer to their wants" See D&C 42:33 and its commentary.

“who shall pay for that which they receive” The bishop's storehouse in Kirtland was Newel K. Whitney's store. Financially self-sufficient stewards were expected to purchase their goods at the Whitney store, and the profits from these sales were used for the good of the poor and needy (see verse 12).

12 That this also may be consecrated to the good of the church, to the poor and needy.

verse 12 “That this also may be consecrated to the good of the church” This phrase refers to the profits referred to in the commentary for the previous verse.

13 And he who hath not wherewith to pay, an account shall be taken and handed over to the bishop of Zion, who shall pay the debt out of that which the Lord shall put into his hands.

verse 13 “an account shall be taken” When local stewards require financial help from the bishop's storehouse, they receive that help from their local bishop and the resources at his disposal. A bill for the debt, however, is then to be forwarded to the bishop in Zion who reimburses the local bishop. Thus, the system of consecration and stewardship was to be a church wide system with no local bishop bearing alone the burden of support for the needy members.

The present system of fast offerings, which are a type of consecration, still operates on a pattern similar to that revealed in these verses. First, local needs are met through local offerings. Then net surpluses or net shortfalls are forwarded to the Presiding Bishop of the Church for redistribution or for reimbursement, respectively.

“bishop of Zion, who shall pay the debt” How was the bishop in Zion to get the resources to reimburse the debts of local bishops? From what “the Lord shall put into his hands.” This would include surpluses forwarded to him from profitable stewards, money sent for purchase of lands in Zion, and profits from other church enterprises, of which he was the overseer.

14 And the labors of the faithful who labor in spiritual things, in administering the gospel and the things of the kingdom unto the church, and unto the world, shall answer the debt unto the bishop in Zion;

verse 14 “the faithful who labor in spiritual things” Who can the bishop in Zion turn to for the resources to pay church debts? To the leadership of the Church—to Joseph Smith and his associates—whose stewardship is not to farm or to manage stores, but to administer the affairs of the kingdom. Those who hold the kingdom's keys are ultimately responsible for the kingdom's finances.

15 Thus it cometh out of the church, for according to the law every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion.

verse 15 “it cometh out of the church” And where do Church leaders get the resources to pay church debts? From the cumulative faithfulness of all the Church’s members in paying their tithes and offerings and in otherwise observing the principles of consecration that they covenanted to observe,

“every man that cometh up to Zion must lay all things before the bishop in Zion” It is intended that only those who consecrated all their possessions to the Lord will be called to Zion (compare Acts 4:34-35; 5:1-4). All the saints in Zion are expected to consecrate all they have to the kingdom, thus providing the resources needed to answer the debts of the Church and to provide the resources needed for the continued growth of Zion.

16 And now, verily I say unto you, that as every elder in this part of the vineyard must give an account of his stewardship unto the bishop in this part of the vineyard—verse 16 “every elder in this part of the vineyard” Please recall that this revelation was given by the Lord to Joseph Smith when Joseph was in Kirtland. Thus, the expression “this part of the vineyard” refers to eastern part of the 1831 Kingdom of God that centered in Kirtland.

17 A certificate from the judge or bishop in this part of the vineyard, unto the bishop in Zion, rendereth every man acceptable, and answereth all things, for an inheritance, and to be received as a wise steward and as a faithful laborer;

verse 17 “A certificate from the judge or bishop in this part of the vineyard, unto the bishop in Zion” Here is the first mention in this dispensation of the “membership record.” Only those members in good standing with their own local bishop would be commended to the bishop in Zion. In today’s Church, membership records are kept to show a member’s standing in the Church. A bishop should not call a new member to a position of trust before receiving his or her church records or by otherwise confirming that member’s good standing.

In the early days of the Church, certificates or recommends (see verse 19) were issued by one bishop for the purpose of confirming good standing to another bishop. In this case the certificates or recommends were not used for entering the temples—there were no temples yet—but primarily for being accepted in full fellowship into the community of consecrated saints in Zion. When followed, this procedure made it difficult for dishonest individuals to receive land and other goods from the Church without first entering the covenant of consecration and otherwise proving worthy.

“for an inheritance” With a recommend from his local bishop, an individual could emigrate to Zion and receive a stewardship there.

18 Otherwise he shall not be accepted of the bishop of Zion.

verse 18 Going up to Zion was a sacred privilege (see verse 24), and only worthy, profitable stewards with recommends from their local bishop were allowed to go. Without a recommend the Ohio saints were not supposed to go, and were not to be received into fellowship or receive an inheritance there if they went on their own. The disobedience of many saints to these and other commandments, however, contributed to the failure to establish Zion in Jackson County.

19 And now, verily I say unto you, let every elder who shall give an account unto the bishop of the church in this part of the vineyard be recommended by the church or churches, in which he labors, that he may render himself and his accounts approved in all things.

20 And again, let my servants who are appointed as stewards over the literary concerns of my church have claim for assistance upon the bishop or bishops in all things—

verse 20 “stewards over the literary concerns of my church” See D&C 70:3. The obligation of the Literary Firm to consecrate their surplus to the bishop’s storehouse is spelled out in D&C 70:7-8. This verse in section 72 establishes the Literary Firm’s right to apply to the same storehouse for their support, if necessary—the same as with any other steward.

21 That the revelations may be published, and go forth unto the ends of the earth; that they also may obtain funds which shall benefit the church in all things;

22 That they also may render themselves approved in all things, and be accounted as wise stewards.

23 And now, behold, this shall be an ensample for all the extensive branches of my church, in whatsoever land they shall be established. And now I make an end of my sayings. Amen.

verse 23 “this shall be an ensample” The word ensample seems to mean “example.” This phrase refers to the working relationship between the presiding bishops Edward Partridge and Newel K. Whitney described in verses 9-23.

24 A few words in addition to the laws of the kingdom, respecting the members of the church—they that are appointed by the Holy Spirit to go up unto Zion, and they who are privileged to go up unto Zion—

25 Let them carry up unto the bishop a certificate from three elders of the church, or a certificate from the bishop;

verse 25 “a certificate from three elders of the church” Perhaps because of the logistical problems arising from having only one bishop outside Zion (Newel K. Whitney), the Lord amends the instructions given in verses 17-19 to allow certificates to be signed either by the bishop or by three worthy elders.

26 Otherwise he who shall go up unto the land of Zion shall not be accounted as a wise steward. This is also an ensample. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

1832 January

While living in the home of John Johnson in Hiram, Ohio, Joseph and Sidney spent much of their time working on the inspired revision of the King James Bible in a corner room of the Johnson home. As they translated they came to a passage in Paul's letter to the Corinthians. The Lord assisted them with the interpretation of the verse [D&C 74 - 1 Corinthians 7:14].

In January 1832, an important conference was held at Amherst, Ohio, during which Joseph was sustained as "President of the High Priesthood" of the Church, and several missionary pairs were called to serve missions in the eastern states [D&C 75 - Missionaries Called to the Eastern States]. Two months later Sidney Rigdon and Jesse Gause were called and ordained as Joseph's counselors. Brother Gause received a revelation calling him to the First Presidency [D&C 81 - Counselor in the First Presidency]. Brother Gause's name was removed from the revelation some time later (after he had left the Church in December 1832), and it was replaced by that of Frederick G. Williams who replaced him in the First Presidency in March of 1833 [D&C 90 - Reorganization of the First Presidency]. More missionaries were dispatched in the spring and summer of 1832 [D&C 79 and 80 - The Call to Preach].

Section 74 1 Corinthians 7:14

After nearly six weeks of preaching the gospel, confounding their critics, and repairing the Church's image in eastern Ohio, the prophet Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon were commanded, on January 10, 1832, to return to Hiram and resume their work on the translation of the Bible (see D&C 73:3-4). When Joseph and Sidney began translating again in an upstairs corner room of the Johnson farmhouse, one of the first texts they worked on was Paul's first letter to the Corinthians. When they came to 1 Corinthians 7:14, Joseph paused and inquired of the Lord. The saints in Corinth had asked Paul a question that probably went something like this: "Paul, I'm a new member of the Church. I love the gospel, and I have a testimony, but my husband (or wife) won't have anything to do with the Church. What am I supposed to do? Should I leave him (or her) and find another mate that will join the Church?"

Paul answers the question in 1 Corinthians 7:14. His answer, paraphrasing, is: No, do not separate. If you are a believer, your participation in the gospel will bring a sanctifying influence into your marriage. This sanctifying influence will also affect all of your children.

Another aspect of this problem at the time of Paul concerned the tension between the husband and the wife over the rearing of children. Often the husband was a Jew who believed in the Abrahamic covenant of circumcision (Genesis 17:1-14), while the wife was a Christian. For the Jew, any male child eight days of age was required to be circumcised as a sign that he was a son of Abraham and a member of God's covenant community. There was a feeling among the Jews that children were unholy without circumcision. What could be more serious for a believing Jew than to have his son grow up uncircumcised? On the other hand, the Christian wife believed that the necessity for circumcision was done away in Christ. Section 74 confirms the principle that through Christ, little children are whole and sinless and do not require circumcision at age eight days to remain so.

Section 74 is unique in that there are only three other sections in the Doctrine and Covenants that are exclusively dedicated to scripture interpretation—Sections 77 (the book of Revelation), 86 (the parable of the wheat and tares—Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43), and 113 (the book of Isaiah). Section 74 was received before the conference that was to convene on January 25th. Thus it was received between January 11th and January 25th.

Scripture Mastery

D&C 74 The Lord's explanation of 1 Corinthians 7:14

1 For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife, and the unbelieving wife is sanctified by the husband; else were your children unclean, but now are they holy.

verse 1 This verse is an exact quotation of 1 Corinthians 7:14 in the King James Bible. Again, this verse was written by Paul in the setting of a discussion of part member families (one spouse Christian and the other non-Christian—perhaps a Jew). Paul’s advice, which remains church policy today, was that such marriages should be continued if:

1. the nonmember will tolerate his or her spouse’s activity in the Church (see 1 Corinthians 7:12-13), and
2. the children of such unions are allowed by the unbelieving spouse to be reared in the Church as Christians and not in the synagogue as Jews.

Today, by extension of these same principles, part member marriages should continue if the nonmember spouse permits the member spouse’s activity in the Church and the nonmember spouse also permits the children to be reared in the Church.

Such a union constitutes holy or acceptable matrimony before God—even though it is an arrangement for time only. There is no unholiness attached to faithful, committed marriages performed outside the temple. They may in truth be a “lesser good,” but they are definitely not an evil. The only thing wrong with such marriages for time is their impermanence and the acceptance of their impermanence, with the consequent loss of blessings, by the partners.

“For the unbelieving husband is sanctified by the wife . . .” “Unbelieving” in this verse means non-Christian. Today the term refers to the nonmember spouse.

The terms “sanctified” and “holy” are exactly synonymous, as the Latin word sanctus, which is the root of the English word sanctify, means “holy.” The Jews of Paul’s day tended to divide the world into things holy or unholy (sanctified or unsanctified). This label indicated whether they were clean or unclean, sacred or profane.

The implication of this phrase is that the believing spouse will have a potentially sanctifying effect on the unbelieving spouse—the believing spouse may cause the other to become believing.

“else were your children unclean, but now are they holy” From the Jewish perspective addressed by Paul, if the above conditions do not exist in a mixed marriage, then the children would be “unclean” which implies “not in the proper relationship to the Lord” or “brought up outside the Church (see verse 4).

2 Now, in the days of the apostles the law of circumcision was had among all the Jews who believed not the gospel of Jesus Christ.

verse 2 “the law of circumcision” See Genesis 17:9-14; JST Genesis 17:11-12. Circumcision involved ritually cutting off the foreskin from the male child’s penis when they were eight days old, or whenever they converted if they were not born a Jew. Circumcision on the eighth day was the sign of the covenant between God and Abraham and was originally instituted to symbolize, among other things, that children were not accountable before the Lord until they were eight years old. The law of circumcision of the flesh was done away in Christ (see Moroni 8:8).

“among all the Jews” Even though Corinth (the saints of which were Paul’s addressees in 1 Corinthians) was a Greek city, there were during Paul’s time a large number of Jews living there. Many of these were in exile from Rome due to an edict of Claudius issued in AD 41, which banned them from Rome for causing civil disturbances (see Acts 18:2).

3 And it came to pass that there arose a great contention among the people concerning the law of circumcision, for the unbelieving husband was desirous that his children should be circumcised and become subject to the law of Moses, which law was fulfilled.

verse 3 “there arose a great contention among the people concerning the law of circumcision” Here “the people” were the Jews, both Christian and non-Christian. Christian Jews and non-Christian Jews were irreconcilably divided over the issue of the law of Moses, especially the law of circumcision. The Christian Jews believed the law was fulfilled, and the non-Christian Jews believed it was still in force. One side or the other must be wrong. No compromise was possible. Naturally, this led to “a great contention” in any relationship between Christian and non-Christian Jews, and it would have been particularly difficult where Christian and non-Christian Jews were already married to each other.

Some Jews who became Christians would have had contracts of betrothal in force between themselves and non-Christian Jews (today we would say such couples were “engaged” to be married). Should these betrothal contracts still be honored now that one partner had become Christians? Paul said yes—if the non-Christian partner would agree that the spouse could continue their associations as Christians and any children from the marriage would be reared as Christians and would not be subjected to the law of Moses, including circumcision. Some Jews were already married when they joined the Church. If their spouse was not also converted, should their marriage be preserved? Again, Paul said yes—on the same terms.

4 And it came to pass that the children, being brought up in subjection to the law of Moses, gave heed to the traditions of their fathers and believed not the gospel of Christ, wherein they became unholy.

verse 4 “they became unholy” If the children of religiously mixed marriages were brought up under the law of Moses, they could not at the same time believe the gospel of Jesus Christ—for the two were often contradictory. Reared under the law of Moses, the children would naturally not want to abandon it for the gospel when they reached the age of accountability. Thus, they would become unholy—sinful and in need of redemption—when they became accountable and did not become members of the Church.

5 Wherefore, for this cause the apostle wrote unto the church, giving unto them a commandment, not of the Lord, but of himself, that a believer should not be united to an unbeliever; except the law of Moses should be done away among them, verse 5 “for this cause the apostle wrote unto the church” Apparently the apostle Paul wrote unto the church in Corinth suggesting to them that a believer in Christianity should not be married to a non-believer unless the Law of Moses can be done away in their household. This counsel is not contained in 1 Corinthians, though the spirit of this counsel is seen in 2 Corinthians 6:14. If, in fact, this counsel was originally in Paul’s first letter to the Corinthian saints, this may suggest that the present New Testament text has become corrupted. It is possible that Paul wrote about these things in his earlier, lost letter to the Corinthians (see 1 Corinthians 5:9 for evidence of an earlier letter), and this phrase merely refers to those prior instructions. Thus, it is possible that by revelation to Joseph Smith, the knowledge of this specific counsel by Paul was restored.

“not of the Lord, but of himself” There is a difference between doctrine and policy. Doctrine is revealed by the Lord through his prophet and never changes. Policy is created and implemented by the Lord’s servants and may be adapted or changed from time to time as circumstances warrant. Doctrines are fundamental principles. Policies interpret and apply doctrinal principles to broader church contexts as directed by church leaders. Policy may not always come directly from the Lord but rather from his servants. In this particular case, where those servants are properly appointed and sustained (Joseph Smith and the apostle Paul), the saints are obligated also to sustain their policies (see D&C 107:30-32).

“except the law of Moses should be done away among them” Paul’s condition for marriage between Christian Jews and non-Christian Jews was that the home must be a Christian home and that the law of Moses would not be observed there.

6 That their children might remain without circumcision; and that the tradition might be done away, which saith that little children are unholy; for it was had among the Jews;

verse 6 “the tradition . . . that little children are unholy” In Paul’s day, Jews had come to believe that infants were born unholy, or outside the covenant, and were in need of circumcision in order to enter the covenant and become holy or clean. This is a version of the apostate doctrine of original sin. Some Nephites had taught also that infants need baptism, a doctrine Mormon declared a “gross error” and “solemn mockery before God” (Moroni 8:6, 9). This lie that little children are unredeemed unless some ordinance is performed for them is one of Satan’s favorites, for it denies “the mercies of Christ” and would have us trust instead “in dead works” or rituals (Moroni 8:23). Ironically, one reason that circumcision was instituted with Abraham was to show him and his posterity that little children are not accountable before the Lord until their eighth year (see JST Genesis 17:11) and require no ordinance before that time in order to be sanctified by grace through the atonement of Christ.

7 But little children are holy, being sanctified through the atonement of Jesus Christ; and this is what the scriptures mean.

verse 7 “little children are holy” Joseph Smith taught that “the doctrine of baptizing children, or sprinkling them, or they must welter [become entangled in] in hell, is a doctrine not true, not supported in Holy Writ, and is not consistent with the character of God. All children are redeemed by the blood of Jesus Christ, and the moment that children leave this world, they are taken to the bosom of Abraham” (HC, 4:554).

Section 75 Conference of January 25, 1832

An important conference of the Church was held on January 25, 1832, in Amherst, Ohio, located about sixty miles west of Kirtland. Amherst was the home of Gideon Carter, Sylvester Smith, and others. One reason for holding conferences away from Kirtland or Hiram was to promulgate the gospel in those areas.

At this conference Joseph Smith was sustained and ordained “President of the High Priesthood” of the Church by Sidney Rigdon. Also at this conference, by the request of the priesthood, the Prophet inquired of the Lord and a revelation (section 75) was given and written in the presence of the whole assembly, appointing many of the elders to missions.

Even though section 75 itself says nothing about this historic ordination of Joseph, it is important that we remember the importance of this event. Actually, the stage had been set for Joseph’s ordination to this office at the conference of November 1831. Some revealed instructions regarding the organization of the priesthood of the Church had been received at that gathering that were not inserted into the scriptural canon until they were later placed in section 107 (examples include verses 59-60, 74, 75, 78-87, 89, 91, 92, 99, and 100). More pertinent examples include verses 65 and 66 of section 107 which call for the selection and ordination of a president to preside over the high priesthood of the Church. Hence, at the next conference, in January 1832, Joseph is ordained.

In our study of the history of the Church, it is fascinating to watch the gradual unfolding of the concepts of priesthood and church government as we now understand them. You will recall that at the June conference of 1831 (see the commentary for sections 44 and 52), twenty-three priesthood bearers were ordained “to the high priesthood” which now corresponds to the office of high priest. Now we witness the selection and ordination of the “president of the high priesthood,” meaning president of the priesthood. Although the term “First Presidency” will not be used until 1835, this supreme council in the Church was organized at this January 1832 conference. The following March, Joseph will learn in an unpublished revelation that the office of president of the high priesthood is vested with the authority to preside, with the assistance of counselors, over all the concerns of the Church. On March 8, 1832, the Prophet selected and ordained Jesse Gause and Sidney Rigdon as his counselors. After the former, a convert from the Shakers, denied the faith and was excommunicated in December 1832, Frederick G. Williams was called to serve as counselor in the presidency.

Also in section 75, the newly called missionaries are given instructions as to how they ought to deport themselves while on their missions. Whenever they are received into a house, they are to leave their blessing (verse 19). From such houses where they are not received, they are to depart speedily, shaking off the dust of their feet as a testimony against those who reject them (verse 20). The elders who deliver their messages and are rejected are also assigned to be judges in the day of judgment against those who rejected their testimonies (verse 21).

Apparently, many of the elders went on these short missions and left their families to take care of themselves. They probably assumed that the Lord and the Church would somehow provide for them. In verses 24-28 the Lord tells them they are not to do their missionary work until they have made adequate provisions for their families.

The earliest manuscripts of section 75, including one in the handwriting of Sidney Rigdon which may be the original manuscript, indicate that, like section 72, this revelation may have been received in two parts that were subsequently joined together—the first part consisting of verses 1-22 and the second part consisting of verses 23-36.

1 Verily, verily, I say unto you, I who speak even by the voice of my Spirit, even Alpha and Omega, your Lord and your God—verse 1 “Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

2 Hearken, O ye who have given your names to go forth to proclaim my gospel, and to prune my vineyard.

verse 2 “ye who have given your names to go forth” Most of the elders present at this conference had already indicated their willingness to serve missions and had been instructed to wait until this conference to receive their specific calls (see D&C 73:2). In contemporary church terms, they had already “put in their papers.”

3 Behold, I say unto you that it is my will that you should go forth and not tarry, neither be idle but labor with your might—

4 Lifting up your voices as with the sound of a trump, proclaiming the truth according to the revelations and commandments which I have given you.

5 And thus, if ye are faithful ye shall be laden with many sheaves, and crowned with honor, and glory, and immortality, and eternal life.

verse 5 “laden with many sheaves” Anciently, grain was cut by hand and tied into large bundles or sheaves that were then carried to the place of threshing. To see a person or an animal “laden with many sheaves” was proof that this person had reaped an abundant harvest and would now enjoy the fruits of his labors.

“crowned with honor” Elder Bruce R. McConkie commented on the symbolism of being crowned: “Those who gain exaltation in the highest heaven of the celestial world shall wear crowns. Perhaps literal crowns may be worn on occasion—emblematic of their victory over the world and signifying that they rule and reign as kings and queens in the eternal house of Israel. But at all times they will be ‘crowned with honor, and glory, and immortality, and eternal life’” (Mormon Doctrine, 173).

6 Therefore, verily I say unto my servant William E. McLellin, I revoke the commission which I gave unto him to go unto the eastern countries;

verse 6 If the reader wishes to review a capsule biographical summary of William E. McLellin, see the introductory commentary for section 66. William E. McLellin had previously been called to a mission to “the eastern lands” with Samuel Smith (see D&C 66:7-9). Though called on October 25, 1831, he did not actually leave until November 16, and he returned home before the end of December showing little inclination to go out again. Samuel Smith parted company with William McLellin before Christmas when “because of disobediences our way was hedged up before us [and] Brother William was taken sick” (Shipps and Welch, Journals of William E. McLellin, 75).

7 And I give unto him a new commission and a new commandment, in the which I, the Lord, chasten him for the murmurings of his heart;

verse 7 “I give unto him a new commission and a new commandment” William McLellin was given another mission call, this time to work south of Kirtland, but this mission was as unsuccessful as his first.

“for the murmurings of his heart” There are indications other than this verse that William McLellin’s heart was not entirely right. For example, after only three weeks on this second mission, he stopped preaching, claiming ill health and inclement weather. When he took a job working in a store, his companion, Luke Johnson, returned home and got another companion. William McLellin himself wrote, “I determined to cease proclaiming until I was satisfied in my own mind” (Ibid., 70-83).

8 And he sinned; nevertheless, I forgive him and say unto him again, Go ye into the south countries.

9 And let my servant Luke Johnson go with him, and proclaim the things which I have commanded them—

10 Calling on the name of the Lord for the Comforter, which shall teach them all things that are expedient for them—

11 Praying always that they faint not; and inasmuch as they do this, I will be with them even unto the end.

12 Behold, this is the will of the Lord your God concerning you. Even so. Amen.

13 And again, verily thus saith the Lord, let my servant Orson Hyde and my servant Samuel H. Smith take their journey into the eastern countries, and proclaim the things which I have commanded them; and inasmuch as they are faithful, lo, I will be with them even unto the end.

verse 13 A statement of Orson Hyde is interesting relative to this verse:

Soon after our return to Kirtland, I was sent on another mission in company with Brother Samuel H. Smith, a younger brother of the Prophet, who was a man slow of speech and unlearned, yet a man of good faith and extreme integrity. We journeyed early in the spring of 1832, eastward together without “purse or scrip,” going from house to house, teaching and preaching in families, and also in the public conversations of the people. Wherever we were received and entertained, we left our blessing; and wherever we were rejected, we washed our feet in private against those who rejected us, and bore testimony of it unto our Father in Heaven, and went on our way rejoicing, according to the commandment (Millennial Star, volume 26:774-75).

14 And again, verily I say unto my servant Lyman Johnson, and unto my servant Orson Pratt, they shall also take their journey into the eastern countries; and behold, and lo, I am with them also, even unto the end.

15 And again, I say unto my servant Asa Dodds, and unto my servant Calves Wilson, that they also shall take their journey unto the western countries, and proclaim my gospel, even as I have commanded them.

16 And he who is faithful shall overcome all things, and shall be lifted up at the last day.

verse 16 “overcome all things” See the commentary for D&C 64:2.

“lifted up” See the commentary for D&C 5:35.

17 And again, I say unto my servant Major N. Ashley, and my servant Burr Riggs, let them take their journey also into the south country.

18 Yea, let all those take their journey, as I have commanded them, going from house to house, and from village to village, and from city to city.

19 And in whatsoever house ye enter, and they receive you, leave your blessing upon that house.

20 And in whatsoever house ye enter, and they receive you not, ye shall depart speedily from that house, and shake off the dust of your feet as a testimony against them.

verse 20 “shake off the dust of your feet” See D&C 24:15 and its commentary.

21 And you shall be filled with joy and gladness; and know this, that in the day of judgment you shall be judges of that house, and condemn them;

verse 21 “you shall be filled with joy and gladness” Not because those who reject the gospel are going to be punished, but because the missionaries themselves will have borne witness of the truth and acquitted themselves of any blame for not warning their neighbors.

22 And it shall be more tolerable for the heathen in the day of judgment, than for that house; therefore, gird up your loins and be faithful, and ye shall overcome all things, and be lifted up at the last day. Even so. Amen.

verse 22 “it shall be more tolerable for the heathen in the day of judgment”

Heathens are those without a knowledge of Christ, the traditionally non-Christian nations of the world. In the final judgment, those who had no opportunity to live by the light of the gospel will be judged with leniency because of their ignorance. We are even taught that they will be judged by an all-knowing Savior as if they had heard the gospel (D&C 137:5-9). But the non-heathens—those who heard the gospel and rejected it, or who knew a portion of it and rejected the fulness, will be judged more harshly. Ignorance in itself is not a sin, unless it is willful. We are assured, by the scriptural passage just mentioned, that this mortal experience will provide each individual with sufficient experience and knowledge to allow the Lord to judge him or her. Deliberate rejection of available light, however, is a sin and cannot be forgiven without repentance.

23 And again, thus saith the Lord unto you, O ye elders of my church, who have given your names that you might know his will concerning you—

24 Behold, I say unto you, that it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families of those, and also to support the families of those who are called and must needs be sent unto the world to proclaim the gospel unto the world.

verse 24 “it is the duty of the church to assist in supporting the families”

Most of those called on full-time missions in 1832 were married men with families to support. Since the responsibility of supporting one’s family in most cases has priority over serving a mission (see verses 26, 28), most of these men needed some assurance of support for their families before they could accept mission calls. Once individual resources had been exhausted, it was the responsibility of church members either to assist in supporting or to support entirely, if necessary, the dependents of those called on full-time missions.

25 Wherefore, I, the Lord, give unto you this commandment, that ye obtain places for your families, inasmuch as your brethren are willing to open their hearts.

26 And let all such as can obtain places for their families, and support of the church for them, not fail to go into the world, whether to the east or to the west, or to the north, or to the south.

verses 25-26 “places for your families” Those who are called on missions are commanded—not merely advised—to find church members willing to take in and support their families. Once these missionaries had found lodging and support for their families, then, and only then, were they to embark on their missions.

27 Let them ask and they shall receive, knock and it shall be opened unto them, and be made known from on high, even by the Comforter, whither they shall go.

verse 27 In some cases the Lord leaves the direction in which a missionary companionship travels entirely up to them (see verse 30).

28 And again, verily I say unto you, that every man who is obliged to provide for his own family, let him provide, and he shall in nowise lose his crown; and let him labor in the church.

verse 28 “let him provide” When a choice must unavoidably be made between supporting one’s family or accepting a mission call, one must meet the higher obligation and support one’s family. When such a choice is necessary, the faithful member need not fear losing his place in the kingdom. When resources are not sufficient to do all that is asked of us, we must prioritize. According to President Harold B. Lee, “The first priority should be to maintain their own spiritual and physical strength; then comes their family; then the Church; and then their professions” (Bishop’s Training Course and Self-Help Guide, sections 2, 7, cited in James E. Faust, CR, October 1973, 18-19).

“let him labor in the church” Where individuals are not able to accept a mission call because lodging and support for their families cannot be obtained, they are to labor in their local church units.

29 Let every man be diligent in all things. And the idler shall not have place in the church, except he repent and mend his ways.

verse 29 “the idler” An idler is anyone with available time who is unwilling to consecrate it to the kingdom. In this context, the idler is one who will neither serve a full-time mission nor accept a local calling or assignment. Idlers may be members of record, and they may even attend their church meetings, but those who will not work to build the kingdom are not members in good standing and, unless they repent, they have forfeited their place in the celestial kingdom.

30 Wherefore, let my servant Simeon Carter and my servant Emer Harris be united in the ministry; verse 30 “united in the ministry” That is, serve as missionary companions.

“Simeon Carter and . . . Emer Harris” Excellent biographical summaries for these and all other individuals mentioned in the Doctrine and Covenants may be found in Lyndon W. Cook’s Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith (see also Black, Who’s Who in the Doctrine and Covenants). It is worthy of note that the first five pairs of missionaries called in this revelation received specific assignments (see verses 6-17), while the next seven pairs were instructed to ask and to knock and the Comforter would tell them where they should go (see D&C 80:3).

31 And also my servant Ezra Thayre and my servant Thomas B. Marsh; verse 31 “Ezra Thayre” Note that Elder Thayre was issued another mission call (see D&C 52:22; 56:5, 8). He accepted this call, and all indications are that he served faithfully.

32 Also my servant Hyrum Smith and my servant Reynolds Cahoon;

33 And also my servant Daniel Stanton and my servant Seymour Brunson;

34 And also my servant Sylvester Smith and my servant Gideon Carter;

35 And also my servant Ruggles Eames and my servant Stephen Burnett;

36 And also my servant Micah B. Welton and also my servant Eden Smith. Even so. Amen.

Brief Historical Setting

1832 February

Shortly after returning to Hiram, following the conference of January 1832, Joseph and Sidney, upon resuming their revision of the Bible, came to John 5:28-29, and a discussion arose between the two of them regarding the nature of the resurrection. Are there only two rewards for those who are resurrected? Or are there more than two degrees of goodness and badness?

With a few elders looking on (who came to the Johnson home to simply watch the interesting process of Joseph and Sidney’s working on the inspired revision), Joseph and Sidney received a glorious vision and revelation concerning the three degrees of glory [D&C 76 - The Vision].

About a month later, the Lord also gave some helps in understanding the final book in the New Testament [D&C 77 - Book of Revelation].

Section 76 The Vision

Section 76 is indeed for us a priceless heritage! It has been called one of the greatest, if not the greatest, revelation ever received by man in this or any dispensation. It was received February 16, 1832, in a corner room of the John Johnson home in Hiram, Ohio. The following statement of Joseph's provides us with helpful background information:

Upon my return [to the home of John Johnson in Hiram, Ohio] from [the] Amherst conference [held January 25, 1832], I resumed the translation of the scriptures [the revision of the King James Bible]. From sundry revelations which had been received, it was apparent that many important points touching the salvation of man had been taken from the Bible, or lost before it was compiled. It appeared self evident from what truths were left, that if God rewarded everyone according to the deeds done in the body, the term "heaven" as intended for the saints' eternal home must include more kingdoms than one. Accordingly, while translating Saint John's gospel [after coming to John 5:28-29: "Marvel not at this for the hour is coming, in the which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation."], myself and Elder Rigdon saw the following vision (HC, 1:245).

We should note that in this corner room of the John Johnson home it was not at all unusual for elders of the Church to come to listen as Joseph and Sidney worked on the Bible revision. It must have been fascinating to watch and listen, and there were often several elders present at any one time. As Joseph and Sidney came to John 5:28-29 and were discussing it, the Spirit moved them to question the verse. They knelt in prayer seeking further light. The Spirit came upon them and they were favored with this glorious vision.

In addition to the Prophet's brief introduction cited above, the only description of this event that has surfaced is a remembrance of Philo Dibble, a close friend and boyhood pal of the Prophet, published in the Juvenile Instructor, May 15, 1892. The following tidbits are contained in Dibble's description of the event:

During the time that Joseph and Sidney were in the Spirit and saw the heavens open, there were other men in the room, perhaps twelve. Among whom I was one [the names of the others are not recorded]. During a part of the time—probably two-thirds of the time—I saw the glory and felt the power but did not see the vision. The events and conversation, while they were seeing what is written (and many things were seen and related that are not written), I will relate as minutely as necessary. Joseph would at intervals say "What do I see?" as one might say while looking out the window and beholding what all in the room could not see. Then he would relate what he had seen or what he was looking at. Then Sidney replied, "I see the same." Presently Sidney would say, "What do I see?" and would repeat what he had seen or was seeing, and Joseph would reply, "I see the same." This manner of conversation was repeated at short intervals to the end of the vision, and during the whole time not a word was spoken by any other person, not a sound or motion made by anyone but Joseph and Sidney, and it seemed to me that they never moved a joint or limb during the time I was there, which I think was over an hour, and to the end of the vision. Joseph sat firmly and calmly all the time in the midst of a magnificent glory, but Sidney sat limp and pale, apparently as limber as a rag, observing which Joseph remarked, smilingly, "Sidney is not used to it as I am."

After probably almost two hours the vision ended. Section 76 was later dictated to a scribe. It was not recorded while they were having the experience. The revelation was first published in the Evening and Morning Star in July 1832, and it was included in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants.

It should be remembered that Philo Dibble was a very old man when he wrote this account of events that had occurred sixty years before. In an earlier reference to section 76, Brother Dibble had indicated that he was actually present only at the end of the vision (see "Philo Dibble's Narrative," 81). Nevertheless, as a young man he was himself an eyewitness to at least part of the vision and was there at the time to learn from other eyewitnesses exactly what had happened before his own arrival.

Has any other prophet ever seen the same or similar vision? Some are quick to mention John the Revelator or the prophet Nephi or the Brother of Jared. We must keep in mind that several men have seen a vision of the beginning of the world to the end thereof. Joseph Smith's vision, however, went beyond the scope of this world and into the eternal worlds of varying degrees of glory. There are actually only two other men recorded in our present-day scriptures to whom this great revelation was revealed: Jacob, the father of the twelve tribes of Israel (see Genesis 28:10-12), and Paul, the apostle (see 2 Corinthians 12:1-7). And our knowledge of these two men having seen such a vision is dependent upon a statement by the prophet Joseph Smith. Joseph taught: "Paul ascended into the third heavens, and he could understand the three principal rounds of Jacob's ladder—the telestial, the terrestrial, and the celestial glories or kingdoms, where Paul saw and heard things which were not lawful for him to utter" (TPJS, 304-05).

Although Jacob saw a vision of the degrees of glory, the present text of Genesis provides only this meager account: "And he dreamed, and behold a ladder set up on the earth, and the top of it reached to heaven: and behold the angels of God ascending and descending on it" (Genesis 28:12). Paul's account is not much fuller, and although it sounds as if he is speaking of someone else, a careful reading of verses 5 through 7 reveals this man to be himself. "And I knew such a man, (whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) How that he was caught up into paradise, and heard unspeakable words, which it is not lawful for a man to utter" (2 Corinthians 12:3-4). Although Paul mentions a third heaven, the prophet Joseph's explanation does much to clarify what he intended. Paul's treatise of the three different types of resurrection, recorded in 1 Corinthians chapter 15, was undoubtedly based on his vision. Note also that Paul was forbidden to reveal his revelation. It should again be acknowledged that since Joseph and Sidney were working on "the translation of the Scriptures" when this vision was given, this knowledge could have once been in the Bible and was being restored through Joseph (see the preface to section 76). Whether Joseph was the only one who recorded it or if he was restoring knowledge that had previously been recorded, the fact remains that he is the one who has given this generation the knowledge of the varying degrees of glory.

Apparently Joseph Smith was the one privileged to record this vision for the inhabitants of this telestial world just as John the Revelator was the one ordained to record the vision to the end of the world. Although the brother of Jared also recorded his vision of the beginning of the world to the end thereof (see 2 Nephi 27:6-11), his record is apparently reserved for the Millennium, when only those of a terrestrial or celestial nature will be living on the earth.

It should be also noted that in the vision itself Joseph and Sidney were told what they were to write down while still "in the Spirit" those portions of it that could be shared with the Church and with the world. They were also told what they were not to write (verses 28, 49, 80, 113, 114-15). Their written account was then forwarded to Independence, Missouri, for church publication and appeared in The Evening and Morning Star in July 1832. Eleven years after the vision (May 1843), Joseph said "I could explain a hundred-fold more than I ever have of the glories of the kingdoms manifested to me in the vision, were I permitted, and were the people prepared to receive them" (HC, 5:402).

While section 76 will not answer all the questions we may have about our eternal destinies, it is abundantly clear that there is an eternal reward commensurate with every level of obedience—rewards that range from godhood to perdition.

Joseph Smith's own summation of the importance of this revelation is instructive:

Nothing could be more pleasing to the saints upon the order of the kingdom of the Lord, than the light which burst upon the world through the foregoing vision. Every law, every commandment, every promise, every truth, and every point touching the destiny of man, from Genesis to Revelation, where the purity of the scriptures remains unsullied by the folly of men, go to show the perfection of the theory [of different degrees of glory in the future life] and witnesses the fact that that document is a transcript from the records of the eternal world. The sublimity of the ideas; the purity of the language; the scope for action; the continued duration for completion, in order that the heirs of salvation may confess the Lord and bow the knee; the rewards for faithfulness, and the punishments for sins, are so much beyond the narrow-mindedness of men, that every honest man is constrained to exclaim: “It came from God” (HC, 1:251-53).

Yet the reaction of the saints to the doctrines revealed in section 76 was not universally positive. The old orthodox belief that most of humanity would be tortured in hell forever was so ingrained in contemporary religious thinking that Joseph’s glorious message of God’s inexhaustible love and mercy was unwelcome to some. Brigham Young recalled: “When God revealed to Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon that there was a place prepared for all, according to the light they had received and their rejection of evil and practice of good, it was a great trial to many, and some apostatized because God was not going to send to everlasting punishment heathens and infants, but had a place of salvation, in due time, for all, and would bless the honest and virtuous and truthful, whether they ever belonged to any church or not. It was a new doctrine to this generation, and many stumbled at it” (JD, 16:42).

Keep in mind that section 76 was received February 16, 1832. Joseph would yet live twelve years and would yet receive much more information regarding the concepts in section 76. If we are going to study section 76, it is important to study other revelations received following section 76 that give further light on the subjects treated in section 76. The following additional revelations are helpful: D&C 88:18-32, 95-100, D&C 130:6-11, D&C 131:1-4, D&C 132:15-26, and D&C 137.

In 1843 Joseph wrote and published a version of the section 76 in poetry. This rewriting of section 76 apparently came about when someone wrote a somewhat antagonistic letter to the editor of the Times and Seasons in Nauvoo which said in effect, “In ancient times the prophets of God wrote their great prophecies in poetry. You claim that Joseph Smith is a true prophet of God, but we’ve never known him to write any poetry.” The editor, W. W. Phelps wrote a bit of poetry himself, then turned the letter over to the Prophet. Joseph, undoubtedly with a twinkle in his eye, took the entire section 76 and rewrote it in poetry. See a copy of that poem following the commentary for this section. In the nearly twelve years that had intervened since February of 1832, Joseph had learned more regarding the three degrees of glory. In this poetic rewriting we find new doctrine never before published such as the concept of “Kolob.” This poem was published in the Times and Seasons—our church periodical in Nauvoo on February 1, 1843, and in England in the Millennial Star in August 1843.

Section 76, though we refer to it as “the vision,” is actually a series of visions. These may be outlined according to the bolded divisions within the verse commentary. In these separate visions, little is said about what they saw; the emphasis is upon what they heard.

D&C 76 The Vision

D&C 76:22-24 After the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all, which we give of him: That he lives!

D&C 76:41-46 The fate of the sons of perdition—the end thereof, neither the place thereof, nor their torment, no man knows.

D&C 76:50-70 Vision of the souls in the celestial kingdom.

D&C 76:71-80 Vision of the souls in the terrestrial kingdom.

D&C 76:81-90 Vision of the souls in the telestial kingdom.

D&C 76:107 I have trodden the wine-press alone, even the winepress of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God.

The Prologue (verses 1-18)

1 Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth, and rejoice ye inhabitants thereof, for the Lord is God, and beside him there is no Savior.

verse 1 “Hear, O ye heavens, and give ear, O earth” Compare Isaiah 1:2; Deuteronomy 32:1. Section 76 impacts our knowledge of both heaven and earth, of both the living and the dead, of both this life and the next. Elder Wilford Woodruff stated that this vision “gives more light, more truth, and more principle than any revelation contained in any other book we ever read. It makes plain to our understanding our present condition, where we came from why we are here, and where we are going to” (JD, 22:146-47).

The Lord addresses the inhabitants of the heavens as well as the earth. As to why the inhabitants of the heavens are included one can only speculate. However, inasmuch as they are invited to rejoice, it seems the Lord may be making them aware that he is revealing information to the earth’s inhabitants that has long been withheld from those mortals on earth. Certainly those in the heavens are desirous that the earth’s inhabitants know “the term ‘Heaven’ . . . must include more kingdoms than one” (preface to section 76). Another purpose for including the heavens is implied in verses 5 through 7, which state that the Lord honors those who serve him and will reward those who do so by revealing the mysteries of the kingdom to them. If the heavens, as used here, refers to beings who once lived on this earth and now serve the Lord as his messengers but have not yet received their eternal status or blessings, it may be that they are also being shown and enlightened by the power of the Lord’s Spirit (see verse 10).

“beside him there is no Savior” This is an excellent moment for the reader to contemplate the series of scriptures Acts 4:12; Mosiah 3:17; and D&C 18:23.

2 Great is his wisdom, marvelous are his ways, and the extent of his doings none can find out.

3 His purposes fail not, neither are there any who can stay his hand.

verse 3 “his purposes fail not” Everything Christ undertakes will be successful (Abraham 3:17).

4 From eternity to eternity he is the same, and his years never fail.

verse 4 “From eternity to eternity he is the same” The words usually translated as eternity in the Old and New Testaments do not refer to endless time but rather to distinct “ages” of time (see the commentary on D&C 19:3, 6; 76:112). President Joseph Fielding Smith wrote: “From eternity to eternity means from the spirit existence through the probation which we are in, and then back again to the eternal existence which will follow” (Doctrines of Salvation, 1:12).

“his years never fail” He never ages, and he goes on forever.

verses 1-4 It is interesting to note that the Lord refers to himself in the third person in these verses. He switches to the first person after the opening phrase of the next verse.

5 For thus saith the Lord—I, the Lord, am merciful and gracious unto those who fear me, and delight to honor those who serve me in righteousness and in truth unto the end.

verse 5 “I, the Lord, am . . . gracious” Christ is the source of grace. The simple definition of grace is the love which God has for man—particularly that aspect of his love that inclines him to bestow upon man blessings that man does not actually merit or deserve.

“unto those who fear me” See the commentary for D&C 10:56.

verses 6-10 These verse contain marvelous promises for the Lord to each person who diligently serves the Lord.

6 Great shall be their reward and eternal shall be their glory.

verse 6 “great shall be their reward and . . . their glory” A person’s glory is synonymous with that individual’s light. Spiritual light correlates directly with an individual’s revealed spiritual gifts. See The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15.

7 And to them will I reveal all mysteries, yea, all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom from days of old, and for ages to come, will I make known unto them the good pleasure of my will concerning all things pertaining to my kingdom.

verse 7 “to them will I reveal all mysteries” The Lord is speaking of “those who fear me . . . and serve me in righteousness and in truth unto the end” (see verse 5).

“all the hidden mysteries of my kingdom” Whenever the scriptures speak of mysteries, they refer to information that can be learned only through divine revelation. The knowledge that will be revealed to Joseph and Sidney in section 76 contains knowledge that had been, prior to February of 1832, “hidden mysteries” (see verses 8-10). This knowledge includes things that, as far as we know, had never as yet been revealed to man—“which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor yet entered into the heart of man” (verse 10).

8 Yea, even the wonders of eternity shall they know, and things to come will I show them, even the things of many generations.

9 And their wisdom shall be great, and their understanding reach to heaven; and before them the wisdom of the wise shall perish, and the understanding of the prudent shall come to naught.

10 For by my Spirit will I enlighten them, and by my power will I make known unto them the secrets of my will—yea, even those things which eye has not seen, nor ear heard, nor yet entered into the heart of man.

verse 10 “For by my Spirit will I enlighten them” Joseph Smith wrote, “Salvation cannot come without revelation; it is vain for anyone to minister without it. No man is a minister of Jesus Christ without being a prophet. No man can be a minister of Jesus Christ except he has a testimony of Jesus; and this is the spirit of prophecy. Whenever salvation has been administered. It has been by testimony. Men of the present time testify of heaven and hell, and have never seen either; and I say that no man knows these things without this” (HC, 3:389-90).

verses 5-10 When coupled with verses 114 through 118, these verses teach us that the Lord is willing to reveal the “hidden mysteries” of the kingdom to those who are faithful. In essence the Lord seems to say that if we want to learn what is in the larger part of this revelation, which Joseph was prevented from writing down, it will come to us through personal revelation if, and when, we prove ourselves worthy.

11 We, Joseph Smith, Jun., and Sidney Rigdon, being in the Spirit on the sixteenth day of February, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two—verse 11 “being in the Spirit” Being filled with the influence of the Holy Ghost.

12 By the power of the Spirit our eyes were opened and our understandings were enlightened, so as to see and understand the things of God—

verse 12 “our eyes were opened” When the power of the Holy Ghost descends directly upon an individual, the veil that normally covers sight and understanding can be temporarily drawn aside, allowing him to see and participate in things beyond this natural world (see verses 116-118, D&C 67:11-12).

13 Even those things which were from the beginning before the world was, which were ordained of the Father, through his Only Begotten Son, who was in the bosom of the Father, even from the beginning;

verse 13 “Even those things which were from the beginning” This phrase refers to things from the premortal state even before the creation of this earth. It is technically incorrect to label section 76 as a vision of the afterlife or of the three degrees of glory, for Joseph and Sidney saw much more than this. The scope of this vision spanned from the beginning of creation (verse 13) to the completion of Christ’s work (verses 106-107) to worlds without number and without end (verses 109-112). As mentioned above, this vision is similar to the grand panoramic vision of this world from its beginning to its end allowed to other prophets who stood at the heads of previous dispensations (see Moses 1:1-9, 24-41; 7:21-67; Abraham 3:5), but section 76 includes a vision of both the earth, from beginning to end, and a vision of the eternities. The poetic version of section 76 (see below) describes the content of the vision as including “what was, and what now is, and yet is to be.”

“his Only Begotten Son, who was in the bosom of the Father, even from the beginning” Note that “the beginning” in this case does not refer to the creation of the earth or to the creation of the universe, but to the appearance of Christ on the scene. Christ is the beginning of all things (see D&C 19:1).

14 Of whom we bear record; and the record which we bear is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ, who is the Son, whom we saw and with whom we conversed in the heavenly vision.

verse 14 The Savior himself may be referred to as the “fulness of the gospel” in that his personal example is the epitome of gospel living, and by virtue of his atoning death he made possible the ultimate fruits of the gospel—a return to our Father’s celestial presence.

15 For while we were doing the work of translation, which the Lord had appointed unto us, we came to the twenty-ninth verse of the fifth chapter of John, which was given unto us as follows—

16 Speaking of the resurrection of the dead, concerning those who shall hear the voice of the Son of Man:

17 And shall come forth; they who have done good, in the resurrection of the just; and they who have done evil, in the resurrection of the unjust.

verse 17 The reader should review the sequence of the resurrections (See the commentary for verse 50. See also “When Are We Resurrected” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 13, The Spirit World). When Joseph and Sidney came to John 5:29 during their “translation” of the New Testament, they stopped to ponder the nature of the two resurrections.

“the resurrection of the just” This is referred to as the “resurrection of life” in John 5:29. This is the resurrection of the celestial and terrestrial individuals.

“the resurrection of the unjust” This is the “resurrection of damnation” spoken of in John 5:29. This is the resurrection of those who will inherit a celestial glory (see verse 85) and those who live a mortal life but then, tragically, become sons of perdition.

18 Now this caused us to marvel, for it was given unto us of the Spirit.

verse 18 “for it was given to us of the Spirit” The full significance and meaning of John 5:29 was given to Joseph and Sidney

The Vision of the Son of God (verses 19-24)

After being assured that God’s purposes do not fail and that he delights to honor the faithful with wisdom and understanding through his Spirit, Joseph and Sidney were privileged to see and converse with the Son of God in heavenly vision. The details of that conversation, or even by what means it was carried out, are not stated. The effect of it, however, is clearly stated in verses 22-24.

19 And while we meditated upon these things, the Lord touched the eyes of our understandings and they were opened, and the glory of the Lord shone round about.

verse 19 “And while we meditated upon these things” At least two other great visions in the scriptures came as a direct result of pondering. Nephi says that he was “pondering in mine heart” the things of his father’s dream when he was “caught away in the Spirit of the Lord, yea into an exceeding high mountain” (1 Nephi 11:1). And President Joseph F. Smith said that he received his remarkable vision of the spirit world as he sat in his room “pondering over the scriptures; and reflecting” (D&C 138:1-2). As Joseph and Sidney pondered John 5:29, they were enabled, by the Spirit of God, to understand and then to see.

President David O. McKay taught the importance of pondering the scriptures:

I think we pay too little attention to the value of meditation, a principle of devotion. In our worship there are two elements. One is spiritual communion arising from our own meditation; the other, instruction from others, particularly from those who have authority to guide and instruct us. Of the two, the more profitable introspectively is meditation.

Meditation is the language of the soul. It is defined as “a form of private devotion or spiritual exercise, consisting in deep, continued reflection on some religious theme.”

Meditation is one of the most secret, most sacred doors through which we pass into the presence of the Lord (CR, April 1967, 85).

Your author has had this blessed experience. May I share with you the particulars of such an experience? In my study of the scriptures, I frequently arrive at a point where I do not understand—what I am reading does not fit perfectly onto what I already understand. I can't quite grasp the concept. At the same time I sometimes feel a sense of real excitement, almost a quickening, that includes a feeling of hope and promise that an understanding of the thing is within my grasp if I will but spend some additional time pondering it. I am often moved to offer a silent or vocal prayer. I also sense a warning that if I do not press on now to a more thorough understanding, then I will lose the whole line of reasoning and will be required, at some time in the future, to begin the whole process again. Usually only a few minutes of pondering are sufficient, though sometimes the answer doesn't come until days or weeks later. Then, almost as if I were granted a gift, the missing information occurs to me. My often-unarticulated questions are answered. I now see clearly the concept. When this occurs, I always feel like shouting "Yes!" and I sometimes shed a tear of joy and gratitude. I feel I must share my new understanding with someone, and I often try. Usually, however, the someone can't appreciate the same significance I feel.

New understanding does not often come to the casual student of the scriptures. To him most of the scriptural record is difficult, confusing, and does not offer a ready promise of new understanding. He tends to see the scriptures merely as a means for reviewing familiar scriptural stories and an occasional source of inspiration. The scriptures are much more than this. They are the most fundamental and vital resource for new doctrinal understandings. The serious scripture student, on the other hand, has a firm understanding of those spiritual concepts he has studied in the past. He ponders them frequently and has defined and sharpened the edges of his understanding. He readily perceives what he does and does not thoroughly understand. His base or platform of understanding if firm and permanent imbues him with real confidence and an enthusiasm for adding significantly to his understanding. He is hungry for, and yearns for, new insights. He reads scripture with the real hope and expectation of acquiring new flashes of knowledge.

20 And we beheld the glory of the Son, on the right hand of the Father, and received of his fulness; verse 20 We mentioned previously that in section 76 we read very little of what Joseph and Sidney saw. The emphasis is upon what they heard. What they did see, however, is important. Here we learn that Joseph and Sidney saw the Father and the Son.

"and received of his fulness" When Joseph and Sidney were in the presence of the Son, they were blessed to experience, in ways that we are not given to understand, the fulness of his glory or light (again, see The Concept of Light in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 15). We have previously learned that we fully benefit from his light only through our diligent obedience to his commands. When we do obey, then, incrementally, we are blessed to receive his glory (his light, his attributes). It then becomes our glory (our light, our attributes). In some way short of this usually lifelong process, Joseph and Sidney were blessed to benefit by his glory or light during their great vision experience.

21 And saw the holy angels, and them who are sanctified before his throne, worshiping God, and the Lamb, who worship him forever and ever.

verse 21 “the holy angels, and them who are sanctified” From the poetic version we learn that the “holy angels, and them who are sanctified” saw the Son “in a fulness of glory and holy applause.” Also, in that poetic version we learn that those giving the holy applause consisted of holy angels and those who were sanctified. These are two separate groups: holy angels (implying those who were assigned to this world) and “sanctified beings from worlds that have been.” Make certain that you understand the specific meaning of the term sanctified (see Justification and Sanctification in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17). Thus, is it clear that these are men and women from other worlds created by Jesus Christ who have already been exalted through his atonement and dwell with the Father in his kingdom (see verse 24). The poetic version teaches:

By him, of him, and through him the worlds were all made,
Even all that career in the heavens so broad.
Whose inhabitants, too, from the first to the last,
Are sav'd by the very same Saviour of ours;
And, of course, are begotten God's daughters and sons.
By the very same truths and the very same pow'rs.

The fact that other worlds were created by Jesus Christ, under the Father's direction, is a prevalent New Testament teaching, although it is often not recognized (see Colossians 1:16-17; Hebrews 1:1-2). This doctrine is also confirmed in the Pearl of Great Price (see Moses 1:33-35), which source also reminds us, “Only an account of this earth and the inhabitants thereof, give I [the Lord] unto you.” Perhaps this is why nothing is said in the New Testament about the atonement covering the inhabitants of other worlds. The Doctrine and Covenants confirms that Jesus Christ atoned for other worlds as well. In speaking of the many kingdoms and the inhabitants thereof existing in the universe, the Lord likened them unto a man having a field, sending his servants into the fields, and promising to visit each man in his own hour and in his own order (see D&C 88:37, 51-61).

22 And now, after the many testimonies which have been given of him, this is the testimony, last of all which we give of him: That he lives!

verse 22 “last of all” Meaning “the most recent” testimony rather than “the final” testimony.

23 For we saw him, even on the right hand of God; and we heard the voice bearing record that he is the Only Begotten of the Father—verses 22-23 These are the sweetest words ever spoken to mankind! He who died now lives! There is life after death!

24 That by him, and through him, and of him, the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof are begotten sons and daughters unto God.

verse 24 We learn that the magnitude of Jesus's creative and atoning powers extend beyond the scope of mortal understanding. His creative works include more than this world, and the power of his atonement extends also to the inhabitants of other worlds. The blood of Jesus Christ was not shed for this world alone. The sons and daughters of God on other earths also partake of its saving powers.

“That by him, and through him, and of him” See D&C 88:41; John 1:3; Colossians 1:16-17. The Creator of the universe and all it contains is Jesus Christ, acting in behalf of the Father.

Astronomers tell us that our solar system is located in a spiral arm of the Milky Way Galaxy, a flat disc-shaped cluster of stars approximately 100,000 light years across at its widest point. A light year is the distance light travels in one year. Moving at the speed of 186,000 miles per second, a beam of light traverses 5.7 trillion miles in 365 days. The size of our galaxy in miles, then, is a staggering 5.7 trillion times 100,000. Our galaxy is estimated to contain at least 200 billion stars, half of which likely possess solar systems similar to our own. The next closest galaxy is Andromeda, a star system much like our own Milky Way, approximately 2.2 million light years away from us. Furthermore, our best telescopes can probe outward into space to a distance of over 10 billion light years and view over 50 billion galaxies, each of which possesses billions of stars. And these galaxies are only the ones we can detect with the present state of our technology.

At this point in our existence, we are not given to understand the extent of Jesus's creations. What comprises our “universe”? What is the extent of this round of our Father's creations? What of all modern science can detect did Jesus Christ create? Our Milky Way galaxy? Many galaxies? All that we can see? We simply do not know!

And what is involved in the process of creation? Today a builder may build or create a home, for example, using pre-manufactured materials. Jesus Christ apparently used only two things—intelligences and unorganized matter—as his basic materials (“things to act and things to be acted upon”—2 Nephi 2:14). These were not created but have always existed (D&C 93:29). From these he made his own raw materials, the atoms, molecules, and elements. Using these raw materials he then formed the structures which we recognize to be part of our physical world. The full creative force of Christ is reflected not only in the forming of the physical world but also in its continued existence. In some way we do not yet understand, his influence—his light—gives energy and life to all things (D&C 88:13). Apparently the light of Christ imposes order and activates all things—even at the atomic or subatomic levels. We may presume that were he to withdraw, all matter as we know it would collapse into unorganized and deactivated chaos.

“the worlds are and were created, and the inhabitants thereof” Note that worlds is plural and that there are inhabitants who have lived and who now live upon those many worlds. Is there intelligent life in the universe? Of course there is! And all of these may be saved by the same Jesus Christ who was born in Bethlehem two thousand years ago. The poetic version of section 76 makes this even more explicit:

By him, of him, and through him, the worlds were all made,
Even all that career in the heavens so broad,
Whose inhabitants, too, from the first to the last,
Are sav'd by the very same Saviour of ours;
And, of course, are begotten God's daughters and sons,
By the very same truths, and the very same pow'rs.

“begotten sons and daughters unto God” Which “begetting” is spoken of here? All of the Father’s spirit children—those who inhabit all of the worlds created by the Son—were born as spirits to the Father and his female companion in the premortal world. Thus, all are begotten of the Father. Also we all may become sons and daughters of the Son. We do this through a spiritual rebirth. We are “born again” as children of Jesus Christ by accepting him, his commandments, his atonement, and entering into his covenants (see D&C 25:1; Mosiah 5:7; Ether 3:14; Moses 6:6, 62–7:1).

Since this verse makes it clear that it is by, through, and of Jesus Christ specifically that all these inhabitants of all these many worlds are begotten sons and daughters of God, this “begetting” is perhaps more likely to refer to our spiritual rebirth rather than our premortal spirit birth.

The Vision of Premortal Life, the Fall of Satan, and the Sufferings of Perdition (verses 25-49)

It is interesting that the Lord chose to show Joseph and Sidney perdition, the absence, of glory, immediately after showing them the glory of God. This was doubtless a great teaching moment—a dramatic foil or contrast—wherein Joseph learned the difference between the glory of God and the desperate lack of glory in outer darkness.

Just as those who completely follow Christ become sons of God (verse 58), those who suffer “themselves through the power of the devil to be overcome” (verse 31) become sons of perdition. Those who become sons of perdition must know God’s power, possess God’s power (verse 31), deny the Holy Spirit after receiving it, deny the only Begotten Son (“crucify him unto themselves”) (verse 35), and deny the Son after the Father has revealed him (verse 43). To become a son of perdition is to suffer a permanent second “second death” (verse 37). They are the “only ones who shall not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord” (verse 38). Through the power of the atonement, Christ saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition (verses 43-44).

After reading these verses which explain how a man might become a son of perdition, you might still be uncertain of the exact process. Let me again recommend that you review the commentary for D&C 132:26-27 which should be helpful.

The Lord explained to Joseph and Sidney that though some are permitted to catch a brief glimpse of perdition, no one except the sons of perdition themselves truly understand the nature, extent, and duration of the suffering there (verses 44-48).

There is an excellent teaching by Joseph about the sons of perdition in the History of the Church, volume 6, pages 461-62. Joseph related a dream, the major lesson of which is that the son of perdition places himself in such a position that no one can help him, not even the prophet. Perhaps even God is powerless to do anything.

The fall of Lucifer from the presence of God is documented in the Bible (see Isaiah 14:12; Revelation 12:7-9), and in the Pearl of Great Price (see Moses 4:14; Abraham 3:27-28). But there are many additional things about Satan and his fall revealed in section 76. That he was in a position of authority in the beginning is amplified in the poetic version by the descriptive “authority great.” The titles given him in section 76 are revealing. That he was called “Perdition” explains why the heavens wept over him. According to the dictionary, the word perdition means utter destruction, loss, eternal damnation, hell.” As Isaiah also said, he was Lucifer, a “son of the morning” (Isaiah 14:12). According to President Joseph Fielding Smith, Lucifer means “a torchbearer” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:281), the word lucifer, itself means bearer of light. “Son of the morning” is usually interpreted to mean he was one of the early-born spirit children of Elohim. Thus, as one of the older of the children of God and someone in a position of authority, the title of Lucifer implies he was not only rebelling against God but was also leading others to do likewise. Therefore, he is designated a torchbearer or crusader against God. In fact, as both Isaiah (Isaiah 14:13-14) and this section teach, he “sought to take the kingdom of our God and his Christ” (verse 28). To do this “he maketh war with the saints of God, and encompasseth them round about” (verse 29). In other words, his primary function of the earth is to oppose the work of the Church and its members. Therefore, we may be assured that whenever members of the Church are individually or collectively assembled to further their own spiritual progress or that of the Church, the devil will be there in opposition. In the words of Joseph Smith, “In relation to the kingdom of God, the devil always sets up his kingdom at the very same time in opposition to God” (TPJS, 365).

25 And this we saw also, and bear record, that an angel of God who was in authority in the presence of God, who rebelled against the Only Begotten Son whom the Father loved and who was in the bosom of the Father, was thrust down from the presence of God and the Son, verse 25 “who was in authority in the presence of God” In the premortal world Satan exercised priesthood power. The poetic version calls him “an angel of light in authority great” (see Abraham 3:27-28).

26 And was called Perdition, for the heavens wept over him—he was Lucifer, a son of the morning.

verse 26 “The heavens wept over him,” and with good reason! He was an “angel of God who was in authority [held the priesthood] in the presence of God.” He was Lucifer, which means torch bearer, or bearer of light. He was a “son of the morning,” which could mean either “son of light” or an early-born spirit child of our Father in the pre-earthly life. Obviously he had great capacity, promise, and influence (compare Moses 7:28). However, he was overcome by pride. After the Father put forth his plan for the salvation of man, Lucifer was presumptuous enough to disagree with the Father’s plan and put forth his own. There was never any question, of course, as to whose plan would be employed. I could well be that presumption and pride were not accurate descriptions of his motivation. There is good reason to believe that the Father’s plan was frightening to him. He was going to have to leave a setting of great status, be born into mortality, and earn the honor of returning to his place of notable position. Your author’s suspicion is that he knew himself well enough to know that he would never make it. In essence, he was a pitiful coward who dared not take the chance of entering the test of mortality.

Who exactly is doing the weeping in this verse? Is it the hosts of heaven—the myriad premortal spirits who knew and associated with Lucifer in that sphere? Or might it be God the Father and God the Son themselves? For a defense of this latter possibility, see Moses 7:28-29 and the commentary for those verses.

Perdition means “the lost one.” It is notable that the title Lucifer occurs in only two other places in the scripture—Isaiah 14:12 and in Nephi’s quoting of this same Isaiah passage in 2 Nephi 24:12.

If you will study the commentary for D&C 132:26-27, you will learn that Satan became Perdition in the same way that a man on the earth might become a son of Perdition—he committed the unpardonable “sin against the Holy Ghost.” He openly rebelled from a position of great light and knowledge. By his power and influence he convinced “a third part of the hosts of heaven” to rebel with him “because of their agency” (D&C 29:36). We must presume that each of his followers also was guilty of the unpardonable sin. That is each fell from a position of great knowledge and fought against the Lord and his plan. Satan and his followers were “thrust down” “into the earth” (Revelation 12:9), “to deceive and to blind men, and to lead them captive at his will, even as many as would not hearken unto [the Lord’s] voice” (Moses 4:4).

For further discussion of Satan, his motives, and his methods, see Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 16, The Role of Satan.

27 And we beheld, and lo, he is fallen! is fallen, even a son of the morning!

28 And while we were yet in the Spirit, the Lord commanded us that we should write the vision; for we beheld Satan, that old serpent, even the devil, who rebelled against God, and sought to take the kingdom of our God and his Christ—verse 28 “Satan, that old serpent, even the devil” The term Satan comes from the Hebrew and means “adversary,” “enemy,” or “accuser” (compare Revelation 12:10).

Devil, on the other hand, comes from the Greek word “diablos,” and means literally “one who separates or divides.” This title is especially apt as the devil separated himself and his followers from God in the premortal world. Also, he now separates those he deceives from God. While God seeks to make us all one (see D&C 38:27; John 17:20-22), the devil seeks to divide us against one another into factions and parties. The divine impulse unites, the devilish divides.

Satan is frequently identified with a serpent or dragon and particularly with the serpent in Genesis 3 (see also Revelation 20:2). In the ancient world the serpent was often a symbol for the forces of chaos and dissolution. Like a poisonous serpent, Satan injects his venom and kills with his mouth—for example, by lying, accusing, teaching false doctrine, etc.

“sought to take the kingdom of our God and his Christ” Satan apparently attempted something like a coup d’ état—to seize the throne of God by force (see Isaiah 14:12-15).

29 Wherefore, he maketh war with the saints of God, and encompasseth them round about.

verse 29 “he maketh war with the saints of God” Satan has singled out the saints as his enemy against whom he will make war. Joseph Smith said, “The devil will use his greatest efforts to trap the saints” (TPJS, 161). He also told Heber C. Kimball that “The nearer a person approaches the Lord, the greater the power that will be manifest by the adversary to prevent the accomplishment of his purposes” (Life of Heber C. Kimball, 1967, 132). Only the saints have the potential of being thrust down to the depths of misery where he dwells. Only the saints have sufficient light available to them to be “sealed up” to their exaltation by the Holy Ghost, and only those who have been “sealed up” can fall to the status of “son of Perdition.” They can rise higher or fall farther than any other of the Father’s children.

“encompasseth them round about” It is interesting to note that a similar expression to this one, “encompassed about,” is found three times in the Book of Mormon (2 Nephi 4:18; Ether 3:2; 6:7). “Encompassed” means encircled or surrounded, but in this verse and in the three verses in the Book of Mormon it implies something further. It suggests being surrounded by something that is threatening or dangerous and nearly overwhelming.

30 And we saw a vision of the sufferings of those with whom he made war and overcame, for thus came the voice of the Lord unto us:

verse 30 “those with whom he made war and overcame” The sons of perdition (see verses 31-32).

31 Thus saith the Lord concerning all those who know my power, and have been made partakers thereof, and suffered themselves through the power of the devil to be overcome, and to deny the truth and defy my power—verse 31 Read this verse again carefully, knowing that the Lord is speaking of the sons of perdition, “those who know my [the Lord’s] power, and have been made partakers thereof” This phrase refers to the high level of spiritual progress necessary before one can fall all the way to outer darkness (see D&C 67:10).

“suffered themselves” They knowingly allowed themselves to be overcome. Like Cain, with full knowledge of both Lords, they loved Satan more than God and deliberately choose to follow Satan (Moses 5:18).

32 They are they who are the sons of perdition, of whom I say that it had been better for them never to have been born;

verse 32 “sons of perdition” Recall that perdition means “lost.” These are they who have made the devil—perdition—their spiritual father rather than Christ, and their fate is to be cast off and lost—perdition—forever. Let us review the characteristics of the son of perdition (see also verse 32). First, he knows the Lord’s power, which is the priesthood. Second, he has partaken of the Lord’s power by entering into his covenants (ordinances), particularly those entered into in the temple. Third, having received the power of God and knowing him and the truth of his gospel, he deliberately denies and defies him. He has got to say that “the sun does not shine while he sees it” (TPJS, 358).

“better for them never to have been born” Though only a hypothetical possibility, oh that they could have never even entered the premortal presence of God the Father or could never have been born into mortality. In either circumstance they lost or will lose any semblance of eternal glory.

33 For they are vessels of wrath, doomed to suffer the wrath of God, with the devil and his angels in eternity;

verse 33 “vessels of wrath” This metaphor compares the sons of perdition to cups or other containers into which the wrath of God is to be poured.

34 Concerning whom I have said there is no forgiveness in this world nor in the world to come—verse 34 The expression that the sons of perdition have “crucified [Christ] unto themselves” (verse 35) means that Christ and his atonement are dead to them—absolutely and irrevocably inoperative in their lives. Forgiveness, of course, comes only through the Savior’s atonement.

The Prophet Joseph had some chilling things to say about the unpardonable sin and those apostates in the early days of the Church and how the spirit of murder can enter their hearts:

What must a man do to commit the unpardonable sin? He must receive the Holy Ghost, have the heavens opened unto him, and know God, and then sin against him. After a man has sinned against the Holy Ghost, there is no repentance for him. He has got to say that the sun does not shine while he sees it; he has got to deny Jesus Christ when the heavens have been opened unto him, and to deny the plan of salvation with his eyes open to the truth of it; and from that time he begins to be an enemy. This is the case with many apostates of The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. . . . When a man begins to be an enemy to this work, he hunts me, he seeks to kill me, and never ceases to thirst for my blood. He gets the spirit of the devil—the same spirit that they had who crucified the Lord of Life—the same spirit that sins against the Holy Ghost (TPJS, 358).

35 Having denied the Holy Spirit after having received it, and having denied the Only Begotten Son of the Father, having crucified him unto themselves and put him to an open shame.

verse 35 “Having denied the Holy Spirit after having received it” President Spencer W. Kimball explained: “The sin against the Holy Ghost requires such knowledge that it is manifestly impossible for the rank and file to commit such a sin” (Teachings of Spencer W. Kimball, 23).

“and put him to an open shame” Sons of perdition would gladly see the Savior ridiculed, spat upon, exposed to all manner of indignity, and even destroyed.

36 These are they who shall go away into the lake of fire and brimstone, with the devil and his angels—verse 36 “the lake of fire and brimstone” A hyperbolic metaphor for the fate of the sons of perdition.

37 And the only ones on whom the second death shall have any power;

verse 37 “second death” See the commentary for D&C 63:17. The term “second death,” as it is used in scripture, sometimes refers to that place of eternal damnation where Satan and his sons live, so-called outer darkness (see Jacob 3:11).

There are they who have “sinned unto death” (D&C 64:7). More commonly, however, the term “second death” is used to refer to the spiritual death or that separation from God which may be suffered by mortals due to their sins (see the commentary for Alma 12:16).

38 Yea, verily, the only ones who shall not be redeemed in the due time of the Lord, after the sufferings of his wrath.

verse 38 All of God’s children will be saved in a “heaven,” that is, they shall inherit heavenly glory in one of its three degrees—telestial, terrestrial, or celestial—except for the sons of perdition. All humanity, except the sons of perdition are granted “salvation”—freedom from death, hell, and the devil (see the commentary for 2 Nephi 28:23).

39 For all the rest shall be brought forth by the resurrection of the dead, through the triumph and the glory of the Lamb, who was slain, who was in the bosom of the Father before the worlds were made.

verse 39 This verse has caused some confusion. It implies that the sons of perdition will not be resurrected. While those sons of perdition who were won over by Satan in the premortal world will never be resurrected, we know that the blessings of resurrection are extended to all those born into mortality (see D&C 88:14-16, 95-102; Alma 12:16-18) including those who live out a mortal life, suffer mortal death, and while in spirit prison steadfastly refuse to repent. They remain “filthy still,” and are banished to outer darkness where they become sons of perdition.

40 And this is the gospel, the glad tidings, which the voice out of the heavens bore record unto us—verse 40 “And this is the gospel” What is the “gospel”? The term gospel comes from the Old English godspell which is derived from god (meaning “good”) and spel (meaning “story”). Gospel, then, literally means “good story,” “good news,” or “glad tidings.” The LDS Bible Dictionary defines the gospel: “The good news is that Jesus Christ has made a perfect atonement for mankind that will redeem all mankind from the grave and reward each individual according to his/her works” (682). Without his atonement, we are lost. Elder Bruce R. McConkie expanded this definition and defined the gospel as, “the atonement. But the gospel is also all of the laws, principles, doctrines, rites, ordinances, acts, powers authorities, and keys needed to save and exalt fallen man in the highest heaven hereafter” (A New Witness for the Articles of Faith, 134).

All other things in the gospel are merely appendages to his atonement. While the doctrines—the commandments, the ordinances, the “plan of salvation”—may be considered to be appendages to the Lord’s atonement, they are, of course, vital as they comprise the plan whereby a man may be exalted. The gospel of Christ, also called the “doctrine of Christ” (Jacob 7:2, 6; 2 Nephi 31:2, 21; 32:6), then, consists of those teachings which, when adhered to, make it possible to return to live eternally in the presence of our heavenly parents and our Savior. The gospel is the “only way . . . under heaven whereby man can be saved in the kingdom of God” (2 Nephi 31:21). It is the only doctrine with the power to save. It is the complete formula for getting back to our celestial home.

The gospel of Christ may be reduced to a six-step formula, though certainly not a formula in the sense of a check list meant to be mechanically followed one time through in sequence. It is a formula whose steps must be all kept simultaneously in mind and worked on continuously:

1. The baptism of water. We deliberately commit ourselves to him and evidence that commitment by our willingness to be baptized. In our consenting to be baptized, we humbly manifest our willingness to forsake our worldly ways. We affirm our intention and willingness to identify ourselves with his people and enter into a covenant to take upon ourselves his holy name (2 Nephi 31:13) and obey him. We evidence our sincere desire to return to God’s presence, desiring it above all else, “with full purpose of heart . . . with real intent” (2 Nephi 31:13). We also communicate our desire to actively and enthusiastically seek out the mind of God in order that we might conform to that will.

The actual ordinance of baptism of water is the physical token of this sacred commitment or covenant. An individual baptized by with the proper authority becomes a candidate for the process which will eventuate in his spiritual rebirth and entrance into the kingdom of God.

2. The baptism of the Spirit. This is the receiving of the gift of the Holy Ghost by the laying on of hands by someone with proper authority (2 Nephi 31:12). This essential gift bestows the power of personal revelation without which there can be no spiritual progress. It also enables and authorizes an individual to participate in the third part of the ordinance of baptism, the baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost.

3. The baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost. This third component of the ordinance of baptism embodies the principle of repentance and the sanctifying influence of the Holy Ghost. The baptism of fire and of the Holy Ghost is the very process or “ordinance” by which man progresses spiritually here on earth. Through this process he is purged of his sins and imperfections. It is an ongoing process that continues over a lifetime.

As we manifest our basic faith—our deliberate faith—by our actions through submitting ourselves to these three parts of the ordinance of baptism, we qualify ourselves to begin to receive the myriad gifts of the Spirit that gradually begin to mold us in his image. We qualify ourselves to participate in the process of spiritual growth.

How does this process actually work? How do we qualify for this sanctifying and purging by the Holy Ghost and this incremental receiving of gifts of the Spirit? The process centers on the ordinance of the sacrament. When we partake of the sacrament, we must commit ourselves to a specific goal of obedience for the coming week. We should prayerfully search our soul and ferret out a specific and small areas where we need to improve. Then we should commit—even covenant—to do better in that specific area. If we strive diligently to obey and live up to our commitment, the Spirit will acknowledge our efforts and the purity of our motivations, and he will bless us. He will extend to us the blessings of the Lord's atonement. He will first forgive us of our sins in the particular area in which we are striving to obey (justification—he will justify us). Then he will sanctify us which is a two-part process. He will first purge out of our soul—as if by fire—the part of the natural self that led to those particular sins. He will then grant us an increment of an attribute of the Savior, a gift of the Spirit. We thus take a small step toward becoming like Christ. Once we have taken a small step, then we are ready for another, and another. Becoming and remaining involved in the process of justification and sanctification is vital.

This process does not just result in a new coat of paint or a “detailing” of our exterior. Rather it produces basic and fundamental changes in us beginning from deep within. It results in a thorough and genuine change in perspective and lifestyle. Through repeated applications of this process we are “born again” (John 3:1-5; Mosiah 27:24-26; Alma 7:14)—we become literally “new creatures,” “totally converted,” “justified,” “reconciled to God,” “born again,” “born of the Spirit,” “born of God,” and “quickenened in the inner man.” We might also be said to have “experienced a mighty change” or to have “received his image in [our] countenances” or to have “entered into the rest of God.” We may even be called “perfect” or “perfect in Christ.”

This brief description of the principles of faith, the three parts of the ordinance of baptism, justification, sanctification, and spiritual growth is hardly satisfactory in instilling in the reader a thorough understanding of these vital and most fundamental principles. For a more thorough grounding please see the following chapters in volume 1 of Ye Shall Know of the doctrine: chapter 9, Revealed Faith, chapter 10, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith, chapter 11, Other Notes on Faith, chapter 7, Spiritual Growth Gifts of the Spirit, chapter 8, The Blessings of Spiritual Gifts, chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification, and chapter 18, Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth.

4. The gifts of hope and charity. These culminating gifts are available to those who are well along the path of righteousness and spiritual progress. For a discussion of these two gifts, see “The Fruits of Faith” in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 11, Other Notes on Faith.

5. Enduring to the end (2 Nephi 31:20). It seems clear that spiritual progress must be an ongoing process. It must be engaged in pro-actively and not passively. There seems to be no such thing as a plateau in an individual's spiritual maturity. When progress slows to a stop, then backsliding will inevitably begin to occur. The key to continued progression, and thus to “enduring to the end” is to maintain one's relationship with and receptivity to the Spirit of God, the Holy Ghost. Without such a relationship it seems impossible to maintain that vital eternal perspective and attitude. When the spiritual or eternal perspective is lost, then only the world and worldliness remains, and all spiritual progress ceases. We must never cease to deliberately strive to progress and improve ourselves. Only in that way does our responsiveness to the promptings of the Spirit remain fresh and alive. The principle of “no pain, no gain” certainly applies in the area of spiritual progress as much as any other. An element of personal grit, will power, and determination are essential.

Some may think of enduring to the end in terms of “hanging on” or “putting up with” or “sticking it out.” Such terms miss the spirit of real enduring. Elder Neal A. Maxwell taught: “Patient endurance is to be distinguished from merely being ‘acted upon.’ Endurance is more than pacing up and down within the cell of our circumstance; it is not only acceptance of the things allotted to us (Alma 29:3, 6). . . . True enduring represents not merely the passage of time, but the passage of the soul” (CR, April 1990, 43). Scripturally, an individual who is ever-striving is said to stand “steadfastly” and “always rejoice, and be filled with the love of God, and always retain a remission of [his] sins; and [he] shall grow in the knowledge of the glory of him that created [him], or in the knowledge of that which is just and true” (Mosiah 4:11-12).

6. Receiving the promise of eternal life (2 Nephi 31:20). As one’s progress continues, then his continued obedience is almost assured, and, in fact, may eventually be guaranteed by the Lord. First, the righteous and obedient individual is a candidate for an ever-increasing gift of the Spirit, the gift of hope. This is the assurance that one is right with God and that one’s behaviors are acceptable to him. Eventually A man may be “sealed up” to eternal life or have his “calling and election made sure.” Apparently, this may occur during this mortal life or at mortal death.

Please see additional material on the gift of hope and the phenomenon of having one’s calling and election made sure in volume 1 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine. See particularly “Two Little-Appreciated Gifts of the Spirit” in chapter 10, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith and “The Fruits of Faith” in chapter 11, Other Notes on Faith. Still further discussion of this topic is found in “The Rest of the Lord—the Gift of Hope” in chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification. See also volume 2 of Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, chapter 16, Calling and Election Made Sure.

We must add to this six-step formula, the principle of the Lord’s atonement which underlies and forms the basis of each principle discussed. We may also add resurrection and eternal judgment. These latter two doctrines were regarded by the prophet Joseph Smith as being among the first principles of the gospel (TPJS, 149, 365).

41 That he came into the world, even Jesus, to be crucified for the world, and to bear the sins of the world, and to sanctify the world, and to cleanse it from all unrighteousness; verse 41 “to be crucified for the world” It should be noted that Jesus came into the world to die for the world, the whole world, so that all the world, not just the righteous part of it, might eventually be cleansed, sanctified, and saved in some kingdom of glory (compare John 3:16). The poetic version of section 76 expresses this idea by saying that Jesus, “lay down his life for his friends and his foes.”

42 That through him all might be saved whom the Father had put into his power and made by him; verse 42 “whom the Father had put into his power” To which of God’s children does this phrase refer? It likely refers to those who favored Christ and his plan in the premortal world and whom Christ was then given power to save through his atonement. Christ was not given power to save those in the one-third of the hosts of heaven who were cast down to earth or those who came into mortality who will refuse to repent and who with therefore remain “filthy still.” These sons of perdition are eliminated forever from salvation, as repentance is a condition of receiving the blessings of the atonement.

“and made by him” All of the physical laws and materials and processes of our universe depend completely upon the light of Christ. Without him the organized universe could not and would not exist or function (D&C 88:13). Thus, while Christ does not father our physical bodies, the materials of which they are composed and their biological processes come from him and his creative powers. All organized physical existence depends utterly upon him.

43 Who glorifies the Father, and saves all the works of his hands, except those sons of perdition who deny the Son after the Father has revealed him.

verse 43 “Who glorifies the Father” We have commented previously that, in ways we don’t completely understand, each individual who is saved in a kingdom of glory somehow adds to the glory or light to the Father.

“saves all the works of his hands” Christ does not really lose the sons of perdition. Rather, they lose themselves. Ultimately all humankind, except for the sons of perdition are saved from death, hell, and the devil in a kingdom of glory. It was this glorious doctrine that caused some in the Church in 1832 to stumble because it so contradicted the traditions they had been taught and had accepted in their former churches.

“who deny the Son after the Father has revealed him” Whenever the Father’s voice has been heard by man on earth, it has been to identify and testify of his Only Begotten Son (see verse 23; Matthew 3:17; 17:5; 2 Peter 1:17; 2 Nephi 31:11, 15;

3 Nephi 11:7; JS-H 1:17). It is not possible for most of us to become sons of perdition. A special testimony and a special witness are required before a man can become a son of perdition.

44 Wherefore, he saves all except them—they shall go away into everlasting punishment, which is endless punishment, which is eternal punishment, to reign with the devil and his angels in eternity, where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched, which is their torment—verse 44 “everlasting punishment . . . endless punishment . . . eternal punishment” The Lord’s use of these terms in association with the concept of the sons of perdition has caused some confusion among the saints. Recall that these terms in section 19 do not mean punishment that lasts forever. Rather, they mean God’s punishment (see D&C 19:10-12 and the commentary for these verses). Do the sons of perdition suffer a punishment that goes on forever or do they suffer a punishment designed by God which may even have a finite end? Does this verse open the door to a doctrine of eventual redemption for the sons of perdition? In a letter to W. W. Phelps, Joseph Smith wrote in 1833: “Say to the brothers Hulet and to all others, that the Lord never authorized them to say that the devil, his angels, or the sons of perdition, should ever be restored; for their state or destiny was not revealed to man, is not revealed, nor ever shall be revealed, save to those who are made partakers thereof: consequently those who teach this doctrine have not received it of the Spirit of the Lord. Truly Brother Oliver declared it to be the doctrine of devils. We, therefore, command that this doctrine be taught no more in Zion” (TPJS, 24).

It is clear we are not given to know the nature of punishment afforded the sons of perdition. My own particular bias is that the Lord seems more likely to banish them to eternal ennui and lassitude than agony that lasts forever.

“to reign with the devil and his angels” It has been common in the Church to think that those who pass through mortality and resurrection to become sons of perdition may reign or rule over Satan and his unembodied angels in eternity (see Moses 5:23; TPJS, 181). Some have supposed that the resurrected bodies of the former will produce an everlasting advantage over the latter.

There is another suggestion in scripture, however, that the resurrected bodies of those condemned to outer darkness will eventually undergo dissolution. They may even return to the form of naked intelligence. The prophet Lehi, for example, teaches in 2 Nephi 1:22: “That ye may not be cursed with a sore cursing; and also, that ye may not incur the displeasure of a just God upon you, unto the destruction, yea, the eternal destruction of both soul and body.” As is often the case in the Book of Mormon, the word “soul” is best interpreted here as spirit. As mentioned, some have seen this verse as evidence that certain of the children of God, namely those who become sons of perdition, may, after their resurrection, not live forever with their resurrected bodies or even their spirit bodies.

Brigham Young, referring to the sons of perdition, made a chilling comment:

They will be decomposed, both soul and body, and return to their native element. I do not say that they will be annihilated; but they will be disorganized, and will be as though they never had been, while we will live and retain our identity, and contend against those principles which tend to death or dissolution. I am after life; I want to preserve my identity, so that you can see Brigham in the eternal worlds just as you see him now (JD, 7:57-58).

Presumably, this dissolution of the bodies of the sons of perdition is to include the dissolution of the resurrected bodies for those who had a mortal experience. And it may even include dissolution of the spirit bodies of Satan and his “third part” of the hosts of heaven. This would leave all sons of perdition without any embodiment whatever. Each would have nothing remaining except for their individual naked intelligence, in which they would be cast into outer darkness, perhaps never again to be picked up in another round of creation. This final dissolution of the bodies may be termed the “third death” (the “first death” is the spiritual death of each man due to the fall of Adam. The “second death” is the second spiritual death of each man due to his own sins).

“where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched” The phrasing follows Mark 9:44-48. The ancients believed that a toothache was caused by a worm eating the inside of a tooth just as a worm eats the inside of an apple. A cavity, they believed, marked the place where the worm had entered, and the phrase “the worm turns” described a sudden sharp pain in a bad tooth. When a bad tooth finally stopped aching, it was believed that the worm eating it had died. “Where their worm dieth not,” then, described an endless excruciating toothache with no hope of relief. Of course the language is figurative, as is the reference to fire, but the imagery is meant to convey some idea of the unending, inextinguishable, and self-inflicted torments of perdition.

45 And the end thereof, neither the place thereof, nor their torment, no man knows;

46 Neither was it revealed, neither is, neither will be revealed unto man, except to them who are made partakers thereof;

47 Nevertheless, I, the Lord, show it by vision unto many, but straightway shut it up again;

48 Wherefore, the end, the width, the height, the depth, and the misery thereof, they understand not, neither any man except those who are ordained unto this condemnation.

verse 48 “those who are ordained unto this condemnation” Smith and Sjodahl in their Commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants wrote of this phrase: “Not foreordained, in the sense of pre-elected by God, to condemnation. . . . He has not foreordained anyone to that fate” (455).

49 And we heard the voice, saying: Write the vision, for lo, this is the end of the vision of the sufferings of the ungodly.

The Vision of the Celestial Kingdom (verses 50-70, 92-96)

Those who inherit this degree of glory are “exalted.” They are those “into whose hands the Father has given all things” (verse 56) and those who have “received of his fulness” (verse 58). They “are Gods.” Later (see D&C 131:1-4), the Prophet explained that there were “three heavens or degrees” within the celestial kingdom (see section 131). It seems clear that the focus of this part of section 76 is upon the highest “heaven” within the celestial kingdom.

Those accepted into the celestial kingdom must have a testimony of Jesus (verse 51); be baptized (verse 51); have received the Holy Ghost (verse 52); keep the commandments (verse 52); overcome sin and the world by faith—also overcome any trial or obstacle “the Lord seeth fit to inflict upon him” (Mosiah 3:19); prove to himself and to God that he is determined to serve God at all hazards (verse 63); and be sealed by the Holy Spirit of Promise (verse 53)—that is; be ratified or approved as worthy of the celestial kingdom by the Holy Ghost (see also the commentary for D&C 132:7).

Though nothing specific is said in this revelation about the necessity of eternal marriage in order to achieve exaltation in the celestial kingdom, that requirement is made clear in D&C 131:1-4 and D&C 132:15-25. Also we learn from D&C 84:33-44 that faithfulness to the oath and covenant of the priesthood is a requirement.

Those who attain this glory are members of the “Church of Enoch” or the “Church of the Firstborn” and “are come unto Mount Zion” (verse 66). These are simply other ways of saying that they are exalted. As we contemplate dwelling “in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever” (verse 62), with all the blessings attendant thereto, we can understand Alma’s declaration: “and my soul did long to be there” (Alma 36:22).

The word “Firstborn” in the phrase “Church of the Firstborn” was never capitalized in the Doctrine and Covenants until the 1921 edition. “Church of the firstborn” is also found in Hebrews, and “firstborn” is not capitalized there. In fact, in the early Greek text the term “firstborn” is plural, meaning the “firstborn ones.” Although “firstborn” certainly may refer to the Savior, it also may have reference to those who are firstborn into the kingdom of God—those who will come with him at his second coming and those who will rise up from the earth and be resurrected from their graves at his coming. These are the ones who come forth in the morning of the first resurrection.

President Harold B. Lee Spoke of those who would inherit celestial glory and explained that they must be converted: “Conversion must mean more than just being a ‘card-carrying’ member of the Church with a tithing receipt, a membership card, a temple recommend, etc. It means to overcome the tendencies to criticize and to strive continually to improve inward weaknesses and not merely the outward appearances” (CR, April 1971, 92).

50 And again we bear record—for we saw and heard, and this is the testimony of the gospel of Christ concerning them who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just—verse 50 “resurrection of the just” Please recall that questions about the resurrection of the just had been part of Joseph and Sidney’s original inquiry prior to their receiving section 76 (see verses 15-19). The “resurrection of the just” is the morning of the first resurrection. All men are not resurrected at the same moment. There exists a pre-defined order and sequence in which man is resurrected. Let us summarize this sequence. The apostle Paul said, “For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive. But every man in his own order” (1 Corinthians 15:22-23; italics added).

Actually there are two separate resurrections, the first resurrection (also called the “resurrection of the just”), and the second resurrection (also referred to as “the resurrection of damnation” or “the resurrection of the unjust”).

The first resurrection is divided into two parts: the “morning of the first resurrection” and the “afternoon of the first resurrection.” Those who merit a celestial body come forth in the “morning” of the first resurrection. These are they who once resided in paradise, those who bore the title “just men made perfect,” those referred to as “the just” (D&C 76:17), meaning that they are justified, ratified, sealed, and approved of God. These are they who have had their calling and election made sure—they who have received the promise by revelation that they shall be equal with him in “power, might, and dominion” (see D&C 76:95). Those who come forth in this resurrection will live with God and enjoy eternal life which is God’s life.

The morning of the first resurrection began at the time of the resurrection of Jesus, and it is likely continuing at the present time. The final phase of the “morning” is the major resurrection that will occur at the time of Christ’s Second Coming just prior to the Millennium. Of course, those who live during the Millennium and merit celestial glory will receive their celestial bodies during the millennial period (see D&C 132:19).

Those who will inherit a terrestrial body arise in the “afternoon” of the first resurrection. The afternoon of the first resurrection begins some time after the onset of the Millennium and ends before the end of the one thousand years. As mentioned, it is during this phase that those bound for the terrestrial glory will receive their bodies. These are called “Christ’s at his coming” (D&C 88:99). These are they “who have received their part in that prison which is prepared for them, that they might receive the gospel, and be judged according to men in the flesh” (Ibid.). These have accepted Christ but not to the degree that would result in their exaltation.

The second resurrection begins at the end of the Millennium. The first to come forth in the second resurrection are those who have been cleansed of their sins and have thus earned the telestial glory. Then, finally, those who have earned no glory and who are destined to spend the rest of eternity with Satan in outer darkness come forth with their bodies. Even “hell” or the spirit prison cannot purge these of their filth. They were given a sure witness and knowledge of heaven’s secrets, but they denied it all and came out in open rebellion striving to destroy the church. Thus they “crucify Christ afresh.” Their fate is unknown, but, as we have already discussed, some have speculated that they may eventually experience dissolution of their resurrected bodies and exist forever as naked or disembodied intelligences in outer darkness.

51 They are they who received the testimony of Jesus, and believed on his name and were baptized after the manner of his burial, being buried in the water in his name, and this according to the commandment which he has given—

52 That by keeping the commandments they might be washed and cleansed from all their sins, and receive the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hands of him who is ordained and sealed unto this power; verses 51-52 Those who inherit celestial glory must have a testimony of Jesus, and they must accept the fulness of his gospel including the ordinances of his Church. Joseph Smith taught: “A man may be saved, after the judgment, in the terrestrial kingdom, or in the telestial kingdom, but he can never see the celestial kingdom of God without being born of the water and the Spirit” (HC, 1:283).

53 And who overcome by faith, and are sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise, which the Father sheds forth upon all those who are just and true.

verse 53 “who overcome by faith” It is clear that those who inherit celestial glory must “overcome all things” (compare verse 60). But what do they overcome, and how do they do it? How does faith enter in?

The celestial-bound individual must subdue or overcome all aspects of his natural self or natural-man self. Inevitably, as we endeavor to obey the Lord’s commands, we encounter resistance from our natural self. Initially we must exert our deliberate will in order to obey. We must summon the strength and decide to obey and then obey. This willful and purposeful doing is a manifestation of “deliberate faith” (see the three chapters on faith in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapters 9, 10, and 11). With each act of deliberate obeying there follows the blessing of being granted gifts of the Spirit—increments of the attributes of Christ. These are granted by personal revelation and are received partly because the Spirit judges the obedient individual’s efforts worthy of such a blessing and partly because the Lord is able to mercifully grant such blessings by virtue of his atoning sacrifice. As we receive gifts of the Spirit, we may be said to be acquiring “revealed faith.” This acquisition results in a lessening or softening of the pulls and tugs of the natural self. An individual who has acquired, through his obedience, much revealed faith—many gifts of the Spirit—thus has less trouble obeying. We thus see the interplay of deliberate effort (deliberate faith), spiritual growth (revealed faith), and the Lord’s grace and mercy in our “overcoming” our natural self.

“sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise” In this particular verse the expression “sealed by the Holy Spirit of promise” likely means sealed up to eternal life.

The Holy Spirit of promise is none other than the Holy Ghost. This is a title used for the Holy Ghost when he performs a particular type of function. A covenant is a contract or a mutual promise between two parties, and it becomes valid or binding when it is “sealed.” Anciently contracts were sealed in wax or clay with the impression of a signet ring or an official seal. Today we seal most contracts by signing them, though official seals are sometimes still used. Covenants or contracts made with God may be sealed by the power of the Holy Ghost. This occurs when a man has successfully kept his part of the covenant. The Spirit then ratifies, approves, and seals the promised blessings upon the individual. The Holy Ghost ratifies and approves the righteous acts of men so that the covenants—according to which those acts were performed—will be binding on earth and in heaven (D&C 132:7). When a covenant with God is sealed, then God will surely keep his end of the bargain. Covenants with God may be entered into but not sealed. Then the contract or covenant is not binding upon the Lord—we “have no promise” (D&C 82:10). We ensure that the Holy Ghost seals or ratifies the contract by our keeping our part of the bargain. Then the Lord is bound.

Ultimately the end result of a lifetime of covenant ratifying (or unratifying) or sealing (or unsealing) is to be “sealed up” to a certain fate or destination, such as the celestial kingdom or exaltation in that kingdom, although people can also be sealed up to wrath (see D&C 1:8-9; 133:71-73) or even be sealed by the devil (see Alma 34:35).

54 They are they who are the church of the Firstborn.

verse 54 “the church of the Firstborn” The Firstborn of God (in the premortal world) is Jesus Christ. Thus, the “church of the Firstborn” is the Church of Jesus Christ. However, the term “The Church of Jesus Christ” is used to refer to his earthly Church, and the term “church of the Firstborn” is used to refer to his eternal heavenly Church—the celestial kingdom. Those on earth referred to by the title “church of the Firstborn” are those in his earthly Church who will still be members in the eternities. They are the faithful—the Church within the Church—those who keep their covenants, who are loyal and serve God with all their hearts. Even though a person’s name may have been found upon the rolls of the Church in mortality, he who takes his covenants lightly will no longer be a member of Jesus’s Church in eternity (see verses 79, 94-95).

55 They are they into whose hands the Father has given all things—verse 55 See verses 59-60. The poetic version adds, “For they hold the keys of the kingdom of Heav’n.”

56 They are they who are priests and kings, who have received of his fulness, and of his glory; verse 56 “priests and kings” They will have all authority as priests and kings unto God. Though kings themselves, they will still serve him who is the King of kings.

“who have received of his fulness” The antecedent of “his” is “the Father,” and the fulness spoken of here is the fulness of the Father (see verse 71). Those who become heirs of the celestial kingdom are joint heirs with Christ and eventually receive the same glory (light) which the Father has given the Son, becoming like the Father and the Son in glory. The poetic version specifies, “Receiving a fulness of glory and light.”

57 And are priests of the Most High, after the order of Melchizedek, which was after the order of Enoch, which was after the order of the Only Begotten Son.

verse 57 “priests of the Most High” Usually “the Most High” refers in scriptures to Jehovah who is Jesus Christ (for example, Psalm 83:18). However, Jesus at times introduces us to the Father who is even greater than himself (see John 14:28). Thus the title “Most High” may correctly be applied to either the Father or the Son, or even to the Godhead collectively.

“after the order of” The order or type of priesthood necessary to achieve the kingdom of God—the earthly Zion or the celestial kingdom—is the priesthood of Jesus Christ. Anciently this was called “the Holy Priesthood after the Order of the Son of God” (D&C 107:3). Because Melchizedek, and before him Enoch, had held this same priesthood and had utilized it to establish Zion, the order of the Son also became known as the order of Enoch and the order of Melchizedek. Both anciently and today, out of respect for the sacredness of its full title, this priesthood is called the Melchizedek Priesthood (see D&C 104:4).

58 Wherefore, as it is written, they are gods, even the sons of God—verse 58 “as it is written, they are gods” This is likely a reference to Psalm 82:6, which is also cited by Jesus in John 10:34. In John it is clear that Jesus understood the psalm to say that those who receive the “word of God” can be called gods (John 10:35), and in the fullest sense Christ is the Word of God (see John 1:1, Revelation 19:13) which must be received to bring this about.

“they are gods, even the sons of God” Note that the two terms “gods” and “sons of God,” are synonymous here, for to be one is also to be the other. Children grow up to be what their parents are. If, through the gospel, we have truly become the sons and daughters of God as the scriptures insist (see verse 24; D&C 11:30; 25:1; 50:41; 4 Nephi 1:17; Mosiah 5:7; 27:25; Ether 3:14; Moroni 7:19; Moses 6:68; 7:1; Matthew 5:9, 45; John 1:12; Romans 8:16-17, 21; 9:8, 26; Galatians 3:26; 1 John 3:9-10), then it follows that as we grow “from grace to grace”—following the example of Jesus himself—we also become more like God (see 2 Peter 1:4; 1 John 3:2; Revelation 3:21).

59 Wherefore, all things are theirs, whether life or death, or things present, or things to come, all are theirs and they are Christ’s, and Christ is God’s.

verse 59 “all things are theirs” See 1 Corinthians 3:21-23 (see also D&C 84:37-38; Revelation 21:7). What isn’t included in “all things”? For the celestial saints, every righteous desire will be granted; every goal achieved; every need satisfied; every hope fulfilled. It is impossible to adequately describe the gifts and bounties of God toward those who love him. They are truly beyond our present comprehension. Those who receive the celestial kingdom belong to Christ and are in his special care, just as Christ belongs to the Father and is in his special care. And as the Father gives all that he has to the Son, so the Son shares all that he has with us, his children of the covenant (see Romans 8:17; Revelation 3:21). Like a kind and good man who wins a fortune and shares his bounty with needy friends, so Christ receives all things, and then he invites us to partake with him in his victory.

60 And they shall overcome all things.

verse 60 See the commentary for verse 53.

61 Wherefore, let no man glory in man, but rather let him glory in God, who shall subdue all enemies under his feet.

verse 61 “let no man glory in man” As hard as we may be striving to keep the commandments, we must never assume that it is by our own merits that we grow spiritually and by our own merits that we are saved. We must rely “wholly upon the merits” of Christ (2 Nephi 31:19; compare 2 Nephi 2:8; see also 1 Corinthians 1:31).

62 These shall dwell in the presence of God and his Christ forever and ever.

63 These are they whom he shall bring with him, when he shall come in the clouds of heaven to reign on the earth over his people.

verse 63 “These are they whom he shall bring with him” At his second coming, Christ will bring with him the spirits of “the dead in Christ,” who have rested in paradise, or Abraham’s bosom, since their death (1 Thessalonians 4:16). Before any of those living upon the earth are caught up, these dead in Christ will be resurrected and will join their Savior in the clouds for his descent to the earth. Only then will the righteous mortals upon the earth be caught up—transfigured but not yet resurrected—to meet the Lord in the clouds and will also join him in his glorious descent (see D&C 88:96-98; Acts 1:9-11; 1 Thessalonians 4:14-17).

64 These are they who shall have part in the first resurrection.

65 These are they who shall come forth in the resurrection of the just.

verses 64-65 “first resurrection . . . resurrection of the just” See the commentary for verse 50.

66 These are they who are come unto Mount Zion, and unto the city of the living God, the heavenly place, the holiest of all.

verse 66 “Mount Zion” The language of verses 66-69 is paralleled in Hebrews 12:22-24. According to D&C 84:2-3; 133:56; Moses 7:62, and Articles of Faith 1:10, Mount Zion is the millennial New Jerusalem that is to be built upon the American continent beginning in Independence, Missouri. It was this very city that the saints in February of 1832 were attempting to build and whose location had been revealed to them barely seven months earlier (see D&C 45:64-71; 57:1-3).

“the city of the living God, the heavenly place” While Mount Zion, the New Jerusalem, is the millennial city of God, that city itself is symbolic of another, heavenly Jerusalem, a cosmic holy of holies, where the Father dwells in celestial glory. Descriptions of this Mount Zion sometimes blend with descriptions of the earthly New Jerusalem.

67 These are they who have come to an innumerable company of angels, to the general assembly and church of Enoch, and of the Firstborn.

verse 67 “an innumerable company of angels” Those who inherit the celestial kingdom will find themselves in communion and fellowship with many, perhaps billions, of celestial beings like themselves—the hosts of heaven—from billions of other worlds all created and glorified by the same Jesus Christ who created our world and who will glorify us.

“the general assembly and church of Enoch” The English word church actually translates from Greek and Hebrew words in the Bible meaning “assembly” or “congregation.” Thus, general assembly and church are parallel terms here meaning roughly the same thing. Because Enoch and his people established Zion and were taken up into heaven, they are a type or symbol for all those later saints who are worthy of Zion and, therefore, comprise part of the church of the Firstborn (see verse 54).

68 These are they whose names are written in heaven, where God and Christ are the judge of all.

verse 68 “whose names are written in heaven” See Luke 10:20; Philippians 4:3; Revelation 3:5; 20:12. There are actually two sets of church records. One is kept on earth for use by the earthly Church—The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints—and one is kept in heaven, where no mistakes are made, for the heavenly Church—the church of the Firstborn, or the faithful saints who keep their covenants and magnify their callings (see D&C 88:2). Being recorded in the earthly records does not guarantee being recorded in the heavenly record.

69 These are they who are just men made perfect through Jesus the mediator of the new covenant, who wrought out this perfect atonement through the shedding of his own blood.

verse 69 “just men made perfect” One may well argue that man, in absolute terms, can never be perfect since he will always be growing and progressing. Even when we reach the celestial kingdom we will have great distances to go before we are like God. But the scriptures say that “no unclean thing can enter the presence of God” (1 Nephi 15:34; Alma 11:37). How can a man be imperfect—still committing sin—and enter into the celestial kingdom? The answer is that here on earth and in heaven God does not hold us to an absolute standard. He does not require absolute perfection. What he does require is that we are earnestly and diligently and constantly striving toward absolute perfection. When we are, then he regularly and mercifully extends to us the blessings of his atonement and justifies or cleanses us of our sins—to the point where he classifies us as being perfect. Therefore, for us, absolute perfection is not possible, but “through the merits, and mercy, and grace of Christ the Holy Messiah” (2 Nephi 2:8) we may become “perfect in Christ.” The poetic version of this verse reads, “These are they that are perfect through Jesus’s own blood.”

“Jesus the mediator of the new covenant” When two parties are at odds or can’t deal with each other face to face, a mediator—a negotiator or go-between—is often called. Because sinful, fallen humans are estranged from their perfect, celestial Father (see Romans 8:7; Mosiah 3:19), we also need a mediator to act as a go-between and to work out an agreement.

The “old” covenant arranged between God and Israel was the law of Moses with its preparatory gospel, its carnal commandments, and its lesser priesthood (see D&C 84:23-27; JST Exodus 34:1-2). Because of Israel’s iniquity at Sinai, knowledge of the Father and access to him were severely limited under this old or lesser covenant, because these are exclusive privileges of the fulness of the gospel and of the Melchizedek Priesthood, which had both been taken away (see D&C 84:25). Under the old covenant of Moses, Jehovah or Jesus Christ represented the Godhead, and his Father remained largely unknown to Israel. The prophet Moses became the mediator or go-between between the Godhead—represented by Jehovah, the Son—and Israel, and this lesser covenant was named after its mediator “the law of Moses.”

In the “new” and everlasting covenant, which is the fulness of the gospel, Jesus Christ once again reveals his Father to Israel and once again seeks to bring us into his Father’s presence, as he once did with Adam, Enoch, Noah, and Abraham. In so doing, the Son himself now replaces Moses as mediator between the Godhead—now represented by Elohim, the Father—and Israel or the Church. This new and better covenant, which once again brings us a knowledge of and access to God the Father, is also named after its mediator, “the gospel of Jesus Christ.”

70 These are they whose bodies are celestial, whose glory is that of the sun, even the glory of God, the highest of all, whose glory the sun of the firmament is written of as being typical.

verse 70 “whose bodies are celestial” Bodies resurrected to celestial glory are qualitatively different from those resurrected to a lesser kingdom in that they can abide greater glory—greater divine energy. Thus, a celestial body can tolerate or “abide” the very presence of God and the fulness of his glory while a terrestrial or telestial body cannot.

“whose glory is that of the sun” The relative glories or light of the sun, moon, and stars are only symbolic of the differences between the heavenly kingdoms. It is in this sense that the expression “is written of as being typical” is used—the sun is a “type” or symbol of the celestial glory. Bear in mind that even the telestial glory is beyond our present powers of perception and appreciation (see verse 89), and that the actual glory of the celestial kingdom is infinitely greater than the brightness of the sun which symbolizes it.

Those who receive the terrestrial glory are:

1. those who died without law (verse 72). This category needs modification and amplification. These are those who died without the law who would not have accepted the fulness of the gospel if it had been available to them. Those who would have accepted the gospel had they heard it are heirs of the celestial kingdom (D&C 137:7-9).

2. the spirits of men kept in prison who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh (they had heard and denied it in the flesh) but afterwards received it (verses 73-74).

3. honorable men of the earth, who were blinded by the craftiness of men (verse 75). These also would not have accepted the fulness of the gospel if given the opportunity.

4. those who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus (verse 79). This category likely consists of church members who did not live the gospel fully.

Taken together, these qualities give us the profile of the terrestrial personality. That personality is capsulized in verses 75 and 79—“honorable men” who have a testimony of Jesus, but who are not valiant in that testimony. Neither celestial law nor telestial wickedness appeals to them.

The question often arises as to whether or not rejecting the gospel at one point in time disqualifies an individual from receiving it later. Perhaps the terrestrial individual earns his stripes not so much by missing one opportunity to accept the gospel but by manifesting repeatedly an unwillingness or inability to repent fully and respond to high levels of light and truth. Many church members also fit into this description of the terrestrial personality. They espouse the gospel ostensibly and may even talk as if they intend to fulfill all the spiritual obligations the gospel imposes on them, but never measure up to their stated intentions.

71 And again, we saw the terrestrial world, and behold and lo, these are they who are of the terrestrial, whose glory differs from that of the church of the Firstborn who have received the fulness of the Father, even as that of the moon differs from the sun in the firmament.

verse 71 “terrestrial” Outside sections 76 and 78, the word terrestrial occurs in scripture only in 1 Corinthians 15:40, where it is used to mean “of the earth” in contrast to celestial, which means “of the heavens.” The root of terrestrial is the Latin terra, which means “earth.” This derivation has troubled some students who associate the earth with Babylon, or the fallen, telectual world. But Paul made it clear he was speaking of the earth from which Adam was originally made (see 1 Corinthians 15:45, 47), that is, the earth as Eden, or paradise. And the Edenic state, or paradisiacal glory, is what this earth will receive again during the Millennium, when it will be returned to the terrestrial glory in which it was first created (see Articles of Faith 1:10).

72 Behold, these are they who died without law;

verse 72 We must be careful to not affix, in our minds, glib and simplistic criteria for assignment to this or that kingdom of glory. We must keep in mind, first of all, that the Savior himself will make the decision for each and every individual. He is the perfect judge and will render his decisions based upon an infinitely perfect knowledge of the characteristics, desires, intentions, and mitigating circumstances of each individual. He sees and understands men’s hearts intimately, and his judgments will all be incontestably fair. Secondly, a terrestrial person is one who cannot and will not abide the celestial law, but is also not of telectual quality. He would be unhappy eternally in either the celestial or telectual kingdoms. He is, at heart, thoroughly a terrestrial person, and he will eventually come to fully realize and acknowledge that fact. Similar principles apply to those found worthy of celestial or telectual glories.

“these are they who died without law” While it is true that a large portion of those who inherit terrestrial glory will be righteous individuals of the heathen nations who never heard the gospel, we must remember that there will be many exceptions. A couple of important principles apply to those who did not hear the gospel. First, “unto whom much is given much is required” (D&C 82:3). The Lord will hold those who had ample opportunity to hear and accept the gospel to a higher standard than he will those who did not. Also, the Lord is clearly able to judge those who did not hear the gospel as if they had heard it (see D&C 137:5-9). Thus, there will also be many among the heathen nations who will inherit either the celestial or telestial glory.

73 And also they who are the spirits of men kept in prison, whom the Son visited, and preached the gospel unto them, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh; verse 73 “the spirits of men” This expression, of course, refers to individuals of both sexes.

“kept in prison” A prison is any place you can’t leave when you want to, and in the spirit world even the righteous are held captive by the chains of death (see D&C 138:16-18). The spirits of the righteous cannot leave paradise. Rather, they wait for deliverance from death, and they look upon absence from their bodies as bondage (see D&C 138:15, 49-50). Thus, the phrase “spirit prison” applies to the entire spirit world, including “paradise,” and not merely to that part of the spirit world where the wicked suffer in hell. “Spirit world” and “spirit prison” are synonymous terms. The spirit prison includes both paradise, where the spirits of the righteous rest and wait in pleasant surroundings for their glorious resurrection, and hell (see D&C 76:84), where the spirits of the wicked suffer for their sins until their resurrection.

“whom the Son visited” See the account of President Joseph F. Smith of this great event—section 138. We actually learn from section 138 that the Savior taught the spirits in paradise but not those in the spirit prison. This verse may be explained, however, by the fact that even those spirits in paradise looked upon their condition in paradise as a bondage from which they yearned from release through their resurrection.

“that they might be judged according to men in the flesh” Both the mortal phase of man’s existence and the spirit world are parts of man’s second estate. The spirit world allows people a continuation of man’s probationary state. The Lord’s hope for the spirit world is that many might receive a greater eternal reward than their performance in mortality would otherwise merit. Joseph Smith praised this “continued duration for completion, in order that the heirs of salvation may confess the Lord and bow the knee” (HC, 1:252). Any additional progress made in the spirit world, including acceptance of vicarious ordinances, may then be credited to an individual just as though it had been achieved while still in the flesh. The poetic version reads, “And then were the living baptiz’d for their dead, That they might be judg’d as if men in the flesh.”

Let us be clear. Each and every individual will end up being assigned for all eternity that place where they will be everlastingly happy and fulfilled. The Lord sees the “heart” of each individual—he knows perfectly the “desires” every individual (Alma 29:4). But the word “desires” here does not refer merely to preferences. It refers to what the person actually is. If a man is of celestial quality, he will be granted celestial glory. The same principle holds true with the terrestrial being or the telestial being. The simple fact is that the terrestrial individual would simply not be happy in the celestial heaven. Celestial life will not be simply a life of bliss. There will be obvious and great challenges. There will be successes and failures. We only need to attempt to identify with the Father as he watches the results of this mortal trial on his sons and daughters. The celestial being is one who will accept and be fulfilled with all that they face in the celestial heaven. The terrestrial individual is one who will prefer the terrestrial life to the celestial life.

74 Who received not the testimony of Jesus in the flesh, but afterwards received it.

verse 74 The poetic version does much to explain this verse: “They received not the truth of the Savior at first [though they had the opportunity]; but did, when they heard it in prison again.” Thus, it would seem that those honorable people who reject the basic testimony of Jesus when they hear it in the flesh but later accept it in the spirit world, will inherit eternal glory, generally terrestrial glory wherein they may enjoy the presence of Jesus forever as he administers that kingdom (see verse 77; D&C 88:32;33; 138:32-33, 58-59). But again, it is not the timing of their accepting the Savior that is the important factor in the judgment. It is the extent to which they are willing and inclined to modify their lives by their acceptance of Christ and his gospel. It is really just exactly who and what they are in their hearts. Are they celestial? Or, are they terrestrial?

75 These are they who are honorable men of the earth, who were blinded by the craftiness of men.

verse 75 Here is the very essence of the terrestrial individual: He is a good, honest, and honorable person—a good neighbor—but he chooses to be misled on some aspects of the gospel by human arguments and reasoning and by his own natural inclinations.

76 These are they who receive of his glory, but not of his fulness.

verse 76 Terrestrial beings will bask in the glory of Jesus Christ, but they will never be able to make his glory their own. They will enjoy the presence of Christ, but they will never become like him.

77 These are they who receive of the presence of the Son, but not of the fulness of the Father.

verse 77 “These are they who receive of the presence of the Son” The usual non-LDS concept of heaven pretty closely matches the LDS understanding of the terrestrial kingdom—a place where good people dwell in joy with Jesus forever but without family ties and without the possibility of actually becoming what Jesus is. Ironically, the righteous among the so-called orthodox Christians in this world, largely the evangelical or conservative Protestants, will get pretty much what they expect. If they accept Christ—“receive of the presence of the Son”—and reject the principles and ordinances of the fulness of his gospel, they will likely inherit the terrestrial glory. In order to receive more than the terrestrial, to return to the presence of the Father and to receive, as joint heirs with Christ, all that the Father has, it is necessary to receive a testimony of Jesus Christ and then strive diligently to accept and obey the fulness of the gospel—the principles and ordinances of Christ’s gospel. The poetic version reads, “They are they, that come into the presence of Christ, But not to the fulness of God, on his throne.”

78 Wherefore, they are bodies terrestrial, and not bodies celestial, and differ in glory as the moon differs from the sun.

verse 78 “they are bodies terrestrial” Terrestrial bodies cannot abide or tolerate celestial glory—it would burn them up.

79 These are they who are not valiant in the testimony of Jesus; wherefore, they obtain not the crown over the kingdom of our God.

verse 79 What does it mean to be “valiant in the testimony of Jesus”? Certainly it means to act on that testimony—to join with his people by covenant (baptism); actively seek to be obedient and to comply with all the laws and ordinances of his gospel; serve him with all our heart, mind, and strength; and endure pro-actively to the end.

Hence, those who receive a terrestrial reward will do so, not so much because of what they do, but because of what they don’t do. In the words of Elder Bruce R. McConkie: “Members of the Church who have testimonies and who live clean and upright lives, but who are not courageous and valiant, do not gain the celestial kingdom. Theirs is a terrestrial inheritance” (CR, October 1974, 44). The essential ingredient of the celestial being is the character, courage, and determination live and be fulfilled by the requirements of the life in the celestial heaven.

80 And now this is the end of the vision which we saw of the terrestrial, that the Lord commanded us to write while we were yet in the Spirit.

The Vision of the Telestial Kingdom (verses 81-90, 98-112)

The word “telestial” is a uniquely Latter-day Saint term. It does not appear in the Bible, and even in latter-day scripture it only appears in D&C 76 and in D&C 88. Webster’s Third New International Dictionary defines “telestial glory” as the “lowest of the three Mormon degrees or kingdoms of glory attainable in heaven.” Thus, Joseph Smith added a new word to the English language. Although Paul speaks of three glories of the sun, moon, and stars, and names the first two as celestial and terrestrial, he does not name the third.

Heirs of this glory are they who receive not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus (verse 82); they who deny not the Holy Spirit (verse 83) [this expression seems to refer to those saints who had been sealed up to their exaltation by the Holy Ghost but fell through sin; they did not, however, come out in open rebellion against the Church]; they who are liars and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and murderers (verse 103, Rev. 22:15).

However, “these all shall bend the knee and every tongue shall confess . . . that Jesus Christ is Lord” (verse 110; Philippians 2:9-11). This obeisance and confession will come sometime during the process of preparing to be “heirs of salvation” (verse 88). This cleansing process involves these spirits’ being called up and judged unworthy of resurrection during the Millennium (D&C 88:100-101), then spending one thousand years “in hell” or the spirit prison learning to obey at least a telestial law (verses 84-85, 105-07). Once they are cleansed and prepared, they shall be resurrected and placed in the telestial kingdom, the glory of which “surpasses all understanding” (verse 89). No longer liars, sorcerers, adulterers, whoremongers, and murderers, “they shall be servants of the Most High” but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come” (verse 112).

Joseph and Sidney saw that the inhabitants of the telestial world were “as innumerable as the stars in the firmament of heaven, or as the sand upon the seashore” (verse 109). Though denied access to where God and Christ dwell, they will enjoy the presence and ministrations of the Holy Spirit (verses 86, 112).

81 And again, we saw the glory of the telestial, which glory is that of the lesser, even as the glory of the stars differs from that of the glory of the moon in the firmament.

verse 81 “the glory of the telestial” See the introductory commentary for this section above. It is possible that the term telestial is derived from the Greek prefix tele which means “at a distance” or “far away.” That would make the telestial kingdom mean something like “the farthest or most distant” kingdom of glory.

82 These are they who received not the gospel of Christ, neither the testimony of Jesus.

verse 82 Again, “received not” here probably means “rejected” or “would not receive,” that is, when they had the chance. The poetic version reads, “These are they that receiv’d not the gospel of Christ, Or evidenced, either, that he ever was.”

83 These are they who deny not the Holy Spirit.

verse 83 Though the telestial beings have been wicked, they are not guilty of the unpardonable sin—that of denying the Holy Ghost.

84 These are they who are thrust down to hell.

verse 84 “Hell” here is the spirit prison. What is hell? In Mormonism is hell a place or a state of mind? It is both. Hell may refer to either “outer darkness” or the spirit prison—specific places. Infrequently, the term may be used to refer to the telestial kingdom. Also hell is the state of mind or the pain caused by sin—the sorrow, anguish, torment, and anxieties when one is not right with God. One may wonder: Does this latter type of hell exist in the terrestrial or telestial kingdoms? Probably not. Those in the telestial kingdom, for example, are happy to be there—it is where they belong, and they know it. The telestial heaven is where they will be comfortable, and they will live among people with whom they are comfortable. They would be unhappy and uncomfortable anywhere else. Recall that, as taught in section 19, there is no such thing as punishment that goes on forever and that the terms “eternal or endless punishment” refer to God’s punishment—not punishment that never ends (see also James E. Talmage, Vitality of Mormonism, 264-65).

Perhaps the most common meaning of the word hell is the spirit world. And this label would not refer to those paradisiacal spirits who are already sealed up to eternal life. We might say that hell refers to the “spirit prison.” But why is life in the spirit prison hell? Consider the state of those who are there. It is likely that it is made known to them that they must be brought to a state where they will sincerely confess Christ and covenant to live by his teachings. The alternative to accepting Christ is to remain “filthy still” and end up becoming subject to Satan in outer darkness. And, furthermore, it’s likely that they will come to know that this change, which for some will be very difficult, will have to be accomplished before the resurrection and final judgment. All things considered, there will obviously be some in the spirit prison for whom this change will be exceedingly painful. It will be hell!

Hell will eventually give up its captive spirits at the resurrection (see D&C 19:6; 2 Nephi 9:12; Revelation 20:13).

Thus, a loving God does not—as the religions of men insisted in Joseph’s day—torture the wicked and the unbaptized forever and ever. Eventually, Christ redeems all human beings, including the wicked, rebellious, and unbelieving, from death and from hell, upon the condition of repentance. Elder James E. Talmage taught: “Hell . . . is a place prepared for the teaching, the disciplining of those who failed to learn here upon the earth what they should have learned. . . . No man will be kept in hell longer than is necessary to bring him to a fitness for something better. When he reaches that stage, the prison doors will open and there will be rejoicing among the hosts who welcome him into a better state” (CR, April 1980, 97). See also D&C 29:38.

85 These are they who shall not be redeemed from the devil until the last resurrection, until the Lord, even Christ the Lamb, shall have finished his work.

verse 85 “the last resurrection” The telestial-bound souls will be resurrected at the “second resurrection” following the millennial thousand years—see the commentary for verse 50 above.

“until the Lord, even Christ the Lamb, shall have finished his work” The “until” is further evidence that hell does not go on forever (see also verse 106). The last redeeming or “buying back” from the devil that Christ will do is to extend the blessings of his atoning blood to the telestial souls.

86 These are they who receive not of his fulness in the eternal world, but of the Holy Spirit through the ministration of the terrestrial;

verse 86 “who receive not of his fulness . . . but of the Holy Spirit” Telestial beings will never really know the Son. Though they will finally acknowledge Jesus’s lordship, they will not enjoy his direct presence in eternity, as will terrestrial beings. The Godhead will administer the affairs of the telestial world through the person of the Holy Spirit and through ministering angels sent to them from the terrestrial world. The logic of this is impeccable. The telestial beings rejected both the fulness of the Father, which is accessible through the gospel, and the fulness of the Son, which comes through the testimony of Jesus (see verse 82). They did not, however, deny the Holy Spirit (see verse 83). Thus, they may receive “of the Holy Spirit,” but not the presence or power of the Father or the Son.

This does not mean that the Son or the Holy Spirit will permanently inhabit the terrestrial and telestial kingdoms. Both these members of the Godhead will be exalted, celestial beings in eternity, and will enjoy all the blessings of exaltation, including the company and fellowship of other exalted beings. It is likely, however, that the Son and the Holy Ghost will administer the affairs of the terrestrial and telestial kingdoms, respectively, just as they administer affairs upon the earth right now, through chosen intermediaries and perhaps, at times, through personal contact.

“through the ministration of the terrestrial” The many kingdoms of our Father’s house will be governed and will enjoy communication with their presiding authorities in ways very much like the present priesthood government of the Church upon the earth. As the Lord reveals his will to the prophets, and they to the General Authorities, and they to area authorities, and they to stake and mission authorities, and so on, so heaven’s lower kingdoms will be governed by communication and instruction from higher kingdoms in an orderly manner from the top to the bottom. And the will of God will be done in all things and in all kingdoms.

Elder Melvin J. Ballard has written, “We must not overlook the fact that those who attain to the higher glories may minister unto and visit and associate with those of the lesser kingdoms. While the lesser may not come up, they may still enjoy the companionship of their loved ones who are in higher stations” (Hinckley, Sermons and Missionary Services of Melvin Joseph Ballard, 257).

87 And the terrestrial through the ministration of the celestial.

verse 87 “the terrestrial through the ministration of the celestial” See the commentary for verse 86.

88 And also the telestial receive it of the administering of angels who are appointed to minister for them, or who are appointed to be ministering spirits for them; for they shall be heirs of salvation.

verse 88 “the telestial receive it of the administering of angels” See the commentary for verse 86. Ministering angels will function under the direction of the Holy Ghost to govern the telestial kingdom.

“they shall be heirs of salvation” A reminder that the telestials are saved in a kingdom of glory, the telestial heaven.

89 And thus we saw, in the heavenly vision, the glory of the telestial, which surpasses all understanding; verse 89 “the glory of the telestial, which surpasses all understanding” Elder John A. Widtsoe explained:

The book [Doctrine and Covenants] explains clearly that the lowest glory to which man is assigned is so glorious as to be beyond the understanding of man. It is a doctrine fundamental in Mormonism that the meanest sinner, in the final judgment, will receive a glory which is beyond human understanding, which is so great that we are unable to describe it adequately. Those who do well will receive an even more glorious place. . . . The gospel is a gospel of tremendous love. Love is at the bottom of it. The meanest child is loved so dearly that his reward will be beyond the understanding of mortal man (Message of the Doctrine and Covenants, 167).

90 And no man knows it except him to whom God has revealed it.

verse 90 “no man knows it” Among mortals, no one can know the glory of even the telestial kingdom except through direct revelation.

91 And thus we saw the glory of the terrestrial which excels in all things the glory of the telestial, even in glory, and in power, and in might, and in dominion.

verse 91 “in might, and in dominion” The terrestrials have more intelligence (more spiritual gifts), more authority, more strength, and a larger expanse in which to operate than the telestials.

92 And thus we saw the glory of the celestial, which excels in all things—where God, even the Father, reigns upon his throne forever and ever;

93 Before whose throne all things bow in humble reverence, and give him glory forever and ever.

verse 93 “and give him glory forever and ever” We have commented before that as we progress spiritually and add to our own light (glory), we somehow add to the light (glory) of the Father (TPJS, 347-48).

94 They who dwell in his presence are the church of the Firstborn; and they see as they are seen, and know as they are known, having received of his fulness and of his grace; verse 94 “church of the Firstborn” See the commentary for verse 54.

“they see as they are seen” Because God through his grace has given these individuals his fulness and has brought them into his very presence, they interact with him there directly—not as equals, for he still reigns over them, but on equal terms, face to face. It would also seem that celestial beings interact with one another on the same terms, knowing as they are known, without guile or hidden agenda.

95 And he makes them equal in power, and in might, and in dominion.

verse 95 “he makes them equal” All the sons and daughters of God who are exalted in the celestial kingdom are equal with each other and with Christ in receiving all the power and might and dominion of that kingdom (see D&C 88:107). This is the celestial principle upon which the law of consecration rests. In order to establish Zion upon the earth, “every man [must be] equal according to his family, according to his circumstances and his wants and needs” (D&C 51:3; see also D&C 70:14; 78:5-6; 82:17-19). This celestial principle is the same in eternity.

This does not necessarily mean that celestial beings will all be the same or that their situations in eternity will be identical, for there, as here, one individual’s family, wants, needs, and other circumstances may differ from another’s. Consequently, their individual, celestial stewardships or kingdoms may likewise be different. All will have, however, equal access to all the corporate resources of the exalted family.

The Lord Jesus Christ also observes the eternal principles of the law of consecration. His eternal consecration is essentially himself—his own perfection, his own merits, his own righteousness. In sharing these, his “earnings,” with us, he raises us to his level, thus making us equal to himself as well as to each other, and making us joint-heirs with him of all that the Father has (see D&C 88:107; Romans 8:17). In consecrating ourselves and our resources for the establishment of Zion here in mortality, we are following the example of Jesus Christ who has consecrated himself and the “earnings” of his infinite atonement for the good of all in eternity.

96 And the glory of the celestial is one, even as the glory of the sun is one.

97 And the glory of the terrestrial is one, even as the glory of the moon is one.

98 And the glory of the telestial is one, even as the glory of the stars is one; for as one star differs from another star in glory, even so differs one from another in glory in the telestial world; verses 96-98 “the glory of the celestial / terrestrial / telestial is one” That is, celestial glory is one distinct level or class of glory. Terrestrial glory is another distinct type of glory, and telestial glory is yet a third distinct type. Each glory is separate and unique. Even though individuals within the telestial kingdom may differ from one another in glory as much as one star differs from another in size or brightness, they are all still of the same order, class, or type of glory (see 1 Corinthians 15:39-41). No one mistakes a star for the moon or the moon for the noonday sun.

99 For these are they who are of Paul, and of Apollos, and of Cephas.

100 These are they who say they are some of one and some of another—some of Christ and some of John, and some of Moses, and some of Elias, and some of Esaias, and some of Isaiah, and some of Enoch; verses 99-100 The divine impulse is unity. The satanic impulse is division (compare D&C 38:27). Zion is established when the saints are of one heart and one mind (see Moses 7:18), and Zion is lost when the saints divide up into individual special interests.

In the New Testament church this wicked impulse for division was manifested by those in Corinth who accepted some church leaders while rejecting others or who accepted some doctrines while resisting others as they pursued their own individual agenda (see 1 Corinthians 1:10-12; 3:3-9). Thus, they divided the unity of the church and of the gospel into rival factions and parties—of Paul, of Apollos, of Cephas, and such. The Old Testament names in D&C 76:100 witness to the same wicked impulse toward factionalism among the members in earlier dispensations. Similarly, there are some in the Church today who will sustain some leaders but not others and who treat the restored gospel as though it were a buffet lunch—accepting the leaders, doctrines, and policies they like and rejecting the ones they do not. But if the saints cannot learn to become one in Jesus’s Church upon the earth, we need not suppose we will do so in eternity.

101 But received not the gospel, neither the testimony of Jesus, neither the prophets, neither the everlasting covenant.

verse 101 Given the setting created by verses 99-100, this verse might well refer to some within the Church today. There are some telestial persons in the LDS Church and in other Christian churches who do not really have testimonies of the fulness of the gospel or even of Jesus Christ as the Son of God, though they would appear to. In reality, these persons are followers of men and believe in the teachings of men. They strive to turn the Church to the prevailing views of Babylon. Such persons merely use the church membership as a mask while they pursue their own individual ends in the service of a different master. The poetic version of the vision says of them, “They went their own way, and they have their reward,” and “In darkness they worshipp’d; to darkness they go.”

102 Last of all, these all are they who will not be gathered with the saints, to be caught up unto the church of the Firstborn, and received into the cloud.

verse 102 See verses 63-67; D&C 45:45; 78:21.

103 These are they who are liars, and sorcerers, and adulterers, and whoremongers, and whosoever loves and makes a lie.

verses 103 A parallel list of characteristics of telestial souls in the book of Revelation adds: the fearful, the unbelieving, the abominable, murderers, and idolaters (see Revelation 21:8; 22:15).

104 These are they who suffer the wrath of God on earth.

105 These are they who suffer the vengeance of eternal fire.

verses 104-105 The reference here is to the wicked who will be living on the earth and who will be burned to death at the second coming of Christ (see also verse 106). Their physical suffering from this very real and very literal fire will last, however, only until they are dead. It is called “eternal” fire because it is the just punishment of an eternal God (see D&C 19:6-12). Additionally, once the wicked are dead, their spirits will be consigned to hell, and “eternal fire” is also used as a figurative expression for the spiritual suffering they will experience in hell between their death and their resurrection. This hell is also located “on earth,” though separated by a veil from the mortal and temporal world of our experience.

106 These are they who are cast down to hell and suffer the wrath of Almighty God, until the fulness of times, when Christ shall have subdued all enemies under his feet, and shall have perfected his work; verse 106 “until the fulness of times” Once again, this verse teaches us that there is an eventual exit from hell. When Christ has completed all his work, the captives in hell will be set free and will be resurrected to the telestial kingdom. This will take place only after the great Millennium and after Satan has been put in chains and cast out forever.

“Christ . . . shall have perfected his work” Perfected is used in its biblical sense to mean “completed.” The Greek and Hebrew words sometimes translated as perfect in the Bible usually mean “complete,” “whole,” or “mature.”

107 When he shall deliver up the kingdom, and present it unto the Father, spotless, saying: I have overcome and have trodden the wine-press alone, even the wine-press of the fierceness of the wrath of Almighty God.

verse 107 “he shall deliver up the kingdom” When Jesus Christ has completed his stewardship assignment and has redeemed all that was fallen and has redeemed and reconciled it all to God, he will then turn all things over to his Father and render the glory of his accomplishments to the Father (see D&C 19:19; Moses 4:2; Revelation 1:6). The Father will thus be further glorified and enlarged by the immortality and eternal life brought to pass for so many of his children (see Moses 1:39). Christ will be installed upon the throne of his Father, where the righteous will reign with him as joint-heirs, and the glorified Father will assume an even more glorious state (TPJS, 347-48).

“I have . . . trodden the wine press alone” The winepress is a double symbol representing the dual roles of Christ as both judge and Savior. As a symbol of divine justice, the winepress represents Christ’s work in crushing all his enemies beneath his feet as if they were grapes in a vat and directing them to drink the wine or the results of his victory over them. The poetic version says, “Till Christ shall have trodden all enemies down.” In this role as conqueror and judge, the redness of Jesus’s garments (see Isaiah 63:1-4; D&C 133:48, 50) comes from the blood of the wicked whom he justly tramples down at his second coming “like him that treadeth in the winefat” (Isaiah 63:2) and who are forced to drink the bitter wine of his victory and his justice by suffering for their sins in hell.

As a symbol of Christ’s saving atonement and his role as Savior, however, the winepress represents the Savior himself being pressed therein until his blood is shed in the Garden of Gethsemane. Gath in Hebrew means “winepress,” and semene means “oil” or “richness.” Thus, Gethsemane means “winepress of richness.” Jesus as the “true vine” (John 15:1, 5; 1 Nephi 15:15; Alma 16:17) enters the garden of the winepress, Gethsemane, and there is pressed like grapes in a vat with the hideous weight of the sufferings and pains of the world. Under that tremendous load, his blood, like the juice pressed from grapes, is squeezed through his very skin, and he bleeds at every pore (see D&C 19:18; Mosiah 3:7; Luke 22:44). In his role as Savior, the redness of Jesus’s garments comes from his own blood, shed in the garden and on the cross in our behalf so that we might not suffer (see D&C 133:48). In partaking of the sacrament, the early saints drank wine squeezed in a press in remembrance of the symbolic wine of his blood that was squeezed from his body and shed for us in the press of Gethsemane.

Further, Jesus is described as having “trodden the wine-press alone” because on the one hand he alone conquers all things as victor, and because on the other hand he alone suffered all things as victim. Beyond this, we must remember that the Savior endured his infinite agony in the garden alone. When the worst came, there was no one to help him or comfort him—the Spirit left him, and even his Father withdrew from him, to leave him utterly and horribly alone in his infinite agony (Matthew 27:46).

“the fierceness of the wrath of almighty God” Finally, we are reminded that the suffering of the Savior in Gethsemane and on the cross was orchestrated by the Father. Though it was made necessary by the sins of men, it was not caused by them. Nor was his suffering of Satan’s design. And there was nothing of arbitrariness in his suffering; the Father had him suffer—just enough—no more and no less than was necessary. Yet his suffering was unimaginable, as he had to come to know the pains, the temptations, the sufferings of every man, that he might know how to judge with perfect fairness (Alma 7:11-12; Hebrews 2:18). See the important discussion in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 19, The Essence of the Lord’s Atonement.

108 Then shall he be crowned with the crown of his glory, to sit on the throne of his power to reign forever and ever.

109 But behold, and lo, we saw the glory and the inhabitants of the telestial world, that they were as innumerable as the stars in the firmament of heaven, or as the sand upon the seashore;

verse 109 “they were as innumerable as the stars in the firmament of heaven” Which kingdom—celestial, terrestrial, or telestial—will, in the eternities, be the most populous? If we were to take D&C 137:10 at face value, that is that all who die before the age of accountability automatically return to God’s presence, then perhaps the celestial kingdom would be. It seems more likely that those in the telestial kingdom will outnumber all others.

110 And heard the voice of the Lord saying: These all shall bow the knee, and every tongue shall confess to him who sits upon the throne forever and ever; verse 110 “These all shall bow the knee, and every tongue shall confess” These seems here to refer specifically to the heirs of the telestial kingdom, a view supported by the poetic version. All those in the celestial and terrestrial kingdoms would by this time have been raised in the first resurrection and would have already acknowledged Jesus as their Lord. Of those who will be saved, all that are left at this point, at the second resurrection, the resurrection of the unjust, are these telestial rebels—who must accept Christ as their ruler and acknowledge his power in order to be redeemed at last from the power of the devil.

Among all the innumerable hosts of the saved in all the kingdoms of glory, every knee will bow and every tongue confess that Jesus is the Christ and that his is the only name in eternity through which they may be saved. One may well argue that such bowing and confessing is not the same as having a testimony of Jesus and being valiant in that testimony. Rather it merely recognizes the practical necessity of submission to his power. The celestial and terrestrial heirs will have made their confession and obeisance before or at the first resurrection. The telestial beings will do it before or at the second resurrection. Note how radical this doctrine would have seemed in 1832. When the Christian world insisted that the wicked would burn in hell forever, Joseph Smith revealed that they will all finally bend the knee and confess the Savior and then be redeemed in heavenly glory.

111 For they shall be judged according to their works, and every man shall receive according to his own works, his own dominion, in the mansions which are prepared;

112 And they shall be servants of the Most High; but where God and Christ dwell they cannot come, worlds without end.

verse 112 “And they shall be servants of the Most High” All those saved in any degree of glory, including the telestial, will be servants of God in eternity.

“where God and Christ dwell they cannot come” This limitation or restriction on the telestials is not the result of statute. There is no written law somewhere which is enforced by angels standing guard. Rather this restriction is the natural result of what they have become. “For where I am they cannot come, for they have no power” (D&C 29:29). The telestial body simply cannot tolerate a celestial environment, and it is likely that the telestial soul would never have the ability to travel to the celestial realm.

There is no indication in scripture that progress is possible from one state to another—from one kingdom to another—once resurrection has occurred. President George Albert Smith observed: “There are some people who have supposed that if we are quickened telestial bodies, that eventually, throughout the ages of eternity, we will continue to progress until we will find our place in the celestial kingdom, but the scriptures and revelations of God have said that those who are quickened telestial bodies cannot come where God and Christ dwell, worlds without end” (CR, October 1975, 172). Elder Spencer W. Kimball agreed with this when he declared: “After a person has been assigned to his place in the kingdom, either in the telestial, the terrestrial, or the celestial, or to his exaltation, he will never advance from his assigned glory to another glory. That is eternal!” (Miracle of Forgiveness, 243-44).

“worlds without end” Forever and ever. In Hebrew and Greek the same words are used for eternity, age, and world. In the idiom of the ancient scriptures, a “world” is as much, if not more, a period of time than a place.

Epilogue and Conclusion (verses 113-119)

A fitting conclusion to section 76 was written by Otten and Campbell:

The fundamental question with which we are confronted is as follows: How do we stand in our relationship to a testimony of Jesus Christ? Sons of Perdition deny him. Telestial people receive not the testimony of Jesus. Terrestrial people reject the testimony of Jesus in mortality, but afterward receive it and/or fail to be valiant in the testimony of Jesus. Celestial saints receive the testimony of Jesus and are true and faithful to it. Our eternal destiny is dependent upon our faithfulness to a testimony of Jesus Christ (Sacred Truths of the Doctrine and Covenants, volume 2, 35).

Again, however, please be reminded that our eternal reward depends on just who we are, and not on the timing of our conversion.

113 This is the end of the vision which we saw, which we were commanded to write while we were yet in the Spirit.

114 But great and marvelous are the works of the Lord, and the mysteries of his kingdom which he showed unto us, which surpass all understanding in glory, and in might, and in dominion; verse 114 “the mysteries of his kingdom” See the commentary for verse 7.

115 Which he commanded us we should not write while we were yet in the Spirit, and are not lawful for man to utter;

verse 115 “not lawful for man to utter” Joseph and Sidney saw much more in this great vision than is recorded in section 76, and much of what they saw was not to be published to the world or even to the membership of the Church. A later comment of Joseph’s to this effect is recorded in his History of the Church: “Paul ascended into the third heavens, and he could understand the three principal rounds of Jacob’s ladder—the telestial, the terrestrial, and the celestial glories or kingdoms, where Paul saw and heard things which were not lawful for him to utter. I could explain a hundred fold more than I ever have of the glories of the kingdoms manifested to me in the vision, were I permitted, and were the people prepared to receive them. The Lord deals with this people as a tender parent with a child, communicating light and intelligence and the knowledge of his ways as they can bear it” (5:402).

“Not lawful . . . to utter” indicates knowledge received by one individual that he or she is then prevented by covenant or by commandment from revealing to others, even if they are also faithful members of the Church. In 1832 this would have included, but would not be limited to, most of the information Latter-day Saints now receive lawfully in the temples of God.

The Prophet Joseph also taught:

Could we read and comprehend all that has been written from the days of Adam, on the relation of man to God and angels in a future state, we should know very little about it. Reading the experience of others, or the revelation given to them, can never give us a comprehensive view of our condition and true relation to God. Knowledge of these things can only be obtained by experience through the ordinances of God set forth for that purpose. Could you gaze into heaven five minutes, you would know more than you would by reading all that ever was written on the subject (HC, 6:50).

116 Neither is man capable to make them known, for they are only to be seen and understood by the power of the Holy Spirit, which God bestows on those who love him, and purify themselves before him;

117 To whom he grants this privilege of seeing and knowing for themselves;

118 That through the power and manifestation of the Spirit, while in the flesh, they may be able to bear his presence in the world of glory.

verses 117-118 “this privilege of seeing and knowing . . . while in the flesh”

This is referring to the privilege granted here to Joseph and Sidney. This passage refers to receiving first-person experience of God rather than only having faith in the words or experiences of others. It is knowing the Father and the Son directly, personally, and empirically through the mediation of the Holy Spirit. This is the great privilege of those for whom the veil is parted because of their faith, that they may see God and come into his presence while yet in the flesh. For this experience it is necessary to be filled with the Holy Spirit, whose indwelling presence changes our nature and preserves our mortal bodies in their contact with divine glory (compare D&C 130:22).

119 And to God and the Lamb be glory, and honor, and dominion forever and ever. Amen.

Joseph Smith's Poetic Version of Section 76

In early 1843, the prophet Joseph, aided by his clerks W. W. Phelps and Wilford Woodruff, was preparing his personal history for publication. Portions of that history were already appearing serially in the Times and Seasons. In particular he was reviewing the period of February and March 1832. It was during this period that section 76 ("The Vision") had been received in Hiram Ohio.

January and February 1843 was also a time of celebration and conviviality for the saints. An Illinois court in Springfield, Illinois, had just advised Illinois Governor Thomas Ford that a writ issued for Joseph Smith's extradition to Missouri was illegal, and a federal district judge discharged the Prophet on January 7, 1843. Joseph had been in Springfield during the hearings. He returned to Nauvoo, as might be expected, as a hero. The saints would continue to enjoy the blessings of Joseph's society. Two days after his return from Springfield, W. W. Phelps presented Joseph a poem entitled Vade Mecum, or Go with Me, as part of the jubilee celebration. It was in this setting in February 1843 that a poetic version of section 76 entitled The Answer was first published, under Joseph's name, in the Times and Seasons. It was a rejoinder to Phelps's jubilee poem, Vade Mecum.

During those intervening eleven years between Joseph's receiving section 76 and the writing of his poetic version, Joseph had learned much. His added insights are included in the poetic version. Hence, Joseph's poetic version serves as an important commentary on section 76.

Some examples of the additional information afforded by his poetic version include:

1. The premortal experience and nature of spirits. The concept of premortal spirits was not well understood during the first years after the Church's founding in 1830. The first hint of such knowledge came in 1833, when Joseph received Doctrine and Covenants section 93. Privately, as early as 1839, Joseph began teaching that there was a mother in heaven—the mother of our premortal spirits. By 1841, Joseph publicly declared, "Spirits are eternal" (Andrew F. Ehat and Lyndon W. Cook, The Words of Joseph Smith: The Contemporary Accounts of the Nauvoo Discourses of the Prophet Joseph [Provo: Brigham Young University Religious Studies Center, 1980], 60.). When the Book of Abraham was published in March 1842, the doctrine was further clarified (see Abraham 3:18).

2. The universality of the Savior's atoning sacrifice. In the poem, Joseph emphasizes that the redemption of Christ was not limited to this world nor to a specific period of time. It reached backward in time and forward into the future. It blessed all who ever have and who ever will live upon this earth and its effects spread across the vastness of space. It was a final act that did not necessitate another sacrifice in the future.

3. Lucifer's remarkable position of prominence in the premortal world. Only in his poem does Joseph identify Lucifer's "godified state" before he fell to the earth to become the devil.

4. The kingdoms of glory. Joseph clarified the identity of those who would inherit the individual kingdoms of glory.

He also emphasizes the happy state of those who will inherit the telestial kingdom. An often repeated story associated with the telestial kingdom deals with something Joseph Smith was purported to have said: "The telestial kingdom is so great, if we knew what it was like we would kill ourselves to get there." Wilford Woodruff recounted a comment by the Prophet that may be the basis of that apocryphal story. According to Charles Lowell Walker, Wilford Woodruff "referred to a saying of Joseph Smith, which he heard him utter: That if the People knew what was behind the veil [sic], they would try by every means to commit suicide that they might get there, but the Lord in his wisdom had implanted the fear of death in every person that they might cling to life and thus accomplish the designs of their creator" (Diary of Charles Lowell Walker, ed. A. Karl Larson and Katharine Miles Larson [Logan: Utah State University Press, 1980], 465). What he may have meant by this statement may never be known, but we do know that the happy state of those who inherit the telestial kingdom is emphasized in the poem.

The poem also clarifies the fate of those who inherit the highest degree of the celestial kingdom—that they will become gods.

5. Joseph Smith's life and mission. Just a few days before Joseph published the poem, he stated, "I know what I say; I understand my mission and business. God Almighty is my shield, and what can man do if God is my friend. I shall not be sacrificed until my time comes—then I shall be offered freely" (Wilford Woodruff Journal, 22 January, 1843). Contemporary sources confirm the Prophet's sense of mission and his knowledge regarding his death (see, for example, Ronald K. Esplin, "Joseph Smith's Mission and Timetable: 'God Will Protect Me until My Work Is Done,'" in Larry C. Porter and Susan Easton Black, eds., The Prophet Joseph: Essays on the Life and Mission of Joseph Smith [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Co., 1988], 280-319.). In this regard, note particularly the first stanza of Joseph's poem.

Vade Mecum (Go with Me) From W. W. Phelps to Joseph Smith the Prophet

Go with me, will you go to the saints that have died,—
 To the next, better world, where the righteous reside;
 Where the angels and spirits in harmony be
 In the joys of a vast paradise? Go with me.
 Go with me where the truth and the virtues prevail;

Where the union is one, and the years never fail;
Not a heart can conceive, nor a nat'ral eye see What the Lord has prepar'd for the just. Go with me.
Go with me where there is no destruction or war;
Neither tyrants, or sland'ers, or nations ajar;
Where the system is perfect, and happiness free,
And the life is eternal with God. Go with me.
Go with me, will you go to the mansions above,
Where the bliss, and the knowledge, the light, and the love,
And the glory of God do eternally be?—
Death, the wages of sin, is not there. Go with me.
Nauvoo, January, 1843.

The Answer. To W. W. Phelps, ESQ.

I will go, I will go, to the home of the Saints,
Where the virtue's the value, and life the reward;
But before I return to my former estate
I must fulfill the mission I had from the Lord.
Wherefore, hear, O ye heavens, and give ear O ye earth;
And rejoice ye inhabitants truly again;
For the Lord he is God, and his life never ends,
And besides him there ne'er was a Saviour of men.

(verse 1)

His ways are a wonder; his wisdom is great;
The extent of his doings, there's none can unveil;
His purposes fail not; from age unto age
He still is the same, and his years never fail.

(verses 2-3)

His throne is the heavens, his life time is all
Of eternity now, and eternity then;
His union is power, and none stays his hand,—
The Alpha, Omega, forever: Amen.

(verse 4)

For thus saith the Lord, in the spirit of truth,
I am merciful, gracious, and good unto those
That fear me, and live for the life that's to come;
My delight is to honor the saints with repose;
That serve me in righteousness true to the end;
Eternal's their glory, and great their reward;
I'll surely reveal all my myst'ries to them,—

The great hidden myst'ries in my kingdom stor'd—
(verse 6)

From the council in Kolob, to time on the earth.

And for ages to come unto them I will show
My pleasure & will, what my kingdom will do:

Eternity's wonders they truly shall know.

(verse 7)

Great things of the future I'll show unto them,

Yea, things of the vast generations to rise;

For their wisdom and glory shall be very great,

And their pure understanding extend to the skies:

(verse 8)

And before them the wisdom of wise men shall cease,

And the nice understanding of prudent ones fail!

For the light of my spirit shall light mine elect,

And the truth is so mighty 'twill ever prevail.

(verses 9-10)

And the secrets and plans of my will I'll reveal;

The sanctified pleasures when earth is renew'd,

What the eye hath not seen, nor the ear hath yet heard;

Nor the heart of the natural man ever hath view'd.

(verse 10)

I, Joseph, the prophet, in spirit beheld,

And the eyes of the inner man truly did see

Eternity sketch'd in a vision from God,

Of what was, and now is, and yet is to be.

(verses 11-12)

Those things which the Father ordained of old,

Before the world was, or a system had run,—

Through Jesus the Maker and Savior of all;

The only begotten, (Messiah) his son.

(verses 13)

Of whom I bear record, as all prophets have,

And the record I bear is the fulness,—yea even

The truth of the gospel of Jesus—the Christ,

With whom I convers'd, in the vision of heav'n.

(verses 14)

For while in the act of translating his word,

Which the Lord in his grace had appointed to me,

I came to the gospel recorded by John,

Chapter fifth and the twenty-ninth verse, which you'll see. (verse 15)

Which was given as follows:

“Speaking of the resurrection of the dead,— “Concerning those who shall hear the voice of “the son of man—

“And shall come forth:—

“They who have done good in the resurrection

“of the just.

“And they who have done evil in the resurrection

“of the unjust.” (verses 16-17)

I marvel'd at these resurrections, indeed!

For it came unto me by the spirit direct:—

And while I did meditate what it all meant,

The Lord touch'd the eyes of my own intellect:—

(verses 18-19)

Hosanna forever! they open'd anon,

And the glory of God shone around where I was;

And there was the Son, at the Father's right hand,

In a fulness of glory, and holy applause.

(verses 20)

I beheld round the throne, holy angels and hosts,

And sanctified beings from worlds that have been,

In holiness worshiping God and the Lamb,

Forever and ever, amen and amen!

(verse 21)

And now after all of the proofs made of him,

By witnesses truly, by whom he was known,

This is mine, last of all, that he lives; yea he lives!

And sits at the right hand of God, on his throne.

(verse 22)

And I heard a great voice, bearing record from heav'n,

He's the Saviour, and only begotten of God—

By him, of him, and through him, the worlds were all made,

Even all that career in the heavens so broad,

(verses 23-24)

Whose inhabitants, too, from the first to the last,

Are sav'd by the very same Saviour of ours;

And, of course, are begotten God's daughters and sons,

By the very same truths, and the very same pow'rs.

(verse 24)

And I saw and bear record of warfare in heav'n;
 For an angel of light, in authority great,
 Rebell'd against Jesus, and sought for his pow'r,
 But was thrust down to woe from his Godified state.

(verse 25)

And the heavens all wept, and the tears drop'd like dew,
 That Lucifer, son of the morning had fell!
 Yea, is fallen! is fall'n, and become, Oh, alas!
 The son of Perdition; the devil of hell!

(verses 26-27)

And while I was yet in the spirit of truth,
 The commandment was: write ye the vision all out;
 For Satan, old serpent, the devil's for war,—
 And yet will encompass the saints round about.

(verses 28-29)

And I saw, too, the suff'ring and mis'ry of those, (Overcome by the devil, in warfare and fight,)
 In hell-fire, and vengeance, the doom of the damn'd;
 For the Lord said, the vision is further: so write.

(verse 30)

For thus saith the Lord, now concerning all those Who know of my power and partake of the same;
 And suffer themselves, that they be overcome
 By the power of Satan; despising my name;—

(verse 31)

Defying my power, and denying the truth;—
 They are they—of the world, or of men, most forlorn,
 The Sons of Perdition, of whom, ah! I say,
 'T were better for them had they never been born!

(verses 31-32)

They're vessels of wrath, and dishonor to God,
 Doom'd to suffer his wrath, in the regions of woe,
 Through the terrific night of eternity's round,
 With the devil and all of his angels below:

(verse 33)

Of whom it is said, no forgiveness is giv'n,
 In this world, alas! nor the world that's to come;
 For they have denied the spirit of God,
 After having receiv'd it: and mis'ry's their doom.

(verses 34-35)

And denying the only begotten of God,—
And crucify him to themselves, as they do,
And openly put him to shame in their flesh,
By gospel they cannot repentance renew.

(verse 35)

They are they, who must go to the great lake of fire,
Which burneth with brimstone, yet never consumes,
And dwell with the devil, and angels of his,
While eternity goes and eternity comes.

(verse 36)

They are they, who must groan through the great second death,
And are not redeemed in the time of the Lord;
While all the rest are, through the triumph of Christ,
Made partakers of grace, by the power of his word.

(verses 37-39)

The myst'ry of Godliness truly is great;—
The past, and the present, and what is to be;
And this is the gospel—glad tidings to all,
Which the voice from the heavens bore record to me:

(verse 40)

That he came to the world in the middle of time,
To lay down his life for his friends and his foes,
And bear away sin as a mission of love;
And sanctify earth for a blessed repose.

(verse 41)

'Tis decreed, that he'll save all the work of his hands,
And sanctify them by his own precious blood;
And purify earth for the Sabbath of rest,
By the agent of fire, as it was by the Flood.

(verse 42)

The Savior will save all his Father did give,
Even all that he gave in the regions abroad,
Save the Sons of Perdition: They're lost; ever lost,
And can never return to the presence of God.

(verse 43)

They are they, who must reign with the devil in hell,
In eternity now, and eternity then,
Where the worm dieth not, and the fire is not quench'd;—
And the punishment still, is eternal. Amen.

(verse 44)

And which is the torment apostates receive,
 But the end, or the place where the torment began,
 Save to them who are made to partake of the same,
 Was never, nor will be, revealed unto man.

(verse 45-46)

Yet God shows by vision a glimpse of their fate,
 And straightway he closes the scene that was shown:
 So the width, or the depth, or the misery thereof,
 Save to those that partake, is forever unknown.

(verse 47-48)

And while I was pondering, the vision was closed;
 And the voice said to me, write the vision: for lo!
 'Tis the end of the scene of the sufferings of those,
 Who remain filthy still in their anguish and woe.

(verse 49)

And again I bear record of heavenly things,
 Where virtue's the value, above all that's pric'd—
 Of the truth of the gospel concerning the just,
 That rise in the first resurrection of Christ.

(verse 50)

Who receiv'd and believ'd, and repented likewise,
 And then were baptiz'd, as a man always was,
 Who ask'd and receiv'd a remission of sin,
 And honored the kingdom by keeping its laws.

(verse 51)

Being buried in water, as Jesus had been,
 And keeping the whole of his holy commands,
 They received the gift of the spirit of truth,
 By the ordinance truly of laying on hands.

(verse 52)

For these overcome, by their faith and their works,
 Being tried in their life-time, as purified gold,
 And seal'd by the spirit of promise, to life,
 By men called of God, as was Aaron of old.

(verse 53)

They are they, of the church of the firstborn of God,—
 And unto whose hands he committeth all things;
 For they hold the keys of the kingdom of heav'n,
 And reign with the Savior, as priests, and as kings.

(verses 54-56)

They're priests of the order of Melchizedek,
Like Jesus, (from whom is this highest reward,) Receiving a fulness of glory and light;
As written: They're Gods; even sons of the Lord.
(verses 57-58)

So all things are theirs; yea, of life, or of death;
Yea, whether things now, or to come, all are theirs,
And they are the Savior's, and he is the Lord's,
Having overcome all, as eternity's heirs.
(verses 59-60)

'Tis wisdom that man never glory in man,
But give God the glory for all that he hath;
For the righteous will walk in the presence of God,
While the wicked are trod under foot in his wrath.
(verse 61)

Yea, the righteous shall dwell in the presence of God,
And of Jesus, forever, from earth's second birth—
For when he comes down in the splendor of heav'n,
All these he'll bring with him, to reign on the earth.
(verses 62-63)

These are they that arise in their bodies of flesh,
When the trump of the first resurrection shall sound;
These are they that come up to Mount Zion, in life,
Where the blessings and gifts of the spirit abound.
(verses 64-66)

These are they that have come to the heavenly place;
To the numberless courses of angels above:
To the city of God; e'en the holiest of all,
And the home of the blessed, the fountain of love:
(verses 67)

To the church of old Enoch, and of the first born:
And gen'ral assembly of ancient renown'd.
Whose names are all kept in the archives of heav'n,
As chosen and faithful, and fit to be crown'd.
(verse 68)

These are they that are perfect through Jesus' own blood, Whose bodies celestial are mention'd by Paul,
Where the sun is the typical glory thereof,
And God, and his Christ, are the true judge of all.
(verses 69-70)

Again, I beheld the terrestrial world,
 In order and glory of Jesus, go on;
 'Twas not as the church of the first born of God,
 But shone in its place, as the moon to the sun.

(verse 71)

Behold, these are they that have died without law;
 The heathen of ages that never had hope.
 And those of the region and shadow of death,
 The spirits in prison, that light has brought up.

(verses 72-73)

To spirits in prison the Savior once preach'd,
 And taught them the gospel, with powers afresh;
 And then were the living baptiz'd for their dead,
 That they might be judg'd as if men in the flesh.

(verse 74)

These are they that are hon'able men of the earth;
 Who were blinded and dup'd by the cunning of men:
 They receiv'd not the truth of the Savior at first;
 But did, when they heard it in prison, again.

(verses 74-75)

Not valiant for truth, they obtain'd not the crown,
 But are of that glory that's typ'd by the moon:
 They are they, that come into the presence of Christ,
 But not to the fulness of God, on his throne.

(verses 76-79)

Again I beheld the telestial, as third,
 The lesser, or starry world, next in its place.
 For the leaven must leaven three measures of meal,
 And every knee bow that is subject to grace.

(verse 81)

These are they that receiv'd not the gospel of Christ,
 Or evidence, either, that he ever was;
 As the stars are all diff'rent in glory and light,
 So differs the glory of these by the laws.

(verse 82)

These are they that deny not the spirit of God,
 But are thrust down to hell, with the devil, for sins,
 As hypocrites, liars, whoremongers, and thieves,
 And stay 'till the last resurrection begins.

(verses 83-85)

‘Till the Lamb shall have finish’d the work he begun;
 Shall have trodden the wine press, in fury alone,
And overcome all by the pow’r of his might:
 He conquers to conquer, and save all his own.
(verses 85 and 107)

These are they that receive not a fulness of light,
 From Christ, in eternity’s world, where they are,
The terrestrial sends them the Comforter, though;
 And minist’ring angels, to happify there.
(verse 86)

And so the telestial is minister’d to,
 By ministers from the terrestrial one,
As terrestrial is, from the celestial throne;
 And the great, greater, greatest, seem’s stars, moon, and sun. (verses 86-88)
And thus I beheld, in the vision of heav’n,
 The telestial glory, dominion and bliss,
Surpassing the great understanding of men,— Unknown, save reveal’d, in a world vain as this.
(verses 89-90)

And lo, I beheld the terrestrial, too,
 Which excels the telestial in glory and light,
In splendor, and knowledge, and wisdom, and joy,
 In blessings, and graces, dominion and might.
(verse 91)

I beheld the celestial, in glory sublime;
 Which is the most excellent kingdom that is,—
Where God, e’en the Father, in harmony reigns;
 Almighty, supreme, and eternal, in bliss.
(verse 92-93)

Where the church of the firstborn in union reside,
 And they are as they’re seen, and they know as they’re known;
Being equal in power, dominion and might,
 With a fulness of glory and grace, round his throne.
(verses 94-95)

The glory celestial is one like the sun;
 The glory terrestr’al is one like the moon;
The glory telestial is one like the stars,
 And all harmonize like the parts of a tune.
(verses 96-98)

As the stars are all different in lustre and size,
 So the telestial region, is mingled in bliss;
 From least unto greatest, and greatest to least,
 The reward is exactly as promis'd in this.

(verse 98)

These are they that came out for Apollos and Paul;
 For Cephas and Jesus, in all kinds of hope;
 For Enoch and Moses, and Peter, and John;
 For Luther and Calvin, and even the Pope.

(verses 99-100)

For they never received the gospel of Christ,
 Nor the prophetic spirit that came from the Lord;
 Nor the covenant neither, which Jacob once had;
 They went their own way, and they have their reward.

By the order of God, last of all, these are they,
 That will not be gather'd with saints here below,
 To be caught up to Jesus, and meet in the clouds:—
 In darkness they worshipp'd; to darkness they go.

(verse 102)

These are they that are sinful, the wicked at large,
 That glutted their passion by meanness or worth;
 All liars, adulterers, sorc'ers, and proud;
 And suffer, as promis'd, God's wrath on the earth.

(verses 103-4)

These are they that must suffer the vengeance of hell,
 'Till Christ shall have trodden all enemies down,
 And perfected his work, in the fulness of times:
 And is crown'd on his throne with his glorious crown.

(verses 105-8)

The vast multitude of the telestial world—
 As the stars of the skies, or the sands of the sea;—
 The voice of Jehovah echo'd far and wide,
 Ev'ry tongue shall confess, and they all bow the knee.

(verses 109-10)

Ev'ry man shall be judg'd by the works of his life,
 And receive a reward in the mansions prepar'd;
 For his judgments are just, and his works never end,
 As his prophets and servants have always declar'd.

(verse 111)

But the great things of God, which he show'd unto me,
Unlawful to utter, I dare not declare;
They surpass all the wisdom and greatness of men,
And only are seen as has Paul, where they are.

(verses 114-18)

I will go, I will go, while the secret of life,
Is blooming in heaven, and blasting in hell;
Is leaving on earth, and a budding in space:—
I will go, I will go, with you, brother, farewell.

Joseph Smith.

Nauvoo, Feb. 1843.

Section 77 Book of Revelation

Please recall that Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon began working on the revision of the King James Bible in June 1830 in Fayette, New York. This revision will continue until July 1833. By March 1832 they had lived in Hiram, Ohio, on the property of John Johnson for about five months, since September 12, 1831. During this period, the Lord had revealed to Joseph and Sidney much additional information concerning the New Testament. For example, the Prophet had received section 74 while they studied 1 Corinthians 7:14 and section 76 while they pondered John 5:28-29. On or about the first of March 1832, they received section 77 as they pondered some questions regarding the meaning of some of the figurative and symbolic writings of the apostle John in the book of Revelation. There were many things in the book they did not understand, hence the Prophet inquired of the Lord and received answers to his questions.

The exact date section 77 was received is somewhat problematic, but the History of the Church and the Kirtland Revelation Book each provide some information that help clarify matters. The Kirtland Revelation Book contains a notation from Joseph Smith in the handwriting of Frederick G. Williams dated March 8, 1832, stating that “from the 26th of February [when section 76 was received] up to this date have been at home except a journey to Kirtland on the 29th of February and returned home [to Hiram] on the 4th of March. We received a revelation in Kirtland and one since I returned home.” Since the Kirtland Revelation Book also records the dates of section 78 as March 1, and section 80 as March 7, it is likely that these are the two revelations referred to here (Kirtland Revelation Book, 11, 15, 18). Moreover, in the History of the Church the brief introduction to Doctrine and Covenants 78-81 chronologically follows the references to section 77. Here Joseph also noted that “previous to the 20th of March, I received the four following revelations.” The four revelations mentioned are section 78 received on March 1, section 79 on March 12, section 80 on March 7, and section 81 on March 15. All of this indicates that section 77 was likely received on or before March 1, when Doctrine and Covenants 78 was received (most likely February 27th, 28th, 29th or March 1st).

Since Joseph was not scheduled to be translating from the book of Revelation in his work on the Joseph Smith Translation at that time, it is possible that the questions found in section 77 were put to him by the brethren in Kirtland upon his arrival there late on February 29 or early the next day before section 78 was received. The informality of an impromptu question and answer session might explain why Joseph’s inspired responses were not included among his published revelations until later. Joseph’s brief note simply states, “About the first of March, in connection with the translation of the scriptures, I received the following explanation of the Revelation of St. John” (HC, 1:253).

Few details have been preserved concerning the reception of section 77. It did not appear in the 1833 Book of Commandments nor in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants. Although it was included in the first edition of the Pearl of Great Price in 1851, section 77 did not appear in the Doctrine and Covenants until 1876, where it was included under the direction of President Brigham Young. The oldest manuscript of section 77, indeed, the earliest evidence of its existence, is a copy in the handwriting of Willard Richards that dates to 1840. Section 77 was, however, included as one of the Prophet’s revelations in the History of the Church, written sometime between August 27, 1841 and August 24, 1843, and it was printed in the Times and Seasons on August 1, 1844 (see Woodford, Historical Development, 2:975-76).

Section 77 is not a complete interpretation of the book, but rather gives only a few helps on the interpretation of some passages between chapters 4 and 11. There are twenty-two chapters, however, in the book. Wouldn’t it be marvelous if Joseph had given us even more revealed information regarding this difficult book?

The world’s biblical scholars have seemed to be frustrated and confused by the book of Revelation. This fact notwithstanding, the Prophet Joseph once said: “The book of Revelation is one of the plainest books God ever caused to be written” (TPJS, 290). Obviously, Joseph, through the Spirit, had caught the secret of the book, and he loved it!

While even today the book remains difficult to interpret, we in the Church do have a considerable advantage over the rest of the world. Modern revelation has given us considerable insight into the meaning of the book. This revealed material includes sections 77, 88, 130, and 131 of the Doctrine and Covenants, 1 Nephi 14:10-27, Ether 4:16 in the Book of Mormon, Joseph’s inspired revision of the King James Bible, and some sermons of the Prophet’s which are recorded in his History of the Church, volume 5, pages 298, 336-37, 339-45 and volume 6, pages 363-67.

D&C 77 The Book of Revelation

1 Q. What is the sea of glass spoken of by John, 4th chapter, and 6th verse of the Revelation? A. It is the earth, in its sanctified, immortal, and eternal state.

verse 1 “the sea of glass” When John the Revelator was taken up to the throne of God in heaven, he saw in front of the throne a sea or lake of glass like rock-crystal. The word sea (Hebrew ya’m) refers to both the fresh-water ocean, the source of all life and fertility according to tradition, and to a basin of holy water in the temple. Thus, the “sea of glass” becomes a perfect symbol for the future celestialized earth—the earth “in its sanctified, immortal, and eternal state” (D&C 77:1). In that state it will be one of the celestial orbs, a source of the power of life for worlds and a retainer of holiness. The earth is elsewhere described as God's "footstool" (Matthew 5:35) and therefore logically sits "before the throne."

The adjective glass-like (Greek hualinos) suggests the idea of clear, calm, shimmering. Crystal has a long association with glory and fire (see Exodus 24:9-10, 17; Ezekiel 1:22, 27). The earth thus becomes in effect a gigantic Urim and Thummim, "whereby all things pertaining to an inferior kingdom, or all kingdoms of a lower order, will be manifest to those who dwell on it" (D&C 130:8-9). D&C 130:6-9 adds further insight: "The angels do not reside on a planet like this earth; but they reside in the presence of God, on a globe like a sea of glass and fire, where all things for their glory are manifest, past, present, and future, and are continually before the Lord. The place where God resides is a great Urim and Thummim. This earth, in its sanctified and immortal state, will be made like unto crystal and will be a Urim and Thummim to the inhabitants who dwell thereon, whereby all things pertaining to an inferior kingdom, or all kingdoms of a lower order, will be manifest to those who dwell on it." Regarding this great Urim and Thummim, Brigham Young explained, "When you wish to know anything, you can look in this earth, and see all the eternities of God" (JD, 8:200).

In a note concerning his activities on February 18, 1843, Joseph Smith further recorded: "While at dinner, I remarked to my family and friends present, that when the earth was sanctified and became like a sea of glass, it would be one great Urim and Thummim, and the saints could look in it and see as they are seen" (HC, 5:279).

The sea of glass is later described as "a sea of glass mingled with fire" (Revelation 15:2), where exalted beings stand with their harps and sing unto God the following words: "Great and marvelous are thy works, Lord God Almighty; just and true are thy ways, thou King of saints. Who shall not fear thee, O Lord, and glorify thy name? for thou only art holy: for all nations shall come and worship before thee; for thy judgments are made manifest" (Revelation 15:3-4).

2 Q. What are we to understand by the four beasts, spoken of in the same verse?

A. They are figurative expressions, used by the Revelator, John, in describing heaven, the paradise of God, the happiness of man, and of beasts, and of creeping things, and of the fowls of the air; that is spiritual being in the likeness of that which is temporal; and that which is temporal in the likeness of that which is spiritual; the spirit of man in the likeness of his person, and every other creature which God has created.

verse 2 "the four beasts" It seems apparent that the four beasts are actual beasts who are now exalted but lived on other worlds. These actual beasts are also symbolic of—figurative expressions of—other things. In the book of Revelation, John generally speaks of two types of beasts:

1. He envisions actual living creatures (Greek zoon) that exist in heaven (Revelation 4:6-9; 5:6-14; 6:1-7; 7:11; 14:3; 15:7; 19:4). In this passage, John saw actual beasts. The four beasts in this passage are actual beasts that exist in heaven. Some biblical commentators place one of the four beasts at each of the four sides of the throne, where they serve as guardians of the throne. This role is similar to that played by the biblical cherubim (see, for example, Genesis 3:24; Exodus 25:18-22). Expanding this idea, the Prophet Joseph stated “that John’s vision [of actual beasts existing in heaven] was very different from Daniel’s prophecy—one [John’s vision] referring to things actually existing in heaven; the other [Daniel’s vision] being a figure of things which are on earth” (Ehat, Words, 189). The beasts are real but also stand as symbols: “They are figurative [i.e., symbolic] expressions, used by the Revelator, John, in describing [1] heaven, [2] the paradise of God, [3] the happiness of man, [3] the happiness of beasts, and [4 the happiness] of creeping things” (D&C 77:2).

2. Elsewhere in the book of Revelation John speaks of other beasts (Greek therion), referring both to wild earthly beasts as well as to symbolic or fantastic beasts (Revelation 6:8; 11:7; 13:1-18; 14:9, 11; 15:2; 16:2, 10, 13; 17:1-18; 19:19-20; 20:4,10). John will later use this term to describe the associates of Satan.

The word beast used in this verse could more accurately be translated “living creature.” In fact, the choice of the King James Version translators to use the word beast is particularly unfortunate, since these creatures are living, dynamic beings filled with intelligence and glory.

Joseph Smith suggested that the four beasts “lived on another planet than ours.” (Ehat and Cook, Words of Joseph Smith, 171.) The “four beasts” are actually four animals each representing a particular class or order (see the commentary for verses 7-8). They represent all of God’s animate creations.

This revelation also taught John that animals are among those who enjoy exaltation—the fulness of God’s blessings intended for them in the world to come. The grand secret was to show John what there was in heaven. John learned that God glorified Himself by saving all that His hands had made, whether beasts, fowls, fishes or men; and He will glorify Himself with them.

John saw the actual beast in heaven, showing to John that beasts did actually exist there. . . .

John saw curious looking beasts in heaven; he saw every creature that was in heaven—all the beasts, fowls and fish in heaven—actually there, giving glory to God. . .

Says one, “I cannot believe in the salvation of beasts.” Any man who would tell you that this could not be, would tell you that the revelations are not true. John heard the words of the beasts giving glory to God, and understood them. God who made the beasts could understand every language spoken by them. The four beasts were four of the most noble animals that had filled the measure of their creation, and had been saved from other worlds, because they were perfect: they were like angels in their sphere. We are not told where they came from, and I do not know; but they were seen and heard by John praising and glorifying God (HC, 5:343-44).

John informs us that the four beasts are capable of worshipping God (Revelation 4:8; 5:8-10).

“the spirit of man in the likeness of his person” There is a similarity of form between the spirit of a living thing and the mortal body it inhabits. This similarity may not be exact, however, as in the case of birth defects and other mortal deformities, and the precise degree to which individual spirits correspond to the appearance of their mortal bodies has not been revealed. Certainly, spirits can look exactly like their deceased bodies when necessary, but whether they always do so is open to question. It is not necessary to insist that genetic and environmental influences on mortal, physical bodies are coincidentally shared by their inhabiting spirits.

3 Q. Are the four beasts limited to individual beasts, or do they represent classes or orders? A. They are limited to four individual beasts, which were shown to John, to represent the glory of the classes of beings in their destined order or sphere of creation, in the enjoyment of their eternal felicity.

verse 3 “in their destined order or sphere of creation” There is no revealed doctrine that explains this intriguing phrase. It raises the question: Are there well-defined orders of animals and other living “beings”? Just as man is of a higher order than the animals, and animals are a higher order than plants, are some orders of animals higher than others? And is there an order that applies to all of God’s intelligences in combination to their mortal bodies, even perhaps including plants, lower forms of life, and even inanimate objects? We simply do not know the answer to these intriguing question.

“the enjoyment of their eternal felicity” All forms of living things, and not just human beings, will, through the work of Christ, receive eternal joy—except those who inherit perdition. Does this apply to every living microscopic creature, plants, and even inanimate objects? Perhaps so, but we are not blessed with revelation on this issue presently.

4 Q. What are we to understand by the eyes and wings, which the beasts had? A. Their eyes are a representation of light and knowledge, that is, their wings are a representation of power, to move, to act, etc.

5 Q. What are we to understand by the four and twenty elders, spoken of by John? A. We are to understand that these elders whom John saw, were elders who had been faithful in the work of the ministry and were dead; who belonged to the seven churches, and were then in the paradise of God.

verse 5 “four and twenty elders” John saw in his vision twenty-four elders who, along with the four beasts, had harps and little bottles of perfume—symbolizing their singing and praying to God as acts of worship. We learn in this particular verse that John may have known some of these men personally, for they had lived in the seven churches of western Turkey addressed in the book of Revelation among which John had labored (see Revelation 1:11). Though John saw in his vision twenty-four specific individuals, these twenty-four symbolically represented all the faithful elders who will be exalted through Christ out of every nation of the earth.

“the paradise of God” This is the pleasant state of some of the spirits in the world of spirits who, between their mortal deaths and their resurrections, are sealed up to immortal life.

6 Q. What are we to understand by the book which John saw, which was sealed on the back with seven seals? A. We are to understand that it contains the revealed will, mysteries, and the works of God; the hidden things of his economy concerning this earth during the seven thousand years of its continuance, or its temporal existence.

verse 6 “the book which John saw” Revelation chapter 5 contains a description of a book sealed with seven seals. The book represents the history and destiny of the earth. Each seal represents a thousand years of its temporal existence. The book is sealed because no man is worthy to open and read it. The book is taken out of the Father’s hand by the Lion and the Lamb—who is Jesus Christ, who is worthy to open the book and who does know the destiny of this world, and in fact is God of this world.

In Revelation 5:1-5, John sees on the right hand of God a scroll of unparalleled significance, “written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.” John notes that the scroll is full, both on the front and the back, which parallels Ezekiel 2:10. Nothing had been left out, and no more could be added. It was the scroll of destiny. John’s imagery bears a mind-set frequently found in apocalyptic literature that from the beginning God has determined the end of history.

We need to clarify here the difference between the view point of Revelation—that God has ordained future events—and the false idea that individual salvation is predetermined and that therefore there is no individual agency. One of the powers ascribed to God is expressed by the Greek words prognosis, and proginsk. These words are respectively translated “foreknowledge” and “predestination” and catch the idea not only of knowing something beforehand, but of choosing someone beforehand. Paul understood that God, because of his foreknowledge, had marked or set the course of history through the use of individuals who would bring about his will (see Romans 8-9). That is, God ordered things through the means of sending down spirits when and where he chose. These spirits, without any other manipulation on the part of God, act in ways he knows. Thus, by selection of these souls, God can order the course of history while still maintaining agency.

A major thesis of Revelation is that God set the path of all things and nothing will stray from his design. This idea is symbolized in the scroll where the sovereign will of God has been recorded, where all history has been foretold. Though the idea that God has determined the course of world events may grate on some, it was a source of comfort and hope for those to whom John wrote.

“the revealed will, mysteries, and the works of God” The book symbolizes the comprehensive plan of God for this earth and its inhabitants from the beginning to the end.

“the seven thousand years of its continuance” These are the seven thousand years of this earth’s existence between the fall of Adam and the end of the Millennium. These seven periods of one thousand years are equated with the “seven seals.”

7 Q. What are we to understand by the seven seals with which it was sealed? A. We are to understand that the first seal contains the things of the first thousand years, and the second also of the second thousand years, and so on until the seventh.

verse 7 “the first seal contains the things of the first thousand years” Even though a seal is a bit of wax or clay, imprinted with an identifying mark, which keeps a scroll tightly rolled up, here Joseph equates the scroll with its seal and explains that “the first seal contains the things of the first thousand years . . .”

For ancient Jews the number seven symbolized perfection or completeness. Since the seven scrolls or seven seals represent the comprehensive plan of God (see verse 6), the sequential opening of the seven seals likely represents the full unfolding or implementation of the divine plan for this earth from beginning to end. With the opening of the seventh seal, God’s plan for the temporal earth will reach its final stage in a glorious Millennium.

8 Q. What are we to understand by the four angels, spoken of in the 7th chapter and 1st verse of Revelation? A. We are to understand that they are four angels sent forth from God, to whom is given power over the four parts of the earth, to save life and to destroy; these are they who have the everlasting gospel to commit to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people; having power to shut up the heavens, to seal up unto life, or to cast down to the regions of darkness.

verse 8 “four angels” John sees four angels standing on the figurative four corners of the earth. These angels hold in check the wind so that it “should not blow on the earth.” The Greek word anemos, translated “wind,” indicates a storm wind, sometimes almost hurricane-like. Such winds brought drought, heat, insect plagues, and desolation. Biblical people viewed such winds as displays of divine wrath (cf.

Hosea 3:5; Revelation 16:9, “great heat” being from a scorching wind). In this light, the angels play the role of divine executioners with power to destroy the whole earth.

We learn from this verse that God commissioned these four angels and gave them power to both destroy life and to save it. They have power over the process of condemning judgment and the spreading of the gospel. They have, as it were, two faces. They are not only destroying angels, but saving angels as well. What makes the difference is how men respond to the message they dispense. These four angels may be the same angels referred to in the parable of the wheat and the tares (see D&C 86:5-7; Matthew 13:24-30, 36-43). In both cases, the angels with the power to save or to destroy were instructed by their leader to wait until the wheat has been gathered (see Matthew 13) or until the saints have been sealed (see Revelation 7). In the meantime their work is to prepare the nations of the world to receive the restored gospel and to bring the world to repentance, even by the use of natural disasters if need be.

The angels have long since left their home in heaven and are now on the earth. These angels are those who in 1831 were “waiting the great command to reap down the earth, to gather the tares that they may be burned” (D&C 38:12). President Wilford Woodruff stated that these angels have been loosed and are at work here (“Temple Worker’s Excursion,” 512). However, their job is not just to destroy but to commit the gospel as well (Joseph Fielding Smith, Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:300-01). Their main period of operation is the sixth seal, or the period just preceding the Millennium. Thus, in this dispensation, angelic administration is combining with mortal efforts to assure the world-wide preaching of the gospel during that time (see D&C 77:10). Only after they fulfill that commission will they unleash the winds of destruction.

The signs associated with the sixth seal—the earthquake, the darkened sun, the blood-red moon, falling stars, the heavens opening as a scroll, the movement of mountains and islands, and fear coming upon humanity—play a major role in the objectives of the sixth seal. Their function is not primarily destruction—rather it is to warn. They represent additional effort on the part of God to bring all men to him. The four angels symbolize the spiritual forces that oversee and assist in fulfilling this objective. During the sixth seal, the fulness of his gospel will be restored to the earth and both natural and supernatural forces will combine to see that it spreads to all lands and cultures. Those who respond with fulness of heart will enter into the rest of the Lord and find peace and safety. Those who reject it will find vexation and misery.

The world has already rejected the gospel many times, but during the sixth seal conditions are such that one more rejection will assure its doom. This is because the gospel, preached with tremendous power, will not be easily ignored. Those who reject it will not do so out of ignorance. Therefore, events during the sixth seal will heighten the ideological conflict between the forces of good and evil. The conflict will not be resolved during the sixth seal, but the battle lines will be clearly drawn.

The battle lines will fall between the church of the devil and the Church of Jesus Christ. The mortal perspective may not perceive and report it that way, but from a spiritual standpoint the issue is clear.

The armor of the saints—righteousness and tremendous power from God—will protect them from the world-embracing colossus of wickedness, pride, and spiritual apathy while the destroying angels prepare to move against it. As noted above, the primary preparation will be the preaching of the gospel. Pure testimony will flow through the nations during the sixth seal. Many will respond. Those who do not, who willfully rebel against the light and who seek to destroy God's work, will face the wrath of the seventh seal.

9 Q. What are we to understand by the angel ascending from the east, Revelation 7th chapter and 2nd verse? A. We are to understand that the angel ascending from the east is he to whom is given the seal of the living God over the twelve tribes of Israel; wherefore, he crieth unto the four angels having the everlasting gospel, saying: Hurt not the earth, neither the sea, nor the trees, till we have sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads. And, if you will receive it, this is Elias which was to come to gather together the tribes of Israel and restore all things.

verse 9 “the angel ascending from the east” In concert with the four angels, John sees another angel ascending from the east. The imagery used here reminds one of the rising sun, which recalls the glory of God, spreading light and life. The idea is reminiscent of Ezekiel 43:4, where the glory of Jehovah comes out of the east. This angel “is he to whom is given the seal of the living God over the twelve tribes of Israel; . . . and, if you will receive it, this is Elias which was to come to gather together the tribes of Israel and restore all things” (D&C 77:9). “Elias” here is used as a title (meaning messenger), rather than referring to a specific individual.

Speaking of this Elias, Elder Bruce R. McConkie has said:

Correcting the Bible by the spirit of revelation, the Prophet restored a statement of John the Baptist which says that Christ is the Elias who was to restore all things (JST, John 1:21-28). By revelation we are also informed that the Elias who was to restore all things is the angel Gabriel who was known in mortality as Noah (D&C 27:6-7; Luke 1:5-25; TPJS, 157). From the same authentic source we also learn that the promised Elias is John the Revelator (D&C 77:9, 14). Thus there are three different revelations which name Elias as being three different persons. What are we to conclude?

By finding answer to the question, by whom has the restoration been effected, we shall find who Elias is and find there is no problem in harmonizing these apparently contradictory revelations. Who has restored all things? Was it one man? Certainly not. Many angelic ministrants have been sent from the courts of glory to confer keys and powers, to commit their dispensations and glories again to men on earth. At least the following have come: Moroni, John the Baptist, Peter, James and John, Moses, Elijah, Elias, Gabriel, Raphael, and Michael (D&C 13; 110; 128:19-21). Since it is apparent that no one messenger has carried the whole burden of the restoration, but rather that each has come with a specific endowment from on high, it becomes clear that Elias is a composite personage. The expression must be understood to be a name and a title for those whose mission it was to commit keys and powers to men in this final dispensation (McConkie, Commentary, 3:491-92. See also Smith, Doctrines of Salvation, 1:170-174).

“sealed the servants of our God in their foreheads” This seal pertains to the Abrahamic covenant and making one’s calling and election sure, as Joseph Smith explained: “Four destroying angels holding power over the four quarters of the earth until the servants of God are sealed in their foreheads, which signifies sealing the blessing upon their heads, meaning the everlasting covenant, thereby making their calling and election sure. When a seal is put upon the father and mother, it secures their posterity, so that they cannot be lost, but will be saved by virtue of the covenant of their father and mother” (TPJS, 321).

In another setting, Ezekiel envisioned the sealing, or marking, on the foreheads of the righteous as a protection for those righteous. This protective sealing and the subsequent destruction of the wicked perhaps prefigures the events recorded Ezekiel 9:4-6: “And the Lord said unto him, Go through the midst of the city, through the midst of Jerusalem, and set a mark upon the foreheads of the man that sigh and that cry for all the abominations that be done in the midst thereof. And to the others he said in mine hearing, Go ye after him through the city, and smite: let not your eye spare, neither have ye pity: Slay utterly old and young, both maids, and little children, and women: but come not near any man upon whom is the mark.” This seal of the righteous recalls the mark of blood at Passover (Exodus 12:13). At that time those who possessed the mark of lamb’s blood—that is, those who desired to make Christ’s atonement effective in their lives—were spared the plague of God (Isaiah 44:5; Galatians 6:17).

In short, God marks and seals the righteous with his seal, making them his and placing them under his protection. In the last days, those who possess God’s seal on their foreheads will not be destroyed by the “four winds of the earth” (Revelation 7:1-3). Joseph Smith explained: “Then, having this promise [of one’s calling and election made sure] sealed unto them, it was an anchor to the soul, sure and steadfast. Though the thunders might roll and lightnings flash, and earthquakes bellow, and war gather thick around, yet this hope and knowledge would support the soul in every hour of trial, trouble and tribulation” (TPJS, 298).

As a counterfeit to the true and sacred things of God, Satan places a mark on the forehead or the right hand of his followers (Revelation 13:16; 14:9). These followers, however, will not be protected from God’s “four winds,” and they eventually will be destroyed by God.

“this is Elias” See the commentary for verse 9 above. There have been many Eliases or those called to do restorative work in this final dispensation, but in this particular verse Elias seems to be none other than Jesus Christ himself. In the context of the earth’s existence in the first six thousand years, restoring all things perhaps means restoring the fulness of the gospel and the keys of the priesthood to a celestial world, and the several Eliases listed in the commentary for Revelation 7:2 have done this. However, in the context of the seventh thousand years, restoring all things includes restoring the earth itself to a terrestrial state and bringing to pass the redemption and resurrection of the dead. This is the might work of only one Elias, Jesus Christ himself. He will, at his second coming, be the great and final Elias or restorer. It is Jesus Christ himself who ultimately will restore all things and who will finally gather all of Israel together “as a hen gatherereth her chickens” (3 Nephi 10:4-6).

10 Q. What time are the things spoken of in this chapter to be accomplished? A. They are to be accomplished in the sixth thousand years, or the opening of the sixth seal.

verse 10 “in the sixth thousand years” The work of spreading the gospel throughout the world to every nation, kindred, tongue, and people is the work of the latter-day Church. We now live in the sixth time period, or day, or thousand years—the period of time immediately before the glorious Millennium, which is the seven time period or the sabbath day of the earth’s temporal existence.

11 Q. What are we to understand by sealing the one hundred and forty-four thousand, out of all the tribes of Israel—twelve thousand out of every tribe? A. We are to understand that those who are sealed are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to administer the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, by the angels to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, to bring as many as will come to the church of the Firstborn.

verse 11 “twelve thousand out of every tribe” John states that the number of those sealed is 144,000. The number need not be taken literally. This verse explains “that those who are sealed are high priests, ordained unto the holy order of God, to administer the everlasting gospel; for they are they who are ordained out of every nation, kindred, tongue, and people, by the angels to whom is given power over the nations of the earth, to bring as many as will come to the church of the Firstborn” (77:11). Note that the Lord’s answer to Joseph’s question does not specify a number. Instead it notes that the group is composed of high priests who have a special calling “to administer the everlasting gospel” and “to bring as many as will come to the church of the Firstborn.”

Joseph Smith associated these high priests with the temple (HC, 6:365). The symbolic meaning of the number supports this association. Twelve represents the priesthood. Biblical people squared a number to amplify its symbolic meaning. Thus, 144 suggests a fulness of priesthood authority. But John is not satisfied with that. He gives the image a superlative quality by multiplying 1,000, representing completeness. In this way he shows the strength and breadth of the priesthood in the latter days, in this dispensation that is, indeed, the dispensation of the fulness of times. During this period that complete priesthood authority will operate.

The attachment to the temple fits perfectly since only there can one receive the fulness of the priesthood (D&C 124:25-30). Elder McConkie states that the 144,000 are kings and priests “converted, baptized, endowed, married for eternity, and finally sealed up unto eternal life” (Doctrinal New Testament Commentary, 3:491). Their mission is not merely to bring people into The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints. It goes beyond that. They will have “general authority” status. Their special assignment centers in getting people sealed into the church of the Firstborn through the administration of the fulness of the endowment (on the “church of the Firstborn,” see D&C 76:50-70; 93:21-23).

John, in the book of Revelation, indicates that the 144,000 will be those sealed from all the tribes of Israel. Curiously, he leaves out Dan and adds Manasses (Manasseh, the son of Joseph) to get twelve tribes. John gives no hint why he left out Dan. Some early Christians believed that John dropped the tribal name because of a tradition that the Antichrist would arise from there. The disfavor into which Dan fell goes all the way back to 1 Chronicles 7, which also omits Dan from the list of tribes. It may be that Dan’s association with idolatry marked the tribe for omission since Jeroboam set up his idols in that tribal territory (see Judges 18:30; 1 Kings 12:29). Since John was writing in part against the influences of idolatry invading the church, he may have omitted Dan as a warning.

“the church of the Firstborn” Again, see the commentary for D&C 76:54.

12 Q. What are we to understand by the sounding of the trumpets, mentioned in the 8th chapter of Revelation? A. We are to understand that as God made the world in six days, and on the seventh day he finished his work, and sanctified it, and also formed man out of the dust of the earth, even so, in the beginning of the seventh thousand years will the Lord God sanctify the earth, and complete the salvation of man, and judge all things, and shall redeem all things, except that which he hath not put into his power, when he shall have sealed all things, unto the end of all things; and the sounding of the trumpets of the seven angels are the preparing and finishing of his work, in the beginning of the seventh thousand years—the preparing of the way before the time of his coming.

verse 12 “sounding of the trumpets” After the opening of the seventh seal in his Revelation, John saw a series of seven angels, who sounded their seven trumpets one after the other in a symbolic series. This verse informs us that the events symbolized by the seven trumpets are mighty works that Jesus Christ will perform after the beginning of the Millennium (after the opening of the seventh seal) but before his second coming—works of judgment, redemption, and resurrection. These works, on the seventh day of the earth’s temporal existence, will be part of sanctifying the earth and raising it to a paradisiacal glory, just as Christ sanctified the earth and gave it the glory of paradise, or Eden, once before—on the seventh day of its creation. This is the same series of trumpet blasts described in D&C 88:96-106. The seventh trumpet announces the completion of all preparations and the coming of the glorious Christ himself to the earth (see Exodus 19:16-20), where the descent of Jehovah, or Christ, to the earth was also marked by the sounding of a trumpet).

“on the seventh day he finished his work, and sanctified it, and also formed man out of the dust of the earth” This phrase can be confusing and should not be interpreted as meaning that the Lord created man on the seventh day. Man was created (the physical creation) on the sixth day of creation. The creation of Adam on the seventh day would require rejecting the specific testimony of Genesis 1:31; Moses 2:31; and Abraham 4:31 that Adam was created on the sixth day or time, and the latter two sources were translated by the prophet Joseph Smith.

13 Q. When are the things to be accomplished, which are written in the 9th chapter of Revelation? A. They are to be accomplished after the opening of the seventh seal, before the coming of Christ.

verse 13 “after the opening of the seven seal, before the coming of Christ” Note that the seventh period of the earth’s existence will start before the second coming of Christ and that there will be a space of time “after the opening of the seventh seal, before the coming of Christ.” The two events are not simultaneous, nor does the opening of the seventh seal initiate the Millennium. According to John’s Revelation, there was silence in heaven for the space of half an hour after the opening of the seventh seal before the events symbolized by the seven trumpets—the final preparations for the coming of Christ—began to take place. If we interpret literally the formula of one day with God being a thousand years with man, which is by no means certain that we must so interpret, a half hour would amount to a little less than twenty-one years separating the opening of the seventh seal and the beginning of the seven trumpets. No indication is given of how much additional time the events associated with the seven trumpets will take, although it seems that all will be completed in less than one generation (see JST Matthew 1:34).

14 Q. What are we to understand by the little book which was eaten by John, as mentioned in the 10th chapter of Revelation? A. We are to understand that it was a mission, and an ordinance, for him to gather the tribes of Israel; behold, this is Elias, who, as it is written, must come and restore all things.

verse 14 “the little book” In his vision John saw an angel holding a little book or scroll. John was instructed to take the book and eat it. When he did so, according to the book of Revelation, he found that it was delicious but that it upset his stomach. The experience of John in this regard is an almost exact repetition of the experience of Ezekiel (see Ezekiel 2:9 through 3:4).

“it was a mission” The interpretation offered here is supported by the similar experience of Ezekiel, who with the same visionary imagery was also called on a mission to preach and minister to the house of Israel. John the Beloved Apostle is here identified as one who will assist in the restoration and gathering of Israel in the latter days. Note that John did not die, but was translated (D&C 7)—making him available to minister to the earth directly in this final dispensation.

15 Q. What is to be understood by the two witnesses, in the eleventh chapter of Revelation? A. They are two prophets that are to be raised up to the Jewish nation in the last days, at the time of the restoration, and to prophesy to the Jews after they are gathered and have built the city of Jerusalem in the land of their fathers.

verse 15 “the two witnesses” In Greek the words for witness and martyr are the same. This is appropriate, since being one often leads to becoming the other. John saw in his vision two servants of the Lord who testify of the truth and who suffer martyrdom for it. These two witnesses have the power to shut the heavens and to smite the earth with plagues. These witnesses will not be casual elders who just happen to be in Jerusalem when was breaks out. They will likely be General Authorities of the Church—prophets specifically called on this mission to the Jewish nation (compare Zechariah 4:12-14; Revelation 11:1-4).

“to the Jewish nation in the last days” It is intriguing that at the time Joseph Smith wrote this revelation, there was no Jewish nation upon the face of the earth. The existence of the nation of Israel in the Holy Land since 1948 constitutes just one more prophecy of Joseph Smith that has come to pass since the Restoration.

Brief Historical Setting

1832 March

By March of 1832, separate united orders were organized under the leadership of Bishops Edward Partridge in Missouri and Newell K. Whitney in Kirtland. The leading brethren of the Church were, by revelation, organized together into yet a third united order—indeed a mini-united order—called the United Firm [D&C 78, 82 and 92 - The United Firm], which was charged with the responsibility of caring for the poor. Initially the Firm owned property jointly, but later the properties were divided among its members [D&C 104 - Reorganization of the United Order and United Firm].

Sections 78 and 82 The United Firm

Section 78 was received on March 1, 1832, in Kirtland, Ohio, while Joseph was visiting there from Hiram, Ohio.

Like many other principles of the gospel, the law of consecration or the law of consecration and stewardship was made known to the Prophet gradually, and he in turn gradually disclosed these principles to the saints “line upon line, precept upon precept.”

While many have used the terms “law of consecration” and “united order” interchangeably, they are more appropriately used as follows: the law of consecration and stewardship is the set of principles by which a group of people enter into an agreement for their common temporal welfare. When a group is engaged in living the law of consecration, we may call the group a united order.

Review the material concerning the law of consecration in the commentary for section 42, especially the five essential characteristics of the law of consecration. I will emphasize a couple of additional points. A man first consecrated all of his possessions to the Church, and then he received his stewardship in return. The things his family subsequently grew or produced that were in excess of the family’s needs were placed in the storehouse to be distributed by the bishop to those in need. Also, the system of ownership provided for by the law of consecration was not communal—that is, private and not shared ownership of the land and materials that constituted the stewardship characterized the order. The Lord perhaps revealed to Joseph the necessity of private ownership by showing him the example of the common stock family. In February of 1831, after arriving in Kirtland from New York, Joseph observed a communal order among the Campbellite followers of Sidney Rigdon called “the family” or “the common stock family.” They had established themselves on the Isaac Morley farm near Kirtland and were led by a man named Lyman Wight. They had become involved in petty controversies and major conflicts. Some members of the family had decided that what belonged to one belonged to all, hence they would take each other’s clothes and property and use them without permission. Joseph advised them to abandon their common stock program.

By March of 1832 there was a united order in Missouri under Bishop Edward Partridge and a separate order in Kirtland under Bishop Newell K. Whitney. A third order also had its beginnings. This is the so-called United Firm, or the Order of Enoch as it was also called. This was a separate united order consisting of the leading brethren of the Church, which was created to manage the temporal affairs of the Church. It was a type of business partnership in which the partners controlled the business interests and properties of the Church and used the financial means at their disposal to finance the various programs of the Church. Initially they shared the responsibilities of holding church properties in trust, and they lived off the earnings of these properties. Later they were each assigned specific properties of their own. After taking from the earnings of these properties sufficient monies for their needs, they gave the surplus to the bishops' storehouses for use by the poor. In fact, this body was assigned primary responsibility for the care of the poor.

The United Firm or simply the Firm also purchased lands for those who gathered in Kirtland and Missouri, and later they would be made responsible for financing the construction of the Kirtland Temple.

Because they acted as purchasing agents for the Church, and because those from whom they attempted to buy lands often had a religious bias against the Mormons, it was important that the identities of the brethren comprising the United Firm remain anonymous, lest they encounter exorbitant prices or even outright refusal to sell. For this reason, whenever these brethren were referred to in revelations in those years (sections 78, 82, 92, 96, 103, 104, 105), they were referred to by code names or pseudonyms. These pseudonyms are now of historical interest only since they are no longer found in the current edition of the Doctrine and Covenants. Joseph was Enoch or Gazelam or Baurak Ale or Seth. Newell K. Whitney was Ahashdah. Sidney was Pelagoram. Oliver Cowdery was Olihah. Martin Harris was Mahemson. Edward Partridge was Alam. A. Sidney Gilbert was Mahalaleel. John Whitmer was Horah. William W. Phelps was Shalemanasseh. John Johnson was Zombre. Frederick G. Williams was Shederlaomach. Pseudonyms were also given to cities and other items in the environment of the early church. For example, the city of Kirtland was referred to as Shinehah (sections 82, 96, 104). "Mine elders" in section 105 was rendered Baneemy. The remaining were all found in section 104. Dollars were talents. New York was Cainhannoch. The tannery was tahhanes. The printing office was Laneshine House. The bishop's storehouse at Kirtland was Ozondah. The ashery at Kirtland was shule. "Print" and "printing" were shinelah and shinelane. It is possible that these names were simply invented, but it appears more likely that most of them came from the Hebrew studies of the early Mormon leaders. These code names were not in the original revelations but were added later as they were needed. Until the 1876 edition the pseudonyms alone were printed, but with the 1876 edition, the real names were published in parentheses following the code names. In the first printing of the current 1981 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, the four code names remaining were in D&C 82:11. In a later printing of the same edition, all of the code names were replaced by the appropriate individual's name.

The United Firm had its beginning in section 70. Please see the background materials for that section. In section 70, six of the brethren were organized into the so-called Literary Firm, and they were given the joint stewardship to publish and sell books, periodicals, and the newspapers of the Church. In the spring of 1832, the Literary Firm became the United Firm and was expanded to include nine church leaders—Oliver Cowdery, Edward Partridge, Sidney Gilbert, John Whitmer, W. W. Phelps, Joseph Smith, Newell K. Whitney, Sidney Rigdon, and Jesse Gause. After Jesse Gause apostatized, he was replaced by Frederick G. Williams. Also John Johnson and Martin Harris were added. These last three brethren had significant financial means and were thus a useful addition to the order. The United Firm not only managed church farmland properties in the Kirtland area but also the Gilbert and Whitney stores in Kirtland and Independence, a tannery, a printing shop, an ashery, and a steam saw mill.

In a period before the leading quorums of the Church were fully organized, the united firm was intended for a limited time to provide financial leadership and accountability for the Church, and its members dealt with matters of church financial policy that would later be the responsibility of General Authorities. Modern analogues to the united and literary firms can be seen in the corporation of the First Presidency, the corporation of the Presiding Bishopric, and the various financial, publishing, welfare, and other committees of the Church.

A major problem encountered in trying to make the United Orders work in Kirtland and Missouri was a tendency for poor people to be attracted to such movements and for the wealthy to shun such enterprises. Few members of the Church owned any land that could be used for redistribution. Since most converts were unable to contribute significant amounts of property to the order, land was not available to be distributed in the form of inheritances or stewardships. Initially the only large acreage owned by members was the Isaac Morley farm on which the family had lived. Although Brother Morley sold fifty acres of land to a nonmember in 1831, he retained about eighty acres. After he moved to Missouri, many members of the Church settled on this farm. In fact, this land was the principal gathering place for the saints prior to 1832. In April 1832, shortly before the United Firm was organized, Frederick G. Williams purchased 144 acres in Kirtland. It was subsequently referred to, quite logically, as the Frederick G. Williams farm. Later in 1833, the Church purchased 103 acres from Peter French for five thousand dollars.

In spite of these land acquisitions, the United Orders were never successful for a variety of reasons. They experienced frustrations and failures for almost a decade, and finally in 1838 the Church was given a less comprehensive law, the law of tithing (D&C 119). Actually, the law of tithing is not a substitute for the law of consecration but rather a part of that law—the part that finances the Church's operations. The United Orders were abandoned, but the law of consecration continues to be a viable principle of the gospel that the saints are expected to live.

Section 78 directs that the “order” (United Firm) be formed, and it commands Joseph, Sidney Rigdon, and Newell K. Whitney to “sit in council with the saints . . . in Zion,” to regulate the affairs of the poor. Obeying the command, Joseph, Sidney, Jesse Gause, and Newell K. Whitney left Ohio on April 1, 1832, and traveled to Independence, arriving April 24. During this visit, at a meeting of the brethren who comprised the United Firm, it was decided to incorporate the Missouri branch of the Gilbert and Whitney store into the holdings of the Firm.

Section 78

Scripture Mastery

D&C 78:17-18 Ye are little children . . . and ye cannot bear all things now; nevertheless, be of good cheer.

1 The Lord spake unto Joseph Smith, Jun., saying: Hearken unto me, saith the Lord your God, who are ordained unto the high priesthood of my church, who have assembled yourselves together;

verse 1 “The Lord spake unto Joseph Smith, Jun.” When the 78th section was initially published in the 1835 edition of the Doctrine and Covenants, Joseph’s name was written in code (see the introductory commentary for section 78 above).

“the high priesthood of my church, who have assembled yourselves together” Although no historical information is available for the setting of section 78, the wording here indicates that it was received around the time of a meeting with the church leadership in Kirtland.

2 And listen to the counsel of him who has ordained you from on high, who shall speak in your ears the words of wisdom, that salvation may be unto you in that thing which you have presented before me, saith the Lord God.

verse 2 “in that thing which you have presented before me” It is clear that section 78 was received in answer to a request of the Lord from the assembled leaders in Kirtland. Although we do not know the exact wording of their petition, it would seem likely that it dealt with the financial problems of the Church and the difficulty in establishing the bishops’ storehouses. By March 1832 the saints had not yet organized a storehouse either in Kirtland or in Missouri, even though an important part of the Lord’s plan for the consecration of his saints was the establishment of a bishop’s storehouse, and some instruction concerning the storehouse had already been received by the Church (see D&C 51:13). This pattern of actively seeking guidance from the Lord concerning the difficulties of our lives and then listening to and following his advice continues to be a prudent pattern for modern saints.

3 For verily I say unto you, the time has come, and is now at hand; and behold, and lo, it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse for the poor of my people, both in this place and in the land of Zion—verse 3 “the time has come” More than a year had passed since the Lord had first commanded that the poor and needy be provided for under the law of consecration (see D&C 42:30-44). Further instruction had been given to Bishop Edward Partridge and the Church ten months earlier in section 51. But by March 1832 very little had actually been done to organize and administer the commanded program.

“it must needs be that there be an organization of my people, in regulating and establishing the affairs of the storehouse” It seems most likely the Lord is referring specifically to the United Firm, though he could as well be referring to the law of consecration and stewardship in general, as little had been accomplished up to this time in actually putting that law into effect. Evidence for this latter possibility is the Lord’s reference to a “permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church” in the next verse. The Lord planned that the system of consecration and stewardship be permanent, but the United Firm was considered more of a temporary solution to the Church’s financial woes.

4 For a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church, to advance the cause, which ye have espoused, to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father who is in heaven;

verse 4 “a permanent and everlasting establishment and order unto my church” Today the bishops’ storehouses operate under the direction of the Presiding Bishopric and not a United Firm. It is the establishment and regulation of a storehouse for the poor that was intended to be “permanent and everlasting.”

“to the salvation of man, and to the glory of your Father” Whatever contributes to the salvation of human beings also contributes to the glory of God, for the work and the glory of God is the immortality and eternal life of man (see Moses 1:39).

5 That you may be equal in the bonds of heavenly things, yea, and earthly things also, for the obtaining of heavenly things.

verse 5 “That you may be equal in the bonds of heavenly things” The purpose of the law of consecration is to make the saints equal in earthly blessings now so that they might become equal in the enjoyment of heavenly or celestial blessings later. Where the saints are not equal temporally, it is because someone will not live the law of consecration. Since consecration is a celestial law, those who will not live it cannot be equal in their heavenly blessings with those who do live it. Therefore those who would enjoy the celestial kingdom in the resurrection must be willing to abide by its laws here upon the earth—including the law of consecration.

6 For if ye are not equal in earthly things ye cannot be equal in obtaining heavenly things; verse 6 Living the law of consecration and participating in a United Order was considered an educational experience for all participants—preparing them to live eternally in the kingdom of heaven. We thus see an example of the idea that the Lord’s purposes are often intimately related to his means. George Q. Cannon taught: “The organization of society that exists in the heavens must exist on the earth; the same condition of society, so far as it is applicable to mortal beings, must exist here” (JD, 13:99). The United Order is referred to in the scriptures as an “everlasting order” (D&C 82:20; 104:1).

The system of power and authority within the United Order was nonhierarchical and nonauthoritarian, so that no man ruled over another even in a benevolent way (A. Don Sorenson, “Being Equal in Earthly and Heavenly Power: The Idea of Stewardship in the United Order,” BYU Studies [1977], 18:1). We have learned that those who dwell in the presence of the Father will be “equal in power, and in might, and in dominion” (D&C 76:95). “Then shall they be gods, because they have all power” (D&C 132:20).

7 For if you will that I give unto you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you.

8 And now, verily thus saith the Lord, it is expedient that all things be done unto my glory, by you who are joined together in this order;

9 Or, in other words, let my servant Newel K. Whitney and my servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and my servant Sidney Rigdon sit in council with the saints which are in Zion;

verse 9 The Lord here calls three members of the United Firm to travel to Independence, Missouri. Obedient to this commandment, these three brethren, accompanied by Jesse Gause, traveled to Independence, met with the members and the leaders, and inducted Oliver Cowdery, Edward Partridge, Sidney Gilbert, John Whitmer, and W. W. Phelps into the United Firm. Martin Harris, Jesse Gause, and eventually Frederick G. Williams and John Johnson were also members of the Firm. The retail store that had been established in Independence by Sidney Gilbert, Newel K. Whitney’s former associate in Kirtland, became the bishop’s storehouse in Zion (see D&C 57:8).

10 Otherwise Satan seeketh to turn their hearts away from the truth, that they become blinded and understand not the things which are prepared for them.

verse 10 “Otherwise Satan seeketh to turn their hearts” Apparently the saints in Zion were having as much difficulty implementing the principles of consecration and establishing a viable storehouse as the saints in Kirtland. If Satan could divert the saints from living this law, then he could destroy their opportunity of gaining the blessings of eternity. It was obvious that drastic measures were going to be required in both Kirtland and Zion to get the saints over the hurdle of actually implementing consecration and stewardship.

11 Wherefore, a commandment I give unto you, to prepare and organize yourselves by a bond or everlasting covenant that cannot be broken.

verse 11 Here the Lord seems to be speaking to those whom he had called to the United Firm.

“organize yourselves by a bond or everlasting covenant” Entrance into the United Firm was by sacred covenant, just as those who accept the burden of consecration today do so by sacred covenant in the temples of God. President Ezra Taft Benson drew a direct connection between those who made a covenant to enter the United Firm and those today who covenant to live the law of consecration:

We covenant to live the law of consecration. This law is that we consecrate our time, talents, strength, property, and money for the building up of the kingdom of God on this earth and the establishment of Zion.

Until one abides by the laws of obedience, sacrifice, the gospel, and chastity, he cannot abide the law of consecration, which is the law pertaining to the celestial kingdom. “For if you will that I give you a place in the celestial world, you must prepare yourselves by doing the things which I have commanded you and required of you” (D&C 78:7) (Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson, 121).

“that cannot be broken” This covenant and every other covenant we make, of course, can be broken because each person has his or her agency. The meaning of this phrase seems to be that since the covenant of consecration is an eternal and a celestial covenant, it cannot be broken without the loss of celestial glory.

12 And he who breaketh it shall lose his office and standing in the church, and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption.

verses 12 “he who breaketh it shall lose his office and standing in the church” Because Zion can only be established upon the principle of consecration (D&C 105:5), those who reject that principle cannot lead others to Zion. Therefore, they must not hold church leadership positions. Worse than this, however, since they have rejected the avowed destination of the Church, they cannot even be counted as members “in good standing.” An extreme example is provided in the New Testament in the case of Ananias and Sapphira (see Acts 5:1-11).

“and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan” The covenant these men of the United Firm made with the Lord was a most solemn one, and it carried with it a very severe penalty. Anyone who broke the covenant would be “delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption” (see also D&C 82:21). According to the 1828 edition of Webster’s Dictionary, “to buffet” means “to strike with the hand or fist; to box; to beat.” An example of the enactment of this penalty occurred when Sidney Rigdon left the Church. Admittedly, this occurred long after the Firm had been disbanded, but Sidney was turned over to the buffetings of Satan by conference action.

“until the day of redemption” Even hell has an end. Eventually, all of those who will repent and accept the atonement and lordship of Christ will be redeemed from the power of Satan (see D&C 76:42-43).

13 Behold, this is the preparation wherewith I prepare you, and the foundation, and the ensample which I give unto you, whereby you may accomplish the commandments which are given you;

verse 13 “this is the preparation . . . and the ensample” The creation of the United Firm was not the ultimate fulfillment of the law of consecration, but it was a beginning and an example of how the principle could be implemented and the commandment obeyed. It was an excellent model for all of the Church to watch. The commandment will only be fulfilled or accomplished when the saints have collectively established Zion in preparation for the second coming of the Lord by living the law of consecration and becoming equal in temporal things.

14 That through my providence, notwithstanding the tribulation which shall descend upon you, that the church may stand independent above all other creatures beneath the celestial world;

verse 14 “notwithstanding the tribulation which shall descend upon you” Again, we see a foreshadowing of the persecutions and trial that are awaiting them in the future (see also the commentary on D&C 58:3-4).

Modern church members also should not regard trials and tribulations as a thing of the past. Elder M. Russell Ballard taught: “We can certainly anticipate some exciting and wonderful opportunities in the years ahead. But it will be more and more difficult to remain a committed follower of Jesus Christ. I believe future followers of Christ will face adversity and persecution that is much more intense than anything we see today” (Ensign, July 1995, 15).

“that the church may stand independent” Implementation of the law of consecration will, with the blessings of God, give the Church the ability to survive on its own resources without being forced to compromise its principles or to ally itself with or rely upon the institutions of the world. From time to time the Church may choose to cooperate with other entities in matters of mutual concern, but never in a manner that would infringe upon its sovereignty and self-determination.

“above all other creatures beneath the celestial world” The word creatures means institutions or entities.

15 That you may come up unto the crown prepared for you, and be made rulers over many kingdoms, saith the Lord God, the Holy One of Zion, who hath established the foundations of Adam-ondi-Ahman;

verse 15 “come up unto the crown prepared for you” The eternal destiny of faithful saints, those who make and keep the covenant of consecration, is not to serve, but to rule—and not over one kingdom alone, but over many.

“who hath established the foundations of Adam-ondi-Ahman” Adam-ondi-Ahman is the name of the place where Adam and Eve settled after they were expelled from the Garden of Eden (see D&C 117:8) (See Orson Pratt, JD, 18:343). It was there that the Lord appeared to Adam and his righteous posterity three years before Adam’s death, and it is there that another great meeting with the Savior will take place before his second coming.

This phrase in verse 15 and all of verse 16 were not in the original revelation of section 78, but were added to the text by the Prophet Joseph in the first printed edition in 1835. By that time the name and the significance of Adam-ondi-Ahman had apparently been revealed to the Prophet, and three years later in May 1838, Joseph indicated that Adam-ondi-Ahman had been located at a place the saints called Spring Hill in Daviess County, about sixty miles north of Independence (HC, 3:35).

16 Who hath appointed Michael your prince, and established his feet, and set him upon high, and given unto him the keys of salvation under the counsel and direction of the Holy One, who is without beginning of days or end of life.

verse 16 “Michael your prince” Michael, or Adam, is not the king, for Christ is King (see Revelation 19:16). But Michael is the next in authority and is the prince of the kingdom of God. In this role he represents all of us as heirs to the kingdom. Adam still stands at the head of his posterity, the human family, but in subjection to Christ his King. Next to Christ, Adam holds the keys of salvation and works for the benefit of his posterity. According to Joseph Smith, “The Priesthood was first given to Adam; he obtained the First Presidency and held the keys of it from generation to generation. . . . The keys have to be brought from heaven whenever the Gospel is sent. When they are revealed from heaven, it is by Adam’s authority” (HC, 3:385-86).

17 Verily, verily, I say unto you, ye are little children, and ye have not as yet understood how great blessings the Father hath in his own hands and prepared for you;

verse 17 “little children” Our present understanding, compared with what we will understand when we reach our eternal “adulthood,” is like that of little children. Though we may be mortal adults, we have been “born again” and are in the infancy of our eternal lives. By eternal standards we are still naive and without understanding. At present we lack the maturity even to comprehend the full blessings of God, let alone to receive them. Despite the tribulations we must experience in this life, our destiny is happiness and joy beyond our present comprehension.

18 And ye cannot bear all things now; nevertheless, be of good cheer, for I will lead you along. The kingdom is yours and the blessings thereof are yours, and the riches of eternity are yours.

verse 18 “ye cannot bear all things now” The present limitations of mortality make it impossible for us to understand or even tolerate an understanding of all that we will receive from God in the future. The blessings of eternity are so great that only resurrected beings can bear them. For now we must follow the leadership of the Lord and trust in his assurances that we are going to be all right—that the kingdom and its blessings and the riches of eternity are truly going to be ours—assuming, of course, that we remain faithful.

19 And he who receiveth all things with thankfulness shall be made glorious; and the things of this earth shall be added unto him, even an hundred fold, yea, more.

verse 19 “he who receiveth all things with thankfulness” Compare D&C 59:21 and its commentary.

20 Wherefore, do the things which I have commanded you, saith your Redeemer, even the Son Ahman, who prepareth all things before he taketh you;

verse 20 “Son Ahman” Orson Pratt taught:

There is one revelation that this people are not generally acquainted with. I think it has never been published, but probably it will be in the Church History. It is given in questions and answers. The first question is, “What is the name of God in the pure language?” The answer is “Ahman.” “What is the name of the Son of God?” Answer, “Son Ahman” (JD, 2:342).

In Moses 6:57 we find that the interpretation of “Ahman” is “Man of Holiness,” and thus “Son Ahman” is the “Son of Man of Holiness” or, in a shortened form, “Son of Man.”

Additional consideration has been given to the name Ahman. Smith and Sjodahl observed that “the word is possibly akin to ‘Amen.’ In Isaiah (65:16) the Almighty is called ‘God of Amen,’ but the translators have made it, ‘God of truth.’ In Revelation 3:14, our Lord calls himself by that name: ‘These things saith the Amen, the faithful and true witness.’ There is also the word Amon, the name which Egyptians gave a Deity, in whose honor the magnificent temple at Karnak was reared” (Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 484).

21 For ye are the church of the Firstborn, and he will take you up in a cloud, and appoint every man his portion.

verse 21 “the church of the Firstborn” See D&C 76:54 and its commentary.

“he will take you up in a cloud” On the last day, the righteous will be lifted off the earth and caught up to meet the Lord in the clouds while the earth is cleansed by fire (see D&C 45:44-45; 88:96-97; 1 Thessalonians 4:17).

22 And he that is a faithful and wise steward shall inherit all things. Amen.

D&C 82:3 Of him unto whom much is given much is required.

D&C 82:7 Unto that soul who sinneth shall the former sins return.

D&C 82:8-9 I give unto you a new commandment that you may understand my will concerning you.

D&C 82:10 I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say, but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.

The only other revelation in the Doctrine and Covenants that largely contains the Lord’s directions for the United Firm is section 82. We will thus consider it here following section 78, though it is out of sequence.

On March 1, 1832, in section 78 Joseph and Sidney had been commanded to travel to Independence to counsel with the saints in Zion (see D&C 78:9). During the first three weeks in March Joseph received other revelations, began establishing the United Firm in Kirtland, and organized the Presidency of the High Priesthood. As Joseph then prepared for the commanded journey to Missouri, several unpleasant events took place.

The Prophet mentioned a confrontation sometime in March with a son of John Johnson, in whose home he and Emma were then living with their adopted twins. Olmsted Johnson, the young man, rejected the gospel and left home in a bad spirit, and Joseph prophesied that “he would never return or see his father again” (HC, 1:260). Another of the Johnson sons, John Jr., had already apostatized, so it seems that the Johnsons were experiencing domestic troubles at this time.

By the fourth week of March, the Smiths’ adopted ten-month-old twins and the Rigdon children, who lived nearby, were suffering from measles. On March 24, Joseph stayed up with the little boy, who was the sicker of the two twins, to let Emma get some much-needed sleep. During the night, a mob led by the apostate Symonds Ryder dragged Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon from their homes and beat, tarred, feathered, and otherwise abused them (HC, 1:261-65). For a more detailed description of this mobbing, see the introduction to section 81. After the attack, Joseph was awake all night while friends and relatives scraped the tar from his body. Nonetheless, in the morning he preached his usual Sunday sermon to a congregation that included some of his attackers.

The following Thursday, March 29, Emma and Joseph's baby son died. Three days later, on Sunday, April 1, Joseph Smith, Sidney Rigdon, and Newel K. Whitney began their journey to Missouri in obedience to the commandment of the Lord. They took with them Jesse Gause, the newly appointed counselor in the Presidency of the High Priesthood.

Joseph and his party arrived in Independence on April 24, 1832, and according to his own account, "on the 26th, I called a general council of the Church, and was acknowledged as the President of the High Priesthood, according to a previous ordination at a conference of High Priests, Elders, and members, held at Amherst, Ohio, on the 25th of January, 1832. The right hand of fellowship was given to me by the Bishop, Edward Partridge, in behalf of the Church. The scene was solemn, impressive and delightful. During the intermission, a difficulty or hardness which had existed between Bishop Partridge and Elder Rigdon, was amicably settled, and when we came together in the afternoon, all hearts seemed to rejoice and I received the following [section 82]" (HC, 1:267).

The minutes of this Missouri conference, during which section 82 was received, indicate that "Br. Sidney Rigdon then stated the items embraced in a Revelation received in Ohio [section 78] & the reason why we were commanded to come to this land & sit in council with the High priests here." In the afternoon session, it was recorded, "all differences [had been] settled & the hearts of all run together in love. A Revelation [was] received through him whom the Church has appointed respecting organization" (Cannon and Cook, Far West Record, 40-42, 45). This revelation was section 82, which was first published in the 1835 Doctrine and Covenants.

1 Verily, verily, I say unto you, my servants, that inasmuch as you have forgiven one another your trespasses, even so I, the Lord, forgive you.

verse 1 "you have forgiven one another your trespasses" This statement refers to the hard feelings between Bishop Edward Partridge and Sidney Rigdon, mentioned in Joseph Smith's account and the minutes of the meeting. Others had been drawn to take sides in the affair. Apparently, Sidney had previously made a lengthy complaint against Bishop Partridge for a number of infractions, among them improper distribution of funds, failure to follow church policy, and speaking against Joseph Smith. On March 10, a conference of elders in Missouri considered the complaint (neither Joseph nor Sidney were present) and replied to Elder Rigdon that most of the infractions had already been corrected and that Bishop Partridge was repentant for any wrongdoing. This conference of Missouri brethren also chided Sidney about "whether he was not actuated by his own hasty feelings rather than the Spirit of Christ" in pursuing the matter (Cannon and Cook, Far West Record, 40-42, 45). In addition, there seem to have been hard feelings by some brethren in Missouri against the Prophet himself, a matter that the Lord would mention again in the future (see D&C 74:76) (see Jessee, Personal Writings, 270-74).

These personal tensions between the brethren of Zion and the brethren of Kirtland were resolved amicably between the morning and afternoon sessions of the Missouri conference on April 26, at least for the time being. Once hard feelings had been dispelled and the spirit of love and harmony restored, the Lord blessed the conference in the afternoon session with the revelation known as Doctrine and Covenants 82. It is worthy of note that first the saints forgave one another. Then, the Lord forgave and blessed them (Matthew 6:14-15). Moreover, the spirit of revelation operates best when the saints are united (D&C 38:27).

2 Nevertheless, there are those among you who have sinned exceedingly; yea, even all of you have sinned; but verily I say unto you, beware from henceforth, and refrain from sin, lest sore judgments fall upon your heads.

verse 2 Here the Lord rebukes all of those involved in the unpleasantries that centered on Sidney Rigdon and Bishop Edward Partridge.

3 For of him unto whom much is given much is required; and he who sins against the greater light shall receive the greater condemnation.

verse 3 When human beings commit sin, the degree of their guilt, or culpability, depends upon the extent of their knowledge and blessings. Two different persons may commit exactly the same sin and yet be held accountable in vastly different degrees, depending on their individual knowledge and background. Elder George Albert Smith cautioned the saints: “We will not be judged as our brothers and sisters of the world are judged, but according to the greater opportunities placed in our keeping. We will be among those who have received the word of the Lord, who have heard his sayings, and if we do them it will be to us eternal life, but if we fail condemnation will result” (CR, October 1906, 47).

Moreover, for those who have accepted the fulness of the gospel by covenant, it is not that the Lord expects more of us but that he requires it. Having been given the means of obtaining exaltation, we are required to use those means toward that end. Once blessed by God’s gracious gifts and obligated by our own covenant promises, should we then choose wickedness or sloth, we do so to our own greater condemnation.

Those in Missouri were covenant members of the Church and “Zion builders,” and consequently of them much was required.

4 Ye call upon my name for revelations, and I give them unto you; and inasmuch as ye keep not my sayings, which I give unto you, ye become transgressors; and justice and judgment are the penalty which is affixed unto my law.

5 Therefore, what I say unto one I say unto all: Watch, for the adversary spreadeth his dominions, and darkness reigneth; verse 5 “darkness reigneth” Does Satan really reign or rule here on earth? It is clear that Satan rules the world—not the earth. He rules over Babylon, the world. The ruler of the next world, the millennial world, and of its heirs who must for now live in Babylon, is Christ. As we approach the end of this world, Satan’s power is growing and spreading. Even as the saints watch and wait for the end of this world and the coming of the next, they will see darkness grow, and they themselves will become more isolated, marginalized, and persecuted until the coming of their Savior.

6 And the anger of God kindleth against the inhabitants of the earth; and none doeth good, for all have gone out of the way.

verse 6 “none doeth good” The Lord speaks of the world at the time of Joseph Smith. The whole world lies in the ignorance resulting from apostasy, and all have gone astray from the full truth of the gospel, hence the need for Joseph Smith and the restoration of the gospel.

7 And now, verily I say unto you, I, the Lord, will not lay any sin to your charge; go your ways and sin no more; but unto that soul who sinneth shall the former sins return, saith the Lord your God.

verse 7 “I, the Lord, will not lay any sin to your charge” Romans 4:8 reads: “Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin.” Both the Lord, in this verse, and Paul in Romans 4:8 refer to those who are earnestly striving to the best of their knowledge and ability to obey the Lord’s commands and also are ever striving to learn more of the Lord’s commands. We know, of course, that being found innocent at the final judgment cannot lie in our perfect performance (that is, salvation by law or works) but rather in our sins not being charged against us on that day through the mercy and grace of the Savior and the virtue of his atoning sacrifice. This great blessing of forgiveness and salvation comes only to those striving to keep the Lord’s commandments—those struggling to obey (2 Nephi 25:23, Alma 24:11, Matthew 7:21-23; 16:27; Luke 6:46; Romans 2:13; James 2:17-20; Revelation 20:12-13).

“go your ways and sin no more” In specific and realistic terms, the Lord is counseling us, “Strive consistently with all your might to follow my example and be obedient to my commands.” Absolute moral perfection at our stage of existence is impossible, and the Lord knows that.

“unto that soul who sinneth shall the former sins return” A man may receive gifts of the Spirit—increments of the attributes of Christ—through his obedience to gospel commands (Spiritual Growth—Gifts of the Spirit in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 7). These divine attributes are received by personal revelation and produce a significant change in our hearts. The processes of Justification and Sanctification are active here (see Justification and Sanctification in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 17). We are then less likely in certain areas to give in to our natural selves and commit sin (break a commandment). We become new creatures in Christ, more likely to continue to obey. As we receive these divine attributes—gifts of the Spirit—the Lord justifies us, that is, forgives us of those sins we committed prior to acquiring these certain gifts of the Spirit.

These attributes, however, are not permanently ours, unless we continue to strive to be obedient. Remember: “There are no plateaus in spiritual growth.” He who stops growing, begins to deteriorate spiritually—he begins to lose those gifts of the spirit he once possessed. He is then likely to sin again in the very same areas in which he had previously overcome his natural tendency to sin (see also D&C 1:31-33).

There is an additional way in which “the former sins return.” When we repent, or begin to obey, the Lord may remove the penalty for our sins assessed by the law of justice. We say that he “forgives us of our sins.” Once forgiven, the penalty may be reassessed if we begin again to sin.

8 And again, I say unto you, I give unto you a new commandment, that you may understand my will concerning you;

verse 8 “I give unto you a new commandment, that you may understand my will concerning you” Here it is likely the Lord is referring specifically to his commandment to organize the United Firm. We may, however, generalize from this statement and conclude that when the Lord gives us a commandment, he is simply explaining to us how we must act, think, and talk in order to be saved in his eternal presence.

9 Or, in other words, I give unto you directions how you may act before me, that it may turn to you for your salvation.

verses 8-9 We often tend to view God’s commandments as restrictive and demanding. Yet, in these verses he reminds us that his commandments are actually informative and enabling. His commandments are ultimately aimed at bringing us greater freedom, joy, and glory. They are something like the directions on a treasure map.

10 I, the Lord, am bound when ye do what I say; but when ye do not what I say, ye have no promise.

verse 10 When we obey the Lord’s commands, he is bound by his honor, by his part of the covenant, to grant us the promised blessings contained in the covenant.

Here is an interesting question: Can we bind God in absolute terms? Can we remove his agency and force him to keep his end of the covenant if he did not choose to do so? The answer is clearly, no. No intelligent being in our universe can have his agency removed. But he is God because of his absolute integrity. When he promises, it will happen absolutely (Abraham 3:17). If he should relinquish his integrity to an erroneous whim, he would cease to be God.

11 Therefore, verily I say unto you, that it is expedient for my servants Edward Partridge and Newel K. Whitney, A. Sidney Gilbert and Sidney Rigdon, and my servant Joseph Smith, and John Whitmer and Oliver Cowdery, and W. W. Phelps and Martin Harris to be bound together by a bond and covenant that cannot be broken by transgression, except judgment shall immediately follow, in your several stewardships—verse 11 “bound together by a bond and covenant” The members of the United Firm in both Missouri and Kirtland are bound to each other in this partnership by sacred covenant. As with every covenant we may enter into with the Lord, there is a penalty assessed should we not live up to that covenant. See the section entitled “Captain Moroni and Covenant Making” in the introductory commentary for Alma 43.

12 To manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pertaining to the bishopric both in the land of Zion and in the land of Kirtland;

verse 12 “To manage the affairs of the poor, and all things pertaining to the bishopric” We have already learned that one of the fundamental and underlying purposes for the United Firm is to look after the poor and see to their needs. Here we also learn that this body will oversee the affairs of the two bishops, Bishop Partridge in Missouri and Bishop Whitney in Kirtland.

13 For I have consecrated the land of Kirtland in mine own due time for the benefit of the saints of the Most High, and for a stake to Zion.

verse 13 “For I have consecrated the land of Kirtland” Here the verb consecrated means dedicated for a specific purpose. The earth is the Lord’s (Psalm 24:1; compare D&C 104:12-14). He owns all the earth and all things thereon. We don’t usually think in terms of the Lord’s consecrating his possessions. While it is true that he cannot surrender his ownership of the earth, figuratively he speaks of himself in this verse as participating, with the saints, in the law of consecration and stewardship.

“for a stake to Zion” This is the first use of the word “stake” in the text of the Doctrine and Covenants. The reader is likely familiar with the metaphor attributed to Isaiah (Isaiah 54:2) in which Isaiah compares the Lord’s earthly kingdom to a tent which has a center pole in Zion and this tent is supported by many ropes or cords attached to many stakes driven into the ground. These tent-stakes, which support the tent, are located throughout the world. Here the Lord puts the kingdom of God in Joseph Smith's day, into proper perspective. The center pole is in Missouri, in Zion, and Kirtland is a support stake.

14 For Zion must increase in beauty, and in holiness; her borders must be enlarged; her stakes must be strengthened; yea, verily I say unto you, Zion must arise and put on her beautiful garments.

verse 14 “For Zion must increase” This phrase has a dual meaning. Obviously the area of Independence, Missouri needs to be built up and strengthened. It is the center place of Zion. But also spiritual Zion, which consists of the pure in heart wherever they may dwell, must also increase. When there is an increase in the numbers of church members who are pure in heart, the borders of spiritual Zion are enlarged, regardless of where the new members may live. The few metaphors in this verse depict Zion as a bride being adorned for her marriage to the coming Bridegroom (see Isaiah 62:4-5; Matthew 25:6; John 3:29; Revelation 19:7-9; Moroni 10:31).

15 Therefore, I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant, and it shall be done according to the laws of the Lord.

verse 15 “I give unto you this commandment, that ye bind yourselves by this covenant” Again, a commandment to those called to be part of the United Firm. As with all those early saints who become part of the law of consecration and stewardship, these brethren entered the Firm through making a covenant with the Lord. Those in the United Firm were called to consecrate their property to establish a bishop's storehouse and to meet other financial needs.

16 Behold, here is wisdom also in me for your good.

17 And you are to be equal, or in other words, you are to have equal claims on the properties, for the benefit of managing the concerns of your stewardships, every man according to his wants and his needs, inasmuch as his wants are just—verse 17 “you are to be equal” Equal here does not mean equal in absolute terms. Rather, these brethren were to receive a stewardship that allowed each to have according to his needs.

18 And all this for the benefit of the church of the living God, that every man may improve upon his talent, that every man may gain other talents, yea, even an hundred fold, to be cast into the Lord's storehouse, to become the common property of the whole church—verse 18 “all this for the benefit of the church” One may argue that the law of consecration and stewardship drains the participants of their motivation, and hence of their productivity. The popular wisdom of the world is that competitive self-interest is the only consistently successful motivation for personal or professional achievement. This is clearly false in a Zion society. Truly celestial individuals are consistently self-motivated to achieve and to excel by the needs of others and by love for God and his Church. They are willing to sacrifice all worldly things for the “benefit of the church” and for the benefit of others.

“that every man may improve upon his talent” This phrase is an allusion to the parable of the talents, in which the righteous servants productively utilized their talents.

19 Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor, and doing all things with an eye single to the glory of God.

verse 19 “Every man seeking the interest of his neighbor” In a Zion society the principle of charity is fundamental. Each person must be as concerned about the temporal and spiritual welfare of his neighbor as he is about his own.

“with an eye single to the glory of God” This phrase has reference to the concept that a man cannot worship both God and mammon (Matthew 6:24; Moroni 7:11-14).

20 This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order unto you, and unto your successors, inasmuch as you sin not.

verse 20 “This order I have appointed to be an everlasting order” Ironically, the United Firm was short lived. On April 10, 1834, members of the Firm met and decided that the order should be dissolved due to transgression of some of its members (see D&C 104:52-53).

21 And the soul that sins against this covenant, and hardeneth his heart against it, shall be dealt with according to the laws of my church, and shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan until the day of redemption.

verse 21 “the soul that sins against this covenant” He who violates his covenant promise as a member of the United Firm.

“according to the law of my church” The laws of the Church are stated in section 42 and deal with denying fellowship, excommunication, and in some cases turning offenders over to civil authorities.

“shall be delivered over to the buffetings of Satan” See the commentary for D&C 78:12.

22 And now, verily I say unto you, and this is wisdom, make unto yourselves friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, and they will not destroy you.

verse 22 “make unto yourselves friends with the mammon of unrighteousness” The word mammon refers to riches or material wealth, particularly when those riches result in evil or immorality. Here the Lord refers to the influential nonbelievers in the environment of the saints as the “mammon of unrighteousness.”

According to Elder Joseph Fielding Smith: “It is not intended that in making friends with the ‘mammon of unrighteousness’ [Luke 16:9] that the brethren were to partake with them in their sins; to receive them to their bosoms, intermarry with them and otherwise come down to their level. They were to so live that peace with their enemies might be assured. They were to treat them kindly, be friendly with them as far as correct and virtuous principles would permit, but never to swear with them or drink and carouse with them. If they could allay prejudice and show a willingness to trade with and show a kindly spirit, it might help to turn them away from their bitterness. Judgment was to be left with the Lord” (Church History and Modern Revelation, 1:323).

Moreover, a righteous individual can learn how wealth and the world operate and then work with the system for righteous purposes. When that is sincerely the motive, such action is not collaboration with Babylon but a way of building Zion.

An additional thought: If you anticipate receiving the true riches of eternity, it is wise to learn obedience and faithfulness with regard to things of this world. If you will become prudent in dealing with a small quantity, you may find yourself in eventual possession of great treasure. If you learn to handle a minor stewardship entrusted to you from someone else, you then can be trusted with something of great value that will be your own (Luke 16:10-12).

23 Leave judgment alone with me, for it is mine and I will repay. Peace be with you; my blessings continue with you.

verse 23 The saints are told to be tolerant and not judge the nonmembers (the “mammon of unrighteousness”) in Missouri.

24 For even yet the kingdom is yours, and shall be forever, if you fall not from your steadfastness. Even so. Amen.

verse 24 The faithful have a right to the kingdom of Heaven. It is theirs to keep, or theirs to throw away.

Sections 79 and 80 The Call to Preach

In March 1832 some elders were called on missions. Jared Carter was called to go to the Eastern states. He was one of the Colesville saints and had joined the Church in New York sometime in February 1831. The following spring he left his farm in Chenango, New York, near Colesville and moved with the saints to Ohio. Settling first in Thompson, Ohio, he later moved to Amherst, about fifty miles west of Kirtland, to be near his brother Simeon. In June 1831 the Lord directed that Carter be ordained a priest (see D&C 52:38), and he was ordained an elder sometime before September of that year. He served six months and two days, keeping a meticulous journal all during his mission. He served mostly in New York and New Jersey and baptized ninety-eight converts.

Section 79 was received by the Prophet on March 12, 1832 in Hiram, Ohio. Jared Carter did record the following details in his journal: "I at length went to Hiram to the Seer to inquire the will of the Lord concerning my ministry the ensuing season and the word of the Lord came forth that showed that it was his will that I should go forth to the Eastern countries in the power of the ordinance wherewith I had been ordained which was to the high privilege of administering in the name of Jesus Christ even to seal on earth and to build up the Church of Christ and to work miracles in the name of Christ" (cited in Woodford, Historical Development, 2:1005; spelling and capitalization standardized).

1 Verily I say unto you, that it is my will that my servant Jared Carter should go again into the eastern countries, from place to place, and from city to city, in the power of the ordination wherewith he has been ordained, proclaiming glad tidings of great joy, even the everlasting gospel.

verse 1 "Jared Carter should go again into the eastern countries" After moving to the west the previous year, Jared is called to return to the east as a missionary to his former neighbors and others as directed by the Spirit.

"in the power of the ordination" Those who hold the priesthood are God's agents and have been authorized to borrow his power. They are expected to use that power as God would: to bless, preach, perform ordinances, etc. When a priesthood holder is asked to give a blessing, he should not merely pray that God will bestow a blessing. The appointed agent having the necessary power should bestow the blessing in the name of Jesus Christ. That which God has delegated to his servants, they should perform in confidence and power, and not delegate back to him by merely praying that God will do something. There is a critical difference between blessing "in the power of the ordination" and merely praying for a blessing.

2 And I will send upon him the Comforter, which shall teach him the truth and the way whither he shall go; verse 2 “the way whither he shall go” Jared Carter was to keep moving and to travel as directed by the Spirit. His journal shows great determination on his part to travel to the major cities in New York, as directed in verse 1, “from city to city.”

3 And inasmuch as he is faithful, I will crown him again with sheaves.

verse 3 “I will crown him again with sheaves” See the commentary for D&C 75:5.

4 Wherefore, let your heart be glad, my servant Jared Carter, and fear not, saith your Lord, even Jesus Christ. Amen.

Stephen Burnett and Eden Smith were also called to preach. Their call was a missionary-at-large type call: “Go ye and preach my gospel, whether to the north or to the south, to the east or to the west, it mattereth not.” Not only were they allowed to go where they wanted, but they were also promised success regardless: “ye cannot go amiss.”

Stephen Burnett was converted to the Church by late November 1830 in Orange, Ohio, by John Murdock, who had himself been a member of the Church, at that time, less than one month. The important church conference held on October 25-26, 1831, at which the first high priests were ordained, met at the Burnett home in Orange, Ohio. Among the high priests ordained there was seventeen-year-old Stephen Burnett.

On January 25, 1832, Burnett was called to serve a mission with Ruggles Eames, although that mission either did not take place or was of very short duration, since Burnett is called here two months later to serve a mission with Eden Smith. Burnett also preached for awhile in New Hampshire with Horace Cowan during the summer of 1833. By 1837, however, Burnett had come out in opposition to the Prophet Joseph and was excommunicated on December 3, 1838.

Eden Smith was also an Ohio resident who joined the Church in 1831 at the age of twenty-four. He served several short missions in 1831 and 1832, but his style was to preach for a short period of time and then return home to work and be with his family.

Section 80 was received March 7, 1832. Chronologically this would actually place section 80 five days earlier than section 79, which was received on March 12. Section 80 was first published in the 1835 Doctrine and Covenants.

Section 80

1 Verily, thus saith the Lord unto you my servant Stephen Burnett: Go ye, go ye into the world and preach the gospel to every creature that cometh under the sound of your voice.

verse 1 “preach the gospel to every creature” Missionaries are called to preach to any individual who will listen. Neither social status, nor education, nor nationality, nor financial status, nor any other factor should cause the missionary to ignore his or her Heavenly Father’s children when called to teach the gospel of Jesus Christ. Without restriction, all who will hear are invited, all who will repent are called, and all who will obey are chosen.

2 And inasmuch as you desire a companion, I will give unto you my servant Eden Smith.

3 Wherefore, go ye and preach my gospel, whether to the north or to the south, to the east or to the west, it mattereth not, for ye cannot go amiss.

verse 3 “it mattereth not” See the introductory commentary for this section. Once again, we are reminded that there are some decisions that just do not matter in the great scheme of things. There are some decisions in life for which there is no right or wrong answer. It might additionally be noted that the opportunities to preach the gospel are so abundant that one cannot go amiss wherever one chooses to labor. Both the righteous and the wicked in all the earth must be warned (see also the commentary for D&C 60:5).

4 Therefore, declare the things which ye have heard, and verily believe, and know to be true.

verse 4 “declare the things which ye . . . know to be true” The power of the Spirit can best work through us when we actually have spiritual testimonies ourselves. Then, as we teach the investigator, the Spirit may bear witness to both us and the investigator simultaneously. One heart then may bear witness to another heart and the two may “rejoice together” (D&C 50:22). When the Spirit bears witness to the missionary as he or she teaches a gospel principle, then the chance that the investigator will also feel the Spirit’s influence is maximized. In this way, teaching the gospel differs drastically from teaching secular concepts.

5 Behold, this is the will of him who hath called you, your Redeemer, even Jesus Christ. Amen.

Section 81 Counselor in the First Presidency

Section 81 is the last of four revelations Joseph Smith mentioned receiving before March 20, 1832. It was received on March 15, 1832. Frederick G. Williams (see the Brief Historical Setting for 1830 October near the end of section 32. See also the introductory commentary for section 56) had been previously called to be an high priest and counselor in the First Presidency, and this revelation instructed him in his calling (see also the background material for section 75).

Actually, in March 1832 there was not really a First Presidency as we call it today. In January 1832 at the conference at Amherst, Ohio, Joseph had been ordained and sustained "President of the High Priesthood." In this section, Brother Williams is instructed in his calling as a counselor to Joseph in the Presidency of the High Priesthood. By 1834 this body was called the First Presidency of the Church. In these commentary materials I have taken the license to refer to the Presidency of the High Priesthood as the First Presidency because the historical evolution from the one to the other is so direct.

Actually, when this revelation was received in March 1832, it instructed Jesse Gause and not Frederick G. Williams in his calling as counselor to Joseph in the presidency. Gause had been ordained a counselor in the Presidency of the High Priesthood on March 8, 1832. When Jesse Gause apostatized and was excommunicated in December of 1832, the call was transferred to Frederick G. Williams, and Jesse Gause's name was removed from the revelation and replaced with that of Brother Williams. Brother Williams was not actually ordained to the office until March 18, 1833! It was on this date that the First Presidency of the Church (as distinct from the Presidency of the High Priesthood) was organized, a year after section 81 was received.

The original recipient of this revelation, Jesse Gause, had been a member of the Shaker community in North Union, Ohio. He had arrived in North Union with his family in October 1831, about seven months after Latter-day Saint missionaries visited that community (see D&C 49). He must have come into contact with the Church soon afterward, for he was called as a counselor to Joseph Smith on March 8, 1832, less than five months later, during which time he had been converted and baptized. Gause was about twenty years older than Joseph Smith and ten years older than Sidney Rigdon. He accompanied the Prophet to Missouri in April and appears to have served faithfully until August 1832, when, on a mission with Zebedee Coltrin, he visited his estranged wife in a proselyting effort among the Shakers at North Union. For health reasons, Coltrin returned to Kirtland on August 19. Gause, unable to reconcile with his wife, "continued east and walked right out of the history of the Church, never again to return" (Woodward, "Jesse Gause," 364). He was excommunicated on December 3, 1832, for reasons unknown, although the Far West Record notes that he “denied the faith,” and it is possible that his wife had something to do with the matter (Cannon and Cook, Far West Record, 47-48).

For the convenience of the reader, let us also briefly summarize the background of Frederick G. Williams. He had joined the Church after being taught by the Lamanite missionaries as they passed through Kirtland on their way to Missouri in the fall of 1830. He volunteered to leave his family and travel with the missionaries to Missouri, and his 144-acre farm in Kirtland was given over to the use of the Church. Members of his family, Ezra Thayre, the Prophet’s parents, and other church members occupied it during his absence. In the fall of 1832, Williams returned to Kirtland and was ordained a high priest. On July 20, 1832, he began serving as Joseph Smith’s scribe. He became a member of the First Presidency in March of 1833. He served as a member of the First Presidency until 1837.

This section was the last to be received while Joseph was living in Hiram, Ohio. It seems appropriate to summarize this Hiram period and make a transition to the next period:

For six and a half months, between September 12, 1831, and the end of March 1832, Hiram, Portage County, Ohio, served as temporary headquarters of the Church. During this period, Joseph and his family lived in the large frame home of John Johnson. Many saints traveled there to meet with him and to seek his counsel, and to attend meetings in the Johnson home. There, the Prophet worked on his inspired revision of the Bible and received some of his most profound visions and revelations. Although the Prophet’s stay in Hiram was brief, this six-month period was one of the truly significant eras in the early history of the Church.

In Hiram, Joseph also encountered serious opposition. Despite a temporary tranquility that prevailed while Joseph was studying, praying, and recording revelations, intense opposition erupted in Ohio in the spring of 1832. Critics denounced the zeal of converts, exposed the failure of members, and complained that the Church created divisions in families. Not understanding the law of consecration, some believed that Joseph was attempting to establish a communistic society in Portage County.

The apostasy of Ezra Booth and Symonds Ryder helped arouse organized opposition against the saints in Hiram (see Character Vignette for Ezra Booth at the end of section 52). When emotions had reached a high pitch, some Missouri settlers planned a violent attack on Joseph. By removing the heart of the Church, they thought they could crush the expansion of Mormonism.

We have already briefly mentioned the mobbing of Joseph Smith and Sidney Rigdon on March 24, 1832, by an angry crowd of about fifty men (see the introductory commentary for section 82). Further describing the turbulence of that black night, the Prophet recalled that the mob broke first into the residence of Elder Rigdon, carried him from his home, and dragged him by his heels so that his head was pulled along the rough frozen ground. Then they covered his body with tar. One man seized a feather pillow from the Rigdon home, and the crowd tore the pillow, removed the feathers, and sprinkled them over Sidney's tarred body.

The Prophet also described his own ordeal: "As I was forced out . . . I made a desperate struggle . . . to extricate myself, but only cleared one leg." Joseph then kicked one of the men. After this man fell on the door step, the angry crowd swore that "they would kill me if I did not" remain still (Times and Seasons, 5:611-12). Joseph was then carried into the stark darkness of a lonely meadow where he was beaten by the aroused men. As he was being carried around the corner of the Johnson home, he recounted, the man whom he had kicked caught up with the group and thrust his blood-covered hand into Joseph's face and swore "I'll fix ye." While being carried into the field, the Prophet was choked until he became unconscious. When he awoke, he saw the tarred and bloody body of Sidney Rigdon stretched out on the ground and assumed that Sidney was dead. The Prophet pleaded for mercy, after which one man cursed and said, "Call on yer God for help, we'll show you no mercy" (HC, 1:261-62). Luke Johnson later identified the man Joseph kicked as Warren Waste. Waste, Johnson added, was one of the strongest individuals living in the Western Reserve and boasted that he alone could take the Prophet from the house. But after struggling with Joseph and being knocked off the steps he cried, "Do not let him touch the ground, or he will run over the whole of us" (Millennial Star, 26:835). Joseph was then carried another thirty rods or so from the Johnson home, where someone cried, "Symonds, Symonds," calling, as Joseph assumed, Symonds Ryder.

Meanwhile some members of the mob held a council. Joseph Smith thought they were trying to decide whether or not to kill him. The group decided against such action, but determined to beat him instead. They tore off all of his clothes, leaving only a shirt collar around his neck. One man fell on him like a "mad cat" and, while scratching his body with sharp nails, muttered, "That's the way the Holy Ghost falls on folks!" Luke Johnson later reported that after Joseph was taken from the Johnson home, the mob stretched him on a board and "tantalized him in a most insulting and brutal manner." He further stated that the mob planned to emasculate him, and a Dr. Dennison was to perform the operation; but when the doctor saw the Prophet stretched on the plank, he changed his mind and refused to perform the operation (Luke Johnson's History, 835).

The mob also attempted to force into his mouth a vial of what the Prophet thought was poison, but he broke the vial with his teeth and it fell to the ground, leaving him with a chipped tooth. After being scratched and beaten, Joseph was covered with a coat of tar and feathers. Some of the men tried to close his lips with tar, and others sought to force the tar paddle into his mouth (HC, 1:263).

Eventually the mob disappeared, leaving Joseph in the meadow. When he attempted to rise, he fell, but after removing some of the tar from his lips, he breathed more easily. After a while he saw two lights in the distance. He arose and made his way toward one of the lights, which was coming from the Johnson home. At the door, his wife saw his body darkened with tar, which she thought was blood, and, thinking that he had been severely crushed, she fainted. A blanket was thrown around the Prophet, and a number of friends who had gathered in the Johnson home spent the night removing the tar and washing his body.

The next day was Sunday, and the saints gathered to worship at the usual hour. During the night Joseph had been cleaned up and he prepared himself to preach. “With my flesh all scarified and defaced,” he wrote, he preached to the congregation as usual and noted that some of the men who had participated in the mobbing of the previous night were in attendance. During the afternoon he baptized three converts.

Although Joseph recovered quickly from this ordeal, Sidney was not so fortunate. For several days he was delirious, but he eventually recovered.

Because of continued threats on their lives, Joseph and Sidney and their families left Hiram in the spring of 1832. On April 1, Joseph and Sidney and others left for a mission to Missouri. Since another mob had been organized in Kirtland and the “spirit of mobocracy was very prevalent through that whole region of the country,” the Prophet avoided returning to Kirtland prior to his going to Missouri. He instructed his wife, for her safety, to leave Hiram, return to the Whitney home in Kirtland, and await his return. Following his departure from Hiram, Joseph was not reunited with his family until he returned to Kirtland in June 1832.

D&C 81:5-6 Wherefore, be faithful; stand in the office which I have appointed unto you; succor the weak, lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees. And if thou art faithful unto the end thou shalt have a crown of immortality, and eternal life in the mansions which I have prepared in the house of my Father.

1 Verily, verily, I say unto you my servant Frederick G. Williams: Listen to the voice of him who speaketh, to the word of the Lord your God, and hearken to the calling wherewith you are called, even to be a high priest in my church, and a counselor unto my servant Joseph Smith, Jun.;

verse 1 “a counselor unto my servant Joseph Smith” The specific calling of Jesse Gause in 1832 was as a counselor to Joseph Smith in the Presidency of the High Priesthood (see verse 2). As mentioned in the introduction to this section, this calling is not exactly equivalent to being a counselor in the First Presidency of the Church, because the First Presidency as such was not organized until a year later, on March 18, 1833 (see D&C 90). The differences between the two callings are, however, negligible. Like the later First Presidency, the Presidency of the High Priesthood presided over the whole Church and not just over the high priests (see D&C 107:78-82, received November 11, 1831).

2 Unto whom I have given the keys of the kingdom, which belong always unto the Presidency of the High Priesthood:

verse 2 “Unto whom” Unto Joseph Smith alone. The President of the Church himself is the only individual who exercises by right all the keys of the kingdom at one time. These keys are always extended through the President to his counselors in the presidency by virtue of their association with him in that quorum. When he dies, however, his counselors’ authority to exercise those keys ends, and the presidency is dissolved. At the death of the President, the counselors in the First Presidency resume their places in the other quorums of the Church, and the President of the Quorum of the Twelve automatically becomes the presiding officer of the Church. Because the Twelve as a quorum hold all the keys collectively (see D&C 107:24), they also have the authority, collectively, to reorganize the First Presidency and designate the new President. He then becomes the only individual who exercises by right all the keys of the kingdom at one time, as stated in D&C 132:7: “There is never but one on the earth at a time on whom this power and the keys of this priesthood are conferred.”

“Presidency of the high priesthood” The Presidency of the High Priesthood is a priesthood office in the Church even today. The First Presidency as we know it today was not organized for another year (March 18, 1832). Today the prophet and his counselors in the First Presidency are simultaneously the Presidency of the Church (with all its members and auxiliaries) and also the Presidency of the High Priesthood.

3 Therefore, verily I acknowledge him and will bless him, and also thee, inasmuch as thou art faithful in counsel, in the office which I have appointed unto you, in prayer always, vocally and in thy heart, in public and in private, also in thy ministry in proclaiming the gospel in the land of the living, and among thy brethren.

verse 3 “verily I acknowledge him and will bless him” That is, the prophet Joseph Smith.

“and also thee, inasmuch as thou art faithful” Jesse Gause (or his successor in the Presidency, Frederick G. Williams) will be blessed to the extent that he is faithful in his subordinate position to the Prophet Joseph. His duties as a counselor to the Prophet and member of the presidency are enumerated.

First, he is to be “faithful in counsel.” The Lord, in his wisdom, provides leaders with counselors, not just to share the workload but also to share insights, knowledge, and wisdom. In other words, even the prophet can benefit from the advice of others. Counselors are not to be “yes men,” but neither are they to be inflexible when their president decides against their views. The Lord governs his kingdom by councils. One individual (in this case, the President of the High Priesthood) has the keys and authority to have the final word, but even the prophet is to consider the wisdom and inspiration of his counselors.

Second, he is to pray always. It is important for every leader to seek counsel from him whose kingdom this is. Therefore, faithful and wise leaders will always pray for inspiration and revelation in their policies and deliberations.

Third, he is to proclaim the gospel. Every calling in the Church has with it the responsibility of proclaiming the gospel in one way or another, and preaching and praying are the two activities that will do the most good upon this earth (see verse 4).

4 And in doing these things thou wilt do the greatest good unto thy fellow beings, and wilt promote the glory of him who is your Lord.

verse 4 “in doing these things thou wilt do the greatest good unto thy fellow beings” See verse 3 and its commentary.

5 Wherefore, be faithful; stand in the office which I have appointed unto you; succor the weak, lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees.

verse 5 Fourth, he is to “succor the weak, lift up the hands which hang down, and strengthen the feeble knees.” This duty has a dual application. First, the counselors in the First Presidency are to care for the poor, the weak, and the afflicted members of the Church by implementing the law of the gospel. Second, they are to assist the President in the event of his weakness or incapacity. President Harold B. Lee, when serving as counselor to the aging President Joseph Fielding Smith, gave this insight into his responsibility:

As I thought of the role of President Tanner and myself as his counselors, I thought of a circumstance in the life of Moses. . . . As Moses sat upon a hill and raised the rod of his authority, or the keys of his priesthood, Israel prevailed over their enemies; but as the day wore on, his hands became heavy and began to droop at his side. And so [his counselors] held up his hands so they would not be weakened and the rod would not be lowered. He would be sustained so that the enemies of the Church would not prevail over the saints of the Most High God (see Exodus 17:8-12).

I think that is the role that President Tanner and I have to fulfill. The hands of President Smith may grow weary. They may tend to droop at times because of his heavy responsibilities; but as we uphold his hands, and as we lead under his directions, by his side, the gates of hell will not prevail against you and against Israel (CR, October 1970, 153).

6 And if thou art faithful unto the end thou shalt have a crown of immortality, and eternal life in the mansions which I have prepared in the house of my Father.

7 Behold, and lo, these are the words of Alpha and Omega, even Jesus Christ. Amen.

verse 7 “Alpha and Omega” See the commentary for D&C 19:1.

Brief Historical Setting

1832 April

While in Missouri, Joseph was also sustained as “President of the High Priesthood” by a conference of the elders in that area. He then visited the Colesville saints who lived in Kaw Township. In Missouri, the Lord gave Joseph a revelation regarding the care of widows and orphans by the Church [D&C 83 - Widows and Orphans].

Section 83 Widows and Orphans

See the introductory commentary for section 82. Joseph Smith and his companions traveled from Ohio to Independence, Missouri, in April 1832, to conduct church business and “sit in council with the saints,” according to the commandment they had received in D&C 78:9. Joseph and Sidney left Hiram, Ohio, on April 1, 1832, for Missouri in company with Newell K. Whitney and Jesse Gause. They arrived in Independence on April 24. On April 26 a general council was held during which the Prophet was sustained by the saints in Missouri as President of the High Priesthood. He had previously been sustained and ordained to that position at a conference of the elders of the Church in Amherst, Ohio, on January 25, 1832 (see D&C 75). Since the two centers of the Church were Kirtland and Independence, it was necessary that this action be repeated in Independence. Also, after reconciling some hard feelings between the Missouri and Ohio brethren, Joseph received section 82. The conference continued on April 27, and Joseph noted that the saints in Missouri “were settling among a ferocious set of mobbers, like lambs among wolves” (HC, 1:269). On April 28 and 29 he visited the saints who lived above the Big Blue River in Kaw Township, a few miles west of Independence. These were primarily the saints from Colesville, New York. They welcomed him with rejoicing. Joseph returned to Independence the following day for meetings of the Literary Firm and the United Firm. It was agreed at this meeting to print only three thousand copies of the Book of Commandments rather than the ten thousand originally planned. A subsequent meeting of the United Firm appointed Sidney Gilbert and Newel K. Whitney as agents for the two branches of the Firm in Missouri and Ohio, respectively. It was also agreed that the United Firm should take out a loan for fifteen thousand dollars, probably for startup costs for the bishops’ storehouses.

Sometime on April 30, 1832, Joseph received section 83. He recorded the event as follows: “On the 30th, I returned to Independence, and again sat in council with the brethren, and received the following: [D&C 83]” (Ibid.). Joseph Smith and his companions remained in Missouri for two weeks,

What happens if a husband in Zion, who is living the law of consecration, is killed? Is the Church beholden to care for his widow and her children? Does the man’s stewardship pass on to his wife and children? What happens if both parents are killed? Do the children have the right to expect that the Church will care for them?

In section 83 the Lord revealed through Joseph that under the law of consecration, the Church does have the obligation to care for widows and orphans, assuming of course there is a need.

What about today? Is the situation different? It would seem that today the primary responsibility lies with the extended family. If family are unable or unavailable to assist, then the Church will step in.

1 Verily, thus saith the Lord, in addition to the laws of the church concerning women and children, those who belong to the church, who have lost their husbands or fathers:

verse 1 “in addition to the laws of the church” This revelation is an addendum to the law of the Church on matters found in D&C 42:30-34, which discussed the rights and obligations of stewards but did not address the rights of dependents, particularly if the steward died.

2 Women have claim on their husbands for their maintenance, until their husbands are taken; and if they are not found transgressors they shall have fellowship in the church.

verse 2 “Women have claim on their husbands” The primary responsibility for the support of married women in the Church lies not with the Church but with their husbands. In the context of the law of consecration, faithful wives have the right to claim support from their husbands as part of their covenant relationship. This was a very liberal idea in frontier America in the nineteenth century. President Ezra Taft Benson declared: “This is the divine right of a wife and mother. She cares for and nourishes her children at home. Her husband earns the living for the family, which makes this nourishing possible. With that claim on their husbands for their financial support, the counsel of the Church has always been for mothers to spend their full time in the home in rearing and caring for their children” (Teachings of Ezra Taft Benson, 547).

Certainly there are exceptions to this policy in practice. Not every female church member has a husband. Not every married sister has a worthy husband. Some sisters have husbands who are disabled or otherwise unable to work. Financial realities may be different from the ideal, and in such cases adjustments can be made. Nonetheless, the general policy remains, and it applies to the vast majority of cases: the husband bears primary responsibility for the support of his wife and family as long as he lives (see 1 Timothy 5:8).

3 And if they are not faithful they shall not have fellowship in the church; yet they may remain upon their inheritances according to the laws of the land.

verse 3 “And if they are not faithful” Some might claim that an unfaithful or unrighteous widow has no right to the Lord’s resources entrusted to her faithful husband, but the Church is not to turn an unfaithful widow out of her home. Such a widow might be refused fellowship according to the same law of the Church that applies to all members, but faithful or unfaithful, a widow is to retain possession of her husband's legally deeded stewardship.

“according to the laws of the land” Most states and countries have laws governing inheritance and the rights of surviving dependents. In all cases, the policy and practice of the Church is in harmony with civil statutes.

4 All children have claim upon their parents for their maintenance until they are of age.

verse 4 “All children have claim upon their parents” The primary responsibility for the support of dependent children lies with the parents. In the rearing and support of children, the wife shares responsibility with her husband. Just as the wife has claim upon her husband for her maintenance (see verse 2), so also children have claim upon their parents until they are of age.

5 And after that, they have claim upon the church, or in other words upon the Lord's storehouse, if their parents have not wherewith to give them inheritances.

verse 5 “after that” After children come of age.

“they have claim upon the church” The context of this revelation is families living under the law of consecration. When children of such families are of an age to support themselves and start families of their own, they may receive a portion of their parents' stewardship to start out but only if the parents' resources are great enough to be divided. If the stewardship of the parents cannot sustain such division the Church is to provide stewardships, or inheritances, for the new family out of the resources of the bishop's storehouse.

6 And the storehouse shall be kept by the consecrations of the church; and widows and orphans shall be provided for, as also the poor. Amen.

verse 6 “the storehouse shall be kept by the consecrations of the church” The resources from which the bishop's storehouse will operate will come from the United Firm and from the surpluses of all the other stewards in the Church who are also living under the law of consecration.

“widows and orphans shall be provided for” All faithful widows, orphans, and poor persons in the Church without other means of support have a claim upon the bishop's storehouse, and even unfaithful widows retain possession of their deceased husband's stewardships (verse 3). The poor who are unfaithful to their covenants have no claim upon the resources of the Church, beyond the simple necessity of saving their lives, if it comes to that (see Mosiah 4:16). The Church has no obligation for continuing, daily support of those who do not keep the faith.

According to President Joseph F. Smith: “It is intended that the widows shall be looked after when they are in need, and that the fatherless and the orphans shall be provided for from the funds of the Church; that they shall be clothed and fed, and shall have opportunity for education, the same as other children who have parents to look after them. When a child is fatherless and motherless, the Church becomes the parent of that child, and it is obligatory upon the Church to take care of it, and to see that it has opportunities equal with the other children in the Church.

This is a great responsibility. Have we ever seen the day since the Church was organized when we could carry out this purpose of the Lord fully, and to our heart's content? We have not, because we never have had the means to do it with. But if men will obey the law of God so that there shall be abundance in the storehouse of the Lord, we will have wherewith to feed and clothe the poor and the orphan and to look after those who are in need in the Church" (CR, October 1899, 39-40).

The Church today maintains active social service programs for the purpose of assisting members who are in need. This includes such things as adoption services and counseling services. One cannot help but wonder whether such programs are but vestiges of the law of consecration and stewardship.

Section 84 A Revelation on Priesthood

After spending two weeks in Missouri “sitting in council with the saints” and providing for the establishment of bishops’ storehouses in Independence and Kirtland as commanded by the Lord, Joseph Smith and his companions, except for Jesse Gause (who remained in Missouri at least until June), returned to Ohio. On the return journey, Bishop Newel K. Whitney’s leg and foot were broken in a coach accident, and Joseph stayed with him in Greenville, Indiana, until the bishop could travel. After staying at an inn for nearly a month, Joseph was poisoned one night at dinner but recovered through a priesthood blessing. He and Bishop Whitney left the inn promptly the following day, arriving in Kirtland in late June. They had been away from their families for almost three months.

During 1832 certain difficulties involving Sidney Rigdon began. Sidney had suffered from depression from time to time but for the most part had been able to keep it under control. During the mobbing of March 24, 1832, in Hiram, Sidney had been dragged by his heels along the ground, so that his head suffered severe blows. Following this physical abuse, in addition to the physical sequelae, his depression apparently worsened. After returning to Kirtland from Missouri, Sidney claimed on July 5, 1832, to have had a revelation and “was telling the people that “the kingdom was rent from them, and they might as well all go home for they were rejected” (Times and Seasons 5 [October 1, 1844]: 660; see also Whitney, Times and Seasons 5 [October 15, 1844]: 686). Reportedly, he also bemoaned that “it was useless to pray or do anything” (Charles C. Rich Papers, as cited in Cook, Revelations of the Prophet Joseph Smith, 174).

In response to Sidney’s claims, Joseph went immediately from Hiram to Kirtland and relieved Sidney of his priesthood calling (counselor in the Presidency of the High Priesthood) and of his license to preach, but three weeks later a repentant Sidney Rigdon was reinstated in the presidency of the High Priesthood. Joseph Smith, ever kindhearted, explained these events in a letter to W. W. Phelps: “When Brother Sidney learned the feelings of the Brethren [in Missouri] in whom he had placed so much confidence, for whom he had endured so much fatigue and suffering, and whom he loved with so much love, his heart was grieved, his spirits failed, and for a moment he became frantic, and the adversary taking the advantage, he spake unadvisedly with his lips. . . . But he has since repented like Peter of old, and after a little suffering by the buffeting of Satan, has been restored to his high standing in the church of God” (Jessee, Personal Writings, 272-73). It should probably be noted that Sidney was not likely fully responsible for the things he had said in view of his significant depression. Nevertheless, President Rigdon was never quite the same man after the mobbing and beating in March 1832 and the difficult journey to Missouri immediately thereafter (see Van Wagoner, Sidney Rigdon, 116-18). Sidney had already moved from Hiram, so when Joseph returned with Bishop Whitney in late June, he spent the rest of that summer in Hiram working on the Joseph Smith Translation of the Bible with Frederick G. Williams as scribe rather than Sidney. In August 1832, Joseph received section 99 at Hiram (see the introductory commentary for section 99).

In September 1832, the Prophet moved from the Johnson home in Hiram, Ohio, into quarters above Bishop Whitney's store in Kirtland, with a kitchen downstairs. During the months since Joseph had left for Missouri, Emma, pregnant again and still grieving for the death of her adopted son, Joseph, had been required to live with three different families in Hiram and Kirtland under cramped and difficult circumstances.

Several months before, during the conference of the Church held in Amherst, Ohio, on January 25, 1832 (see section 75), at least twelve pairs of elders had been called to missionary service in the eastern United States. They labored for about nine months, which was the average duration of a mission in those days. By September they were beginning to return to Kirtland with accounts of their many successes. Joseph Smith, by then relocated in Kirtland, was overjoyed by their experiences. After their return, some of the missionaries came to Joseph and said in effect, "Joseph, give us a blessing. We would love to know more about our priesthood. Give us some morsels from the Lord." Thus on September 22 and 23, 1832, Joseph and six elders united themselves in prayer and were given this revelation (section 84). Other notes taken on that occasion suggest that on the second day, September 23, ten brethren (high priests or elders) were present with Joseph when the revelation was given. Joseph recorded his recollections as follows: "The elders during the month of September began to return from their missions to the Eastern States, and present the histories of their several stewardships in the Lord's vineyard; and while together in these seasons of joy, I inquired of the Lord, and received on the 22nd and 23rd of September, the following revelation on Priesthood [D&C 84]" (HC, 1:286-87).

An interesting aside is that when these missionaries returned to Kirtland, there was one thing that detracted from their general feelings of satisfaction regarding their missions. Many of them had found themselves preaching the gospel in such places as Boston, Philadelphia, Washington, New York, etc. These were places of culture, refinement, government, and education. They found there was a barrier that often appeared as a result of the vast differences between themselves and the people in these cities. These missionaries were men from the frontier, not very sophisticated, and of meager education. They just didn't relate. The report of these missionaries was the seedbed for one of the greatest innovations in the Church, and in fact the whole United States—the School of the Prophets—the first really successful adult education program in the United States. After attending that school, the elders could return to the mission field better prepared to meet all people in any walk of life on their terms.

D&C 84 The Oath and Covenant of the Priesthood

D&C 84:33-42 Oath and covenant of the priesthood. Whoso breaketh this covenant . . . and altogether turneth therefrom, shall not have forgiveness of sins in this world nor in the world to come.

D&C 84:54-57 And your minds in times past have been darkened because of unbelief, and because you have treated lightly the things you have received—Which vanity and unbelief have brought the whole church under condemnation. And this condemnation resteth upon the children of Zion, even all. And they shall remain under this condemnation until they repent and remember the new covenant, even the Book of Mormon and the former commandments which I have given them, not only to say, but to do according to that which I have written.

D&C 84:85 Treasure up in your minds continually the words of life, and it shall be given you in the very hour.

D&C 84:88 I will go before your face . . . and mine angels round about you, to bear you up.

D&C 84:109-110 Let every man stand in his own office, and labor in his own calling, and let not the head say to the feet it hath no need of the feet.

1 A revelation of Jesus Christ unto his servant Joseph Smith, Jun., and six elders, as they united their hearts and lifted their voices on high.

verse 1 “and six elders” Joseph Smith indicated that section 84 was received over a two-day period. There is good evidence that verses 1-41 were received on September 22 and verses 42-120 on September 23. The two earliest manuscripts of D&C 84, both in the handwriting of Frederick G. Williams, who was serving as the Prophet’s scribe at that time, agree that six elders were present to receive verses 1-41, presumably on September 22. Both manuscripts note that verses 42-120 were received by ten elders (or high priests) on September 23.

2 Yea, the word of the Lord concerning his church, established in the last days for the restoration of his people, as he has spoken by the mouth of his prophets, and for the gathering of his saints to stand upon Mount Zion, which shall be the city of New Jerusalem.

verse 2 “his church, established in the last days” This verse explains a dual purpose for establishing the Church in the last days. First, the Church is established to restore the house of Israel, the chosen people of the Lord. This will be done by searching out both the literal descendants of Israel and those who will be adopted into the house of Israel from among the Gentiles, teaching and baptizing them, thereby restoring or adopting them into the covenant. Second, the Church has been organized to gather the saints of God to establish Zion in preparation for the second coming of Christ. The establishment of Zion refers to both the spiritual Zion, which exists wherever the pure in heart dwell (see D&C 97:21), and also the physical Zion, which is the New Jerusalem, whose center will be at Independence, Missouri.

“Mount Zion” “Mount Zion” is synonymous with Jerusalem or, more specifically, with the Temple Mount in Jerusalem. In scripture the term sometimes refers to Old Jerusalem (see Psalm 78:68-69; Isaiah 10:12), but more usually to the New Jerusalem, the Zion to be built upon the American continent (see for example, Isaiah 24:23; Obadiah 1:21; Micah 4:7; Articles of Faith 1:10). Mount Zion is the dwelling place of God (see Isaiah 4:5), and thus the term refers specifically to the temple and by extension to the land and society centered around the temple, which have become sanctified like the temple itself.

The Mount Zion referred to here is the New Jerusalem (see verse 3) which, by the time this revelation was received, the saints had been commanded to build in Independence, Missouri (see D&C 57:1-3). Joseph Smith once observed: “I shall say with brevity, that there is a New Jerusalem to be established on this continent, and also Jerusalem shall be rebuilt on the eastern continent” (HC, 2:262; Ether 13:1-12).

3 Which city shall be built, beginning at the temple lot, which is appointed by the finger of the Lord, in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, and dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jun., and others with whom the Lord was well pleased.

verse 3 “Which city shall be built, beginning at the temple lot” The temple lot is described in D&C 57:3, and it had been dedicated a year earlier, on August 3, 1831. When the enemies of the Church prevented the establishment of Zion and the construction of its temple in Jackson County, this commandment was revoked (see D&C 124:49-51). Nonetheless, Zion will eventually be built, and it will be built beginning with the construction of a temple in Independence, Missouri. It seems likely, but may not be necessary (given D&C 124:49-51), that this temple will be constructed on the lot dedicated for that purpose by the prophet Joseph Smith. This property is now owned by the Church of Christ, Temple lot. This group is commonly known as the Hedrickites, after an early leader, Granville Hedrick.

“dedicated by the hand of Joseph Smith, Jun.” The Hebrew phrase “by the hand of” or “under the hand of” (beyad or tachat yad) means “under authority, control, or direction or,” as well as literally “by the hand of.” In this particular phrase in verse 3, it appears to mean that the temple lot was literally dedicated by Joseph Smith (see also verse 12).

“others with whom the Lord was well pleased” Note the past tense. Although the individuals who dedicated the location of Zion and its temple were approved of the Lord when they performed that labor, Ezra Booth had since left the Church and some others had weakened in their commitment by the time section 84 was received.

4 Verily this is the word of the Lord, that the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints, beginning at this place, even the place of the temple, which temple shall be reared in this generation.

verse 4 “the city New Jerusalem shall be built by the gathering of the saints” The purpose for gathering to Independence, Missouri, both in the past and in the future, is to build the city and temple of God and establish the center place of Zion. In the future gathering for this purpose, however, it will not be necessary to call all the saints to Missouri, for “My cities . . . shall yet be spread abroad” (Zechariah 1:17; see also D&C 97:18). Those who are called to build up the center place of Zion will be called by the priesthood leaders of the Church at that time and will labor under their direction, but there will not be a worldwide gathering of all the saints to Missouri, for Missouri could not hold them all. Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught: “The place of gathering for the Mexican saints is in Mexico . . . and so it goes throughout the length and breadth of the whole earth. Japan is for the Japanese; Korea is for the Koreans; Australia is for the Australians; every nation is the gathering place for its own people” (Ensign, April 1975, 65).

5 For verily this generation shall not all pass away until an house shall be built unto the Lord, and a cloud shall rest upon it, which cloud shall be even the glory of the Lord, which shall fill the house.

verses 3-5 “this generation” Just what is the duration of a “generation”? A prophecy is made in verses 3 through 5 concerning the city of Zion of the city of New Jerusalem that will be established and the temple which will be erected in that city located in the western boundaries of the State of Missouri, the place already dedicated by the Prophet.

Brother Rox W. Doxey discusses the possible meanings of the word generation and suggests that the expression “this generation” in these verses refers to our entire dispensation of the gospel: “Inasmuch as that temple has not been built within [more than 180] years of 1832, some members of the Church have wondered about the length of a generation. Although a generation, under certain conditions, is mentioned in the Book of Mormon as an hundred years (Helaman 13:8-11), the term, under some conditions, refers to an indefinite period. For example, Jesus said that it was an evil and adulterous generation that sought after a sign (Matthew 12:39), and in our dispensation the Lord said that “this generation shall have my word through you [Joseph Smith]” (D&C 5:10). From these examples, it is clear that the dispensation of the fulness of times is considered a generation, for the people of our time are still receiving the word of the Lord in the revelation received through Joseph Smith. There is no way of determining the number of years meant in Section 84, verses 4 and 5. There are two things to be known, however. First, that the Lord has said through his Prophet that the temple will be built in this generation, and second, that from the time this announcement was made the leaders of the Church have never departed from the Lord's intention" (Roy W. Doxey, The Doctrine and Covenants Speaks [Salt Lake City: Deseret Book Co., 1964], 2: 56 - 57).

The Lord may yet foresee the building of this temple (or these temples) in Independence, Missouri, some time prior his second coming.

verse 5 "and a cloud shall rest upon it" This passage is reminiscent of Old Testament references to the Lord's house (see, for example, 1 Kings 8:10-11; 2 Chronicles 5:13-14), particularly to the tabernacle in the wilderness when the glory of the Lord descended in a pillar of cloud by day and fire by night and filled the tabernacle. In their commentary on the Doctrine and Covenants, Smith and Sjodahl wrote: "The Lord manifested himself in ancient Israel in a cloud, shaped as a pillar, which became luminous at night. It guided the people on the journey to Canaan. It stood at the entrance to the Sanctuary, and in it God spoke to Moses. It rested on the Sanctuary and filled it, when that sacred tent was set up. It was the visible sign of God's guiding and protecting care over his people. This glory of the Lord is known as the Shekinah. When the first temple was dedicated, it filled the house (2 Chronicles 7:1-3), and the people bowed down and worshiped. The Shekinah departed when the temple was profaned (Ezekiel 43:2-3). The presence of the Lord will be manifested in this temple of the Latter-day Zion" (Doctrine and Covenants Commentary, 497).

verses 6-16 Verses 6 through 16 contain a genealogy of Moses' priesthood or Moses' line of priesthood authority. The specific descent from Adam to Noah is given elsewhere in D&C 107:40-52 and in Moses 6:1-25; 8:1-9.

President John Taylor taught that Melchizedek was Shem, the son of Noah. The late Elder Bruce R. McConkie disagreed with that idea. Elder McConkie seemed to base his belief on the plural of the word "fathers" in verse 14. What is the doctrine of the Church regarding this question? There isn't any.

verses 6-31 Place a parenthesis, to open a parenthetical phrase, in verse 6 just after the phrase "sons of Moses." Then go to verse 31 and close the parentheses just after the phrase "for the sons of Moses." The material without the parentheses flows smoothly when read after omitting everything within the parentheses. The material within the parentheses contains significant historical and doctrinal material which is an important explanation of how the two priesthoods, the Melchizedek and the Aaronic, came to be held by Moses and Aaron.

6 And the sons of Moses, according to the Holy Priesthood which he received under the hand of his father-in-law, Jethro; verse 6 “sons of Moses” The biblical idiom “son of” or “children of” can mean either biological offspring or someone who is in a certain category or belongs to a certain group (see, for example, Luke 5:34; Ephesians 2:3). In this passage, the phrase “according to the Holy Priesthood” makes it clear that these are Moses’s sons in the latter sense. As in section 84, the “sons of Moses” here are all those who, like Moses, receive the Melchizedek Priesthood.

“his father-in-law, Jethro” When Moses fled alone from Egypt, he traveled to the land of Midian, where he married Zipporah, the daughter of Jethro the Midianite (see Exodus 2:15–4:20). The Midianites, who lived in the western part of what is now Saudi Arabia, were descendants of Abraham by his wife Keturah and were therefore distant cousins of the Israelites. From his Midianite in-laws, Moses learned the gospel and received the Melchizedek Priesthood, which had been passed down among the Midianites from the time of Abraham to Jethro through the lineage indicated in verses 6 through 14. The priesthood lineage of Jethro (and Moses) back to Adam is traced in verses 14-17.

7 And Jethro received it under the hand of Caleb;

8 And Caleb received it under the hand of Elihu;

9 And Elihu under the hand of Jeremy;

10 And Jeremy under the hand of Gad;

11 And Gad under the hand of Esaias;

12 And Esaias received it under the hand of God.

verse 12 “Esaias” The prophet Esaias is someone other than the prophet Isaiah, although Isaiah’s name is uniformly rendered Esaias in the King James Version of the New Testament. The prophet referred to here and in Doctrine and Covenants 76:100 lived in the days of Abraham and is otherwise unknown to us.

“received it under the hand of God” See the commentary for verse 3. Unlike in verse 3, it is unlikely here that verse 12 intends to convey the idea of ordination directly under God’s hands, because the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (Jesus Christ) did not yet have a physical body and because heavenly beings are not sent when there are righteous priests available in the flesh to perform ordinances “under God’s direction (or hand).” It may have been in this sense that Joseph Smith said, “All the prophets had the Melchizedek Priesthood and were ordained by God himself” (TPJS, 181). In addition, if Esaias had somehow received his priesthood literally at the hands of God, then the priesthood lineage given in verses 6-16 would be disrupted, any priests before Esaias would be links in a different chain of authority back to God, and their inclusion in Moses’s priesthood lineage would be pointless.

13 Esaias also lived in the days of Abraham, and was blessed of him—verse 13 “Esaias . . . was blessed of [Abraham]” It is probable that Esaias received the priesthood from Abraham at the Lord’s direction and that this ordination was the larger part of Abraham’s “blessing” of Esaias. In just the same way, the Bible states that Melchizedek blessed Abraham (see Genesis 14:19). We know from section 84 and other sources that this blessing included ordination to the Melchizedek Priesthood. It is odd that though the Midianites were descended from Abraham through Midian, Midian himself is not mentioned in the priesthood lineage between Abraham and Jethro. Perhaps Midian, which is actually a place name, was a title or some other alternative designation for Esaias, just as the scriptures refer to Jethro as Reuel (see Exodus 2:18), Raguel (see Numbers 10:29), or Hobab (see Judges 4:11).

14 Which Abraham received the priesthood from Melchizedek, who received it through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah; verse 14 “Melchizedek” Melchizedek, a contemporary of Abraham, was a non-Israelite who held the keys of the high priesthood and who ordained the patriarch Abraham. Melchizedek was an ancient king of Shiloam or Salem (ancient Jerusalem, according to the Bible Dictionary) who succeeded in calling his wicked people to repentance and establishing peace by preaching the gospel to them (see Alma 13:14-19; JST Genesis 14:25-40).

“through the lineage of his fathers, even till Noah” The language in this passage clearly suggests more than one generation between Melchizedek and Noah. Moreover, Alma 13:19-20 states the Melchizedek reigned in Salem “under his father” and that there were “many before him,” which gives the similar impression that there were generations between Melchizedek and Noah, or at least that Noah was not the father of Melchizedek. Hence, Melchizedek was not Shem. Though it is a belief of some in the Church that Melchizedek is Shem, the son of Noah, this identification cannot be confirmed from the scriptures or from modern revelation. The reference in D&C 138:41 to “Shem, the great high priest” is not sufficient to establish this connection, especially in light of D&C 84:14 and Alma 13:19-20. Some early church leaders did express the opinion that Shem was Melchizedek, but this information likely came from their reading in Jewish rabbinic literature. In the fourth century after Christ, Saint Jerome had also heard the same stories. Ironically, the rabbis’ purpose in identifying Melchizedek with Shem, beginning about the fourth or fifth century, was to combat Christian arguments for the existence of a “Melchizedek” priesthood outside the lineage of Aaron (see Hebrews 7:1-21).

15 And from Noah till Enoch, through the lineage of their fathers;

16 And from Enoch to Abel, who was slain by the conspiracy of his brother, who received the priesthood by the commandments of God, by the hand of his father Adam, who was the first man—verse 16 “Adam, who was the first man” The First Presidency wrote in 1909: “It is held by some that Adam was not the first man upon this earth, and that the original human being was a development from lower orders of the animal creation. These, however, are the theories of men. The word of the Lord declared that Adam was ‘The first man of all men’ [Moses 1:34], and we are therefore duty bound to regard him as the primal parent of our race. It was shown to the brother of Jared that all men were created in the beginning after the image of God [Ether 3:15]; and whether we take this to mean the spirit or the body, or both, it commits us to the same conclusion: Man began life as a human being, in the likeness of our heavenly Father” (Improvement Era, November 1909, 80). Whatever man-like creatures may have existed on earth prior to the advent of Adam—and it seems highly possible that there were some—Adam and Eve were the first of those spirit children of God that were born with a mortal body in the image of their heavenly parents—in other words, Adam and Eve were the of the spirit children of the Father who were on the “fast track” to godhood (not on the “animal” track) to be born into mortality.

17 Which priesthood continueth in the church of God in all generations, and is without beginning of days or end of years.

verse 17 “Which priesthood continueth” This phrase refers to the higher or Melchizedek priesthood. There has been a Church of God (Jesus Christ) on the earth in all “generations” (dispensations). And whenever the true church has been upon the earth, it has been governed by the same authority and keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood. No credible claim to being the true church can be made in any time or place without possession of the keys of the Melchizedek Priesthood.

“without beginning of days or end of years” This allusion and the JST clear up a misunderstanding about Melchizedek from the text of Hebrews 7:3, in which Melchizedek is said to be “without father, without mother, without descent, having neither beginning of days, nor end of life.” The JST and section 84 clarify that it is the priesthood of Melchizedek, not the man himself, that was so described. According to Joseph Smith, “The Priesthood is an everlasting principle, and existed with God from eternity, and will to eternity, without being of days or end of years. The keys have to be brought from heaven whenever the Gospel is sent” (HC, 3:386).

18 And the Lord confirmed a priesthood also upon Aaron and his seed, throughout all their generations, which priesthood also continueth and abideth forever with the priesthood which is after the holiest order of God.

verse 18 “the Lord confirmed a priesthood also upon Aaron and his seed”

There is another order of priesthood—the Aaronic. We must conclude that all of the rights and authority of the Aaronic Priesthood lie within those of the higher order of priesthood, the Melchizedek Priesthood. In other words, the Aaronic is merely a part of the Melchizedek Priesthood. Perhaps this explains the statement of the Prophet Joseph: “All Priesthood is Melchizedek, but there are different portions or degrees of it” (TPJS, 180).

The “priesthood which is after the holiest order of God” is the Melchizedek priesthood.

19 And this greater priesthood administereth the gospel and holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom, even the key of the knowledge of God.

verse 19 “this greater priesthood administereth the gospel” The Melchizedek Priesthood is necessary if the fulness of the gospel is to be on the earth. For example, John the Baptist, who held the Aaronic Priesthood and who knew the gospel, could baptize, but only Jesus and his disciples who held the Melchizedek Priesthood could bestow the gift of the Holy Ghost, administer the Church of Christ, and exercise the keys of the kingdom of heaven (see Matthew 3:11; 16:18-19).

“this greater priesthood . . . holdeth the key of the mysteries of the kingdom” We have spoken previously about the “mysteries of the kingdom” (see the commentary for D&C 6:7; 8:11). They are spiritual facts and concepts that cannot be understood by the carnal mind. They can only be truly understood and appreciated by the man whose mind is connected with and responsive to the influence of the Holy Ghost.

There is a certain subgroup of human beings here on earth who have an advantage in learning the mysteries of the kingdom—they have a “leg up” in obtaining and keeping the influence of the Holy Ghost. These are the men who hold the higher priesthood and are righteously administering the affairs of the Lord’s earthly kingdom. These men have better access to the two-way communication between heaven and earth—the figurative gaps or openings in the veil which separates heaven from earth are larger and filled, in one direction, with the petitions of the Lord’s righteous servants on behalf of those members of the kingdom whom these servants are serving. The larger gaps are filled in the other direction with the blessings of heaven to those same servants (see The Priesthood in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 2, chapter 12).

On one level, therefore, we may say that righteous holders of the Melchizedek have an advantage in learning, by the Spirit of God, the mysteries of the kingdom. The Lord promised those who exercise their priesthood in righteousness that “the doctrine of the priesthood shall distil upon thy soul as the dews from heaven” (D&C 121:45). Joseph Smith taught that the priesthood is the “channel through which all knowledge, doctrine, the plan of salvation, and every important matter is revealed from heaven” (HC, 4:207; TPJS, 166-67).

On another level, when the higher priesthood is on the earth, so are the keys of that priesthood, which keys include the authority to minister to the people of earth spiritual “mysteries.”

“even the key of the knowledge of God” One of the great blessings of the Lord to mortals who are consistently striving to obey his commands, is that he will reveal himself to the man through the influence of the Holy Spirit by the process of personal revelation (see D&C 93:1). We also learn here from this verse that the holders of the Melchizedek have an advantage in coming to truly know God (John 17:3). Again, the two-way communication between heaven and earth is more open for those who hold and honor their higher priesthood.

20 Therefore, in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest.

verse 20 “in the ordinances thereof, the power of godliness is manifest”

There are perhaps two different ways in which one might interpret this phrase:

1. First of all, when a righteous holder of the Melchizedek Priesthood is exercising the rights of his office—performing ordinances including blessing the sick, bestowing the priesthood upon the heads of others, giving blessings of comfort, giving patriarchal blessings, etc.—he does not utilize his own personal power; rather he uses the power of God which he is authorized and entitled to borrow by virtue of his holding the priesthood.

2. The second interpretation is perhaps more likely and centers around the definition of godliness. The power of God is not the same as the power of godliness. Definition one, above, assumes that the two are the same. Godliness actually means “God-like-ness.” Hence the power of godliness does not refer to God’s power, but rather to that power which empowers men to become like God. In the covenants (ordinances) we are commanded to enter into is found the essence of our becoming like God. As we keep our covenants and then enter into more lofty and more and more sacred covenants, we receive increments of the attributes of God—gifts of the Spirit—and we do become slowly more like God. Hence, the gospel ordinances, when done by proper authority, and when entered into with righteous intent, have the power to enable us to become like God.

The orthodox Christian world does not believe in the concept of deification—the idea that man’s destiny is to progress and become like God. Kindliness is the state of being kind. Loneliness is the state of being alone. Holiness is the state of being holy. Saintliness is the state of being saintly. Yet, the world refuses to understand that the scriptural word “godliness” means being like God. The word “godliness” is referred to several times in the Bible and includes the idea of man’s potential to become like God (see 1 Timothy 2:2; 3:16; 4:7-8; 6:3; 2 Timothy 3:5; 2 Peter 1:3).

21 And without the ordinances thereof, and the authority of the priesthood, the power of godliness is not manifest unto men in the flesh; verse 21 The power of our becoming like God is in the ordinances of the holy priesthood—in the covenants into which we are commanded to enter. The priesthood is a grand channel for revelation and power.

22 For without this no man can see the face of God, even the Father, and live.

verse 22 “without this no man can see the face of God” “This” does not mean without holding the priesthood. Here, “this” refers to the power of godliness. We have to become more like God in order to see him. This becoming more like him can occur temporarily (transfiguration) or it can happen more permanently as we progress—through receiving incremental gifts of the Spirit in response to our obedience—toward godhood.

While those who hold the Aaronic priesthood can stand in the presence of angels and receive their counsel, the Melchizedek Priesthood is necessary in order to be able to abide the presence of God. Elder Bruce R. McConkie taught that without the priesthood powers, man “would not see the face of God. For if they did, his glory would destroy them. Sinful men cannot see the face of God and live” (The Promised Messiah, 589).

23 Now this Moses plainly taught to the children of Israel in the wilderness, and sought diligently to sanctify his people that they might behold the face of God;

verse 23 “this Moses plainly taught to the children of Israel” When Moses taught the Israelites, he held the Melchizedek Priesthood. He taught them the gospel of Jesus Christ and that they needed the ordinances of the holy priesthood to see God and become as he is. It was Moses’s intention, in taking the children of Israel to Mount Sinai, to give them these ordinances, including the ordinances of the temple (hence, the tabernacle) and to introduce them into the presence of God—“that they might behold the face of God.”

“sought diligently to sanctify his people” Moses sought to see his people grow spiritually through obedience to the commandments of the gospel of Jesus Christ. While Moses was in Midian, he learned the gospel of Jesus Christ (see Moses 1:17), received the Melchizedek Priesthood from his father-in-law (see verse 6), and experienced the vision of the burning bush, which called him to minister to the children of Israel still captive in Egypt (see Exodus 3:1–4:17). It was the intention of Moses and the will of God that the children of Israel should also be taught the gospel of Jesus Christ, be sanctified through obedience to the laws of the gospel, ordained, endowed, and brought into the presence of God at Mount Sinai. For this reason, they were brought to the mount (see Exodus 19:3-13). Initially, the children of Israel collectively accepted the Lord's proposals (see Exodus 19:7-8; 24:3-8), and many of them received the ordinances, made the covenants, and were consequently brought into the very presence of God (see Exodus 24:9-11).

24 But they hardened their hearts and could not endure his presence; therefore, the Lord in his wrath, for his anger was kindled against them, swore that they should not enter into his rest while in the wilderness, which rest is the fulness of his glory.

verse 24 “But they hardened their hearts” Despite Moses's intentions, however, the children of Israel weakened in their resolve and collectively refused to receive the covenants of the gospel. They did not fully repent, and they did not really want to know God or enter into his presence. Those who had already received the ordinances and made the covenants violated them. “God cursed the children of Israel because they would not receive the last law [the gospel] from Moses. . . . The Israelites prayed that God would speak to Moses and not to them [Exodus 20:19; Deuteronomy 5:23-27]; in consequence of which he cursed them with a carnal law [the law of Moses]” (Dahl and Cannon, Encyclopedia of Joseph Smith's Teachings, 506-07).

In addition to rejecting the opportunity to receive the fulness of the gospel, the children of Israel then brazenly sinned against even the lesser law (and those who had seen God broke their holy covenants by making and worshiping the golden calf; see Exodus 32:7-9). While Moses was on the mountain receiving a dispensation of the higher laws of the gospel, Aaron and the people below “corrupted themselves” with idolatry (Exodus 32:7). In consequence, they became unworthy of the higher law, and God in his anger revoked the promises made in the gospel covenant.

“that they should not enter into his rest” The conditional promises God had made to Israel were revoked because the conditions for them had not been met.

What is “his rest”? See the commentary for 2 Nephi 21:10. See further discussion of this important spiritual gift in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1. See particularly, “Two Little-Appreciated Gifts of the Spirit” in chapter 10, Deliberate Faith and Revealed Faith and in “The Fruits of Faith” in chapter 11, Other Notes on Faith. Still further discussion of this topic is found in “The Rest of the Lord—the Gift of Hope” in chapter 17, Justification and Sanctification.

25 Therefore, he took Moses out of their midst, and the Holy Priesthood also;

verse 25 This doctrine is crucial to an understanding of the Old Testament scriptures. Why is the fulness of the gospel of Jesus Christ not clearly found in the writings of Moses and the other Old Testament prophets? Is it because these originally “Christian” texts have become corrupted and the “plain and precious” references to Jesus Christ and his gospel have been removed? No, not usually (but see Moses 1:41). The fulness of the gospel cannot be found in the Old Testament writings because most of it was never put there in the first place. According to this verse, God took the fulness of the gospel away from Israel as a nation at Sinai. Individual prophets and some others associated with them, such as the kings David and Solomon, did receive the fulness of the gospel and its covenants in Old Testament times (see D&C 132:39), but the gospel and its covenants were withheld from Israel collectively by divine decree because of Israel's rejection of these blessings at Sinai. Joseph Smith wrote: "Was the Priesthood of Melchizedek taken away when Moses died? . . . That portion which brought Moses to speak with God face to face [the Melchizedek] was taken away; but that which brought the ministry of angels [the Aaronic] remained" (TPJS, 180-81).

The public writings of Moses preserved in the Old Testament (Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, and Deuteronomy) are documents specifically adapted to a people living a lesser law under the lesser priesthood. Because the knowledge of the fulness of the gospel, along with the higher priesthood and its ordinances, was removed from ancient Israel by command of the Lord (see Moses 1:23), a restoration of the Melchizedek Priesthood in the latter days also called for a revision of the Old Testament scriptures, restoring them from their post-Sinai to their pre-Sinai point of view. The Joseph Smith Translation and the books of Moses and Abraham in the Pearl of Great Price fulfill this need by putting the events of Genesis and other Old Testament passages in their proper setting of the fulness of the gospel. As presently constituted, the biblical books of Moses are preparatory documents, perhaps corresponding to the Aaronic Priesthood (see Galatians 3:19, 24), whereas the creation accounts and the patriarchal narratives recorded by Joseph Smith in the Pearl of Great Price and the JST represent the restoration of the fulness, corresponding to the Melchizedek Priesthood.

26 And the lesser priesthood continued, which priesthood holdeth the key of the ministering of angels and the preparatory gospel; verse 26 "And the lesser priesthood continued" When Israel sinned by its idolatry, Moses broke the stone tablets that God had made for Israel (see Exodus 32:19). This set of tablets contained upon them the new and everlasting covenant of the gospel. After Israel had been punished and the wicked and unrepentant killed, Moses returned to the mount and received another law based on the same principles as the original but formulated as a law of carnal commandments (a list of do's and don'ts) with the fulness of the gospel and the higher priesthood removed from it (see verses 25-27). This lesser law was not the gospel of Jesus Christ, but the law of Moses, named not after the divine Christ but after the man Moses, its lesser mediator (see JST Exodus 34:1-2; Galatians 3:19; JST Galatians 3:19; D&C 42:18; 76:69). When the knowledge and powers of the Melchizedek Priesthood were taken away from Israel, the Aaronic Priesthood was allowed to continue, but from that time on the people were forbidden entrance into the temple itself. "High priests" in Israel were Aaronic priests who administered only ordinances of the Aaronic Priesthood, and the only “temple” ordinances available to the people were animal sacrifices performed outside the building itself in the courtyard.

“the key of the ministering of angels” To minister means “to serve,” just as ministry means “service.” The Aaronic Priesthood holds the keys that entitle one to be visited and aided when necessary by angels sent from the presence of God (see Oaks, CR, October 1998, 48-52). Nevertheless, the Melchizedek Priesthood and the power of godliness manifested in its ordinances are necessary for one to enter into the presence of God himself (see verses 19-22).

27 Which gospel is the gospel of repentance and of baptism, and the remission of sins, and the law of carnal commandments, which the Lord in his wrath caused to continue with the house of Aaron among the children of Israel until John, whom God raised up, being filled with the Holy Ghost from his mother’s womb.

verses 26-27 “the preparatory gospel . . . and the law of carnal commandments” The lesser law of Moses is not the gospel of Jesus Christ. It does not contain full knowledge of Jesus as Savior, of the gift of the Holy Ghost (the conferring of which is a Melchizedek Priesthood ordinance), or of justification through grace (see D&C 20:30), for these all pertain to the fulness of the gospel. The law of Moses is a preparatory gospel of obedience, repentance, and baptism for the remission of sins. The law of Moses with its carnal commandments prepares human beings for the fulness of the gospel by raising them from a level of disobedience and wickedness associated with the telestial kingdom to a level of obedience and relative righteousness associated with the terrestrial kingdom. In this condition, having learned obedience by following rules, they are prepared to receive the celestial principles of the gospel and to become perfected and sanctified through the atonement of Jesus Christ.

Carnal commandments are rules, sometimes even seemingly arbitrary rules. Rules require less understanding than do principles, and rules are therefore better suited to the spiritually immature than are principles. Rules are usually black and white—do this; don’t do that. A law of carnal commandments is essentially a collection of rules that require little thought, wisdom, or spiritual experience and sensitivity from those who live them. Rules require obedience, not understanding. If one is obedient, one can live the law of carnal commandments, even if one has no idea why some behaviors are demanded and others are forbidden. Once one has learned to obey (through the observance of rules or carnal commandments), then, and only then, is one equipped and prepared to be instructed in the higher principles upon which the rules are based. Thus, observing rules develops the commitment of obedience, which then prepares us to receive principles. The succession of kingdoms (telestial, terrestrial, and celestial) is loosely paralleled by a succession of obedience (wickedness through disobedience, righteousness through rules, and perfection through gospel principles).

verse 27 “the Lord in his wrath” The law of Moses with its carnal commandments was not a blessing to ancient Israel at Sinai. It was rather a curse (see Galatians 3:10, 13). Those to whom God had offered the fulness of the celestial gospel at Sinai were cursed by having the fulness of the gospel withdrawn from them and by being given only a preparatory gospel in its place. Moreover, the lesser law itself pronounces a curse upon all who disobey even one of its tiniest rules (see Deuteronomy 27:26), and because all humans sin, all Israel falls under the curse of the law. On the other hand, to later generations of Israel the law of Moses was both a curse and a blessing—a curse for these same reasons but also a blessing because it provided a divine law that reminded them of their duties and responsibilities to the God of their fathers.

“until John” The preparatory nature of the law of Moses is illustrated by the ministry of John the Baptist, who held the Aaronic Priesthood, and who affirmed that the kingdom of God was approaching, and preached repentance and baptism for the remission of sins (see Matthew 3:1-6). He did these things to prepare Israel for the One who was coming to “baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire” (Matthew 3:11; see also verse 28). John did not himself publicly preach the fulness of the gospel of Christ, however; that was a ministry for Jesus’s apostles. John was the administrator of the preparatory gospel. Its principles and ordinances were faith, repentance, baptism in water, and the remission of sins—the first, second, and third principles of the gospel. Nevertheless, it was only a preparatory gospel because it did not contain the fourth principle of the gospel: baptism by fire and the Holy Ghost. The reader is invited to review the discussion of the three parts of the ordinance of baptism in Baptism, the Ordinance that Brings Spiritual Growth in Ye Shall Know of the Doctrine, volume 1, chapter 18. Also missing was the Melchizedek Priesthood with its other ordinances.
